TO THE REAEER.

GOd made man (as all things elſe) for himſelf, Gods glory is the end for which man was made; the fruition of God is the happineſſe to which he was appointed: that he might be ſubſervient to this end, and obtain this happineſſe, he beſtowed on him a reaſonable ſoule conſiſting of an underſtanding and a will, that by the one he might contemplate and behold the beauty of the Lord, by the other he might embrace him. The underſtanding as the eye of the ſoul to diſcerne truth, the will as the feet of the ſoul to carry it to good. The underſtanding (though furniſhed with excellent knowledge in things naturall) was chiefly enriched with the knowledge of God the firſt Truth: the will (though let out to the deſire of good natural) was ſpecially enamored with God the chiefeſt good; and whileſt theſe faculties continued in thoſe poſtures, man continued in the happy and holy condition of his primæve creation; the corruption and miſery of the ſoule is the averſion of theſe faculties from this object, the corruption of the underſtanding the ignorance of God; the corruption of the will, the abhorring of God; man loſt not his faculties by his fall, but their integrity; he hath an underſtanding ſtill, but in regard of heavenly things blind and vain, quick ſighted in other things, he hath a will ſtill, but averſe from God, and purſuing with eagerneſſe things terrene: the reparation of the ſoule is the reſetling of theſe faculties on their proper objects, and this is that which is required, My ſon give me thy heart, give me thy understanding to know me, give me thy will to cleave to me, by loving and fearing me, by delighting and hoping in me. These acts of loving, fearing, &c. commonly called by the name of Affections (I speak with submission to better judgments) are onely the motions of the will, by which it goeth forth to the embracing of its object which is good: which considered in the general nature is loved, considered as in the fruition is delighted in; considered in the future as attaineable, if with ease, is desired, if with difficulty, is hoped for, if the will or these Affections be fixed on their proper object, there is no danger in the excess God cannot be loved or feared, &c. overmuch, the only danger in them, is either in misplacing upon a wrong object, or their loose adhering to the right: both these the Apostle rectifies, Be not drunk with Wine, in which is excess, but be filled with the Spirit, covet the best gifts. Thus Christ invites his Church, Drink ye, be drunk, O my beloved. This drunkennesse, saith Ambrose, makes men sober: And this is the subject of this ensuing Discourse published for thy benefit. Read, consider, pray, and the Lord give thee understanding to conceive of it, and a will to conform unto it.

A TREA-

A TREATISE OF THE AFFECTIONS.

The I. SERMON.

COLOS. 3. 2.

Set your affections on things that are above, and not on things which are on the earth.

THe ſubject of the Text and this Treatiſe is the Affections, ſhewing the right uſe and ordering of them, which is a thing of continual and great concernment: for they will never be idle, but ſtill running out and bringing into the ſoul, either healing or hurtful objects, and ſo Authors either of our woe or welfare: and certain ſignes either of our happineſſe, that we are riſen with Chriſt: or miſery, that we are ſtill dead.—— And concerning theſe the Apoſtle

Firſt, Implies a diſeaſe and diſtemper: that they are disjoyn'd from God, and that deſperately.

Secondly, Applies a medicine, a way to cure them, to bring them back, and place them upon their firſt and right object God, and things above.

The firſt he intimates to us in three things.

Firſt, by calling them inordinate affections, and ſuch as can never be ſet right, without they be mortified. Mortifie your earthly members, Fornication, Uncleanneſſe, Inordinate affection, &c. v. 5. He tearmes them inordinate and maſterleſſe affections, and he commands us to mortifie them.

Secondly by ſhewing they are buried in the things of the world, and never can be raiſed up again, but onely by the power of the reſurrection of Chriſt. If ye be riſen with Chriſt, ſeek thoſe things that are above, ver. 1. q.d. Ye can never be able to make your affections ſeek upwards, unleſſe ye be riſen with Chriſt.

Thirdly, by ſuppoſing they are naturally (as Solomon ſaies of a fooles wrath) as heavy as a stone, the affections are so naturally, as heavy as a stone, which falls down to the earth, and cannot ascend, except it be heaved up: Set your affections on things above, and not on things on the earth. q. d. They naturally sagge downwards on things that are earthly, but let them not do so: no, heave them up, and set them up upon things that are heavenly. If ye be risen with Christ.

These words are to be construed with all the exhortations Saint Paul does here give. If ye be risen with Christ, seeke those things that are above. If ye be risen with Christ, set your affections on things that are above. If ye be risen with Christ mortifie your earthly members, and your inordinate affections, &c. q. d. if ye be not risen with Christ, it is but a folly for me to bidde you do this, ye cannot mortifie your affections, nor raise up your affections to God, ye cannot possibly do this, except ye be risen with Christ. The point then is this, which I will handle by way of coherence.

Doctr. A natural man cannot set his affections upon God, or upon things above: for our more intelligible proceeding in this Doctrine, as likewise in the whole Treatise of the Affections, which I desire to go through: let me tell you,

What the affections are. First, What the affections be. The affections are the forcible and sensible motions of the heart, or the will, to a thing, or from a thing, according as it is apprehended to be good or to be evil. There be four things to be considered herein.

1. The affections are motions. First, The affections or motions. They are the motions of the heart. The motions of sinne., sayes Saint Paul, Rom. 7. 5. that is, the affections of sinne, for so it is in the Original: so that then are a mans affections set upon God, when the heart hath its out-goings to God, and therefore the Scriptures call the affections the feet of the soule: for as the body goes with its feet to that which it loves, so the soul goes out with its affections to that which it loves. I thought upon my wayes, and turned my feet unto thy Testimonies, Psal. 119. 59. that is, I turned mine affections to thy Testimonies: looke to thy feet when thou comest into the house of the Lord. I have refrained my foot from every evil way, Psal. 119. 101. Their feet are swift to shed blood, Rom. 3. 15. The Soul hath no other way to come at that which it loves, but onely by its affections: can the muck-worme bring his bagges and his coffers to his Soul? can the voluptuous man bring his dogges, and his hounds, and his bowles to his Soul? No, though his Soul loves such vanities as these, it cannot move to them but onely by its affections, Currui similes sunt & equis pernicibus affectus, sayes Lactantius. The affections are the Soules horses, that draw her as it were in a Coach to the thing that she affects: a man is moved by his affections. By Anger he moves out to Revenge: by Desire he moves out to Obtain: by Love he moves out to Enjoy: by Pitty he moves out to Relieve: the affections are the motions of the Soul. When the unbelieving Jewes had an affection of envy at Saint Paul, the Text sayes, They were moved with Envy, Acts 17. 5. So the Soul of the godly is moved with affection to God. This is the first thing, the affections are motions.

L. 6. de vero cultu. c. 17.

By faith Noah warned of God moved with fear, &c. Heb. 11. 7.

2. The affections are motions of the will. Secondly, As the affections are motions, so they are the motions of the Will. I know Aristotle and most of our Divines too, do place the affections in the sensitive part of the Soul, and not in the Will, because they are to be seen in the beasts. But this cannot be so, for a mans affections do most stirre at a shame or disgrace; which could not be, if the affections were in the unreasonable sensitive part: the unreasonable sensitive part of a man is not sensible of credit or esteeme: call the desires of the appetite greedy and gluttonish; the appetite is senceleſse of any disgrace, and therefore the affections must needs be in the heart: the Scripture places the affections in the Heart or the Will. Being affectionately desirous of you, we were willing, 1 Thes. 2. 8. Saint Paul couples his affections and his will together in one, and his affection that he had to the Thessalonians, he seats in his will. How could the Apoſtle command us to ſet our affections on God, and the things which are above, if the affections were in the ſenſitive and unreaſonable part? can a man make his material ſtomack to hunger after God? or the thirſt of his ſenſitive appetite to thirſt after Chriſt? alas! the ſenſitive part is not capable of a command or precept. No, if the affections were onely in the ſenſitive and material part of the ſoul, then how could they be in the Angels? the good Angels have affections, all the eſſential parts of the affections, and ſo have the bad. The good Angels, which things the Angels deſire to looke into, 1 Pet. 1. 12. The evil Angels or Devils, The Devils believe and tremble, Jam. 2. 19. I confeſſe there be certain animal and analogical affections that are in the ſenſe: ther's griefe for torment, and feare to touch a ſerpent or a toad: delight in meats that are pleaſant, and hatred of them that are noyſome. But the Lord doth not call for theſe ſenſitive paſſions to be ſeated upon him and on heaven, they are ſeated aright as they ſtand, ſo a moderation be kept, they have no need to change objects: The affections of the heart, theſe are the affections the Lord doth call for; the out-goings of the heart, as the ſenſe is afraid of a Lyon, ſo is a godly heart afraid to ſin againſt God; as the ſenſe is joyful to have eaſe after trouble, ſo a godly heart is joyful with a good conſcience in Chriſt; as the ſenſe loves that which doth feed it, ſo a godly heart loves God that doth nouriſh it: and therefore Auſten, and Galen, and Scotus, and why ſay I them? the Scriptures ſay, the affections are motions in the heart, Mine eye affecteth my heart, ſaith the poor Church, Lam. 3. 51. that is, when ſhe beheld the lamentable diſtreſſes of the daughters of Sion, this ſtirred up the affection of pitty in her heart.

Thirdly, as the affections are the motions of the heart, ſo they are the forcible motions of the heart; every little motion in the heart is not an affection, but onely the forcible motions of the heart; a man is then ſaid to ſet his affections upon God, when his heart goes with force unto God; for as God appoints every creature his taske, and to ſeeke out its own good, ſo he gives it a force for to do it; the ſtone its nature is to fall downwards, and God gives it a weightineſſe that it may fall downwards with force: the ſtomacke its nature is to take food when it is empty, and God gives it a hunger, that it may take it with force: every creature hath not onely its motion to move it to its own good, but it goes to it with force; ſo God hath given affections to the heart, as weight to the ſtone, and hunger to the ſtomacke; ſo God (I ſay) hath given affections to the heart, that it may ſeeke out its good with a force: ſo that then does a man ſet his affections upon God, when he ſets all his forces to God-ward. When David had given 847. millions, 382 thouſand 500 pound in ſilver and gold of his own charges, to the building of Gods houſe, for ſo the learned may gather out of two Chapters in the Chronicles, you may well think he imployed all his forces thereto; but what ſayes the Text, I have ſet mine affection to the houſe of God, 1 Chron. 29. 3. Thus ye ſee when he ſets his affections to Gods houſe, he put to his forces: the affections are the forcible motions of the heart; when a childe of God prayes with affection, he prayeth with force; when he ſtands for God with affection, he ſtands for him with force. 3. They are forcible motions of the heart.

Fourthly, as the affections are the motions, and the forcible motions of the will, ſo they are the ſenſible motions too. For the will ſtirres up the inferiour faculties of the Soul, and they ſtirre up the humours and parts of the body, to make the greater reſiſtance to that which it diſaffects, or the greater embracement of that which it affects. 4. They are the ſenſible motions of the heart.

This is one reaſon why the affections are called paſſions, for they make the ſoul to ſuffer, and the body to ſuffer. The affection of Joy makes the ſpleene for to ſuffer, and anger makes the gall for to ſuffer, and feare makes the heart for to ſuffer; yea, the affections make humours, blood, ſpirits, members, even bones, and all the body for to ſuffer. Hence it is, when a man ſets his affections upon God, his feare, the fear of God makes him tremble; his Love, the love of God makes him to weepe for his ſinnes; the Shame of it that he ſhould diſhonour his God, makes him to bluſh before Chriſt. Griefe for his ſinnes many times dryes up his moyſture; and Zeale for his glory conſumeth his fleſh: ſo was it with the Pſalmiſt, when he was full of affections towards God, and ſaw how men did diſ-obey his Commandements, ſee what ſenſible motions were in him. Mine eyes guſh out with rivers of waters, becauſe men keepe not thy Law, Pſal. 119. 139. Ezra was ſo affectionate for God, that knowing how the people tranſgreſſed, it made the colour to come in his face, and to bluſh before heaven, Ezr. 9. 6. as Demetrius bluſht for his father Philips offences; the Orator that pleaded King Philips defence, did not do him ſo much ſervice, as the bluſhing of Demetrius his ſonne. This was the effect of his affection to his Father, it ſhewed it ſelfe in his bluſhing for the offences of his Father: Thus the affections are the ſenſible motions of the Will.

5. They are ſuch motions as are according to the apprehenſion of good or evil.

Fiftly and laſtly, they are ſuch ſenſible motions as are according to the apprehenſion of good or evil. For when there is but ſmall apprehenſion of good or evil, the affections are weake, and may hardly worke on the body at all; but when there is a great apprehenſion of either, not onely the ſoul is deeply affected, but alſo the body is mightily compatible. Nay, if the apprehenſion be deepe indeed, the affections break out into raptures, as dancing and leapings of the heart, which are the raptures of joy: raviſhments and enamorings, which are the raptures of love; meltings, and bleedings, and breakings of Spirit, which are the raptures of greife; aſtoniſhments, amazements, which are the raptures of feare; confuſion and the like, which are the raptures of ſhame: the affections burſt forth into ſuch raptures as theſe, when the apprehenſion is deepe. Olofernes his eyes were raviſht with the ſlippers of Judeth, becauſe he was deeply in love with her: Jacob ſhooken almoſt dead at the ſight of his ſonnes bloody coate, becauſe he was deepely affected thereat. The Roman Senate were affrighted with the ſight of the Carthaginian green figges, that Cato did ſhew them: ſuch raptures have the Saints very often in their prayers to God, being helpt with ſighes and groanes that cannot be uttered, Rom. 8. 26. becauſe they have a deepe apprehenſion of the corruption that is in them. Thus ye ſee what the affections be, they are forcible and ſenſible motions of the will, to a thing or from a thing, according as it is apprehended to be evil, or to be good.

Judith 16. 9.

Gen. 37.

Reaſons.

In the next place let me ſhew that a carnal man cannot ſet theſe his affections upon God or upon Grace, which may appeare by reaſons.

The affections are the wings of the ſoul.

First, Affectus ſunt alæ animæ, as the proverbe goes, The Affections are the wings of the Soul. If the birds wings be lime-twig'd and glued to the ground, ſhe cannot fly up; now a carnal man his affections are glued and lime-twig'd to the things of the world, or the things of this life: and therefore it is impoſſible he ſhould flie up unto God. I read in the life of good Anſelme, walking in the fields he ſaw a ſhepherds boy that had taken a bird, and tyed a ſtone to her legge, and as the bird would be offering to mount, the ſtone pulled her down; ſhe had ſuch a weight on her legge, ſhe could not flie up: this good Father fell a weeping, to conſider, that ſo it was with men, carnal men; though perhaps they think to flie up unto God by many good purpoſes, they are ſtill borne down with their ſinnes, their affections are clog'd, ſecurity, deadneſſe of heart, ſelf-love, and love of the things here below, like milſtones made faſt to their heeles, their affections cannot mount up to God. Haſt thou more affection to a game then a Sermon? more affection to ſit drinking in Ale-houſes, then to be reproved for thy ſinnes? more affection to a good booty, then a good duty? alas! how canst thou set thine affections upon God? thine affections are earthly affections, and therefore they cannot be placed upon God, Rom. 1. 26. there read of vile affections. God gave up the Heathen to base and vile affections: so these are base and vile, and carnal affections, that thou art given unto: thine affections are malice, and envy, and revenge, which cannot be set upon God: they are worldly feares, and worldly sorrowes, and worldly joyes, and worldly pleasures, and worldly delights, these are thine affections, these can never be placed upon God. They are vile affections, too base and dishonourable to God. Thine affections are lime-twig'd by Satan, they cannot fore up unto God. This is the first reason, why a carnall man cannot set his affections upon God, because his affections, which are the wings of his soule, are glued to the earth.

Secondly, Affectus sunt inclinationes animæ, The affections are the inclinations of the Soule: as a man is affected, so is he inclined; and therefore the affections in Scripture are called the bent of the soule, My people are bent to backesliding from me, Hos. 11. 7. that is, their affections to me are unstable, unconstant, and fickle. How stands such a one bent? as we say; that is, how stands he affected? A man is bent to that which his affections are on; now then is it possible that a carnal man should set his affections on God, when his heart does not stand bent unto God? the mucke-worme, his heart stands bent to the world, the voluptuous, his heart stands bent to his pleasures; the proud man, his heart stands bent to get credit and be well thought on; the natural man stands bent to be carnal and earthly; and how can such men set their affections on God, when their hearts stand that way bent; the affections, are they bent? that way that thy bent goes, that way do thine affections go: thou art merry and jocond, and joyful to day, tell me, what is it for? is it because God is glorified by thee? No, no, thy mirth and thy joy stand otherwise bent; thou hast been angry and revengeful, what was it for? was it because God is dishonoured, and thy lusts have been violent? Alas! no, thy anger and thy wrath stand otherwise bent: thine affections are the bent and inclinations of thy heart, and therefore if thou be inclined to things that are earthly, thou canst not place thine affections upon God; nothing can go against its own bent and inclination, unlesse by the omnipotent power of the Spirit of Christ. David knew this well enough, that his affections could never be to God and his righteousnesse, if his heart did not that way stand bent; and therefore he prayes God, Incline not my heart to any evil thing, Psal. 141. 4. Let not mine affections be on any evil thing, for then I should be that way inclined. This is the second reason why a carnal man cannot set his affections upon God, because their affections of the heart are the bent of the heart.

They are the Inclinations of the Soule.

Thirdly, Affectus sunt passiones animæ, sayes Damascen, The affections are the passions of the Soule. When the heart is affected with a thing, it lets in that thing, and it suffers a change by that thing; when a man is affected with anger at a wrong or an injury, we say he is in a passion; that is, he lets in the wrong, and there does his heart bite upon the wrong, and chafe at it; thus he is passionate, when a man is affected with love to a pleasure, he lets in the pleasure, and suffers it to prevaile on the heart: now then a carnal man cannot set his affections upon God nor his Grace, because he cannot let it in; to prevaile over his Soule, he will not suffer it to enter; can he be in a good passion for God? can he be angry and cholericke to see how Gods Spirit is grieved? can he be grieved at the lusts of his heart, which he joyes in? can he be zealous for Gods truth, and for the beauty of holinesse? Alas, alas! no. He cannot let in these things into his heart, nor Christ, nor Grace, nor Holinesse, nor Humility, nor Self-denial, nor any saving grace that is Christs, can get entrance into his heart; and therefore he cannot set his affections

They are the passions of the Soul.

Elias was subject to the like passions as we are. Jam. 5. 17. That is, subject to like affections with us.

fections upon God. When the Apostle had exhorted the Hebrews, and now was concluding, that he could exhort them no further, he concludes on this manner: And I beseech you brethren, suffer the word of exhortation, Heb. 13. 22. He labours to worke on their affections, that they would let in his exhortations into their hearts, he does not say, suffer me to exhort you, for he had exhorted them already, and had taken his leave, but suffer it to enter into your hearts; now if you be carnal, thou wilt never suffer Gods counsels to enter; youle never suffer the word of reproof, neither will ye suffer a resignation: Suppose we should pull down all the unnecessary Ale-houses in the Parish, would ye suffer it? Suppose we should roote out all your game-houses and the like, would ye suffer it? Suppose we should make every man pay his twelve-pence a day for every time he is absent from Church, and have all disorders punisht in the Town, would ye suffer it? Suppose we should come to your houses and exhort you, and reprove, and tell you of your sinnes, and labour to reforme you and your Families, alas! would ye suffer it? No, your passions will rise, ye would be so farre from affecting these things, as that your affections would be against them, nay, ye would be in passion against me; carnall hearts cannot set their affections upon God, why? because the affections are passions, as I have proved already, and the soule does suffer its affections. The affections do alter the heart, but a carnal heart will not be altered by the word, nor by Christ; nor suffer his graces to enter.

4. They are the Perturbations of the Soule.

Fourthly, put the case a man set himself wrong, Affectus sunt perturbationes animæ, The affections are the perturbations of the soul; if once they go wrong, and the reines be laid on their necks, they are like wilde horses to the soul, to carry her whither she would not; they are the disturbers of judgement, and violent tyrants over the soul, they make a man walk as they list; and therefore the Apostle cals them, the lusts of concupiscence, wherein a man walkes, 1. Thes. 4. 5. in the original it is the affections of concupiscence, they are cruel and masterless misleaders of a man; now a carnal man, his affections are such, they are disturbances and perturbations unto him, they will so trouble him, and tosse him up and down, from lust unto lust, from sin unto sin, that he shall never be able that is carnal, to set them upon God. Jamblychus cals them the nayles of the soul, whereby it's nailed to the things of the body; would a carnal man repent? alas! his affections disturbe him; would he pray and hold out in that duty? his affections are importunate to be otherwise occupyed; would he exhort and reprove, and be rebuking his neighbour for sinning against God? his affections they are against it, he is ashamed for to do it, he is afraid he shall have a flout for his labour; would he forsake his covetousnesse, and drunkenness, and company? Oh! his affections are so strong to them, that he is not able to draw his heart from them. The very Heathen brings in all the world thus speaking of themselves, Nitimur in vetitum semper cupimúsque negata, so head-strong are the affections when they are wrong: as Medea in the Poet, video meliora proboque, she saw the good and she liked the good, but her affections transported her quite to the contrary; thus it was with Herod the King: when he heard there was another King of the Jews born in the world and that Wise men from the East were come for to do homage to that new King; the Text sayes, he was troubled, Matth. 2, 3. feare and shame, and grief, and vexation, and all his affections, they were all up in Armes, and would not let him be quiet: they troubled him sayes Saint Matthew. Yea, they made such a disturbance in Herod, they did so baffle his judgement, and busie his thoughts, and torture his minde, that they drove him to murther God knows how many scores of poor Infants, before they would be quiet, they made him a mad-man. Thus the affections are grievous perturbations, when they are once come to be mis-placed; and if they be such perturbations as they are, alas! how can a carnall man set his affections upon God?

they are masterlesse wild horses, and he cannot subdue them: they are bedlams and frantick misleaders, and he cannot overcome them: they are desperate things, his affections are so giddy and unruly, that he can never be Christs, as long as his affections are alive; unlesse they be set upon the tenters, and put upon the rack, and tamed perforce, they'le never be right: and therefore sayes the Apostle, Those that are Christs have crucified the flesh, with the affections and lusts, Gal. 5.24. Those that are Christs, have done so, or else they could never be Christs, because the affections are perturbations & disturbances, most wofull perturbations they are. And this is a fourth reason why a carnall man cannot set his affections upon God, because his affections are perturbations, and like a company of wilde horses, that will not be ruled.

The II. Sermon.

Set your affections on things that are above, &c.

THus I have shown you first, what the affections be: Secondly, how a carnall man cannot set his affections upon God. But here it may be objected: cannot a carnall man have good affections to God and to grace? The people were so affected with Johns preaching, and with his Baptisme, that they would have been angry and zealously affected against that man, whoever he was, that should have said it was not of God; they would have stoned such an one to death, Luke 20.6. The people most of them were carnall, yet they were thus affected with his preaching. Certainly a carnal mans affections may be marvellously wrought on. For the clearing of this doubt: Let me shew you nine degrees, wherein the affections may be wrought on: in five of them, a carnal man may have his affections to be wrought on, and in the last four of them he cannot. First, I will name you these nine degrees of the affections of the heart.

The first is, when they are so farre wrought on, that heart is enticed and allured much by them. Thus the eloquent Ministers in Corinth, it seems, they wrought upon the peoples affections exceedingly, their words were so drawing, and their speech was so inticing, that they came flocking to them. Saint Paul confesses he would not preach so, with the enticing words of mens wisdome, 1 Cor. 2.4. (q.d.) what good should I do, if my preaching were such? Its true I might allure you, and move you, and entice you, and stir your affections; but alas! this would never bring you to faith, and repentance with power: this might tickle your hearts peradventure a little, but not soundly comfort you. 1. The heart is enticed and allured by them.

The second is, when the affections are wrought on so far, that the heart is somewhat touched therewith. As a man when his affections are moved with any, at a disgracefull word, he saith, this toucheth me indeed. When God turned the affections of Israel unto Saul, indeed some of them had no affection to Saul, How shall this man save us? say they, they despised him in their hearts, but God turned the affections of the rest upon Saul, for to follow him: The Text sayes of them, The Lord had touched their hearts, 1 Sam. 10.26. That is, he set their affections upon Saul, that they might follow Saul up and down. As when when the Needle is touched with the Loadstone, then it will turn it self presently to the North; their affections were touched, and therefore they followed after Saul. So, many men, their affections are touched at a Sermon; their affections are not only allured, but receive a touch from the Word: there is some vertue goes out of the Word, as some went from Christ to the Woman that had but a touch of his garment; so their affections have a touch from the Word, and some vertue goes to them, for the affections are termed the touch of the heart. It's good for a man not to touch a woman, 1 Cor. 7. 1. That is, not to set an amorous affection of the heart upon a woman. Thus far a wicked mans affections may be to the Word, they may be touched by the Word.

3. The heart is somewhat bowed by them.

The third is, when the affections are wrought on so far, That the heart is somewhat bowed thereby; this is another degree of working on the affections, to bow the affections, as ye may read; David bowed the heart of all the men of Judah, even as the heart of one man, 2 Sam 19. 14. that is, by his kind speeches, and friendly message he sent, he inclined and bowed their affections unto him. So a wicked man may have his affections bowed unto good, whereas his affections stood sturdy before, or may be they were bowed another way before, now they be bowed the contrary; as wicked Ioabs affections were so bowed to God-wards, and for the good of his Church, that he was willing to dye in his defence. Be of good courage, sayes he, let us play the men for our people and the Cities of our God, and the Lord do what seemeth him good. 2 Sam. 10. 12. See how he rowzes up his valour, and his generous affections to fight for his God, his affections were somewhat bowed unto God, and yet he was a wicked man.

4. The heart is stolne away with them.

The fourth is, the affections may be wrought on so far, that the heart may be stolne away with them: this you may find in the story of Absalom, who with his beauty and the properneſse of his person, and the flattery of his lips, and his courteous complement with the people of the land, he did so win their affections, that the Text sayes, He stole the hearts of the men of Israel, 2 Sam. 15. 6. So grace is so beautifull, and the Word of God hath such kind promises and kind speeches with it; not complemental, as Absaloms, but reall and truly amiable, that it may steale the affections of a carnall man, as the Israelites stole from the Ægyptians, and they knew not how, so grace may steal thine affections and take them with its beauty, and yet thou be a wicked man for all that. As Paul with his preaching did so steal away the affections and the hearts of Galathians, that for a need they would have pluckt out their eyes and given them to Paul, they were so strongly affected with him and the Gospel he taught them, Gal. 4. 15. Nevertheless S. Paul says they were fooliſh & carnal.

5. The heart is inflamed by them.

The fifth is, the affections may be wrought on so far, that the heart may be hot and inflamed by them. That this is another degree of the affections, you may gather from the avenger of blood; when any had unwittingly and unwillingly killed his brother, the Lord commands him to flie quickly to a City of refuge, leſt the avenger of blood should kill him in fury and anger. The words go thus, leſt the avenger of blood pursue the slayer, while his heart is hot. Deut. 16. 6. While his heart is hot, that is, while he is in the heat of his passion, while his anger and the affections of revenge are hot: the affections may be raised so high, that they may set the heart in a heat upon a thing which it affects. So a carnal man may have his affections heated and inflamed towards God and towards grace. Saul had a great zeal to Gods Church, 2 Sam. 21. 2. Jehu was zealous for God, Come with me, sayes he, and see my zeal for the Lord, 2 King. 10. 16. Zeal is the heat of all the affections, and therefore Iehu was heated in all his affections for God; his affections were hot to root out Idolaters, his affections were hot to cut off Gods enemies, and to reform abundance of sinful abuses in the Kingdom: he was zealous, his affections were heated towards God, and yet Jehu was no better then a carnal man for all that. Thus far may a carnal mans affections be wrought on for grace; and this is no argument that he hath set his affections upon God, as shall afterwards appear. Therefore there be four further degrees which are only to be found in the godly.

The sixth then is, the affections may be wrought on so far, that the heart is quite overturned from that it was before; I say the affections may be wrought on so far, that the heart may be turned upside down by them. So it was with the godly; they were even overwhelmed in affections for God with the fear of the Lord, and their hearts turned upside down with grief for their sins. Behold O Lord, for I am in distresse, my bowels are troubled, my heart is turned within me, for I have grievously rebelled, Lam. 1.20. Her soul was even battered with affections of repentance and humiliation; her soul was distressed with terrors; her bowels were troubled and contracted with fears, and her heart was turned upside down with sorrowes, and all for her sins, for I have grievously rebelled, sayes she. No wicked man under Heaven had his affections ever so wrought on, that was not converted upon it. As Job sayes of his birth, He was curdled like Cheese: so here in the second birth, her heart was curdled like Cheese, &c. My heart is turned in me, sayes she. This is a higher working on the affections, then any carnal man hath.

Iob 10. 10.

The seventh is, the affections may be wrought on so far, that the heart be engaged for God. As a womans affections towards a man may be so deep, as that she engages her heart unto that man, and resolves to have none other husband but him. So when the affections are so deep in love with grace and with Christ, that the heart is once engaged for Christ, to be a widow for ever, unlesse he will be pleased to count her his Spouse: the world shall never have her heart more, the flesh shall never have her heart more, nor devill, nor lust, nor any other sin shall ever have her heart more, she is so far in love and affection with Christ, as her heart is engaged for Christ, this is a godly soul. Who is this that engages his heart to approach unto me? saith the Lord, Jer. 30.21. If pleasure come, saying, set thine affection on me; no sayes the heart, mine affections are engaged already; if her old lusts, and her old lovers, and her old acquaintance come, saying, set your affections on us; no, sayes the heart, I am engaged for another, even for Christ and his graces: this is a deep working on the affections indeed, when they are engaged for Christ.

7. The heart is engaged for God.

The eighth is, the affections may be wrought on so far, that the heart may be glued to a thing by them. Iamblicus the heathen hath a pretty phrase to this purpose: a wicked man he calls him ἐσφιγμένον ἐν τοῖς ἐπιθυμίαις, bound in and nailed in his affections, he is even nailed and glued to the things of the world, his heart does even stick to them like pitch and Tarre to the Ship. So it is with a godly soul, his heart sticks fast unto Christ, and the Commandments of Christ. I have stuck unto thy testimonies, sayes David to Christ, Psal. 119.31. How came his heart to stick to Christs testimonies? His holy affections were the glue, his affections clave to Gods law.

8. The heart is glued to a thing by them. De vita Pythag.

The ninth is, the affections may be wrought on so far, that the heart may be quite given up to the thing which it affects, Solomon had such affections to wisdom that he gave his heart for to seek it. Ecc. 1.13. As we use to say, he hath my heart, what can he have more? all mine affections are set on him, if he have my heart, and all. So a godly heart is so deeply affected with Christ and his righteousnesse, as that Christ hath his very heart and all. He gives up all that he hath unto Christ. It's true, no wicked man in the earth hath his affections thus far wrought on; but it is marvellous to think how far a mans affections may be wrought on for Christ, and yet be a carnal man. It's proved already, he cannot set his affections on Christ, but he may raise up his affections a good way towards Christ, and now I will prove it.

9. The heart is quite given up to that which it affects.

The affections may be thus raised.

First, the ignicles and embers of right reason that God hath made naturall to his heart, may regulate his affections to be chast, and sober, and kind, and liberal, and just, and morally humble, and patient, and merciful, &c. and to observe the things contained in the Law. Natural reason, directs men to love their parents and their children, and one another: thus the very Heathen themselves guided their affections with Religion as it were, the vertues of morality says Aristotle, they do ἐυρίσκειν τὸ μέσον ἐν τοῖς πάθεσι. They find out a Medium or a golden mean in the affections, & hold them unto it. And therefore St. Paul knoweth thus much, and how that some of the Heathen were so wicked, that they would put out the light of their own reason, and be drunk and lustfull, and proud, and mercilesse, and disobedient to parents, he condemns them especially for this, that they were without understanding, and without naturall affection, Rom. 1.31. that is, because they put out that naturall reason, and that naturall affection that were in them. Because their affections might have been naturally set upon those things. Their very naturall reason might have ruled their affections, and set them upon vertues of morality. 1. So that thus far thou mayest go, and yet be a carnallist, thine affections may run to be civil, and morally honest, and the like natural reason may raise up thine affections from drunkennesse and lust, and from naturall injustice; and from swearing and lying, and filthinesse of speaking, and the like. I say natural reason may raise up thine affections from these. Indeed it may be thine affections are violent, and greedy, and sensual to tempt thee to some of these sins, but natural reason may take them off from such sins as these. Are thine affections so vile as to follow thy blowzing and thy company keeping? we need not quote Scripture to convince thee: thy material stomack cries out it is a sin, for it grumbles at it. Thine eyes, and thy legs, and thy heels cry out, it is a sin; for they do betray it. Look upon thy purse, it cryes against thee, for it thou hast emptied. Look upon thy Children, and thy Servants, and thy Wife, they cry against it, for them thou hast beggard. Look upon thy fields and thy lands, and thy inheritance, they cry against it, for them thou hast morgag'd and impaired. Look upon the stinking dunghil, it bids thee hold thy nostrils at the stinkingnesse of this sin, for there is thy spewing and thy vomiting, and so of the rest of these sins; natural reason may easily raise up thine affections from these. Which if thou hast done already, and art civil and moral, thou art yet gone no further then a Naturian may go. Thou mayest do that, and yet be a Carnallist.

Lib. 2. Eth. c. 6.

2. By knowledge out of the word that raiseth up the affection.

Secondly, because thou hast more means then the means of bare nature, thy knowledge out of the Word, may raise up thy affections exceedingly: knowledge may awe the heart, and move it with the affection of feares, that it go not against its own knowledge. Herod feared John, knowing that he was a just man, Mark 6.20. Herod his affection was stirred with fear at the hearing of John; why? he knew he was a good man, and he knew it was just as he preached; he knew it was Gods Word. And therefore he feared not to obey him, he was afraid to go against him. Nay, his affections were more raised then so; he heard John gladly, and did many things. He was affected with joy at his Sermons, and his affections were wrought on to break out into act, and to do many things. I do not read, he stuck at any thing but only his darling corruption. His affections are so wrought on, that it should seem he reformed many sins in his Courts, and many of his Courtiers; he began to set up some worship of God in his Palace. All this was by reason of knowledge; he knew Iohn was a good Preacher, he knew he preached the truth, and the truth over-powred his affections. Now he had no such elbow-room for to sin, as he had in his ignorance. Now he feares to do many sins that before he feared not, why? because his knowledge was inlightened. This is no argument that thou art a childe of God, because thou reformest many things. Alas, thy knowledge is convinced thou must so: the very Devill himself may be over-powred by his knowledge; when the Devill knew Christ was Christ, he could not but confesse, We know thee who thou art, the holy one of God.

Mark.

Mark. 1.24. Happily thou fearest to go flatly against the Sermons thou hearest, thou feareſt to live so bad as thou didst; happily thou rejoycest to hear the Bell ring to a Sermon, and art glad to hear the preaching of a Minister; happily thine affections are so wrought on, that thou art moved to do many things, not to suffer such potting and cupsying in thy house as thou usedst, not to endure such disorders in thy family as thou wert wont; alas, alas, this is good yet; and, O that others were proficients thus far, this is further then many do go, but this thou mayest do, and yet be a Carnallist. Thou knowest this is the truth of God, and this stirres thine affections a little.

Thirdly, God may be, he hath quickned thy knowledge a little, and quickned thy conscience, and made it tell thee the horror of thy sins, and this may raise up thine affections many steps higher; not onely to mourn for thy sins, and be full of the affections of sorrow, but also to go mournfully, and hang up and down, to pull down thy proud looks, to take on lamentably, because of thy former iniquities. As Ahab. Thus the word made Ahab rend the very clothes off his back, and fling off his royal robes, and put on sackcloth in their room, it made him have no mind to his meat, but to fast, yea to go softly too, sayes the Text: 1 Kings 21.27. When Ahab heard these words, he tore off his clothes, he abstained from his meat, and went softly. Ambulabat demisso capite; that is, he did not go so proudly up and down with such a careere in the streets, as before; No, he hung down his looks, he went sadly and softly up and down as he went. Thus far too thou mayst go in raising thine affections, and yet be a Carnallist. Thou mayest be smitten in thy soul for thy sins, as to go softly, and sadly, & mournfully up and down, to have little lust to eat thy meat for thinking of thy sins, to go poorly and meanly, and have little mind to go bravely: I say thine affections may be so quickned, as to go sadly all along as thou goest, so that all that knew thee before may wonder; good Lord, what ayles yonder man, how he is changed! He was a Ruffian, a Roysster, and who but he the other day: what's the matter with him? he goes so sadly up and down, and pensively along. But why do I speak against thee, when there be few that are a quarter so well affected as thou? but alas, I tell thee, thou mayest go thus far, and be thus deeply affected, and yet be a Carnalist. 3. By knowledge and conscience quickned.

Fourthly, a deep apprehension, and sense of the horror of thine estate: this may wind up thine affections many steps higher; thou mayest be afraid to be damned, and afraid of the judgements of God, and this may fetch teares from thine eyes, and sighes and groanes from thy heart. This may even melt thy affections into weepings, and abundance of weepings for the sins thou hast done, and yet be a Carnallist. The Prophet brings in the carnall Iewes so doing, This have ye done again, covering the Altar of God with teares, with weeping and crying out; insomuch that he regardeth not the offering any more. Mark, they offered their prayers unto God, and cryed out-right, yea, they powred out many teares, they covered Gods Altar with teares, and yet sayes he, God regarded not their prayers, and their offerings for all that: should we see a man come to Gods House, and hear him at the hearing of the Word, or calling upon God, make an out-cry of his sins, yea weep and weep abundantly, cover his Pew with his teares, we would wonder at the repentance and the good affections of that man, yet so far thou mayest go, such good affections thou mayest have, as to cover thy Table with tears, yea and Gods Altar with thy weepings, and yet be a Carnallist. ἀνδρὸς δ' ἐστὶ δακρυόεντος ἀνδρός. Good men sayes Homer, are weeping men. Nay, I say a man may be a lesse weeping man, and yet be a good man. O how mightily may a mans affections be wrought on, and yet be a stranger from Grace! 4. By a deep apprehension of the horror of their estate. Mal. 2. 13.

Fifthly, self-love: look how high self-love may wind up thy affections for thy sins, so high may thine affections be wound up. Self-love may make thee wondrous affectionate. No naturall affection can possibly be raised up higher, then self-love may. St. Paul may being to reckon up all the sinfull af- By self-love.

fections of men in these last dayes, he names self-love for the formost. In the last dayes perilous times shall come, why? for men shall be lovers of themselves: then the names eighteen more, but this he places in the front on the Catalogue, for self-love is strongest of all, 2 Tim. 3. 2. I cite this Text only to shew how high our affections may be raised to God, namely as high as ever self-love can clamber. Self-love will make a man be very affectionate, When a man knows he cannot be saved, unless he do thus and thus; O how affectionate may he be for to do it, when he knowes, he shall perish for ever, if he be not religious and godly; if he do not bewaile his iniquities and strive against sin, and labour to do good unto others: how marvellous full of affections may this make him to be, to do abundance of things!

Which may, First, make a man be loath to commit sin.

First, it may screw up his affections so high, that he be loath to commit sin; peradventure he does often commit it, but fain would he leave it, O he is unwilling to do it, he wishes affectionately, O Lord, how shall I leave it? O that I might leave it: yea, he seeks some means for to leave it; he does it I confesse, but fain would he not do it: his affections may be wrought upon thus far, and yet be a Carnallist. Such an one was Darius, he had made a Decree, and writ it, and signed it, and sealed it. Well, Daniel would not do according to the tenor of the Decree: and therefore the Decree was, he should be cast into the Lions Den. The King did cast him in indeed, but lo, how unwilling he was to commit this sin: He fasted, he waked, he could not sleep a winks sleep; he wisht, O that I might safely deliver him! O that thy God, O Daniel, would deliver thee. True, he thought I must needs now do this sin; alas my Decree, and what may the Lord think of me? If I should not it, all the Country would think me too blame, nay they would rebell against me outright, for breaking the Laws of the Medes and the Persians. Alas, I must do it; but it appeares though, how unwilling he was for to do it, he could neither eat, nor sleep, nor be merry, nor quiet, till he might hear Daniel was safe. Many a King but a quarter as great as he, would have scorned to have troubled his thoughts about such a Puritan as Daniel was esteemed to be: nay, he rises early in the morning, before the time was expired, he runs in all post to the Den of the Lions, and there he cries lamentably, O Daniel, thou servant of the living God: O Daniel, he screecht it out dolefully: and when he heard that Daniel was alive, he rejoyced exceedingly, Dan. 6. 23. These subsequent circumstances shew how unwilling he was in the of committing of the sinne, if he could have helpt it, and saved his honour with his Lords and his Nobles. Thus Men ihe was unwilling to commit the sin, yet a wretched man for all that. magine they have a good Christian plea, when they can say this for themselves; it is true, I do rap out an oath in my choler, I do pray coldly and with many by-thoughts, but God knows I am unwilling to do so, I would very feign have it otherwise; I am sorry I am drawn so away. Alas so thou mayst be, and yet be a Carnalist: thou mayest pray, and be unwilling to pray carelesly, thou mayst repent in some manner; and be sorry thou repentest no more; thou mayst be loath to commit an offence, and yet be a meer natural man, no jot of saving grace in thee. Was not Pilate sensibly unwilling to condemn Jesus Christ? Was not Herod unwilling to behead John the Baptist? it spoyled all his mirth at his feast, that he was compelled for to do it, for so he counted it a compulsion, otherwise he would not have done it: was not Saul unwilling to transgresse the commandment of the Lord? He forced himself; he had abundance of gain-sayings in his heart, abundance of wishes in his breast; O I would not do it, I would to God I were not put upon such importunate circumstances as I am, fain would I not do it; he forced himself, there was a kind of pitcht field in his bosom, a battel in his soul: fain would he do it, that way went his lusts; fain would he not do it, that way went his conscience: So he forced himself, 1 Sam. 13. 13. and yet God did reject him. Thus self-love may wind up a mans affections exceedingly, to be loath to commit a sin.

Invitus feci, as he said in the Comedy.

Second-

Secondly, It may ſo draw up ones affections to God, as to make one vomit up a deare ſinne ones ſelfe, and be ſorry that others too ſhould commit it; he may be vext to ſee other men drunk, vext to ſee them break the Sabbath, vext to ſee how ſlack they come to Gods houſe, vext to hear any body ſwear, or curſe, or take on, he may be driven to make reſtitution himſelf. Thus it was with Micah, he had ſtolne 11. hundred Shekels of ſilver from his Mother; well, this man, as it appears, hears his Mother curſe, and ſweare, and take on: he had loſt ſo much ſilver, ſome body had ſtolne it from her; when he heard his Mother curſe and ban on this faſhion, he was ſo deeply moved to hear it, that he could not abide it: nay, it made him be willing to confeſſe he had ſtolne it from her, and to make reſtitution of all, yea ſo far as his mother did think fit. O what a bleſſed convert was her ſon, he was now converted to be of ſo honeſt a minde. Bleſſed be thou of the Lord my ſon, ſayes his Mother. He ſaid unto his Mother, The eleven hundred Shekels of ſilver that were taken from thee, about which thou curſeſt, and ſpakeſt of alſo in mine eares, behold the ſilver is with me, I took it: and his Mother ſaid, Bleſſed be thou of the Lord my ſon, Judg. 17. 2. He had ſtolne the ſilver from his Mother, and yet when he heard his Mother curſe and ſwear, and take on in that wiſe, it ſhould ſeem his affections did burne him. What ſhall I hear my Mother curſe in this ſort? and rather then he would let her ſtand ſwearing and curſing, he would vomit up his ſweet gettings. Nay, ſhe thought him ſo religious as paſſes, becauſe he did ſo. Bleſſed be thou of the Lord my ſon: but ſhe was deceived, for he was a wretched Idolater; the Lord cals him an Idolater, Verſe 5. Beloved, this is a ſtrange thing indeed; yet thus far may a carnaliſt go: he may be zealous againſt other mens ſins, and grieved to hear others tranſgreſſe, and vext to ſee others offend. When David would ſin and number the people, it vexed the ſoul of Ioab to ſee it. O my Lord the King, why wilt thou be a cauſe of treſpaſs to Iſrael? 1 Chron. 21. 3. So thou mayeſt be vexed to ſee others offended, and yet notwithſtanding no better than a carnaliſt.

And vomit up a deare ſin, committed by himſelfe, and be ſorry that others ſhould commit it.

Thirdly, it may ſo raiſe up his affections to God, and to be ſo ſet againſt ſin, as to be willing to loſe hopes of getting houſefuls of ſilver and gold, to loſe the favour of Kings and of Princes, to loſe preferment and all, then venture on a ſin. This was Balaams caſe, If Balak would give me his houſe full of ſilver and gold, I cannot go beyond the commandement of God to do leſſe or more, Num. 24. 13. He durſt not go beyond the commandement of God a jot, no not for a houſeful of money, which is more then a thouſand can ſay, that will go beyond it, and beſide it, and againſt the commandment of God for a handful of Barly, yet he though a Reprobate, durſt not go beyond the commandement of God to do good or bad of his own mind, not for a houſeful of coyn. Knoweſt thou not, ſayes King Balak unto him; knoweſt thou not that I can promote thee to honour? yea, he knew it well enough, and yet for all that Balaam would not yeild to him. Balaam, if he would have hearkned to carnal arguments, he might have found many. The Iſraelites are a people of another Nation. I am a Moabite, and they are of another generation: and what though they be better people then they, yet I am a Subject to the King of Moab, and I muſt be true to my Soveraign, and count them mine enemies which are the enemies of my Country, and are come to lick up the land? if I do obey my King, I may have money by houſefuls, I may have preferment, as much and more then I can wiſh. Thus fleſh and blood might have reaſoned; but ſee how his affections were better rectified than thus; he durſt not do it upon any termes, becauſe it was againſt the commandement of God. Thou thinkeſt thy cauſe to be happy, O thou canſt be willing to paſs by the wages of ſin, though thou couldſt get by a ſin, yet thou dareſt not commit it: thou thinkeſt certainly mine affections are to God and to grace; I might get this, and I might get that, if I would but go againſt my conſcience a little, but I will not for mony, nor favour, nor any thing. Well ſaid yet; better then millions can say: but this thou mayest do, and yet be a carnallist.

3. And not dare to venture upon a ſin, though he loſe by it.

4. And to be forward in Religion, run to persecution.

Fourthly, It may elevate his affections so high, as to be so forward in Religion and godlinesse: so strict in his wayes, as to be persecuted too for the truths sake, and for Christs sake: he may endure persecution a good while: indeed if it go too far, he will warpe; but persecuted he may be, and suffer a good while he may, and yet be a carnal man. This you may see in the stony-ground hearer, He heareth the Word, and receives it with joy, Matth. 13.20. Mark, his affections are raised, he receives the Word and the Gospel with joy, he is affected with the Word, nay sayes our Saviour, He endureth a while, and persecution arises against him, then he is offended, Verse 21. Its true, he is offended at this, that he should suffer persecution; he would be glad to be a Professor of the Word, so he might professe it in a whole skin, as we say: he does, and he will warpe then, that's certain: that's all one; nevertheless ye may observe in the meane time what a great way he goes in religion, he trades so far in it, that others will persecute him for it, and yet but a carnal man for all that. Now of the good ground.

5. And to be ravished with the joyes of the Spirit.

Fiftly, it may lift up his affections so high, as to ravish him and enamour him with joyes of the Spirit. He may be in some extasies of spiritual joy: as many examples might be named. Were not the Galathians enamoured with the Gospel that would have pluckt out their eyes and given them to Paul? were not the people over-joyed, when they cryed out in the open Congregation, Lord evermore give us this bread? O then, set your affection, &c.

The III. Sermon.

Set your affections on things that are above, &c.

THe last thing that I told you was, what a great way a carnal man may go in this point. His affections may be wrought on exceedingly. I promised to shew you that this was no argument that his affections are set upon God. The Apostle does not say, let the things that are above work on your affections, for so they may do, and ye be carnal for all that; but he sayes, Set your affections on things which are above.

Reasons 4.

There be four reasons to prove, though a carnal mans affections be so wrought on as ye have heard, that they are not rightly wrought on.

1. The carnal mans affections are not kindly wrought on.

First, because they are not kindly wrought on. They are chafed and heated very much, but they are not kindly wrought on. The affections must be kindly wrought on, otherwise they are not wrought on aright; they may be violently and passionatly wrought on, there may be a great deale of pudder wrought in the affections, but never are they rightly wrought on, unless they be wrought upon kindly. Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love, sayes Saint Paul, Rom. 12.10. The Galatians that would have pluckt out their eyes for S. Paul, they were strongly affected with S. Paul, but they were not kindly affected. If they had been kindly affected with him or his Doctrine, they would not have hearkened to false Apostles, as they did. A carnal mans natural reason and knowledge out of the Word may work on his affections, his his conscience, and selfe-love, whereby he is loth to be damned, and glad to be saved when he dies, these may worke on his affections, and cause him to weep for his sins, and give over many corruptions, and to be strongly affected, but alas he is not kindly affected. It's onely the love of God shed abroad in the heart, that kindly affects one. But it's selfe-love, and not love of the Lord Jesus that affects him: he is not kindly affected.

Secondly, a carnal mans affections are not judiciously wrought on. They are wrought on in a fit as it were, but they are not wrought on with judgement, they have not the true beginning of working, which is sound judgement. S. Hierome sayes of the affections of Christ, respectu Christi semper sequuntur rationem, Christs affections had alwayes the right beginning, which was true reason and judgement. And therefore S. Matthew notes especially the beginning of his sorrow. He began to be sorrowful and very heavy. Matth. 26. 37. He had a right begining of it. The natural beginning of the affections is this, when the judgement is first poysed, and the heart is first fired, this is the natural beginning of the affections. So that the heart must first be wrought on, and the spirit moved, before the affections can be judiciously wrought on. And therefore sayes Saint John, Christ troubled himself. He groaned in spirit, and he troubled himself. John 11. 33. He was exceedingly affected with sorrow for Lazarus his death, and his kinsfolkes sorrows and distrusts they were in, and he troubled himself: we translate it, he was troubled, but in the Original it is, ἐτάραξεν ἑαυτὸν, he troubled himself, his own judgement, and his spirit, and his heart stirred up his affections to be troubled. His affections were wrought on judiciously. A carnal mans affections though they be much wrought on, yet they are not wrought on judiciously. Now he's in the minde to be strict, and to be godly, now he weepes and takes on, can ye wonder? his conscience now jerkes him, and is quick: but when a few teares and a few labours and endeavours that way have contented his conscience, as his conscience is apt to be satisfied, the man is of another judgement then quickly. He is of the judgement then, tush, what need I be so strict and precise; Thus he's affected, not upon sound judgement. Affected he is, and strongly affected too for the while, but he is not affected judiciously.

2. They are not judiciously wrought on.

Thirdly, a carnal mans affections are not wrought upon regularly. His affections may be are wrought upon, by Gods justice and judgements, because God is a consuming fire against sinne, because God is severe against the workes of iniquity, because he hath made *H*eaven-gate to be straight. These are the grounds of his work. His affections are wrought upon this way; therefore he weeps, and therefore he prayes, and therefore he reformes, and therefore he's affected. But this is not regular affection: he is affected with feare, but it is not the feare of Gods goodnesse, no. Gods mercy and goodnesse, were there no other attribute in God, he might looke long enough, before he would feare his mercy: that's a ground of presumption to him, but he feares Gods judgements and his justice, he does not tremble and quake to consider that God is a mercifull God, and a good God whom he hath sinned against. The true Israel of God, they feare the Lord and his goodnesse, Hos. 3. 5. their affections are regular, they are affected with feare of Gods goodnesse. But a carnal man is not affected with the feare of Gods goodnesse. *H*e is affected with the feare of Gods justice, his affections are wrought on irregularly.

3. They are not regularly wrought on.

Fourthly, a carnal mans affections are not wrought upon universally. Some affections are wrought on, and others are not. No, he hath a contradiction of affections. *H*e hath some good affections to God & to grace, & he hath some affections that are contradictory to these. Some sins he greives under, some he is glad under; some commandements he delights to be doing, and some he delights delights to be breaking. I do not meane part fleſh, and part ſpirit, for ſo the beſt godly ſoules under Heaven have a contradiction of affections: they have ſome affections of the ſpirit, and ſome affections of the fleſh, contradicting and oppoſing one another. I do not mean this. But a carnal man hath ſuch a contradiction of affections, as that his carnal affections give the other the lye. He's affected with ſorrow for his ſins, but he is not troubled for his uſury. He's affected with deſires to leave his ſins, but no to leave his ſinful dependances. As Eſau, he was affected with weeping for his miſſing of grace and the bleſſing, but not for his pleaſures & ſenſual delight. Is not this a contradiction of affections? He found no place of repentance, though he ſought it carefully with teares, Heb.12.17. He was affected with weeping after repentance, but he could find no place to beſtow it in. There was not elbowroom enough for repentance in his heart. He made ſome room in ſome part of his heart for repentance, but not in all. He found place for it in ſome of his affections, but not in all. He is affected, but he is not affected univerſally. He hath a contradiction of affections in his ſoul; ſo that a carnal mans affections, though they be wrought on, they are not wrought upon univerſally.

4. They are not wrought on universally.

μετανοίας τόπον. Sayes the Text.

It's true, a carnal mans affections may be exceedingly wrought on, then I pray examine your ſelves; Two perſons I would have examine themſelves.

We muſt therefore examine our ſelves, eſpecially thoſe,

Firſt, them that think their affections are ſet upon God. For as for them that are abſolutely carnal, whoſe affections are buried in the things of the World, and have no affection at all unto grace or unto holineſſe, I ſpeak not to them, their own conſciences condemn them to be rotten, and are as good as a thouſand examiners. I do not ſpeake to them. If they will not hear their own conſciences, much leſſe will they hear me. I ſpeak to them that thinke their affections are ſet upon God.

That thinke their affections are ſet on God.

Secondly, them, that though their affections be ſet upon Chriſt, yet they think they are not affected aright: for many Chriſtian ſoules are rightly affected, and do not thinke ſo. Examine your ſelves whether ye be rightly affected or no.

He that truly affects grace, affects nothing ſo much as grace.

Firſt, he that is truly affected with grace and with Chriſt and his Word, He affects no things ſo much as he does grace. A carnal man may be greatly affected with grace, but there is ſomething he affects more. He affects his vanities more, and his profits more, and his pleaſures more. Herod it's true, he affected John Baptiſt, he knew he was a juſt man, and he feared him: he affected his preaching, for he heard him gladly, he affected the practice of his Doctrine, for he did many things, he was affected greatly with theſe good things, but there was ſome things he was affected with more. The daughter of Herodias affected him more. She pleaſed Herod, ſayes the text, Mark. 6.22. he was not onely affected with her dancing, but affected to content. She pleaſed Herod. Iohn Baptiſt did not pleaſe him, he had not content in his Miniſtery. Nay, her dancing affected him ſo much, that he was willing to part with halfe of his Kingdom to gratifie her. Whatſoever thou ſhalt aske of me, ſayes he, I will give it thee, to the one halfe of my Kingdom. This was more affection than ever he ſhewed to Iohn's Doctrine. He never ſaid to Iohn of his Doctrine, I'le part with a quarter of my Kingdom, nay he would not part with his whore nor his luſts for that. Nay he would rather ſee Iohn dead, as well as he affected him, than miſſe of his pleaſures, or not gratifie his Lords. I'le give thee ſayes he to his damoſell, I'le give thee one half of my Kingdom. Give me then, ſayes ſhe, Iohn Baptiſt's head in a Charger. The fooliſh King had not wit enough to ſay, Iohn is dearer than all my Kingdom. No, he, affected his teaching well, but he affected his paſtime better. Examine thy ſoul by this marke; thou art affected with grace, but is there nothing thou art affected with more? thou art glad to hear a Sermon, but may we not ſee thee gladder at thy ſports? thou art glad to part with an hour at Gods worship, but art thou not gladder to part with two at thy profits? a child of God is affected with grace most: let credit flie, let profit flie, let carnall relations flie, let life, let living, let all that he hath flie, rather than let a good duty of grace flie away: he is most affected with grace, there is nothing he affects more or so much,

Secondly, he that is affected with grace and godlinesse aright, must needs have expressions of grace; he cannot but shew it; he can as easily carry fire in his bosome and hide it, as conceal grace. Can a man be deeply affected with sorrows, and not shew it in his face? can a man be deeply affected with passions of anger and of wrath, and not shew it in his countenance? hands, feet, lips, nostrils, eyes, forehead, yea, and all a mans gesture and carriage will shew what affections are in him, Affectio taciturna nulla est affectio. Every passion hath its proper dialect. Concealed affection is no affection at all, or but small and as good as nothing. So if thou beest affected with grace, 'twill shew it self in thy speeches, in thine actions, in thy wayes, 'twill shew it self in thy calling, 'twill shew it self in thy company, 'twill shew it self at the table, 'twill shew it self in the market; thou canst not be affected with grace, but thou wilt be an open professour of grace, Can a man take fire in his bosome, and his cloathes not be burnt? Prov. 6. 27. If fire be in thy bosome, all that come near thee, will feel the very smell of it in thy clothes. The affections are a fire. The fire kindled, sayes David, Psal. 39. 3. that is, mine affections did kindle, he strove for to hide them, but he could not; can you not be religious but you must shew it? sayes the mocker of all goodnesse. No, its a sign thou hast no affection to holinesse, because thou wilt not shew it: thou canst hear God dishonoured with oathes, and not shew thine affection against them: thou canst come in company and suffer unprofitable language, and not shew thine affections to holy discourse, a sign thou hast no affections that way; thou mayst say thou art affected with grace, but how doth it appear? It appears not in thy prayers, little or no affection in them; it appears not in the Sabbath, little or no affection to the sanctifying of it. Like the stupid fool in the Comedy, who being willing to be thought to be angry, he knew not how to shew it, but only by saying, Irascor, I am angry, sayes he; one would think if he were angry, he needed not say he was angry, the affection of anger would have expressed it self, but he had no other reasons to be thought to be angry, but onely his saying, I am angry. So thou hast no other expressions of affection at the word, or at grace, but only thou sayest, I am affected therewith. Concealed affection is no affection, De non apparentibus & non existentibus eadem est ratio, it's a good rule in Law. There is the same reason for things which appear not, that is for things which exist not. Certainly here it is most true, I may be confident to say, if thine affections appear not, thine affections are not,

2. He must have expressions of grace.

Prov.

Thirdly, he that is affected with grace or with holiness, if he be never so little interrupted, he is troubled, it's like the stopping of a water-course, the water swells and is troubled exceedingly, that it cannot passe; like the Woman in the Gospel, whose affections were to Christ to anoint his head, when his Disciples had cast in a rub in her way, that it had been better bestowed on the poor; why trouble ye the woman? sayes Christ, Mat. 26. 10. Christ knew it troubled her affections, to be hindred from their course: he that is truly affected with Christ or his Spirit, (if he light not on Christ the sooner) he is even sick of love. I charge you O ye daughters of Jerusalem, if ye find my Beloved, that ye tell him, I am sick of love, Cant. 5. 8. her poor soul was even sick at heart for her Love, because she could not come at him: examine thy self in this point. I am sure thou hast been long enough without Christ, thou art 20. or 30. years old, and all this while thou hast been without Christ; thou sayest thou art affected with Christ, O thou wouldst fain have Christ, thou wouldst fain have him live in thee ever; answer me now, art thou sick of love for a Christ? Hope de- ferred makes the heart sicke, Prov. 13. 12. Thou sayest thou art affected with hopes after grace, thou hopest for grace, and for strength against sin, and thy hope is deferred, thy hope comes not yet, thou art not able to withstand thy corruptions, not able to subdue such a lust; no if thou beest affected at all with any hope, thy hope is deferred as yet: but hath it made thy heart sick? wert thou ever sick at heart for this grace? if it have not made thy heart sick, it's a sign thou wert never rightly affected with hope, for if thou wert, it would make thy heart sick to be so long without it, as thou hast been. May be thine affections are so strong set on the world, that thou hast been world-sick, and crosse-sick, and trouble-sick, and anger-sick, and revenge-sick, and covetousnesse-sick; as Ahab was sick, because he knew not how to get Naboths vineyard, 1 Kings 21.4. May be thou art crost, and sick of vexation; may be thou art incensed, and sick of revenge or impatiency: but art thou sick after grace? Aristotle calls the affections Ægritudines animi, they are the sicknesses of the soul; if the soul be affected indeed, she is sick if she speed not.

3. He is troubled with any interruption.

4 He hath his conversation in heaven whence grace descends.

Fourthly, He that is truly affected with grace, hath his conversation in heaven, whence all grace does descend. Animus est non ubi animat, sed ubi amat, the soul is, not where it animates, not where it sojourns, but where it affects; and therefore thou livest in heaven, if thou beest truly affected with heavenly things: he that is truly affected with grace, is most affected with the fountain of grace, which is God. God is the fountain of all grace, and if thou beest affected with it, thou art chiefly affected with God. Alas! thou mayest have a good memory, a good wit, and good parts, and be affected with them, and rejoyce that thou hast them. But all the question is this, art thou affected with God the fountain of grace? a wicked man may be affected with grace in the bucket, and yet have no love to grace in the fountain: it affects him well enough to have some, but it does not so like it to have much. Omne nimium vertitur in nigrum monachum, thinks he. It's the property of the godly to be affected with God; Rejoyce in the Lord O ye righteous, Psal. 33. 1. Be ye affected with God himself, sayes the Psalmist. One, he is affected with pleasures, another, he is affected with honour and respect, another, he is affected with profit, another, he may be affected with grace too, but it is the godly man only that is affected with God himself. Examine your affections, are ye affected with God himself? are ye affected with his glory?

It does infinitely stand us in hand, to have our affections set right; which I will prove by these eight arguments.

1. Hereby only are we marriageable to Christ. l. 1. de sacrif. Abel. & Cain.

First, hereby only are we marriageable to Christ. When a man goes a wooeing for a wife, all his care is to get her affections, hee'l never marry her if he be wise, if he may not have her affection, δῆλον ἐγγονον τῆς ψυχῆς ἐστι τὸ πάθος, sayes Philo. The affections are the womanhood of the soul, hee'l ne're marry her, if she be not a woman for him, much lesse will he marry her, if she be not a woman at all, he will not have a man for his wife, she shall be a woman certainly, if he ever mean for to marry her; she is not marriageable, but only for her affection; what a miserable soul then is thy soul, if thy affections be not right? thou art not marriageable to Christ. This is the rule of all wives, and of all Spouses, thy desire shall be to thy husband, Gen. 3. 16. Thine affections shall be to him, or thou canst not be his wife. He is a monster in nature that will have a wife, whose affection is set on another. What, dost thou take Christ for a monster, that thy soul should be married to him, when thine affection is forestalled? If thine affections be to the world, and to the strumpet-like things of the world, Christ cannot abide thee. knowest thou not that the love of the world is enmity with God? Out thou filthy strumpet-like soul, betrothest thou thine affections to the world, and yet hopest to be married to Christ? thou art not marriageable to him, it gains and pleasures and vanities, and such like base paramours be welcomed to thy heart, thou canst not be married unto Christ, thou art the worlds spouse and the devils spouse, when thine affections be inordinate. Uncleanneise and inordinate affection, the Apostle puts them together, Mortify your members which are on the earth, fornication, uncleanneſſe, inordinate affection, Col. 3. 5. So that thy soul is a filthy and unclean soul, that hast these inordinate affections unmortified in thee, thy soul is a fit spouse for the unclean spirit, and not for Christ, and therefore it deeply concerns you to have your affections set right, because thereby only are ye marriageable to Christ.

Secondly, Hereby onely does the soul set up favorites in her heart: those are the hearts favorites whom the heart most affects. Now if Christ be not thy hearts favorite, what a woful condition art thou in? It hath been the undoing of many a Prince, the having of ill favorites; and that soul must needs be for ever undone, that hath ill favorites in her heart. As soon as Joseph was in favor with the the Keeper of the prison, Ioseph presently had all at command, nothing was done, but Ioseph was the doer of it, Gen. 39. 21. He was no sooner in favour, but he was Dominus fac totum, as we say; he ruled all then. Look what thy heart does affect, that is in favour with thy heart; that is Dominus fac totum. If thy pleasures and thy vanities be once in favour with thy heart, Christ can have no command of thy heart, no further than thy lusts will give leave; thou canst not reform any thing that is amisse, no further than thy lusts will give leave: wouldst thou repent, or stand for Gods glory? thou canst not unlesse thy lusts do give leave: wouldst thou be reproved, or well counselled? thou canst not unlesse thy lusts will give leave, as long as thy lusts are in favour with thy heart, they govern all, they command all, thy mind goes as they tend, thy thoughts come as they call, thy courses are as they will. I will give this people favour in the sight of the Egyptians, and they shall spoyle the Egyptians, Exod. 3. 21, 22. When they were once in favour with them, they might spoyle them, and rob them, and borrow any Jewels of them, and never pay them again; they might do any thing, when they were in favour with them. O the misery of the soul, when the world, or pleasure, or sin, or the like are in favour with it, they spoyle it, and rob it, and bereave it of all the Jewels it hath; Christ can do nothing to any purpose with that soul, that favours other things besides Christ. Now if thine affections be not set right, thy favour is not right set: this is the reason why thou art wedded to the world, and wedded to thy lusts, that thine affections cannot be unto Christ. When Hadad had great favour with Pharaoh, Pharaoh even married his own wives sister unto Hadad, 1 King. 11. 19. He made him his brother, he brought him into the neerest relation he could, when his favour was set towards him. So if thou favourest the things of this life, thou weddest thy soul to them. What an infinite indignity is this unto Christ, that such base and sordid things should be in favour, and Christ not be thy soules favourite?

2 Hereby onely does the soule set up favorites in her heart.

Thirdly, hereby the soule is convertible and reconcileable to God. Be a man never so crosse and crooked, never so cruelly and implacably bent to transgresse, yet as long as there be affections in him to be wrought, his heart may be wonne. Though a Kings wrath be as the roaring of a Lion, though he be never so fallen out with a man, yet as long as there be affections in the King, patience, wisdom, and humbling ones self, and the like, these things may perswade him: by long forbearing is a Prince perswaded, Prov. 15. 15. Without a man have any affections in him, he is not capable of perswasion, ἐστι δὲ τὰ πάθη δι' ὅσα μεταβάλλουσι, &c. sayes Aristotle. The affections are they whereby a man is mutable. For though it be a weaknesse to be mutable, yet when a man is evill and wicked, it's a blessed weaknesse that he is mutable from himself. Now if a man be grievously set upon mischiefe, though he be an enemy of all grace and of goodnesse, yet as long as there be any affections left in him, he is not an implacable enemy: no, his affections fections are a possible subject to be wrought on, the Word and the Spirit may perswade him; and therefore what a care should we have of our affections, because thereby we are placable and reconcileable to God? The Apostle yokes these two together, without natural affection, implacable, Rom. 1. 31. for a man as long as he hath any natural affection left, he is never implacable: still he may be perswaded, unless his affections degender, and prove to be unnatural; if the affections depend on this fashion, he is not only wicked and an enemy to grace, but he is an implacable enemy: think then what wrong ye do to your own souls, so unnaturally to set your affections, to let them to degender as you do, and wander after vanity. Beware how ye do so, ye go about to divert all possibility of conversion, and provoke the Lord to count you implacable enemies to grace and to the scepter of his dear Sonne.

3 Hereby the soul is convertible and reconcileable to God.

4. The affections are the hands of the soul.

Fourthly, it may appeare how infinitely it stands you in hand to set your affections aright, because the affections are the hands of your soules. Ye cannot take hold of any thing in the World to do you any good but by your affections. For as hands are to the body, so the affections are to the soul. Will a man be so mad as to put his hand and his fingers out of joynt? alas he cannot take hold of so much as his meat for to eat it. So the affections are the hands of the soul. He that hath clean hands and a pure heart. Psal. 24. 4. that is, he whose affections are clean, and heart pure. I will wash my hands in innocency, and so will I compasse thine Altar. Psal. 26. 6. that is, I will purge mine affections, and so I will pray. I will that men pray every where lifting up holy hands without wrath, 1 Tim. 2. 8. that is, lifting up holy affections, without the distempered affections of wrath or anger or the like: the affections are the hands of the heart, whereby it takes the word or the Commandement, or any thing to it. Now what a horrible thing is it that these hands of thine should be put out of joynt? as long as thine affection are to the things here on Earth, they are all out of joynt; thou canst never take grace. Ye cannot take hold of a promise nor any of the word, unless your affections be right. I know that Faith is the right hand of the soul, whereby it takes hold of that which is good. But alas the hand of Faith is clumbsie without the affections. Such a one had a crosse, how did he take it? say we; that is, how is he affected under it? ye take it ill to be reproved of your sins: ye take it ill to be warned and admonished either in publique or private. Ye take it ill to be told of the judgements of God against your lusts. Alas, how can you do otherwise? ye cannot take it well, when your affections, that should take it well, are set upon vanity? wilt thou binde up and hamper thine affections in the things of the Earth? alas thy hands are quite bound, thou canst not take hold of Christ or of Heaven. Thou doest even pinion thine own soul and shackle it for Hell. What does the Devil, when he shackles a man like a prisoner for Hell and damnation? he binds him hand and foot, and so casts him into utter darknes; he binds up his heart and affections, that he cannot weepe, nor he cannot repent of his sins, he cannot rejoyce in grace, nor in goodnesse, he cannot delight in the word, he binds up his affections which are the hands and feet of the soul, and so fits him for Hell and destruction: above all things then be sure that thy hands be loose, and thine affections at liberty to set them upon Heaven.

5. The Affections are the handles of our hearts.

Fiftly, it may appear how infinitely it stands you in hand to set your affections aright, because they are not onely the hands, but the handles of your hearts, as your hearts can catch hold of nothing that is good, unless your affections take hold, so nothing can take hold of your hearts, but by your affections. If ever the word do convert you, it must catch hold of you. Jesus said unto Simon, henceforth thou shalt catch men, Luke 5. 10. that is, the preaching of the Word, it shall catch men, when thou preachest. Now one of the first

holds that it catcheth, is by the affections. Men are affected with the word, and so it comes to convert men; now beloved, had you not need to have a care of your affections, seeing they are the handles of your hearts? were it not for them, the word could never catch hold on you. There is no hold to be had of such a man, as we say; that is, that his affections are slippery. Beloved, here you come to Gods House, miserable wretched soules, in your sins, alas, how is it possible that ever Gods Ministers should catch hold of your hearts! your affections are the main hold that we can catch of you. If your affections be not here, but run after the things of this life, we can have no hold of you, you have nothing that we should take hold by. Indeed we may catch hold of your understandings: that's nothing unless we take hold of your affections, they are as slippery Eeles, we can scarce ever hold them. O could we take hold of them, it were well: they are fair handles for us to take hold by. O if we could but truly affect your hearts with the truth, then we might have some hope to convert you. As Epictetus sayes of wrongs and of injuries, and all things in the World; every thing hath δύο λαβάς. Every thing hath two handles, O sayes he, if a man could take hold of every wrong at the right handle, then he would bear it patiently; so I may say of your hearts. Your hearts have two handles. I pray God the word may take hold at the right handle of your hearts. The true affections of the heart, if ever the word take hold of them, it hath taken hold of the right handle; Is it not then a lamentable thing that mens affections are misplaced? alas they are the hold of the heart, and the heart can never be taken, unless they be set right. Epict.

Sixthly, it may appear how infinitely it stands you in hand to set your affections aright, because they are the soules stomack; that which the soul does affect, that feeds and filleth the soul, as meat does the stomack. Is it not necessary to be carefull what meat we do eat? if we eat trash it will kill us, if we feed upon poyson, it will poyson and infect us. Now that is the food of thy soule, which thy soul does affect, and thine affection is thy soules stomack to hunger after it, thine affections are ὀρεκτικὴ δυνάμεως, sayes Aspasius, they are the appetite of the soul. Such then as your affections are, such is your food. Should you see a man feed upon dirt and upon bricks, and upon carrion, certainly you would say, unless he be broken therefrom, it will kill him. No remedy but it will kill him without doubt. And wilt thou feed thy soule with vanities, and with trash, and with poyson? Every thing is trash besides Christ, every thing is poyson besides Christ and his graces; if thou feedest upany thing besides Christ and his spirit, thou feedest upon trash and upon poyson. Now if thou set thine affections here below, thou feedest upon trash. Thou murthrest thy soul with such food, it's rank poyson, and yet thou feedest upon it. That which thou affectest, that's thy soules food. As new born babes desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby, 1 Pet. 2. 2, milk, ye know, is the babes food: if it have not its food, it cannot possibly live. But the word is the milk and the food of the soul, and that the Apostle would have you to set your affections upon. Desire it, or affect it, sayes he: where note your affections are the stomack of your soul. The word is your food. All other food is but trash, and it feeds you accordingly, O ye poor soules that feed upon poyson all the day long, that dyet your soules with nothing but trash, and filth, and froth, how long will ye do thus? O set your affections on things that are above, these are the wholesome food of your soules, &c. 5. Affections are the soules stomack. L. 2. ad Nicom. c. 3.

Seventhly, it may appear how infinitely it stands you in hand to set your affections aright, because they are the maine matter of grace. They are ὕλη τῆς ἀρετῆς, They are the materials of grace; as Aristotle sayes of the vertues, they are nothing but the right ruling of the affections, so may I say of grace with 7. Affections are are the main matter of grace. Arist.

with a little alteration, the maine work of grace is the ruling of the affections aright, it takes them off from the things here on earth, and lifts them up to the things that are in Heaven. When grace does convert a man, it does not take away the affections, but it ruleth them. Thou wert angry before, grace does not take away thine anger. No, oportet virum bonum esse iracundum, sayes Cicero. A good man must he angry. I say grace does not take away thine anger, but it ruleth thine anger, and teaches thee to turne it against sin, and against the dishonour of God. Thou wert merrily disposed before, of a cheerful constitution, grace does not come to take away thy mirth, but to rule it. Whereas thou wert merry with vanity, and ever laughing at jests and at fooleries, now grace makes thee merry in Gods service, and to rejoyce in the Lord. Thou wert of a sad spirit before, but perhaps it was for crosses and losses, and discontents and the like, grace comes not to take away thy sorrowes, but to rule them, to make thee weepe and mourne at thy deadnesse and unthankfulnesse towards the Lord Jesus Christ.

Gratia non tollit, sed attollit naturam. Grace does not take away nature, but it taketh it up. The affections are natural, grace turns them into spiritual; this I say brethren, that ye may see how that grace runs along in the affections, as water in the pipe. The affections are the matter of grace. As the soul is in the body; the body is the matter; And the soul is in it, and so makes up a living creature. A man had need look to his body, for it is the due matter of his soul; so it is with the affections, thou hast need to be careful of them, for they are the matter of grace: and therefore the Apostle calls the affections the members; yeeld your members servants unto righteousnesse, Rom. 6.19. that is, as expositors expound it, yeild your affections thereto.

For they are your soules members, and the materials of grace: is not fear the matter of the fear of Lord? and love the matter of the love of the Lord? and sorrow the matter of repentance from sin? now if the affections be the materials of grace, what a desperate condition are ye in, that set your affections upon the things here below? ye throw down all the matter of grace. How can ye have any grace, when ye cast away in the kennel all the matter for grace. Grace requires the affections for its matter, and thou hast no matter, for this grace. Thou hurlest away all thine affections upon thy pleasures, and thy profits, and thy vanities, thou art so farre from all grace, as that thou hast no matter for grace.

3. Affections are arguments what we be.

Eighthly, it may appear how infinitely it stands you in hand to set your affections aright, because they are arguments what ye be. According as your affections are, so are your souls: if I could see what your affections run on, I could see what ye all be; whether Saints or wicked, whether of God, or the Devil. The affections are the arguments that a man is a man. When the people of Lystra took Paul and Barnabas for gods, and would have sacrificed to them, Sirs, sayes Paul, why do ye thus, whereas we are men of like passions with you? Acts 14.15. that is, affections: we have fear, and joy, and griefe, and love, and the like passions with you. Now if the bare having of affections be the arguments that a man is a man, then surely the goodnesse or vainenesse of these affections are the arguments that a man is a Christian man, or an ungodly man. I beseech you consider what a woful distressed condition ye are in, if your affections be vain and earthly. Ye carry a brand in your hearts that ye are not of God, that ye are yet the slaves of Satan and the servants of unrighteousnesse, and your end is no better than eternal death and destruction. Affectus virum indicat. Your affections shew you what men and women ye be, &c.

The IV. Sermon.

Colos. 3. 2.

Set your affections on things that are above, &c.

HItherto it suffices to have spoken of the coherence of the words, wherein ye have heard.

First, what these affections be.

Secondly, that a wicked man cannot set his affections on God.

Thirdly, how far forth a wicked man may have good affections, and how they differ from the godlis.

Fourthly, how they may examine themselves, and find that their affections are not set right.

Fifthly, eight severall arguments to convince them, what a wofull condition they are in, till their affections are set upon God.

Now for the words, they contain a speciall duty, that a Christian is bound to, namely to set his affections upon God. The Apostle presses it strongly.

It is a Christians duty to set his affections upon God.

First, because it's an infallible mark of our being or not being in Christ. If ye be risen with Christ, &c. set your affections on things above. As if he should say; Ye say ye are risen with Christ, come then and demonstrate it now that ye are risen with Christ. If ye be risen with Christ, this will infallibly follow. Ye will set your affections above; it cannot be otherwise. If your affections be not set above, doubtlesse ye are not risen with Christ. Those that are Christs, sayes S. Paul, have crucified the flesh, with the affections and lusts, Gal. 5. 24. He takes it for granted, that if they be Christs, they have crucified the flesh and the affections to the World-ward, and set them upon God.

1. Reason. Because it is an infallible argument of our being, or not being in Christ.

Secondly, he presses it as a matter of reasonable equity; the competition stands but between two, Either things in Heaven, or things on Earth. One of them ye must set your affections upon; ye cannot set your affections upon both; if ye set your affections any where, ye must needs set them upon one of these two. Mark the competition. Set your affections on things that are above, not on the things on the Earth: now there's a necessity of reason, that Election should be made of the best, that we should set our affections on the better of the twain: to wit, the things that are in Heaven, which are infinitely better then the things here on Earth. Set your affections on things that are above, and not on the things on Earth. So that hence ye may see the necessity of this duty. We must set our affections above, or which is all one, upon God. The strength of this necessity will the better appear, if we consider these four things.

Reas. 2. Because it is a matter of reasonable equity.

Yea of necessity:

First, that God is the principall object of our affections: as the eye is made to be set upon colours, and the ear is made to be set upon sounds, and the smell is made to be set upon odours; so the affections are made to be principally set upon God. The affections are so naturally due unto God, that if it be not God the soules affections are set on, it makes it a God or an Idol. And

1. Because God is the principall object of our affections.

therefore the Apostle bids us mortifie our inordinate affections, evill concupiscence, and covetousnesse, which is Idolatry, Colos. 3. 5. when our affections are set upon gaines, and upon profits, and the things of this life, the Apostle calls this covetousnesse, and this covetousnesse he sayes it's idolatry; because the soule makes Gold a god, and Silver a god, and Profit a god, by setting it's affections thereupon. As the eye does either see colours, or else it sees a thing under the likenesse of a colour: colour is the principall object of the sight, and therefore if it be not a colour which it sees, (as the eye may see light, as the light of the fire, the light of the Sun, but it sees it under the likeness of redness, or whitenesse, or some other colour) it appears by a colour, or else it cannot see it. So beloved, it is either God our affections are on, or we idolize it as a God. Indeed we may affect other things as mediums, and in reference to God; but look where we set our affections, that is our God. Only, fear the Lord, and serve him with all your heart, 1 Sam. 12. 24. We must set our affection of fear only upon God. The affections are the soules attendants. Doth not a servant wait only upon his own Master? whom he gives his attendance unto, him he maketh his Master, and whom should the soule wait on but only upon God? the affections are the soules attendances; upon whomsoever the bestowes them, the waites upon it as true God. My soule, sayes David, my soule wait thou only upon God, Psal. 62. 5. Give thine attendance to none but to him. Thine affections of love, and of joy, and of hope and desire, these must wait upon God for to worship him. Thine affections of fear and of care, these must wait upon God to provide what ever may please him. Thine affections of hatred, and of grief, and sorrow, and the like, these must wait as a guard to keep off what ever may offend him; thine affections are principally for God: this is the first ground, the affections were made for God.

2. Nothing but God hath that which the affections look for, because nothing is good but God. Chrysost.

Secondly, as the affections were principally made for this purpose, to be set upon God, so nothing but God hath that which the affections look for. It is God which the affections look for, and where can the affections find it but only in God? there is none good but one, that is God, Matth. 19. 17. The young man would have thought he sought for good in a right place, when he sought for it in Christ. But as Chrysostome observes, ὡς ἀνθρώπῳ ψιλῷ, when he lookt upon Christ as a meer man, Christ tells him he was mistaken in calling him good, there is none good but one, that is God. Christ himself, as near as he was unto good, as he came nearer to it then any Creature, in Heaven or in Earth, yet if he had been a Creature, and men had set their affections on him, as their good, being a Creature, they had set their affections amisse: why callest thou me good? sayes he; so much more does every Creature answer. Thou thinkest riches, honours and pleasures are good. Why call ye me good? may they all say, there's none good but one, that is God. Will a man seek for the Sun in a pale of water? Indeed if the Sun shine on the water, there may you see it. But if the Sun do not look on it, you may look over all the waters in the world, and never find the Sun in them all. So will you set your affections on the things of the world? it is good, your affections look for, can ye find any good in these things? alas, alas, thou mayest have all the things of this world, yet if God do not shew thee his face, and his grace in the same, stultus ad cribrum, thou runnest to them, as a foole to a sive. The sive seems to hold a great deal of water, but by pulling the sive from the water, the fool lost all the water. So riches, and wealth, and pleasures, as long as thou hast them in grace, and in God, they are like sives in the water, full of water as long as they are in. So these are full of good, as long as they are in God and in grace; But if thou dost not set thine affections upon God, thine affections are befooled, and therefore thou must set thine affections upon God, because nothing but God hath that which thine affections look for. It is good which the affections look for, and thine affections can finde it nowhere but in God.

Thirdly, as nothing but God hath that which the affections looke for, nothing is good but he, so nothing is my good but onely he, for if it be good, and not my good, this discontents mine affections; mine affections look at my good. I know compassion, and mercy, and love may look at the good of another; but then they consider some kinde of propriety in that other, either as my brother or friend, or my neighbour, still the affections have an eye unto my good, thine affections to thy good. Now nothing in the world can so truly be said thy good, as thy God. Other goods are called this Worlds goods, 1. John 3.17. They are the goods of this world rather than thy goods: But God is thy goodnesse; Thou art my goodnesse, O Lord, sayes the Psalmist, Psal. 144.2. Thou canst not say of thy pleasures, this is my goodnesse, nor of wealth, this is my goodnesse; nor of any thing in the world, this is my goodnesse: the good that is in it, is the goodnesse of the thing, not thy goodnesse; if I should say, this is thy goodnesse, it's all one as if I should say, thou hast no goodnesse, for that's none of thine, but only by possession, it is not thy goodnesse. And therefore how canst thou set thine affections upon it?

3. Because nothing is my good but onely God.

First, it is onely the good of thy body, it is not thy good. Anima hominis est homo, sayes Plato. The soule is the man, rather than the body. If the things of this life be the goods of the body, then how canst thou set thine affections upon them? Thine affections are the affections of thy soule. Meat is good, let thy body hunger after it, and thou sinnest not: drink is good; let thy body thirst after it, thou errest not; but wilt thou set thine affections upon it? when it is not thy good, but onely the good of thy body, it is not thy good: means & maintenance is the good of thy body, house, and lands, and livings, these are the good of thy body, let the desires of thy body be to them, this is wel yet; but if the desires of thy soul be thereto, if thou set thine affections upon them, thou art a beast, because they are not thy good. As Theophylact well observs upon the rich man in the Gospel; Soul, thou hast much goods layd up for many yeares, Luke 12.19. Take thine ease, eat, drink and be merry, sayes he; see the baseness of this fools affections, sayes Theophylact: to eat, to drink, and to be merry; these were the goods of his unreasonable part; to rejoyce in Gods law; to rejoyce in holy thoughts and meditations, these are the goods of the soul, of the reasonable soul of a man. Now the foole he had none of these goods layd up; and yet he says, soul thou hast much good laid up for many years, whereas that very night he dyed and was damned for ever; the things of this life then are not thy good, and therefore thou must not set thine affections upon them.

1. The good of the Creature not thy good, because but the good of the body.

2. It is not thy good, because it is not as long as thou art. Thou must live for ever in Heaven or in Hel. Now all the goods of this life, they last but this life, when thou dyest, thou must leave them to others, and therefore they are not thy goods, were they thy goods thou mightest carry them away with thee when thou diest; but this cannot be. Canst thou carry thy barns and thy houses, to Heaven or to hel with thee? canst thou carry thy Dogs and thy hounds, and thy pleasures, and thy preferments to another world with thee? No, no, and why then doest thou set thine affections upon them, when they are not thy goods for to carry with thee where ever thou goest? if thou wouldst set thine affection, upon grace and upon God, thou shouldst set thine affections upon thy goods; these are thy goods as long as thou livest, and these are thy goods when thou dyest, and these thou mayest carry with thee whithersoever thou goest. Wilt thou set thine eyes upon that which is not? sayes Solomon; for riches certainly make themselves wings, they fly away as an Eagle, Pro. 23.5. wilt thou set thine affections upon that which is not? wealth is not, and pleasure is not, and all the things of this world are not, they make themselves wings, now may be they are a bird in the hand, but by and by they are gone, there's a wing of prodigality, a wing of change, and mishaps, and of casualties wings of losses and other occurrences, and though thou couldest clip all these wings with thy wisdome, yet the wing of death and mortality will carry them all away in a moment, and then whose shall they be? thy pleasures then whose shall they be? thy gains and thy comings in whose shall they be? sure it is, they shall be none of thine, and therefore set thine affections elsewhere, thou must set them upon God.

2. Because not so long as thou art.

3. Because they will not take thy part.

3. They are not thy good, because they will not take thy part. Will any man set his affections on him that will not take his part? how can I affect him that will not affect me? if hee'l leave me in the lurch, I can never affect him as my friend. Alas, all the things of this life will leave thee in the lurch, thou mayest perish and be damned for all them. They'l never deliver thee from the hand of Hell; when thou comest before the tribunall of Christ, doest thou think it will profit thee to say, Lord I have hunted and hawked, and gamed and sported, and I have been merry; will it benefit thee to say, Lord I have builded and purchased, and increased my livings and my rents, I have a good house, and a good farme, and good friends, will this advantage thee? no, Miserable comforters are they all; canst thou say, Lord I have built up thy Church and thy worship I have purchased zeal and holinesse, and pureness, and glory to thy name, I have been persecuted and hated of all men for thy name sake, and I am in Christ, &c. If thou canst say thus, this would be thy good indeed; but if thou canst not say thus though thou beest Juven. Sat. 13. Gallinæ filius albæ thou mayest perish with the devils and cursed fiends for evermore for all the blessings of this life. Set thine affections then upon God: truly God is good to Israel, sayes the Psalmist, Ps. 73. 1. He is good, and he truly is good; thou canst not say so of all the things under Heaven; thou canst not say truly riches are good to me. Pleasure truly is good to me, peace and plenty and liberty truly is good to me; they are good, but they'le never be good to thee; when thou hast most need of good, then they'le leave thee in the lurch, these doe thee no good then. This is the third, as nothing but God is good, so nothing is thy good, but God.

4. Nothing can rest the soule but onely God.

Fourthly, as nothing is thy good but God, so nothing can rest thine affections but God. When thou affectest any thing, wherefore doest thou affect it, but onely to rest contented therewith, when thou hast it? and therefore thou must set thine affections upon God, because nothing can rest thy soule, but onely thy God, rest in the Lord, Psal. 37. 7. Returne unto thy rest, O my soule, Psal. 116. 7. God is the rest of the soule; if the soule ever get him, it resteth content, the affections are in a maze, if they be not set upon God, like a man in a quagmire, he sinks deeper and deeper. So a man sinks deeper and deeper in desires and in wishes, that hath not his affections upon God; there is nothing can give the soul rest, if the soul rest not in God. Wil meat in a dream and drink in a dream give satisfaction to our hunger, and our thirst? So are all the good things in this world. Isa. 29. 8. Go to all the wicked men in the Earth, let them desire & have their desires, stil they desire and further they desire, and yet they desire after millions of desires, their affections are as farre for to seek for rest, as if never they had sought. All the things in the world are like some Ale-house-beer, which will never quench the poore Travellers thirst, like the eating of salt neats-tongues; the more they doe eat, the more they are a thirst: hungry meat, He that desireth silver, shall never be satisfied with silver, he that affects pleasure and vanitie, shall never bee contented nor satisfyed therewith, give him ones, he affects tens; give him tens, he affects hundreds: give him hundreds, he affects thousands; give him them, he affecteth millions; thou canst never get rest, till thine affections are pitcht upon God. Quieplus sunt potæ plus sitiuntur aquæ. It's God onely that resteth the affections. Now if these be so, is it not our best way to set our affections on God, where we may have rest for our souls? nothing besides can give us any rest.

First

First, because nothing but God is all-good. Every good besides God hath but one or two goodnesses in it, None but God hath all goodnesses in him; what is meat good for, but onely to feed one? when thou hast it, thou must desire again to have raiment, for meat wil not cloth thee? what is raiment good for, but only to cover one; when thou hast it, thou must desire again to be fed, for raiment will not feed thee; what is mony good for, but only to buy with? when thou hast it, thou must desire again to be recovered of thy sickness, for mony wil not cure thee of the Fever: thus no good thing in the world can give thine affections a rest, because they have but one or two goodnesses a piece in them, but the Lords goodness is infinite, he is all-good; if thou hast him, thou wantest no manner of thing that is good. They that seek the Lord shall not want any good thing, Psal. 34. 10. For every good thing is in him. He is bread to the hungry, and drink to the thirsty, and health to the sick, and liberty to the captive, all in all to them that set their affections on him. Frustra fit per plura quod fieri potest per pauciora. If thine affections go to any creature, thou fetchest but a little good at once, thine affections will be fain to go a thousand and a thousand times over and over, thou getteſt so little at once, that thou shalt be tempted to be affecting the other; but if thine affections go to God, thou goest to the fountain, there thou hast it by drops, never enough, here thou mayest have it at once. Who would be so mad to fetch water at a Cock that runneth by drops, when the Fountain is by? 1 Because nothing but God is all-good.

Secondly, because nothing but God is the ultimate good. Thou affectest the things of this life, alas they will never give rest, for still there is something beyond them, but God is the utmost of all goods, when the soul is once setled on him, it hath no further to go; like the stone, when its come to the centre, it hath no further to go. I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, the first and the last, saies Christ; if the soul be in Christ, Christ is his last, the soul is at rest; why? it hath no where to go: whether should we go, saies Peter to Christ? Thou hast the words of eternal life, John 6. Christ first, and Christ next, & Christ last; Christ is the utmost and ultimat good of the soul; the soul hath no further to go: and therefore here must thou fix thine affections, fix them upon Christ. 2 Nothing but God is the ultimate good Thirdly, because nothing is it self without God; the things of this life, they are good I confesse, but they are not themselves without God; if God be not in them the very good that they have, is not in them. When thou affectest pleasure and delight, answer me, why doest thou affect it, is it not for the good that is in it? when thou affectest profit, or health, or peace, or friends, or credit, or what ever thou affectest, tell me in thy conscience why doest thou affect them; is it not for the good that is in them? they are good, therefore thou affectest them: but if thou hast not Christ, and God, and his Spirit, and his grace, if thou hast not the Lord in these things, they are not themselves, neither have they the good that is in them. Riches is no riches without grace, but a snare; health is no health without Christ, but a curse; peace and pleasure are not themselves without God, but poyson; thy good parts are thy bane, thy money is thy vengeance, thy goods are a witnesse against thee without Christ. If thou beest not in Christ, if not a new creature, one day thou shalt curse that ever thou wert born, and therefore much more shalt thou curse that ever thou had means, or maintenance, or life, or health, or any thing; the more thou hadst of these blessings, if Christ be not with them, as he is not, if thou beest not a new creature, I say, if Christ be not in them the blessings are not themselves; they have not the good that is in them without Christ. David had a Castle, and a Buckler, and a Horne, but they were not themselves without God. Lord thou art my Castle, and my Buckler, and the Horne of my salvation. David had a servant to make his bed in his sickneſſe, but to let us know that this blessing was not it self without God, he puts the phrase upon God, Who made his bed in his sickneſſe; no 3. Nothing is it selfe without God.

blessing is it selfe without Christ, or without God. He hath all the goodnesse that is in it. The Heathens have a pretty phrase, whereby they set out a happy man, Undecunque Deus, When God is every way about him; about him in his meanes and his riches, about him in his house and in his goods, about him in his friends and acquaintance, about him in his pleasure and mirth: he is not happy unlesse God be in every thing that is about him; they are but the carkasses of good, if God be not in them. Thus ye see we must set our affections on God.

Use
It is a blessing of God that we have affections.

Here then we are taught, That it is a blessing of God that we have affections implanted in our hearts. For how could they be set upon God, if it were not a blessing that we have them? There is a main controversie between the Philosophers, the Stoicks, and the Peripatetiques, concerning the affections: the Stoicks do stifly maintain, that it is an evill to have any affections at all: and therefore Zeno defines the affections to be unnaturall stirrings of the heart, averse from right reason, which is false, for this is the definition of affections as they are corrupt, and not as they are affections: the affections in themselves are not sinfull.

Apud Cic. Tusc. l. 4.

The affections are not in themselves sinfull.

1. Because Adam and Eve had affections in innocency

First, because Adam and Eve had affections in innocency. If the affections were all sinfull in themselves, Adam and Eve in their innocency could not have had them, for they were created without sin: but they were created with affections, as love, and joy, and delight, and hope, and fear and the like. Before Eve ever sinned, we see plainly she was afraid to eat of the forbidden fruit; indeed when the Devill had ripened his temptation, then she went fearlesly on for to eat it; but when the Devill assaulted her at the first, O sayes she, We may not eat of it lest we die. Gen. 3.3. Lo she was afraid for to eat it at first. I confesse before the fall, may be they had not all the affections in act, because there were no objects for all the affections to worke on; they had nothing to grieve for, nothing to be angry at, nothing to despair of; but for my part I think they had distinct objects to work on, though not in themselves, for they had not sinned as yet, yet they had distinct objects in the world for all their affections to work on, for should they not grieve to see God dishonoured by the fall of the Angels? should they not hate and abhor backsliding from God? though there were none in themselves, nevertheless the affections of fear and hatred were given them to keep away sin and apostacy from God. Now if the affections were in Adam in innocency, they could not be sinfull in themselves.

2. Because Christ took our affections upon him

2. Because Christ took our affections upon him. If the affections were sinfull themselves, he could not take our affections upon him; for he was made like unto us, sin only excepted: & therefore if the affections were sins, he could not have taken our affections; but he did take them, as the Gospel doth abundantly shew. He had our affection of joy, Jesus rejoyced in Spirit, and said, I thank thee O Father, &c. Luke 20.23. He had our affection of sorrow, My soule is exceeding sorrowfull unto death, Matth. 26.38. He had our affection of anger: He looked round about on them with anger, being grieved at their hardnes of heart, Mar. 3.5. He had our affection of desire, with desire I have desired to eat this Passover with you before I suffer, Lu. 22.15. And so of the rest. If Christ took our affections upon him, our affections are not sinful in themselvs. Nay, he did not only as the Son of man take our primitive affections, as we are men, but he was Ben Enosh, he was the son of fraile man, Psal. 8.5. And he took our miserabiles affectiones, our affections of infirmity upon him; I do not mean the affections of sinfull infirmity, for he knew no sin: but I mean the affections of our frailty and infirmity, as fear, and fellow-feeling, and the like. We have not a High Priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin, Heb. 4.15. This then is an undeniable argument, that the affections are not sinfull in themselves, because Christ did assume them.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, because the Lord doth command us to be angry. Be angry and sin not, sayes he, he commands us to grieve and be sorry for our sins. Therefore also now saith the Lord, turn ye even to me with all your heart, and with fasting, and with weeping, and with mourning, Joel 2.12. He commands to fear. Work out your salvation with fear and trembling; pass the time of your sojourning here in fear. Be not high minded but fear. I will forewarn you, sayes Christ, whom ye shall fear, fear him which after he hath killed, hath power to cast into hell, yea, I say unto you, fear him, Luke 12. 5. He commands us to be ashamed of our evill doings, and is offended if we be not; thou hast a whores forehead, and refusest to be ashamed, Jer. 3.3. If the affections were sinful in themselvs, the Lord would not commandus to shew our affections on this wise; it's true, they are sinfully used and corruptly perverted among men, the more is the pity, but they are not so in themselvs. Neither do I deny but there be some natural affections, that are naturaly now, as corrupt nature does stand, that be sinful in themselvs, as envy & malice, and the like; which never can be regulated, nor guided by any moderation, but are quite to be rooted out: but these affections are not properly natural, they are no other wise natural then lice and vermin are natural to Carrion, then filthy & noysom weeds are natural to a cursed ground; these must be utterly rooted up and stubbed out of our hearts, because to speak properly they are unnatural affections and sinful in themselvs, but our natural affections are not sinfull in themselves. Nay more, let me tell you, the affections are not onely not sinfull, but it is an infinite blessing of God, that God hath given us affections. First, because if we had no affections at all, we should be like stocks and like senseless stones. The Philosopher was in a doubt, whether Brutus were not a block or a brute, because he had no affection at all to his own children, whom he could see murthered before him with dry eyes. The Lord himselfe counts that man a very block that hath no affection in his heart. Have ye no regard, all ye that passe by? behold and see if there were any sorrow like my sorrow, Lament 1.12. (q.d.) What are ye such blocks and stupid stocks, that ye can shew no affections at my sorrow? And therefore it's reckoned among the symptomes of a heart that is desperately hardened, not to be affected with any thing: to hear the Word, and not to be affected therewith, to pray unto God, and not to be affected with Gods presence; to be in affliction, and not to be affected with remorse. I say, this is a symptome of a hard heart. And therefore it is a blessing of God that a man hath affections within him. Secondly, because as Plutarch the very Heathen observes, were it not for our affections, our nature would be lazie and idle, ὥσπερ κυβερνήτης πνεύματος ὀκνηρὸν, Like a Pilot at sea without wind; alas! the ship would goe slowly, were there no winds stirring to drive it. So the affections, sayes he, are to the soule, as the wind to the sailes of the ship; as the ship could not saile apace without winds; so the soul would go slowly about any thing, if the affections did not carry it. When Davids affections were hampered about with wordly fears, fears of his enemies, and griefs at his persecutions which he suffered, he went slowly on in obedience, but as soon as his sails were up, then he ran like a ship in the sea with a great wind, I wil run the way of thy Commandements, when thou shalt enlarge my heart, Psal. 119.32. As soon as God would help him to spread the sailes of his heart, and enlarge his affections, then he would run like a fleet pinnace in the Seas. I will then run the way of thy Commandements, sayes he; this is an infinite mercy of God, who seeing how dull we are unto good, how slack to good duties, how slow to holy performances, vouchsafes us these winds and these sails for to carry us, καθάπερ ὄχημα τῷ λογισμῷ ἡ ὄρεξις τὸ πάθος sayes the same Philosopher. The affections are like wheeles, and like Chariots unto reason. If a mans reason be never so good, he knows he is bound to repent, and be godly, and obey; yet if he have no affections thereto, he goes like a Chario without wheels; he goes without force, force, he cannot go at all; but if he have affections thereto, the affections are like wheels, and like horſes to carry him amaine. Draw me, ſayes the Chriſtian ſoule unto Chriſt, draw me, and I will run after thee, Cant. 1.4. She prayes that Chriſt would draw her by the affections of love, for ſhe ſpeaks of love; the virgins love thee, ſaies ſhe, *V.*3. Draw me with thy love too, and then I ſhall run after thee, like the Chariots of Aminadab, that is, drawne by quick Horſes: ſhe would run as with wheels unto Chriſt, if her affections did once carry her. As Cicero ſayes of the affection of anger, it is cos fortitudinis, it is the whetſtone to valour; ſo I may ſay of all the affections, they are all whetſtones to good, if a man have any grace. Haſt thou love? it is a whetſtone to obedience, haſt thou grief? it is a whetſtone to repentance, haſt thou anger? it is a whetſtone to zeale, &c. What is the reaſon men come ſo ſlowly on unto good? the reaſon is this, becauſe their affections ſtand another way. Men repent but ſlowly, and amend their lives but ſlowly, increaſe in grace but ſlowly; why? this is the cauſe, their affections are to the world; they run on in their pleaſures and their vanities, they run on in their earthly imployments, and buſineſſes; why? their affections are thereto. O beloved, it is an infinite mercy of God, that we have affections given us of God, for theſe may quicken our dulneſſe unto grace. Thirdly, becauſe the affection are good chanels for grace to run down in. Be there never ſo full a fountain of good water, yet if it have not a chanell to run all along in, the fountain may be ever a bubling, but it choaketh it ſelf for want of a chanell. So though God ſhould put never ſo much grace into thy heart, yet if it ſhould have no chanell to run downe in, it would ſmother it ſelfe. Now God hath given thee affections like chanels, for grace to run down in. Art thou covetous and full of deſires? what a fine chanell is that for grace to run down in? it is eaſier for thee to covet the beſt things: art thou of a cholerick and angry conſtitution? what a fine chanel is that for zeale to Gods glory to run down in? it is the eaſier for thee to be zealous in Gods worſhip: art thou melancholy and of a ſad diſpoſition? what a fine chanell is that for repentance to run down in? it is the eaſier for thee to deſpite the vain pleaſures of the world, and to ſorrow for ſin: art thou merry and of a cheerfull nature? what a fine chanell is this for delight in the Lord to run down in? it is the eaſier for thee to joy in the Holy Ghoſt; art thou fearfull and of a timerous ſpirit? what a fine chanell is that for fear of Gods judgements and truth to run down in? it is the eaſier for thee to tremble before God, and fear to offend him. Solomon was full of the affections of love, it is true he let luſt after women, and uncleaneſs a while run down in that chanell, but when grace and repentance recovered his ſoul what an excellent chanell was it for love unto Chriſt to run down in? Never was there ſuch a love-ſong to Chriſt, as the Canticles, ſince the creation of the world to this day, and therefore it is called, Canticum Canticorum, the ſong of ſongs, Cant. 1.1. Certainly Jeremy was a man of a ſad conſtitution, but ſee what an advantage this bent of affection was to him, it was a chanell for ſpirituall ſadneſſe to run down in. Oh that my head were waters, and mine eyes a fountain of teares, to weep day and night for the ſlain of the daughter of my people, Jer. 9.1. The woman in the Goſpel which was a ſinner, a whore in plain tearms, one bewitched with the affections of love to her lovers; as ſoon as ever any grace did look into her heart, ſee how theſe affections did advantage her. She loved our Saviour more affectionately than S. Peter himſelfe, She loved much, ſayes the Text, Luke 7.47. Before no queſtion but ſhe was full of her whoriſh and ſtrumpet-like tears; now the chanell was turned, ſhe waſht Chriſts feet with her tears, and wipt them with the hair of her head: and ſhe loved much, ſayes the Text. It is ſuch an admirable advantage to be full of affections, that the Lacedemonian Schoolmaſter thought that if he had a young ſcholar full of affections, full of ſhamefaſtneſſe, and full of fear, and full of cheerfulneſſe, ποιήσω αὐτὸν ἀχβεβαι τοῖς αἰσχροῖς &c. He thought it was eaſie for him to make him aſhamed of all filthineſſe, and delighted in goodneſſe, and fearfull to do evil. I am not of his minde, but this I am, though he hath an exceeding good advantage to do it. If a man have ſpent his affections upon ſin and eaten out the heart of his affections upon vanity; or if a man have no affections at all, as ſome have but few, a man ſhall as ſoone work on a beaſt as ſuch a man. Nay if grace ſhould come in into ſuch a man, alas! he ſhall never be able to come to much good; if beſt come to the beſt, he ſhall have infinite adoe to do any duty without wofull dulneſſe and ſenſeleſneſſe; it is an admirable bleſſing that God gives unto men, to give them affections, and therefore the Stoicks are infinitely to blame to cry out of the affections, as if they were evill in themſelves. To ſpeak truly and rightly of the Stoicks, I do not thinke the Stoicks were ever ſo ſottiſh as to meane ſo; but their intent (as Auſtin ſaies) of them, was to pare off the affections that are evill, and to rule the affections that are naturall: and therefore it was that they declaim'd ſo bitterly againſt the affections. You ſee now by this Text I have choſen, that the affections are great gifts of the Lord, for how could the Apoſtle command us to ſet our affections upon God, if the affections were evill in themſelves? Nay it followes from hence, that it is a great bleſſing of God that we have any affections at all, that we may ſet them upon God.

The V. Sermon.

Set your affections on things that are aboue, &c.

THE Chriſtians of the Primitive Church had learnt this leſſon very well, to ſet their affections on Gods Kingdome, they were often thinking of it, often ſpeaking of it, in the companies they came in, they would be diſcourſing of it, inſomuch that the fooliſh heathen hearing them talking ſo often of a Kingdome, tooke them for aſſecters of Kingdomes, and accuſed them of aſpiring to be Kings, ὑμεῖν ἀκούσαντες βασιλείαν προσδοκώντας ἡμᾶς, ἀνθρώπινον λέγειν ἡμᾶς ὑπολήφατε, ſayes Juſtine Martyr. Ye hear, ſayes he, that we expect for a Kingdome. Ye imagine we look after humane Kingdomes. No, no, ſayes he, we mean the Kingdome with God and with Chriſt in Heaven above. Their affections were much there; Ye have heard beloved, the neceſſity of this duty, that we muſt ſet our affections upon God and his Kingdome, and grace. Ye have heard the reaſons why we muſt do ſo; for the uſe of the point, ye have heard a confutation of the Stoicks, that teach a vacuity of affections, and ſay the affections are all evill in themſelves. They cannot be evill in themſelves, becauſe we muſt ſet them upon God: were they evill in themſelves, it were unlawfull to ſet them upon God. But it is not onely not unlawfull, but alſo it is very neceſſary to ſet our affections upon God. O this is a hard duty to our corrupt fleſh, and ſo ye ſhall finde it, to ſet your affections on God. There be many lets that hinder us from ſo doing.

Apol. 6. pro Chriſtian. ad Antonin.

First

The first impediment that hinders the setting the affections on God, because it is an hard thing to turne an antipathy or sympathy.

First, because it is a very hard thing to turn an antipathy or a sympathy; our hearts are so deeply affected with the things of the world, as that they have a sympathy with them, and an antipathy against a removall there-from. When the affections are deep set with or against, they prove to be sympathies and antipathies, which are infinitely hard to be changed. The Philosophers call them occultas qualitates, hidden qualities, no reason can be given of them. No man can give a reason why the load-stone should be so deeply affected with iron, as to draw it unto it. It hath a sympathy with it; the wild Bull hath a sympathy with a fig-tree; nothing can tame him but it; the Elme hath a sympathy with the Vine: the Vine hath a sympathy with the Olive. No man can give a reason, why it should be so. So beloved, our deep affections are the sympathies of our hearts, and therefore seeing they are set to the things of the world, they are hardly removed. No reason, scarce any reason can sever them. Demas when he set his love upon the world, the text sayes he forsook Paul, and he embraced this present world, Demas hath forsaken me, and embraced this present world, 2 Tim. 4. 10. We translate it, he loved this present world, but the word signifies, and so other translations render it, he embraced this present World; that is, the affections of his heart had a sympathie with it, as the Ivie with the Elme, he embraced it. S. Paul could not hold him, no reason could withhold him, he had a sympathy with it. Now when the heart hath a sympathy with the things of the World, it must needs have an antipathy at grace; the proud man hath an antipathy at the parting with that which he prides in; the revengefull man hath an antipathy at the putting up of an injury. The stubborne man hath an antipathy at a sound reproof, he cannot endure to be sharply rebuk't for his sins. As some men, (suffer a homely similitude) some men I say have an antipathy with Cheese, they will goe out of the room where it is. As the mullet hath an antipathy with the Pike; the Coleworts have an antipathy with the Vine; theyle die rather than grow together. So men are vext to be curbed of their lusts. The affections are the sympathies and the antipathies of the heart, and therefore it's very hard to remove, it will cost thee a mighty deal of labour to pull off thine affections from all the things in the world, and to set them upon God. Secondly, it's a hard thing to work on the heart, when the heart is bewitcht. The affections are the bewitchings of the heart: when the heart hath once set its affections on the the things of the World, its even quite bewitched therewith. Foolish people talke much of bewitchings; Brethren let me tell you, here's a bewitching ye little consider. Your affections bewitch you. O foolish Galatians who hath bewitched you, that ye should not obey the truth? Gal. 3. 1. Δαίμων & ἐπῴδημα sayes S. Chrisostome; this is the bewitching of the Devill; the false Apostles had wrought upon the Galatians affections, and drawne them from the truth, and now when their affections were set on't, the Apostle sayes they were bewitcht. The affections, when once they are up about a thing that is earthly or carnall, they are like a company of Devils in Hell to bewitch one: there be abundance of bewitchings in nature. The bird Galgalus, if she see a man that is sick of the Jaundize, the man recovers, and she is so bewitched therewith that she dyeth. If a Toad be seen by the Wesill to gape, the Wesil is so bewitched, that she gives up her selfe to be devoured: but of all the bewitchings in the World, the bewitching of the affections are the most dangerous. Eucilides was in so deep an affection to his own beauty, that he was bewitcht with it: were not Samsons affections bewitched with Delilah? were not Herods affections bewitcht with Herodias? were not Judas his affections bewitcht with thirty pence again, that for it he should deny his owne Master? S. Paul tels the Galatians their affections were bewitcht. S. Hierome thinks verily the Devill was in them. The Drunkard is bewitcht with his Cuppes; the Adulterer with his whore, whore, the angry man with his choler, the vaine man with his vanities, the carnall man with his flesh; that will damn their own souls, rather than be new Creatures. Beloved, are not ye bewitched in your sins, when all the preaching and teaching and warning ye have had, cannot yet turne you from your sinnes unto God, to set your affections above? this is a grievous let that sends millions to Hell, their affections bewitch them. Ye need no Devils to tempt you to sinne: if your affections be once set on't, they'le bewitch you as bad as any Devil can bewitchyou. Nay, the Devil cannot bewitch you to sin, but onely by your affections, If ever thou save thy soul, thou shalt find it a great task to unbewitch thine affections to set them upon grace.

3. Because affections are the estimations of the heart.

Thirdly, another let is, that as the affections are the bewitchings of the heart, so they are the estimations of the heart. If the thing be not good enough to be affected, which the affections are set on, they esteem it to be. Quisquis amat ranam, ranam putat esse Dianam. Many of you know the old Proverb. If a man should set his affections on a Frogge, there's little goodnesse in a Frog, why it should be affected; but if a man should set his affections on a Frogge, he would esteem it as comely, as another would Diana. The affections if they be set upon vanity, they doe utterly besot one. Look upon the Drunkard, he thinks it's a fine life to be potting and piping in an Ale-house, which a man in his wits knowes to be base, and brutish, and hellish. Look upon the vaine Gentleman, he thinks it's a fine life to be hunting and gambalting and bragging and flanting, and challenging, and to be lird and to be worshipt at every word. Which a wise man knowes to be foppish, and foolish, and devillish. The affections blind the judgement, and befoole the understanding and make a man to defend himselfe in a course which in very deed will lead him to Hell. When the children of Israel had set their affections on their lusts; Moses thus speaks to them. Do ye thus requite the Lord, ye foolish people, and unwise! Is not hee thy father? &c. Deut. 32. 6. naturall affection would lead a child to be obedient to his father, and seeing their affections were crosse set, the Lord cals them a foolish people. Their sinful affections did besot them and befoole them. Samosatenus was so besotted with the love of a certain woman, that he forsook his faith and religion for her. I read of a pretty parable to this purpose. When Ulysses had left his men with Circe the witch, she changed them all into divers sorts of beasts, Dogs, Swine, Lyons, Tygers. Ulysses complained she had done him great wrong for changing his men into beasts on that fashion: wrong, sayes she? I have not done thee nor them any wrong. Doe but aske them now whether they doe not like the condition they are in. So Ulysses demanded first of the Hog, whether he would be a man again or not. He answered no, by no meanes; For now he could fill his belly, and ly down on the dunghill and sleep. And so he demanded of the rest, and they all save only the elephant, they all replyed they had rather be beasts as now they were. This parable is made to shew how the carnall affections besot one to esteem the pleasures of sinne, the gaines and profits and beggerly things of the World, and prefer them before holinesse, and righteousnesse, and pureness, and strictnesse of living. One his affections besot him in a love-locke, or long haire, that he cannot be perswaded to shave it off: another his affections besot him in a Tobaccopipe, another in a filthy gotten custome, another in some other base haunt of the heart, all the preaching under Heaven cannot dissuade them, therefore they do so esteem them and prize them, and think they are so pleasing: a noble minded Christian would wonder how it is possible they can so.

Chrys. hom. 7. in Johan.

Fourthly, another let is, that as the affections are the estimations of the heart, so they are the most naturall temperaments of the heart. Spirituall and heavenly affections are the good temper of the heart, and carnall or earthly affections are the evill temper of the heart, and therefore it's hard to change ones affections, becauſe the heart it ſelfe muſt be taken a peeces as it were, if one would alter his affections. An earthly heart is not a right ſoyle for the ſpirituall plants to grow in. Gardners have daily experience, what a coile they have to keep an herb from dying in their gardens, when the garden is not a right ſoyle for it: they are faine for to dig it, and dreſs it, and water it, and tend it, yet ſcarce will it grow there when it is not a right ſoyle for it. Men muſt get themſelves new hearts and new mindes, if ever they would have their affections renewed. Faſhion not your ſelves to the world, ſayes the Apoſtle, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your minde, Ro. 12.2. Unleſſe your minde be renewed, ye can never ſpy a pleaſing faſhion of the world, but O your affections will be to it. When David had miſplaced his affections on Bathſh ba another mans wife, and his affections had been mad upon adultery, and on murther, what does he do? he goes to God in prayer for a new heart, hee could never have new affections elſe; Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right ſpirit within me, Pſal. 51. 10. He could not get new affections, till he had gotten a new heart. This is a miſerable impediment that lets multitudes of men and of women from ſetting their affections upon God; becauſe their hearts are not a right ſoyle for ſuch affections as theſe. May be they trimme their affections, as the very heathens have done with morality; as a Barber trims and ſhaves a mans head, but the haire growes again, becauſe the head is the hairs ſoyle. So the carnal affections will grow again: ſpirituall and heavenly affections will not grow there, for the heart is not a right ſoyle: and this is a ſhrewd let, and you muſt labour continually to remove it.

The affections are the most naturall temperaments of the heart.

1. ground

We cannot ſet our affections on God, unleſſe we have a new heart.

And therefore, before I helpe you with means how to ſet your affections on God, let me give you theſe two grounds.

First, you muſt have this ſame new heart, otherwiſe ye cannot ſet your affections on God. For there is a heart that will ſet its affections on God, and there is a heart that will not. The Lord wiſhes his people to have the former kinde of heart, the heart that will ſet its affections on God. O that there were ſuch a heart in them, that they would fear me, and keep my commandments alwayes, Deut. 5. 29. There is ſuch a heart beloved, O that we had it; I ſay, there is ſuch a heart that will fear God, and ſet all its affections on God; and ſuch a heart ye muſt get, or elſe it is in vaine to command you this duty: all the Sermons (ye ſee) are in vain that ye have heard to this day; all the exhortations and admonitions ye have had ſince ye were, ye ſee plainly they are in vaine to many of you: as your affections were earthly twenty years agoe, ſo they are ſtill: as they were carnall and wordly heretofore, ſo they are ſtill; your hearts are the ſame hearts, your hearts are ſtark naught, and therefore your affections cannot ſore up unto God. Ye can have no quick affections in prayer, no melting affections at the word. The Sabbath comes, but your affections are not on it: a Sacrament comes, but what poor affections you have to it, your conſciences may witneſſe. Ye ſit in your ſhops, or ye follow your callings, or ye goe about your earthly imployments, and your affections are below; σπουδιον τον πόδα δεδεμενον, ſayes Maximus, the Sparrowes foot is bound with a cord, ſhe cannot flye up unto God. Your hearts are not ſpirituall, and this is the cauſe your affections are ſo carnall. Peradventure ye lop off now and then ſome part of your carnall affections, as Tarquinius lopt off the heads of his poppies, but ye do not cut up the roots. It may be ye go about to heave up your affections in good duties ſometimes, as the key lifts up the ſpring in the lock, but the key is no ſooner turn'd but down goes the ſpring, ſo down go your affections preſently again. And therefore I premiſe this as a firſt ground, ye can never ſet your affections on God, till ye have gotten new hearts.

Eſt ſimilitudo Angeli-Politiani de ira ſed paulo ſecus applicat.

The

The ſecond ground is this, Ye can never ſet your affections upon God, unleſſe you feed upon Chriſt, by faith. If ever the ſoul feed upon Chriſt by faith, it cannot but ſet its affections upon God. I remember an invention of Queen Artemiſia, who when her husband Mauſolus was dead, not knowing how to keep him freſh in her affections as long as ſhe lived, ſhe cauſed her husband Mauſolus his body to be turned into aſhes, and mingled them in her drinke; ſo ſhe buried her husband in her bowels, and this way ſhe took to keep her affections freſh unto him. This indeed unnaturall in her, to eat and drinke her own husband; but faith teacheth us to feed upon the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; this wil take off our affections from the world, we ſhall never hunger after the world more, nor thirſt after the things of this life more, if ever we feed upon him. I am the bread of life, ſayes Chriſt. He that cometh to me ſhall never hunger, and he that beleeveth on me ſhall never thirſt, John.6.35. If ever we believe the ſweetneſſe of the promiſes of Chriſt, the pleaſantneſſe of the commandements of Chriſt, the precioufneſſe of the graces of Chriſt, and the love of Chriſt, and the benefit of Chriſt, our affections will be to him. Nothing can take off thy affections from the world but faith in Chriſt. He that beleeveth in Chriſt cannot ſet his affections on the world. Can a man ſet his affections upon the world, when he verily beleeves it to be droſſe and dung in compariſon of Chriſt? Can he ſet his affections upon earthly pleaſure, that beleeves it is madneſſe? It is certain, men never beleeved in Chriſt ſince they were born, that ſet their affections upon the things of the world; they have not one dram of Chriſt. Chriſt is altogether lovely, Cant. 5.16 He is all love, one that commands the affections. Thou beleeveſt in the world and not in Chriſt, if thou ſet thine affections upon any other but Chriſt. Thou beleeveſt thou canſt have pleaſure and delight in ſomething beſide Chriſt, profits and gaines in ſomething beſide Chriſt; eaſe, and content, and comfort in ſomething beſide Chriſt; if thou ſet thine affections upon any thing beſide Chriſt, Alas! thou canſt never ſet thine affections upon Chriſt: as long as thou beleeveſt not onely in Chriſt. If thine earthly affections tranſport thee to be earthly, fly under the wing of Chriſt, as Chickens under the wing of the Hen, leſt the Kite devour them. Theſe are the two Grounds that I give you. Firſt yee muſt have new hearts; and ſecondly, yee muſt be beleevers in Chriſt, or elſe yee cannot ſet your affections upon God.

2. Ground. nor unleſs we feed on Chriſt.

Means to ſet our affections on God

The foundation being layd, let me now help you with ſome meanes to ſet your affections on God. I could help you to abundance of means, but I deſire to help you to ſuch meanes as are eaſier to uſe, then to ſet your affections on God. For if they be not eaſier than this duty, they cannot properly be ſaid to be helps to this dutie.

Firſt, pray to God to gather up your affections from the things of the

The firſt then is this, often pray to God that he would gather up our affections from the things of the world, and unite them unto him. Our hearts are divided and ſcattered up and downe among the things of the world. Carnall friends have ſome of your affections; our gaines, and our livings, and our maintenance, have other-ſome our pleaſures and delights, and fleſhly refreſhments, have other-ſome; our earthly buſineſſes, and cares, and imployments, our credit, and the like, theſe have abundance of our affections. Thus our hearts and affections are ſcattered up and downe among the things of the world; if ever we would have them ſet upon God, we muſt be frequent in prayer; that God would unite together our ſcattered hearts, to ſet our affections upon God. This was the practiſe of David, O Lord, ſayes he, unite mine heart to fear thy name, Pſal. 86.11. His heart was ſcattered up and down in a thouſand pieces. Some pieces of his affections run after one thing, ſome after another. And therefore he prayes God to unite his heart together, to feare his Name. If God would once gather up his heart from all its vain haunts, and unite it together; then he could set his affections, his fear, and his love, and his delight, and the rest upon Gods Name, Jejunio passiones corporis, oratione pestes sananda sunt mentis, sayes Hierome; as the affections of the body are to be healed by fasting, so the Affections of the soul are to be healed by prayer: as long as they are carnall, they are the plague and pestilence of the soul and prayer must heal them. As Father Latimer said to good Ridley, pray, pray, O pray, pray; so may I say. Pray, pray, I beseech you, pray unto God evermore, again I say pray. I have not time enough to pray so often. I do pray in the morning and evening, but my businesses are so many, &c. This may be thou objectest. Not time enough, sayest thou? Finde out some odde times besides morning and evening; steal into some corner or other, belabour thy heart before God. O, sayest thou, I finde it a hard thing to stir up mine affections, I am a very Stoick πάνυ ἀπαθής, I have no affection, I cannot compell mine affections to God. Canst thou not? but thou canst compell thy heart for to pray; thou canst tug and pull at thy heart in thy prayers, and this will fetch up thine affections. Prayer is not only a mouth to beg Physick, but also it is physick it selfe, whereby Christ cures the affections of the heart. The poor begger, the more he is driven to beg, the more affectionate he is in describing his miseries: you shall see some beggers to set forth their misery, and cry so lamentably, as it would burst a mans heart with pity and compassion, ones bowels would even yearne but to hear them. I doe not mean your lazie canting beggars, but distressed Lazars indeed. So beloved, pray; if ever thou be used to it, it will serve up thy heart, and raise up thine affections exceedingly! I do not mean that lazie hearted and canting kind of praying of most wretches, that hath no more affection in it, than there is savour in the white of an Egge. But set thy selfe to prayer indeed, and by it Christ will quicken thine affections. Alas, thy heart is divided and scattered up and downe among the things of the world, and therefore strive with God that he would gather up all the pieces into one; thou must have all thine affections and all the pieces of thy heart gathered up into one, if thou wouldst set them upon God. I will give them one heart, that they may fear me for ever, saies God, Jer. 32.39. your heart and the affections of your heart are divided and scatered up and down into a thousand pieces, one upon one thing, another upon another; and God hath promised that he will gather up your hearts into one, and give you this same one heart, that ye may fear him and set all your affections upon him: will ye miss such a gracious promise as this for want of asking it, and begging it, and praying for it? this is the reason why men have such earthly affections as they have, because they are not frequent in prayer to God to be helped. Prayer is an excellent help to winde up your affections to God. This is the first; often prayer to God.

Hierom. in Marcum.

2. Light up a candle in thy heart

The second is this, Light up a candle in thy heart, that it may see what to set thine affections on in God. Get knowledge of God, ignoti nulla cupido, Unknown, unaffected; thine affections are unruly, and thou canst not rule them to God-ward, yea but thou canst get knowledge. Knowledge will help thee exceedingly. The affections we see plainly that come neerest to reason, are soonest of all ruled. And the affections that are remotest from reason, are more hard to be ruled. A man commonly will sooner rule his affections aright, then a woman or a child, because a man hath more reason. The Philosophers shew this by the example of a horse or a Bull: A Horse is sooner tamed than a fish, because a Horse is more capable of knowledge and of reason; as naturall reason and knowledge can naturally rule the affections, so spirituall reason and knowledge, can spiritually rule the affections And therefore if thou wouldest rule thine affections aright to set them on God, labour to know God, every one that loveth God, knoweth God. 1 John 4.7. He must needs know God

God that loveth God, for how can he set his affections of love upon God, if he do not know God? Knowing therefore the terrour of the Lord, we perswade men, 2 Cor. 5. 11. S. Paul perswades the affections of the people, why? because he knew the terrour of the Lord, and he was able to make them to know it too; and therefore hereby he endeavoured to perswade their affections to fear God and to serve him. They that know thy Name, will put their trust in thee, for thou never forsakest them that seek thee, Psal. 9. 10. David speaks peremptorily, they that know thy Name, they will place their hope, and their trust, and their confidence and all their affections on thee. They will so certainly, if they know thee; if once they know, what a good God thou art, how true of thy promise, how gratious to thy children, how sure a friend thou art, never forsaking them that seek thee. He concludes it positively, they that know God will set their affections on God. Can a covetous man know a rich purchase, and not have an affection to it? can a beggar know his almes is a hundred pounds, and have no affection to take it? as long as the woman of Samaria did not know Christ, she stood pratling and wrangling and geering at Christ, she had no affection neither to him nor the water of life that he could give her, she had more minde of her well, and her waterpot: though she were in Christs company, yet because she did not know, she never askt him a drop of grace, nor would she give so much as a draught of her water to Christ. But what answer did he make to her? If thou knewest, sayes he, who it is that saith to thee, give me to drink, thou wouldest have asked of him, and he would have given thee living water. John. 4. 10. If thou hadst known who I am, thine affections would have been eagerer than they be. Beloved, ye hear the word, and have no affection to tremble at it. Ye hear Gods Commandements, and have no affection to doe them, ye live in your sins, many of you poor damned soules to this day, and ye have no affection to be humbled. Alas, alas, ye are blinde, and ye know not. But if ye had known what a damnable case ye are in, what a word it is ye reject, whose Commandements they are which ye break, whose bloud it is ye contemne; If ye had known God and the truth that is of God, ye would have been otherwise affected than ye are. Occulta musices nullus respectus, sayes Suetonius. Be the musicke never so pleasing, yet if it be not knowne, none is affected therewith. Youle say ye do know God; what doe? and have no more affections to obey the Commandments of God? ye lye in flat tearmes, sayes S. John. He that sayeth I know him, and keepes not his Commandements, is a lyar, and there is no truth in him, 1 John. 2. 4. I confesse thou mayest know a many things about, God, and never have thine affections set upon God to obey him; but this knowledge is in a reprobate, there's no truth in this knowledge. The truth is not in him, sayes the text. Knowledge may be in them, but the truth of knowledge is not in him. And if thou doest not know God, no mervaile though thine affections be not set on him. Incognitum non amatur. Unknown unkist, as we say. This is the second help to set our affections on God, to know God.

Suetonius.

The third is this, Occasion thine affections this way. Be it never so hard to to thy corrupt nature to set thine affections upon God, it is easier a great deale to give them frequent occasions to be set upon God. A theevish companion, may be, is afraid for to steale, least he should be taken, yet if a booty doe ever and anon offer it selfe pretty handsomely and fairely and covertly unto him, then he will steal it.

Occasion thine affections this way.

Occasio facit furem, Occasion makes a filcher; the posterne doore maketh a thiefe, as the Proverbe is. That gives him an occasion for his villany; as it is in evill, so also in good. Occasion thine affections alwayes to good, at last they may take hold of it. Bee often thinking, and meditating, and remembring of God, let thy thoughts and meditations

give occaſion to thy heart, in the end it may take it. The Apoſtle gives this as a reaſon why Titus was ſo well affected with the good people in Corinth, namely becauſe he thought of and remembred their obedience to God. His inward affection is the more abundant toward you, whileſt hee remembreth the obedience of you all, 2.*Cor.*7.15. If we would often buſie our thoughts and remembrances about God, this might winne our affections to God. Thou giveſt thine affections ſo many thouſand occaſions to bee ſet upon the things of this life, thy tongue is accuſtomed to ſpeak of little elſe, thine ear accuſtomed to hear little elſe, thy minde and thy memory accuſtomed to think of little elſe, thou giveſt thy heart ſo many occaſions to ſet its affections on the things of this life, that I wonder not thine affections are not ſet upon God. This is the reaſon why men are ſo to touchy and ſo cholerick, and revengefull and envious and malicious; this is the reaſon why they are ſo apt to be overtaken with inordinate pleaſure, or covetous deſires, or carnall ſorrowes and griefs and the like, they give their hearts occaſions to bee ſo; they are not choice of their company, they are not wary of the beginnings of ſin, they entertaine too many thoughts of injuries and croſſes, and afflictions, and profits, and vanity in the World, many occaſions they give to their hearts to ſet their affections thereon. The heart when it hath an occaſion to ſinne, is like the wilde-Aſſe in the Prophet: in her occaſion who can turne her away? Jer. 2, 24. The wild-Aſſe if ſhe have an occaſion of luſt, no body can turne her away from her luſt, as Tremelius obſerves: occaſion is a maine thing in matters either of ſin or of grace. If Peter had not given his heart an occaſion to bee tempted by being in the Hall, doubtleſſe he would have beene better occupied then in denying his Maſter; if David had not given occaſion to his luſts by looking careleſſely from his roofe, for all that I know, he had been at his prayers, when he was a whoring with Uriah his wife. If Lot had not given occaſion to his fleſh by drinking of Wine, he had been a bleſſing of God for his mercy the while he was committing of inceſt. Capillata eſt occaſio, Occaſion hath a fore-top, how eaſie is it to be taken hold of! The Galatians are commanded that their liberty be not uſed as an occaſion to the fleſh, Gal. 5.13. for as ſoone as the fleſh hath an occaſion offered, preſently it's likely to take it, Women muſt not give an occaſion to the Adverſary to ſpeak reproachfully 1 Tim. 5.14. Let no man put a ſtumbling block or an occaſion to fall in his brothers way, Rom. 14.13. Occaſions to evill are all dangerous; as the fleſh is ready to take all occaſion to ſinne, ſo the ſpirit to take an occaſion to good. And therefore if thou wouldeſt ſet thine affections on God, give thy heart as many occaſions that way as thou canſt: keepe ſuch company as may occaſion thy heart to be affected with Chriſt. Compoſe thy ſelfe to be often thinking and meditating of the Word, and of ſuch things as may occaſion thy heart to ſet its affections above. And when thy heart hath ſuch occaſions as theſe offered unto it, preſſe it and urge it to take hold of the occaſion. Premenda occaſio, ſaies Horace; good occaſions are to be preſt upon. If thou wouldeſt make conſcience of this duty, to occaſion thine affections aright, they would be ſet quickly upon God. This is the third helpe, to ſet thine affections on God, give thine affections often occaſion that way.

Horat.

4. Let thine affections be often wooed to God.

The fourth is this. Let thine affections be often wooed to God, never miſſe if thou canſt chooſe, the preaching of Gods Word: there is never a godly Miniſter but is Chriſts paranymph, he is a friend of the Bridegroom. John 3.29. Whenſoever he preaches, he comes on Chriſts errand to wooe thine affections to Chriſt. Chriſt does as a great Prince, that minding to marry a wife out of a farre Countrey, ſends over his paranymphs to wooe for him, to get her affections if it be poſſible. So beloved we that are Gods Miniſters, we are Chriſts paranymphs, we preach to wooe your affections to Chriſt. And therefore never misse the preaching of the word, its the wooing of your affections to Christ; they say, women love to be much wooed. Love then the preaching of the word, that wooes thee and wooes thee again and againe. O what infinite need hast thou of comming continually to the word; thine affections are infinitely coy; this they must have, and that they must have. Like a vain Damsel, she must have her geegaws, and her fashions, she must have her pleasure and her will, and her ease, and thus it must be, and so it shall be, if she marry him, she will not have the man else. Hee hath such adoe to get her affections, either he is too homely, or too base, or too strict, or too ill favoured, or to poor, or somewhat. Now may be he hath her, and then her thoughts change, then again she is inclined, and then her affections are off. My brethren, so it is with our souls; our affections are to this and that and I know not what. If Christ will not let them have their pleasures, and their ease and their profits, and their vanities, Christ is not for them. They must have the credit in the worldd, theyle not be mockt at for puritans and for hypocrites, they'le not deny father nor mother, nor self, nor any of these things, they are loth to be held in so strictly as Christ does injoin. But Christ will not marry us, unless our affections be wholly upon him. Blessed is he that is not offended in me. Many are offended at the precisenes of his word, many at the bitternesse of the Crosse, many at the shame of the world, they are offended in Christ, their affections are quite against these things. They are unwilling to be alwayes a talking of Sermons and of Heaven, to be alwayes a wracking their thoughts about their sins, and about repentance and faith, to be hated of all men, to go through tribulations and persecutions for the Gospels sake, to part with their customes, and their own naturall inclinations and their lusts, their affections are against these conditions. O it's wondrous hard to wooe the affections of the heart unto Christ. and doest thou think that Christ will marry thee till thine affections come down to his conditions? will a man marry a woman, whom he sees is contrary-hearted unto him? Mulier inquieta tempestas in domo. A cross wife is a tempest and a storme in a House. Come then continuall to the preaching of the word, γνῶμη. if ever thou desire to have thine affections wrought on. Gods ministers are Christs paranymphs, they preach for this purpose to wooe thine affections to Christ. If there be any one Sermon, that thou refusest to be at when thou mayest, thy conscience tels thee thou mayest be at it, and wilt not, if there be any one Sermon I say that thou wilt not be at, thou rejectest Christs paranymphs. Like a cross maid, that when her suiter comes to her, he shall have no speech with her. She will not be spoken with. O what a provoking is this unto Christ? if thou wilt not be spoken with, take heed least the Lord Jesus abhorre for to owne thee. Nay if she be so strange forsooth, let her keep her affections for who's will, I scorne to wooe her any more. How long hath Christ woed your affections Beloved, and yet hee's pleased to woe you. Bring hither your affections, that here they may be wrought on. Frequent the Lords House, for here be Christs paranymphs: if ever your affections can be gotten, here they may be won some time or other. Many other meanes may be used to help you in this task, namely to set your affections on God. But these may suffice for the present. Set your affections on things that are above, and not on things that are on the Earth.

5. To be ſober and temperate in all things.

THE fifth meanes to ſet our affections on God, is to be ſober and temperate in all things. For if we be not, our affections cannot ſtedfaſtly ſettle upon God. And this is the reaſon, why the Apoſtle joynes ſobriety with prayer. Prayer is a duty that requires moſt freedome of affections for God, and if it be not backt with ſobriety, will ſoon be affectionleſſe and deadiſh. Be ye ſober and watch unto prayer. 1. Pet. 4. 7. Titus muſt exhort young men to be ſober minded, Tit. 2. 6. Young mens affections, ye know, are more unruly then others, and therefore they had need of ſobriety, otherwiſe their affections will be grievouſly exorbitant. If thou take any recreation, take it very ſoberly; one little game at bowles, one houres play at a ſhove-board, or at Cheſſe, or the like, if thou doeſt not take heed, it is ſtrange how it will dull thine affections to good duties; if thou follow thy buſineſſe in the world, follow it ſoberly, be not over eager upon it, leſt it blunt thine affections to God-ward. If thou eat, and if thou drink, if thou ſleep or if thou talk, what ever thou doeſt, be ſure to doe it ſoberly. Beware of the leaſt exceſs, leſt thine affections be ſuddenly tickled therewith.

A man may be drunk with any paſſion.

Hier. com. in Ezek. cap. 44.

If thou let thine affections ramble upon too much in this kinde, they will quickly be mad, Either to make thee drunken with the cares of this life. Luke 21. 34. Or to be quite drunken with pride, Iſa. 28. 1. Drunken with pleaſure, drunken with furie, and ſo forth. All drunkenneſſe is not drunkenneſſe with drinke, ſaith S. Hierome. Amore & odio mens inebriatur, ſaith he. A mans ſoul may be drunken with a paſſion, drunken with love and drunken with hatred, and drunken with any other affection. Thus civill men, and ſober men, as we call them, though they will never be drunk with wine, or with beer, yet they are drunkards in this ſenſe; they are drunk with affections to other things in this life. A man may be drunken with ſorrow, ſayes the Prophet, Thou ſhalt be filled with drunkenneſſe and with ſorrow, Ezek. 23. 33. That is, thou ſhalt be filled with ſorrow, till thou art drunk with it again. So a man may be drunken with fear, drink and be drunken, ſpue, and fall, and riſe no more, becauſe of the ſword which I will ſend among you, Jer. 25. 27. That is, ye ſhall be drunken and reele too and fro with feare. A man may bee drunken with delights and with pleaſures, and drunken with ſecurity: they are drunken but not with wine, for the Lord hath powred out upon them the ſpirit of a deep ſleep, Iſa. 29. 9, 10 That is, ye are ſo ſecure, and ſo faſt aſleep in your luſts, as if ye were dead drunke with ſecurity. Thus all the affections may be drunk with the things of this life. And therefore if ever we would have our affections to be right, let us be

ſober in all the things of the world. Ye deſire food and raiment, there bound thine affections with ſobriety, and be content. Ye love the world for the uſe that ye have of it, there limit your affections with ſobriety, and uſe it as if ye uſed it not. Buy as if ye bought not, go to the Markets and your Faires, as if ye went not. Sow, and reap, and gather in, as if ye did it not. And ye will needs be merry and harmleſly jeſt now and then, O be marvellouſly ſparing and ſober. Eating muſt be, and drinking muſt be, and ſleeping muſt be, and providing for your ſelves and your family muſt be: if ever ye love your own ſouls and ſalvation, be ſparing and ſober in theſe things, leſt ſuperfluity of affections ſtep in in a moment: the devil is always a catching for his opportunities to deceive you; he is ever as a roaring Lion ſeeking by all means to devour you. Be ſober then and vigilant, for your adverſary the devill walketh about ſeeking whom he may devoure. 1 Pet. 5. 8. When a man is to fight with a ſtout enemy, will he go and make himſelf drunk, that his enemy may ſet upon him drunk? Ye had need to be ſober: if ye be to fight with the devill; if ever ye be never ſo little overtaken, never ſo little giddy, then is the devill moſt buſie. Temperance and ſobriety hath a very good name in the Greeke tongue; the Spirit of God calls it σωφροσύνη, that is, the keeper of the mind ſafe, or the keeper of a man in his wits. Do ſo, otherwiſe thou ſhalt never be able to ſet thine affections on God. This is an admirable means to keep our affections in tune, to be ſober in all things: to be ſober-thoughted, and ſober-hearted, and ſober-minded, and ſober-mouthed, and ſober-meated, and ſober-clothed, and ſober-imployed. This is the fifth means to ſet our affections on God, to be ſober in all things.

The ſixth is this, when we ſee how apt our affections are to flye out upon vanity, to clip their wings of much of their lawfull liberty; not onely to abſtaine from things that are evill and unlawfull, but alſo to abſtain from many things that are lawfull. There be a thouſand lawfuls that that thy heart does affect, which if thou do not abridge thy ſelf of, thou ſhalt never be able to ſet thine affections upon God. This rule Socrates the very Heathen obſerved; no man can be ſafe from falling into unlawfulls, but only this man, ſayes he, that abſtaines from many things that are lawfull. Its lawfull to drink ſtrong drink; but for thee that art apt to over-deſire it; it is dangerous. Its lawfull to go finely; but for thee that art apt to be proud of it, It is not ſafe to go to the utmoſt bounds of what is lawfull. If thou uſeſt the utmoſt of a thing that is lawfull, one ſtep further is unlawfull. It is not wiſdom to go to the utmoſt ridges of a rock, juſt at the brow of a high cliffe; though the ground thou goeſt on be ſure, yet thy going is not ſure: how ſoon mayſt thou ſlip with thy foot? how ſoon may a giddineſſe in the head come upon thee, and then thou break thy neck? Perhaps thou mayſt go ſteady, yea, but perhaps not, but topple down on a ſudden and be daſhed to peeces. It was lawfull for Dinah to go forth, and to ſee the daughters of the land, but thus ſhe fell to be raviſht & uſed like a whore, Gen. 34. 1. It was lawfull for Iehoſaphat to viſit King Ahab, but his uſing this lawfull viſitation drew him to partake in ſome meaſure of his ſins. It was lawfull for Daniel to eat the portion of meat that the King gave him, but he would not, Dan. 1. 8. That very lawful thing if he had uſed it, it would have defiled him. All theſe things are lawful for me, ſaiſt thou, yea, but all theſe things are not expedient; becauſe if thou takeſt thy liberty in all things that are lawfull, thou wilt quickly be a ſlave to thy luſts, and under the power of inordinate affections. All things are lawful for me, ſayes the Corinthian, yea but I will not be brought under the power of any, ſays S. Paul, 1 Cor. 6. 12. As if he had ſaid, all things of this nature are lawful, but I count it not expedient to uſe them for all that, why? becauſe if I ſhould take liberty in this kind, I ſhould be brought under the power of my ſinful affections. Cavendi ſunt affectus, ne illis nos ipſos ſubjiciamus, ſays Pet. Martyr. Take heed of thine affections, they will inſtantly inſlave thee. Follow not thy pleaſure ſo much as thou mayeſt, nor thy profits and earthly employments ſo much as thou mayeſt; drink not, and ſleep not, and jeſt not ſo much as thou mayeſt, for if thou doeſt, thine affections will be caught or ere thou art art aware. Many men and women, they will be enquiring and queſtioning, what, is not this lawfull? and is not that lawfull? Is it not lawfull to have a little recreation every day? Is it not lawfull to be merry, and to tell a merry tale, and to break a jeſt, now and then? Is it not lawfull to ſell Ale? and keep a victualling-houſe? Is it not lawfull to weare ſuch a geegaw? or to plat ones haire after ſuch or ſuch a faſhion? Theſe queſtions ſound like the ſpeeches of fooles, that are likely to be gulled in their affections by Satan. For what though they be lawfull; I do not deny they are lawfull; but the queſtion is this, be they ſafe and expedient for thee, when thine affections are ſure to be needleſſely a gogge upon theſe things? O do not needleſſely endanger thine affections, if ever thou mayeſt remedy it, Chryſoſt. in 1 Cor. 6. 12. σκόπει μὴ γένῃ ὁ δοῦλος τῶν παθῶν, ſayes Chryſoſtome, Look thou be not a ſlave of thine affections: thine affections itch after this and that, look thou do curb them: if thou doeſt not curb them of many things that are lawfull, thou wilt never be able to ſet them upon God. This is the ſixth means to ſet our affections on God, to clip their wings from flying upon the things here below.

7. Meanes. To be abundant in the exerciſe of godlineſſe.

The ſeventh, is this, to be abundant in the exerciſes of godlineſſe. We muſt be abundant in prayer, and in all other exerciſes of godlineſſe. When Paul had exhorted good Timothy to be exerciſed in godlineſſe, 1 Tim. 4. 7. in the next verſe, he gives him a reaſon why he ſo exhorts him. Becauſe ſays he, godlineſſe is profitable unto all things. If godlineſſe be profitable for all things, then certainly it's profitable for this, to ſet our affections upon God. Abound then in good duties, abound in good conference, abound in reading good books, abound in good and gracious acquaintance, abound in godly meditations. This was Davids means whereby his affections came to be earneſt upon God. O how love I thy Law! it is my meditation continually. Pſal. 119. 97. his affections were even rapt up in his God, O how love I thy Law! he was not able to expreſſe how his affections were rapt. O how love I thy Law! How came they to be ſo? the reaſon was this. He was abundant in godly meditations; It is my meditation continually. Abounddance in any thing cauſes the affection to abound. The voluptuous man is abundant in his pleaſures, he abounds with his hunting and hawking and gaming and merriments, and therefore his affections are abundantly ſet hereupon. The covetous man his mind abounds in thinking of the world, his memory abounds with remembring the things of the world, his tongue abounds in talking of ſuch matters, his labours, and his cares abound in this kind; and therefore his affections are abundantly ſet upon theſe things. There is nothing makes the affections ſo exceſſive as abundance. Abound then in the exerciſes of Gods worſhip, if thou wouldeſt have thine affections to be abundant that way. Never think thou canſt pray enough, hear enough, ſpeak holily enough, examine thy ſoule enough, nor ſanctify the Sabbath enough, never think thou canſt reform enough, or do any duty enough. Men ſerve God as little as they dare, they pray and hold out in their prayers as little as they dare, they ſhew themſelves for God as little as they dare, theſe mens affections can never be upon God, becauſe they love not to be abundant in good duties: thy heart is a great deep. Pſal. 64. 6. It is not a little winding, or a little turning will fetch up a Bucket out of a deep Well. So the heart I ſay is a great deep, a little praying, and a little hearing, and a little amending will not fetch up the affections from this great deep unto God, no. Thou muſt be abundant in goodneſſe and in the duties of goodneſſe, if thou wouldſt have thine affections ſet upon God; provided alwayes that thy heart be renewed and quickened, otherwiſe abundance will cloy thee. The more thou prayeſt, the leſſe affections thou wilt have; the more thou heareſt, and the more thou ſpeakeſt of Religion or of grace, the more formall thou wilt be, thine affections will be leſſe ſet hereupon. O my brethren, this is a curſed craſis and diſpoſition of ſoule, to be ſpiritually cloyed in this manner; abound and abound right, elſe it's to ſmall purpoſe; if thou abound in good duties, and abound right, this will ſet thine affections upon God. Abound in a thing, and be the thing never ſo bad, it will ſoon command thine affections. Let a man be abundant in playing, drinking, or abundant though it be but in the taking of hot waters, I have knowne ſome their affections were ſo to it, that it killed them. Beloved, abound then in good duties, this will take off thine affections from the world, and ſet them on God. This is the ſeventh means, to ſet our affection on God, to be abundant in the duties of holineſſe.

8. Dive down to the bottome of thine affections.

The eight is this, Labour to dive down to the bottome of thine affections; the ſweeteſt is at bottome as we ſay. So the affections that are ſweeteſt to the heart are at bottome. And therefore dive down to the bottome, and get up the bottome of thine affections, and ſet them upon God; thine affections are never ſet upon God, till them at the bottome are ſet upon God. A man may ſet the ſhallow of his affections upon God, when the bottom is ſet upon the things of the world. There is many a cloſe hypocrite, he thinks his affections to the world are now dead; but they are not dead: the Fox ſeems often to be dead, to ſeize the more cunningly on his prey. So the affections will ſeem to be dead to the world, that ſo they may be the more cunning to feed upon the things of the world; they ſeem to be dead, that is, the ſhallow of them ſeems ſo, but the bottome ſtill is alive to the world, that is not ſet upon God. Beloved, a man may ſet the ſhallow of his affections upon a thing, which the bottom of his affections does hate. See this in Ammon, his affections were to Thamar, and he loved her. O he would ſeem to be ſick for her. I, the ſhallow of his affections were to her, but anon out comes the bottome: when the bottom of his affections once did come out, then he did hate her. He hated her worſe then he loved her. 2 Sam. 13. 15. dive down then to the bottome of thine affections, and labour with all might to get up the bottome, and ſet them upon God. Here's a man, he hath good affections to repentance and amendment, good affections to be godly and have grace; he reforms much, and he profeſſes much: you would wonder to ſee this man a year hence to perſecute the Miniſter, and to oppoſe Gods people, and make a mock of the power of Religion: but this you may ſee, if the bottome of his affections be not got up and ſet upon God. Get up the bottom, and ſet that upon God, or 'tis nothing.

There be three means to get up the bottome of thine affections, and ſet them upon God.

Meanes to get up the bottome of the affections.

1. Be humbled after thy turning to God.

First, Be humbled after all thy turning unto God, this will get up the bottome of thine affections to God. A wicked man before he is turned unto God may be humbled; as Ahab was humbled, and Judas was humbled, and Pharaoh too, and many other ſinners they are humbled before ever they have turned from their ſins. When once they have turned from their profaneneſs, and their impieties, then they begin to think well of themſelves, now they are well, think they: indeed before they are turned, they may be humbled. Thus a drunkard and a whoremonger may be humbled, thus a mocker and a prophane perſon may be humbled, their conſciences may pull them by the throat as long as they live in theſe ſinnes, and then their affections are ſtirred exceedingly: they may weep, and ſigh and groan, and tremble, and be aſhamed of their doings; they may be humbled thus before they are turned: but when they are once turned from theſe ſins, then they begin to be quiet and ſecure, and to hope well. Alas, alas the bottome is not up yet. But if thou wouldeſt get up the bottom of thine affections, be humbled after all thy turnings to God. So it was with good Ephraim: ſurely after that I was turned, I repented, and after that I was inſtructed, I ſmote upon my thigh, I was aſhamed, yea even confounded. Jer. 31. 19. Ephraim was humbled after that he was turned. It was not before he was turned, but after that he was turned, he repented and was humbled. This got up the very bottome of his affections, and all unto God. See how full of affections he was. He ſmote upon his thigh, he was in a holy rage at his own ſoul, he bluſhed, he was aſhamed, yea he was even ſmitten with confuſion of face before God. All the bottom of his affections was up, his zeale, his ſorrow, his ſhame, and the whole bottome of all came up then, becauſe he was thus humbled.

2. Keep no cloſe cloſe luſt unmortified.

Secondly, Keep no cloſe luſt, no corruption, in ſecret unmortified. As this is a meanes to get up all the bottome of our affections, and ſet them upon God, ſo it is a ſign too whether we do ſo or no. For when a man is willing to be ſearcht, who may be was ſuſpected of ſtealing, if he be willing to be ſearcht, to have his pockets, and his houſe ſearcht, and his cofers ſearcht, and all his haunts ſearcht, ſearch me, ſayes he, I have it not: He that is willing thus to be ſearcht, it's a ſign he hath not ſtollen it. So it was with the Pſalmiſt; for having ſaid that his affections were ſet upon God, and againſt them that were againſt God: he bids God ſearch him, and ſee if he could find that it was contrary. Search me O God, and know my heart, or as ſome tranſlations have it, and try the ground or the bottome of my heart, ſee if there be any way of wickedneſſe in me. Pſal. 139. 23, 24. As if he had ſaid: If I have any ſecret corruption that I favour my ſelf in, I confeſſe the bottome of mine affections is rotten, but I am willing to be ſearcht, ſearch me O God, and try the ground or the bottome of my heart, and ſee if it be not ſo as I profeſſe it to be; I ſay, as this is a means, ſo it is a ſigne too. A meanes it is to get up the bottome of the affections, and ſet them upon God. For as long as a man hath any ſecret luſt, any bottome corruption which he favours himſelf in, he can never ſet the bottome of his affections upon God,

Vid. v. 21, 22.

3. Conſider God will ſhame thee one day if the bottome be not ſound.

Thirdly, conſider God will ſhame thee one day, if the bottome be not ſound; thou mayeſt have good affections for the while, and be held for a very good Chriſtian, and a forward profeſſor: but if thine affections be not ſolid and ſound at the bottome, God will ſhame thee. Though the Apple look never ſo well, yet if it be not ſound at the core, at laſt 'twill be manifeſt. Though the Egge look never ſo lovely, yet if it be addle within, at laſt it ſhall appear. God will unmaske thee one day and make it appear thine affections were never right at the bottome. This David uſed as a meanes to provoke him to get a ſound heart at the bottome. Let my heart be ſound in thy ſtatutes, that I be not aſhamed. Pſal. 119. 80. The affection of ſhame a man would be loth to be put to, and he knew he ſhould be put to it ſome time or other, if he were not ſound at the bottome, And therefore he labours with God that his heart might be ſound in his ſtatutes, he was not content to have good affections that way, but he labours to have ſound and ſolid affections that might be ſound at the bottome. That I be not aſhamed, ſayes he; what a ſhame will it be to ſee thee a damned Goat at Chriſts left hand, that now art eſteemed a good Chriſtian? if thou beeſt not right at the bottome, ſo it will be. Give me leave to tell you one thing that occurred in an experience of mine owne. I was once a ſaying to a Gentleman who was exceedingly affected at the word, and profeſſed great love to my Miniſtery, and that he would defend it, and make much of the word. O ſaid I, there be many that yet ſeem very forward to approve of the word, and to defend it, &c. that when the word comes to meet with their boſome-ſinnes, and gives them no reſt in their conſciences, I feare me will ſet againſt Miniſter and word and all ere be long. O no, God forbid sayes he, I were unworthy to live, if I should do so; well, well said I, I pray God it may not be so as I say: but mark it, and peradventure you shall see it with your eyes. Within one fortnight, this Gentleman that seemed to be such a friend at my first coming to the Parish, being met with in a Sermon, and feeling his sin (a sin I little imagined he was guilty of) to be reproved and condemned in the Pulpit, he never would be known to me more, but opposed me as long as I stayed there: he was affected, but his affections were not sound at the bottome, and therefore he came to this shame: God grant it have humbled him by this time, if now he be alive. Its a good rule in morality. Affectus mendaciter se subjiciunt rationi. The affections will feigne a submission to right reason. It is as true in Divinity; the affections will seeme to submit unto grace, when they do not. For as long as the bottome is not sound, they cannot be set truly upon God; they are nothing but flashes, like plashes of water after a shoure, that are dried up quickly. This is the eight meanes to set our affections on God, to get up the bottome of our affections, and set them on God.

Beloved, these are the means whereby ye may set your affections on God: now see how nearely it concernes you to use all these meanes, and to make conscience of this duty; and this will appeare, if ye consider these two things.

It concerns us to use all these meanes.

First, the affections are the bonds of the soul, that is wicked, whereby it is fast bound unto sin: thou canst never repent nor be saved, as long as thine affections are not turned. Can a prisoner go that is fast bound in the Stocks? Thine earthly and carnal affections fast binde thee in sin; if these bonds be not broken, thou canst never go to God. When Peter saw a carnal affection in Simon Magus the Sorcerer, presently he tells him, I perceive thou art in the gall of bitternesse, and in the bond of iniquity, Acts 8. 23. He does not say onely, in iniquity, but also in the bond of iniquity; for his carnal affection was a bond, and he was fast bound in his sins. The Prophet preaches hell and damnation against such men, and such women; for alas how can they get out, when they are bound and corded to their pleasures and the things of the world? Wo unto them that draw iniquity with cords of vanity, and sin as it were with a cart-rope, Isa. 5. 18. Great Carts are drawn by the cart-ropes; so all a mans sins are drawn to him by these cords. Chrysostome expounds these words, both of their sins and their woes; they draw both them. The cords of our affections are the hearts tyers to sin, they do even tye the soul unto sin, that it cannot get loose. Wo is to them, sayes the Lord. Be the affections all like unto bonds, and cords, and cart-ropes, to tye the heart to sin? what a woful case are ye in, till your affections are set right! look what ye tye them unto, that do ye draw after you; if you fasten them on the things of this life, them ye draw after you; if you fasten them on grace, and on Christ and his Word, them ye pull after you. Never was Sampson so fast bound with Delilahs withs, as he was with his affections to Delilah, sayes Gregory. Ah poor slavish soul, thou art in the Devils stocks; as long as thine affections are not fastened aright, thou art heart-bound, and soul-bound, and conscience-bound, thou art fast bound in his cage. How neerely then concerneth it you all, to get your affections to be set upon God? Ye are even the slaves and bond-slaves of hell; and therefore as ever you desire to flie from the vengeance to come, use all these meanes with all conscience, that ye may set your affections on God.

1. Because the affections are the bonds of the soul.

Chrysost.

Greg.

Secondly, earthly affections are the forestallings of the heart; the heart is prepossest already with the things of this life, and is prejudicate against the things that are above, and therefore there is no hope to perswade you, as long as your affections are set upon the things of this life. When our Saviour Christ perceived how the Pharisees affections hawkt after credit and honour from men, being prepossest with desire of humane applause, he tels them plainly, they could never believe, nor ſeek the honour of God. Ye cannot believe, ſayes he: how can ye believe which receive honour one of another, and ſeek not the honour that cometh from God onely? John 5. 44. It is a grievous thing to be prejudicate and prepoſſeſt with another good beſide God. It is a miſerable task to be to reaſon with a prejudicate man; he will not yeild, no; by no meanes will he yeild, when once he is prejudicate. As long as our affections are ſet on the world, our hearts are prejudicate; and therefore go we about the meanes preſcribed, whereby our affections may be ſet at rights; never till then can we hope to convert you, or to work any good on your ſoules.

2. Because earthly affections are the forestallers of the heart.

The VII. Sermon.

Colos. 3. 2.

Set your affections on things that are above, &c.

Miniſters muſt labour to ſtir up the affections of their hearers.

ARE the affections the motions of the heart, and muſt we ſet them on God? this may teach us one leſſon by the way; we that are Gods Miniſters muſt take notice from hence how to qualifie our preaching, namely, to ſtir up the affections of mens hearts. Every man, ſayes Rodolphus Agricola, that hath any learning at all, is able to teach; but concutere affectibus audientem, to ſhake mens affections, and turne mens hearts, he is an extraordinary man that can do this: after this manner was the preaching of our Saviour, he did ſo move the affections of his hearers, that the Text ſayes they were aſtoniſhed at his Doctrine, Matth. 7. 28. Why ſo? the Evangeliſt makes anſwer in the next verſe, for he taught them as one having authority, and not as the Scribes; that is, non ita frigidus ut Phariſæi; he was not ſuch a frigid and cold teacher as the Phariſees and Scribes were; the people ſat like immoveable ſtocks in their ſeats, when the Scribes were a teaching, they were not moved a jot; but our Saviour was a powerfull teacher, he taught them as one having authority, and not as the Scribes; his Sermons were moving and forceable. John the Baptiſt wrought ſtrongly on the affections of his auditors, they could not poſſibly hold, but they cried out-right, as they heard him. The people aſkt him, what ſhall we do? the Publicans cried out, Maſter what ſhall we do? the Souldiers alſo, whoſe affections are as hard to be moved as anyes, yet they cried out too, and what ſhall we do, Luke 3. 14. This uſe is plainly grounded on my Text. Gods Miniſters ye know are Gods inſtruments to bring men to faith and repentance, and reconcile them to God; and therefore if this be your duty, to ſet your affections on God, we muſt labour to work on your affections to provoke you to do it. The reaſons of it are theſe.

Reaſons.

1. Becauſe the Word is full of affections.

First, becauſe the word is full of affections; full of affections of love to woo a man to God; full of affections of pity to yerne upon men in their miſery; full of affections of terror to terrifie the wicked; and therefore that Miniſter that preaches not affectionately, preaches but one halfe of the Word he preaches but the dead corps of the truth, as I may call it; he does not preach the life and the ſoul of the truth. The affections of a ſpeech are the ſoul of a ſpeech, both make up the whole of the Word. Is not my Word like unto fire, and like a hammer, that breaketh the rocks in pieces? Jer. 23.29. If the Word be a fire, he that delivers it coldly, delivers the Word otherwiſe then it is. Would not you ſay that man were ridiculous, who when a neighbours houſe is on fire, would go and coldly adviſe the Pariſh in this manner, O my dear neighbours, you ſhould do well to look to your houſes, leſt fire fall upon them, as now of late I underſtand it hath done; I pray let me perſwade you to provide water, otherwiſe all your goods and mine too will be conſumed to aſhes: it is true that this man ſayes; but would not men deeme him a foole? the truth, is a truth of affection, and he leaves out the affection of the truth. Nature hath taught us another courſe in ſuch a caſe, he would run crying into the ſtreet, fire, fire, help, help, for the Lords ſake; water, water, in all haſte, alas, alas, we are undone, quickly, ſpeedily, run for ladders; pull down this ratter here, cut down that beame there, untile the houſe; what mean you? ſtir hands, armes, legs, hie thee for water, run thou for iron crooks, crowes, hooks, buckets, haſte, haſte, we are all undone. Here now is the affection of the truth: the like muſt a Miniſter do, who knowing his people wallow in ſin, in the ſtate of hell and damnation, as many as go on in their courſes; he ought not with filed phraſes and mellow-mouthed words, nor with cold exhortations admoniſh his hearers, but he muſt put in the affection of the Word in his Sermons: he muſt cry fire, fire, the fire of hell beloved is among you; the fire is kindled, ſin is entred into the ſoul: O the water of teares, teares, repentance, repentance, help your ſelves for Gods ſake: the devil ſtands ready to devour you, death watches unawares to ſtrike you, hell-mouth gapeth to ſwallow you; look about you, ſtir your ſelves and conſider, or ye periſh in a moment. Leave off your riots, down with your pleaſures, away with your vanities, put on Chriſt quickly, work out your ſalvation with feare and trembling. See ye not men die daily before you on a ſudden, falling to hell? haſte, haſte, flatter not your ſoules, time is uncertaine, the danger is too certaine, the puniſhment eternal, damnation is intolerable. Thus muſt a Miniſter preach this truth. It is a truth full of affection, the affection muſt be delivered as well as the body of the truth. All the imaginations of the thoughts of mans heart are onely evil, &c. Gen. 6. 5. As this is a truth, ſo there is a great deale of affection in this truth, the affection of loathing. Do we think when the Lord ſaid it, he ſaid it coldly and nakedly; all the imaginations, &c. No, he ſaid it with a great deale of affection, of loathing, &c. O Jeruſalem, Jeruſalem, &c. O that thou hadſt known, &c. As this is a truth, ſo there is a great deale of affection in this truth; affection of pity. There is a great deale of affection in every threatning, a great deale of affection in every command, a great deale of affection in every promiſe, in every truth. Chriſt does not bid us preach the letters, and ſyllables, and propoſitions of his Word, but his Word. Now my VVord is like fire, ſayes God: fire is the ſtirringeſt element of all elements, and therefore if there be any feeling at all in you, the VVord is able to ſtir you, even as if ye had a fire in your bowels. Beloved, either we that are Gods Miniſters are unskilful to handle the VVord, or elſe ye are ſenſleſſe and ſtupid if ye do not ſit upon hot coales for to hear it: it will make the drunkards heart ake to hear what this Word ſaies to him: it will make the worldlings heart ake, and the ſecure Chriſtians heart ake. The Word is a fire. Did not our hearts burne within us, while he opened to us the Scriptures? Luke 24. 32. The Word did ſo inflame their affections, that their hearts burned to hear it. Does not thy godly heart burne to hear the ſweetneſſe of Gods promiſes? and burne when the Scriptures are opened to direct thee?

And

And ſo on the other ſide, does not the Uſurers heart burne, when the Scriptures are opened that rip up his ſins? Does not the carnall profeſſors heart burne now and then as he ſits, when the Scriptures are opened to ſhew him his rottenneſſe? there be ſuch ſcorching texts in the Word; texts of death, texts of judgement, texts of hell and damnation; they may well make a wicked heart burne for to hear them; and therefore the VVord being ſo full of affection, a Miniſter that preaches it, muſt needs be an affectionate preacher, if he be a true preacher, otherwiſe he does not preach the whole word.

2. The word looks to be obeyed with affections.

Secondly, as the Word is full of affection it ſelf, ſo it lookes that a man ſhould be full of affection that obeyes it. God loves no other obedience, but obedience with affection; he loves a cheerful giver, 2 Cor. 9. 7. So God loves a cheerful obeyer, a cheerful repenter, a cheereful believer; what ever we do in his ſervice, he loves we ſhould do it with affection. Should a Miniſter preach without any affection; happily he may reaſon men out of may of their ſins, and prevaile with them to take up the duties of Religion, but all would be formality, without any affection. It is a good ſaying of Auſtin, the godly muſt have affections in obedience, otherwiſe they are not obedient. There be two things in every Commandement of God.

Firſt, the duty commanded to be done, Feare God and keepe his Commandements. This is the whole duty, Eccleſ. 12. 13. That is, there is never a duty that a man hath commanded him, but it is within the compaſſe of the Commandements of God. So that in every Commandement there is a duty.

Secondly, the ſtrength of affection wherein the Commander commands it, and therefore the Commandement is called Gods will. Teach me to do thy will, O God, Pſal. 143. 10. It is called Gods pleaſure, Bleſs the Lord ye miniſters of his that do his pleaſure, Pſal. 103. 21. It is called Gods deſire. Thou deſireſt truth in the inward parts, Pſal. 51. 6, Becauſe the ſtrength of Gods will, and deſire, and pleaſure, and affection lies in it. Theſe two things being in every commandment of God, it follows of neceſſity, that a man muſt have his affections in obedience, otherwiſe he is not obedient. As God does not only command me, but alſo with affection he commands me: ſo I muſt not only do the thing he commands, but with all affection I muſt do it, or elſe I never obey him. Virtuti immiute furorem, ſayes Hor. Adde affections to thy vertue; Vertue is no vertue without the affections, prayer is no prayer without thine affection be in it, repentance is no repentance without thine affections be in it. Whatſoever duty thou doeſt, if thou doeſt it not with all thine affections, it is abomination to God: and therefore the miniſter that preaches muſt ſtir up affections: if he do not ſtir up affections, the religion he begets in the hearts of his hearers, is likely to be little better than wretched formality.

3. Men are very dull in affections to embrace the Word.

Thirdly, as the Word is full of affection it ſelfe, and requires affection in them that obey it, ſo men are very dull in affection to embrace it; they are dull of hearing, Heb. 5. 11. They have dull ears, and dull hearts, and dull affections: tell them they ſhall periſh becauſe they do not repent; they will be damned becauſe they will not obey: they ſhall be ſaved that will; they are like Gallio, they care for none of theſe things; and therefore now we that are Miniſters, muſt ſtrive to make them care whether they will or no. Cry aloud, ſayes God, ſpare not, lift up thy voyce like a trumpet. Shew my people their tranſgreſſions, Iſa. 58. 1, Do not onely ſay a Sermon to them, but cry it; not onely ſo, but cry aloud; they are deafe, ſpare not, thou wilt never ſtir them if thou ſpareſt. Spare not, ſpare neither rich nor poor, neither great nor ſmall, lift up thy voice like a trumpet, that is, preach ſo, that if it be poſſible, thou mayeſt move their affections. It is a ſimilitude taken from the trumpet in battel, though the Souldier be faint-harted, it will ſtir him up with affection to fight. Great Alexander was ſo ſtirred up at the trumpeting of one Antigenida an admirable Trumpeter, that all his couragious affections were up, and his fingers did itch to be fighting. So lift up thy voice like a trumpet, ſtir them up, if by any meanes thou canſt. O they are verie dull, and ſenſleſſe, and hard to be affected, and therefore we muſt ſtudie how to work on their affections.

If yee ask mee how; how muſt the Miniſter ſtir up affections? I anſwer.

First, negatively; not with the enticing words of mans wiſdome, 1 Cor. 2. 4. Some men indeed out of theſe words do gather, that S. Paul condemned all eloquence & affectionate preaching. But this cannot be, that he ſhould condemne that which he moſt ſhewed himſelfe, moſt of all the Apoſtles of Chriſt. He was ſuch an eloquent golden mouthed man, that the Lycaonians thought he had been another Mercury, he was ſuch a ſweet ſpeaker, Acts 14. 12. He was ſuch an Affectionate Orator, that he made Agrippa's bowels even earne to be a Chriſtian, and Fœlix to tremble. S. Auſtin conceived him to be gifted with ſuch an admirable power this way of Almighty God, that it was one of his three wiſhes, if he might have it for wiſhing; namely to hear Saint Paul to preach in a pulpit; and therefore he does not condemne all affectionate and eloquent preaching; but he condemnes that flattering kind of affected Rhetorick, whereby men that preached themſelvs, tickled mens ears, and delighted them with luſcious phraſes of Oratory; handling ſuch points as might pleaſe the phantaſies of their hearts, rather than to convince them of their ſins: thinking it too preciſe and too baſe to preach of mens damnable eſtate and condition in ſin, the curſe of the law that all men are under till they be new creatures in Chriſt; the taking up of Chriſts Croſſe; to be hated and mocked, and perſecuted of all men, for Chriſts ſake and his Goſpel. Theſe points, they either thought to be too ruſtick, and burly and auſtere, or they ſugred them over with their comments, and tickled the people with more velvet-like paſſages of mercy. I ſay, this kinde of eloquence, and this kinde of preaching, with the enticing words of mans wiſdome, does the Apoſtle condemn, and therefore I do not mean this. How then muſt a Miniſter ſtir up affections? I anſwer, he muſt ſtirre up affections five wayes.

First, by preaching to the life. As a Painter then paints a man well, when he paints him to the life; he paints it ſo to the life as if it were a living man indeed. So then does a Preacher preach affectionately, when he preaches to the life; when he preaches of hell, he preaches to the life, as if hell were before mens eyes; when he preaches of heaven, as if the people did ſee it with their eyes as it were. As King James ſaid of a good preacher in this Kingdome, this preacher, ſaies he, preaches as if death were at my back: ſo a good preacher preaches to the wicked, as if vengeance were at their backs as if hell were at their backs, he preaches to the godly as if Chriſt were at their backs, and heaven at their backs. If this kind of preaching will not worke on mens affections, their affections are bewitcht, O fooliſh Galatians, who hath bewitcht you, that ye ſhould not obey the truth, before whoſe eyes Jeſus Chriſt hath been evidently ſet forth, crucified among you? Gal 3. 1. Paul among them had preached Chriſt to the life; ſo evidently, and ſo plainlie had hee preached Chriſt crucified, as if they had ſeene him crucified before their eyes. Certainly thought he, theſe peoples affections are bewitched, that are no better wrought on. When Galba would perſwade the Spaniards againſt Nero for his cruelty, he ſet out ſo vifibly his cruelty, that they might even ſee it with their eyes. Lycurgus ſo expreſſed the difference of good education and of bad that the people might even ſee it with their eyes. Not as though preachers ſhould do as they did, or as ſome that I have read of, have done; who brought

A Miniſter muſt ſtir up affections by preaching to the life.

A ſaying of King James a dead skull into the pulpit, that the people might ſee death even with their eyes. We have no ſuch warrant in Scripture; but they muſt doe it with the lively teaching of the truth. And therefore the Apoſtle ſaies, that true preaching is in the demonſtration of the Spirit, 1 Cor. 2. 4. When the truth is demonſtrated with evidence.

Secondly, By being full of affections himſelfe. For affection in the ſpeaker is likely to beget affection in the hearer. It cannot be otherwiſe, ſaies Cicero. Cicero being an excellent ſpokes-man, whenſoever he pleaded before the people of Rome, to beget any affections in them, he would be ſure to put on thoſe affections himſelfe. If he would move them to griefe, he would be full of the affection of grief. When to pity, he would be full of the affections of pity. When to anger, his countenance would be ſet full of anger. The higheſt point of moving the affections in another, is to be endued with thoſe affections, thy ſelfe, ſayes Quintilian. It is an old maxime in Oratorie, and in all moving of the affections of others, Pectus eſt quod facit diſertos. It is a mans owne breaſt that makes him to be affectionate and eloquent. If a mans own breaſt be piteous, and full of compaſſion and bowels, that man is an eloquent perſwader to pity. If a mans owne breſt be loving, and kind, and full of affections, that man is an eloquent ſpeaker to move love: Si vis me flere dolendum primum ipſi tibi: If thou wouldeſt have me to weep, weep thy ſelfe firſt. What mean you to weep and break my heart, ſayes the Apoſtle, Acts 21. 13. it burſt his very heart to ſee others ſtand weeping about him. There be many clamorous Preachers, ſayes Calvin, who declaime againſt the ſins of the people, and thunder againſt the iniquities of their Pariſh, and make as though they had a great deal of zeale, that never move a jot; the affections of the people are not ſtirred up a whit, becauſe the people ſee plainly through all their actings and vehement enforcements, that ſuch Miniſters are not affected themſelvs, but onely exerciſe their ſides and their throat, as if they would act it on a ſtage. But O, ſayes he, labour to mourne for their ſins in thine heart, before thou labour to move them. Be thou more affected thy ſelfe, than thou undertakeſt to affect them. S. Paul did ſo move the affections of Dionyſius and Damaris, and others at Athens, that the Text ſaies, they clave to S. Paul. Certain men clave to him and beleeved, Act. 17. 34. He preached ſo movingly, that their affections did even cleave to him as he preached. How came it about that he ſtirred up affections in them? look into the 16 verſe, and there you ſhall ſee he was greatly affected himſelfe. His ſpirit was ſtirred in him, ſayes S. Luke, when he ſaw the Citie wholly given to idolatry. He could not have ſtirred up affections in them, if he had not been filled with affections himſelfe. O beloved, our hearts are grievouſly ſtraightned, and our ſouls are wofully ſtopt that we are not more affected our ſelves at your miſeries than we be: would it not fetch teares from our eyes, and groans from our bowels, to ſee how deſperately ye are hardened, but that we are too little affected our ſelves? you know the damned abuſes in your Pariſh, the curſed ſins that raigne in your houſes, and the ſtupid ſecurity ye are in, yet nothing can move you. Your conſciences cannot be ignorant ye are carnall, and are not yet Saints, nor born again many of you; your conſciences can tell you ye are Saints, or elſe ye are hell-hounds, and if ye die as ye are, ye have no evidence for Heaven, but ye may be damned ere long for all that ye know. Ye can hear this every time ye come to Church, and yet no reformation, no ſhew of humiliation, no ſhew of grace nor repentance nor any thing. πῶς ταῦτα Σιμωνίδης δρηνήσῃ, what weeping Simonides can weep ſufficiently for theſe things? Paul knowing ſome abuſes among the Corinthians, that many of them were like to be damned for ever, out of much affliction and anguiſh of heart ſayes he, I wrote unto you with many tears, 2. Cor. 3. 4. pene quot ſyllabas, tot lachrymas, as Haymo ſpeaks, that is, he ſhed as many tears as

as he wrote syllables, he could hardly write for wetting the paper with teares which he wrote on. O that we who are Gods Ministers could be so affected! The Lord lay it not to our charge that we are not: but O that our heads were water, and our eyes were a fountain of teares, that we might weep day and night for these things. Ye thinke your soules are safe, alas, we know they are desperate. We know that your drunkennesse will damne you; and your swearing, and lying, and company keeping will undoe you. We know your pride and your hardn,esse of heart are symptomes and infallible marks of such as are yet no better than reprobates. Ye hope your crying Gods mercies will help you, we know they cannot. Ye hope that Gods mercies will relieve you, we know they will not, unlesse ye be new Creatures. Ye trust God wil not be so strict as we say, we know he wil. Ye imagine ye are not led by the Devill, though ye sin thus and thus, we know ye be, and the Devil, the God of this world, rules in your minds, and your consciences. Neither are ye able, unlesse ye be Atheists and Devils incarnate, to deny God to be God, and his Scripture to be Scripture, ye are not able to deny it. O that we could sigh, and sob, and groan in our pulpits, O that we could even wet our cushions with tears, and yearn over your souls as we preach; I beseech you consider, will ye never beleeve, nor be affected till ye feele it? Lord, when thy hand is lifted up, they will not see, but they shall see and be ashamed, and the fire shall devour them, Isa. 26. 11. I protest unto you, I could finde in my heart to fall down on my knees to every one of you all, were it profitable, to beseech you to consider this, now Gods Hand is lifted up, and he calls to you, and ye will not heare, he shewes you your sinnes, and ye will not see, you shall see sayes he, and be ashamed, and the fire of Hell shall devour you. Take heed ye see not too late. O that thou hadst known at least in this thy day, before they be hid from thine eyes. God will hide his grace from thine eyes, and his spirit from thy heart, if nothing can move thee. I pray God affect our hearts with these things, that wee who are your Ministers, may be more touched our selves.

This is the second meanes whereby we might move you, if we were affected our selves.

Thirdly, By being godly our selves. As we must be affected our selves, so if ever we meane to stirre up affections in the heart, we must be godly our selves. Aristotle requires this in an Orator, that hee be a good man, κυριοτάτην ἔχει πίστιν τὸ ἦθος, the good manners and the life of the speaker have the greatest power to perswade the affections. Hence is that usuall saying of the vulgar, He that preaches well, and lives ill, pulls that downe with one hand which he built with the other. Nay commonly a man loathes a good saying out of a foule mouth. Let a drunken Minister exhort to sobriety, for the most part the people do loath it. Let an adulterous, or covetous Minister exhort to be godly and religious, for the most part they abhor it. Let a loose Minister preach of strictnesse of life and conversation, and zeale and puritie, Solomon sayes it is like a lame mans leggs, when one is shorter than the other, Prov. 26. 7. that is an ill sight: A wicked Minister can never stir up the affections of the people aright. Gregory Nazianzen would have a Minister, ἢ μὴ διδάσκειν ἢ διδάσκειν τῷ βίῳ; Either not preach at all, or preach by a good and godly life. Otherwise the people will have little affection to hear him: nay, which is lamentable, it is usuall in the world, not onely to set their affections against a wicked Ministers preaching, but also to loath the verie Ordinance it selfe: when Eli his sons were wicked, and sons of Belial, the Text sayes, the people loathed Gods offerings. The sinne of the young men was verie great before the Lord, for men abhorred the offering of the Lord, 1 Sam. 2. 17. At the best, the people, though never so greedy otherwise for to heare, yet if the Minister doe not as he sayes, they have small affection to heare him.

Quis tuleris Gracchos &c. Juvenal.

L. 1: Sent. Spiritual. tetrast. 4.

Our Saviour Chriſt knew this well enough by his Diſciples, who were willing to hear him, whenſoever he preached, but he knew they had little affection to heare a Sermon of the Phariſees, who ſaid and did not. And therefore he was faine to command them not to be offended at that, but to heare them. It was not then in vaine, that the Apoſtle exhorts Titus to look to his owne life. In all things ſhew thy ſelfe a pattern, ſayes he, a patterne of good works. For if the Miniſter that preaches be not a good patterne to his people, his Sermons will not be ſo able to ſtir up affections in their hearts. Paſco verbo, paſce exemplo, ſayes Gregory: we muſt feed them by doctrine, and feed by our example: this is the way to ſtir up affections in our hearers. It is true, the people ought to be ſtirred up by the Word, in whoſe mouth ſoever it be, and it is their fault that they be not, but yet it will never be ſo: the Miniſters contrary life in any particular, as it is curſed of God, ſo likewiſe it is a ſcandalous thing unto others, and an infinite occaſion of offence, and takes off the edge of the Word. Yea commonly it does more hurt, then all the preaching can doe good. For thus men will argue, if it be neceſſary to live as he ſayes, then why does not he live ſo himſelfe? He hath more learning than I, and the like: nay, they call the Word into queſtion, and hoodwink their ſoules with preſumptuous pretences. Thus millions of ſouls are gone to Hell with their Miniſter for company: Malus Miniſter eſt niſus Diabolus. It is a true ſaying of a Father, An evill Miniſter is the Devils Gos-Hawke or Spar-Hawke. He goes a birding for Hell. But why ſpeake I of theſe things among you whom it concerneth not? Yea, it concernes you much every way; For as it is a curſe to a Pariſh that a Miniſter is wicked, ſo is the Pariſh tied as ever they love their own ſoules, to pray unto God that he would ſanctifie their Miniſter more and more, that the word may run and be glorified, for the life of the Miniſter hath a great hand in moving the affections. The holyeſt Miniſters move moſt.

Tit. 2.7.

Gregory

A Miniſter may ſtir up affections by his voyce.

Fourthly, by the due carriage of their voyces, when the Miniſter is affected himſelfe: I do not ſay it is alwayes ſo, for ſome have not the ſame command of themſelves through accident all reaſons: but commonly when the Miniſter is affected himſelfe, the inward affections of his own breaſt diſpoſe the voyce into ſome gracious manner of expreſſing the ſame. As Paul that was full of griefe and ſorrow for the peoples ſins, hee for the moſt part preached with a weeping voyce, Many walke, ſayes he, of whom I have told you often, and now again tell I you even weeping, they are enemies of the Croſſe of Chriſt. Whoſe end is deſtruction. &c. Phil. 3. 18. 19. And truly if we conſider the iniquities of the times, and the ſins of moſt men, how lamentable their conditions be, no other affection better ſuits than this. Loquere flebiliter, ſayes Bucolcerus to a preacher, ſpeake mornfully, and ſorrowfully, the very voyce it ſelfe will ſomewhat modifie the affections of the people. Certainly it is an ordinance of God, and very moving, to ſpeake according to the point in hand. To ſpeak compaſſionately in points of pity. To ſpeake rejoycingly in points of comfort; to ſpeake moſt terrible in points of terror. As Cato adviſed that ſouldiers ſhould terrifie their enemies with terrible voyces. Neither is it amiſſe, that when the Miniſter threatens the judgements of God againſt rebellious ſinners, he ſhould compoſe his voice accordingly. I know not what hidden occult influence the voice hath into the affections ſaith St. Auguſtine, but a great influence it hath. When a Miniſter goes dreamingly on, the people ſit careleſly, and regard it not, and let him ſay never ſo good matter, they heed it not; let him threaten, or comfort, or command, or reproove, they reſpect all alike, for they ſee no difference in the Miniſter; I know the people ſhould not doe thus, but ſuch is the corruption of men, thus they will doe; now God hath given many of his meſſengers more wakening voices as petty

inſtruments to provoke mens affections ſomwhat the more. And truly we are bound to make conſcience thereof, that our very voyce may be a comment upon our matter; 'twas a pretty ſtory of Demoſthenes; when one told him that he was beaten and miſuſed exceedingly by ſuch a companion. It ſeems he told it to by rote as we ſay, ſhewing no affection at all in his telling. Why ſayes Demoſthenes; hath he beaten thee? I do not beleive he hath beaten thee. No? ſayes the man. He was much troubled to hear him deny it, and ſo he ſpake angerly and in a chafe, I am ſure he beat me, thus he did, and thus he did, & do you not call this beating? now I believe ſaies Demoſthenes; I believe now he hath beating thee indeed, now I hear the voyce of a man that was beaten. So if we ſhould dreamingly uter our voice, and reprove our hearers, they ſcarce beleeve they are reproved, becauſe they do not hear the voyce of a reprover. Let us deliver uſes of terror to them, they hardly beleeve any terror in it, becauſe they doe not hear the voyce of terror. But when the Miniſter is affected aright, and his affections direct the carriage of the voyce along, the voice it ſelfe does more ſignificantly expreſſe the matter: and this no queſtion is very moving. Plutarch in Demoſthene

But then let me tell you, if this be it ye look for, and if ye can be carping at a Miniſter for the want of this, what the Lord accompts of you. He ſets it as a brand upon the wicked Iewes that they were affected with the Prophet Ezekiels pleaſant voyce, when they were affected with little elſe, Ezek. 33. 32. even a rare and a worthy Moſes may be defective in this caſe, and wo is the people that findeth fault. But how ever be the voyce of a godly Miniſter never ſo meane, yet there will be ever ſome hidden grace in it, whereby more or leſſe, it appears unto the conſciences of them that have ears to hear. This is the fourth thing whereby a Miniſter may ſtir up affections by the due cariage of his voyce.

Fifthly, I might adde by a decent action. For my part, I have little reaſon to name it, but verily it is a bleſſing of Chriſt to them that have it, for they have a great advantage over the affections of their hearers. Cicero ſaies ſome were eſteemed viri diſerti, eloquent, and moving men, but for want of action they could not put their gifts in practiſe, habiti ſunt infantes, they were eſteemed infants in this profeſſion, ſayes he. Action we ſee it much employed in the Preaching of the Prophets and the holy men of God. Ezechiel was commanded to ſtamp with the feet. Iſaiah commanded to goe naked. Ieremiah commanded to put a yoke on his necke. Iohn Baptiſt was totus vox. He was all-voyce; The voyce of a cryer in the wilderneſſe, Matth. 3. 3. his eyes ſpake, and his face ſpake, his hands ſpake, and his body ſpake, yea, his life, and dyet, and all ſpake, he was all-voyce The Prophets ſtretched forth their hands to the people in fulneſs of affection. I have ſpread forth my hands all the day unto a rebellions people, Iſa. 65. 2. S. Paul ſet his eyes upon Elymas the ſorcerer. Act. 13. 9 O full of all ſubtilty, and all miſchief; thou child of the Divell, thou enemy of all righteouſneſſe, wilt thou not ceaſe to pervert the right waies of the Lord? the Lords hand is upon thee, and thou ſhalt be blind, &c. Its counted a grand ſinne in old Eli, that he did not frowne on his ſonnes, 1. Sam. 3. 13. why does the Text expreſſe Elies not ſeverely threatning his ſonnes, by this action of frowning? but onely becauſe they that doe ſeverely threaten, do uſe to frowne. Thus ye ſee how that Gods Miniſters have uſed action to move affections. By a decent action

The VIII. Sermon.

Colos. 3. 2.

Set your affections on things that are above, &c.

It is a great sin to set our affections on the Earth

Arguments to convince this truth are foure

MUst our affections be set upon God? then this reproves them, who set their affections on the Earth. The matter is reduceable to foure heads.

The first, is the multiplicity of the affections, they are very many in number.

The second is, the ἐπιπλοκὴ or the checkerwise order of the affections. As they are many, so they are complicated and platted one within another, that look what they are set on, they knit the heart to it.

The 3. is, the degree the affections are in, in regard of other acts of the soul.

The fourth is, the extremity of the affections, which is zeale. From all these foure heads I will shew you the wofull aggravation of this sinne, not to set our affections on God.

If a man sets his affections on the earth, he sets all his affections on it.

First, from the multitude and multiplicity of the affections: a man cannot set his affections upon earth, but he must set them all upon earth: the affectious they all go together and are many. Not onely foure, as Boethius does count them; nor onely five as Galen does reckon them; nor only eleven, as Aristotle does number them; nor only twenty, as Cardan does summe them; but they are like a swarme of Bees, as Lælius Peregrinus does compare them for multitude. Plato sayes they are innumerable, without question they are many. Now what a woeful aggravation is this of this sinne, to set thine affections on the earth! Thou settest all thine affections thereon, if thou settest one, thou settest all; for they all go together. Like the Angels that sinned, they all fell together. So when the affections fell off from God, they all fell together. Like the two eyes of the body, they both look one way; like the two eares, one doth not heare one sound, and another an other. If thou lovest those things that are carnall, it is certaine thy desires are all carnall, thy joyes, and delights, and thy hopes, are all carnall, thy feares, and thy griefes, and thy sorrowes are all carnall; if one of them be set on the things here on earth, all are: were there but one affection that way, it were the lesse; but if thine affections be set upon these things, not one, nor two, nor tenne, but numberlesse multitudes, whole swarmes of affections are all earthly. Thou art altogether brutish and foolish, Jer. 10. 8. That is, thine affections are altogether brutish and beastly, altogether filthy or stinking, for so the word signifies, Ps. 14. 3. That is thine affections are altogether stinking & noisom affections. I proved before, that when the affections are carnal, they all like so many devils do bewitch thee. O foolish Galathians, who hath bewitched you? It is grievous enough to be plagued with one devil. He must needs run whom the Devil drives: one devil wil drive thee fast enough to hel. One affection if it were single, will hurry thee fast enough unto hell: what then are the whole legeon of affections?

they like the legeon of Devils that entred into the ſwine, the Herd ran violently downe a ſteep place into the ſea, Luke 8. 33. They ran with all violence to be drowned, when a legeon of devils did drive them. So thou muſt needs run with all violence downe into the lake, when a legeon of affections, like a legion of devils does hurry thee. Sua cuique Deus fit dira cupido, ſayes the Poet. The very heathen man ſaw this, that every mans evill affection was his devill; and therefore the whole legeon of affections are a legion of devils. Doe ye not ſee how ye are toſt up and down all the day long, tanquam pila Diaboli, as the Devils Teniſ-bals, as Odo ſpeaks: from worldly delights unto wordly deſires, from deſires unto fears, from fears unto melancholies, from melancholies to angers and vexations; from them again unto carnall comforts; theſe are all like a legeon of devils that hurry thee up and downe till thou art hurried to hell, &c. If thine affections be carnall, they are a legeon of devils to drive thee. It is a merry devill that makes thee ſo greedy of pleaſure and of mirth; a ſurley devill, that makes thee ſo cholerick and touchy; a giddy devill, that makes thee ſo fearfull and timorous; an unclean devil, that makes thee ſo deſirous of drinking, and company-keeping. Anger and wrath is a devil; Let not the Sunne goe down upon thy wrath, neither give place to the devil. Epheſ. 4. 26. 27. That is, do not give way to thy wrath. When thou giveſt way to thy earthly deſires, thou giveſt way to the Devil. When thou giveſt waie to thine earthlie delights and thy ſorrow, and thy melancholy, thou giveſt way to the devil. Look how many earthlie affections thou haſt that thou giveſt the way to, ſo many devil are in thee. Doeſt thou think thou art a childe of God, when thy conſcience tels thee, that ſuch and ſuch earthly affections have way in thy heart? alas, thou haſt a devill. Be ſober, for your adverſary the devill, 1 Pet. 5. 8. Mark, every giddy affection is a devill, our adverſary the Devill comes with it. Yea ſo many earthly affections, ſo many devils: and wilt thou ſet thy affections upon things that are earthy? if thou doeſt, thou haſt a legeon of devils within. This is the firſt head, the multitude and the multiplicity of the affections, the affections are many.

The ſecond head is taken from the ἐμπλοκὴ or the checker-wiſe order of the affections: as the affections are many, ſo look where they are ſet, there they are platted, and woven, and hampered together. God that firſt created man upright and good, he gave him affections ſo to twiſt and hamper his heart upon good, that it might be the harder to looſen it. He gave him the affection of love to imbrace good. If the good were wanting, he gave him the affection of deſire, to hunger after it. If the good were poſſible to get, he gave him the affection of hope to expect it: if the good were once gotten; he gave him the affection of joy to delight in it. If there were any danger to loſe it, he gave him the affection of fear, to be afraid of it. If the good were once loſt indeed, he gave him the affection of grief, and of ſorrow to lament it. If he ſhould meet with any thing that would hinder him in the proſecution of good, he gave him the affection of hatred to oppoſe it, &c. Thus God embroidered the affections and wove them together, that ſtill mans heart might be knit by the affections to good and to God. And wilt thou now ſet thine affections on the things of this life? thou little thinkeſt how thou twiſteſt and hampereſt thy ſoul about theſe things, thine affections will make thee live and dye a carnall wretch. Had not Eraſiſtratus cured Antiochus of his carnall affection, it had coſt him his life, for he was ſick of it unto death. Galen ſayes, he met with many ſick patients, if he had not cured their affections, he had never recovered them. The affections hamper the ſoule unto death. So if thou ſet thine affections on the things here on earth; they will ſo hamper thy heart, that unleſſe thine affections be cured, thy ſoule is deſperately uncureable; they entangle thy ſoule, thou canſt not get free.

2. Affections hamper and intangle the ſoul.

And

And therefor S. Peter calls falling into earthly affections, he calls it, intangling If after they have escaped the pollutions of the flesh they are again intangled, 2 Pet. 2. 20. That is, if after they have once gotten out they fall in again because they cannot fall in again but their lusts and affections will intangle them again Be not intangled again with the yoke of bondage, Gal. 5. 1. Paul knew if the Galathians were addicted to the ceremonies of the Law, they would affect them more, then the Commandements of Christ. And therefore hee gives them advise no further to use them, because their hearts would be intangled if they did: no man that warreth, intangleth himselfe with the affairs of this life 2 Tim. 2. 4. A souldier had not need to have a new married wife or a new-borne childe, or a new-purchased ground, a new-planted vineyard, a new suit at law in the Chancery: alas, then his affections would be a gadding, when he should be fighting, O my wife at home, and O my childe at home, and I would I might taste of my vineyard at home, and O that I could follow my cause in the Court; this were to intangle him in warre, he could not fight valiantly. Thus the affections doe intangle a man. So if thine affections be earthy, they will intangle thee, thou canst not be free for the seeking of heaven, or of Christ; thine affections are so complicated and hampred, thou canst be in no place, in no estate nor condition, but some affections or other will intangle thee. Thou lovest thy land and thy living, and thy things in the world; O how are thine affections intangled, what case soever thou art in? thine affections lye checker-wise and will have thee. If thou beest rich, the affections of pleasure, or delight, or security, there they will have thee. If thou beest poore, the affections of desire and discontent; this thou desirest and that that thou wouldest faine have; there thy wishings, and wouldings, and carkins will have thee. If thou beest crossed, or troubled, or afflicted, the affections of griefe, and of sorrow, and of melancholy, these there wil have thee. If thou beest injured, abused or provoked, which fals out very often, the affections of anger and revenge, these then will have thee. If thou beest in danger of sickness or distresse, or losse of this or that, the affections of fear and the like, they lie in ambush to catch thee. If thou comest to the Word, and there thou art told thou art a damned man as long as thou livest as thou doest, the affections of vaine hopings and trustings, they lie in scout for to take thee: thus thou art entangled, when thine affections are earthy, in what case soever thou art in, they intangle thee. Sometimes thou art merry and jocant for a pang, anon thou art melancholy and sad for a fit. Sometimes thou art angry with a servant, or a childe, or a wife, or a neighbour, anon thou art pleased. Sometime a danger comes and fears thee, anon it is gone, and thou art secure. Sometimes one affection, sometimes another. Sometimes a hating and sometimes loving; sometimes desiring, and sometimes hoping. Thus thou livest, and thus thou diest, and perishest for ever through intanglements.

The third head is taken from the degree the affections are in, in regard of other acts of the soule. And here is a subdivision of heads.

The first is, the affections provoke thoughts; and therefore if the affections be earthy, the thoughts are all earthy.

Secondly, The affections increase lusts and therefore if the affections be carnall, the lusts are all carnall.

3. The affections are in a high degree in regard of the acts of the soule

Thirdly, the affections infer purposes and resolutions, and therefore if the affections be to the things of this life, the purposes and resolutions of the heart are so too.

Fourthly, the affections inferr devisings and contrivings, and therefore if the affections be vain, so are the devices. From all which thou mayest see the infinite miserie thou art in, if thine affections be set here below. First, because if thine affections be set here below, so are thy thoughts. When Saul had a treacherous affection unto David, he made as thought he did affect him so well, as to make him his son in law; it was a treacherous affection: but the text sayes, to were his thoughts. Saul thought to make David fall by the hand of the Philistines, 1 Sam. 18. 25. As his affections were treacherous, so his thoughts were in like manner treacherous. The affections are the feet of the soul, as I told you; now when these feet run to evil, so do the thoughts. Their feet run to evil, their thoughts are thoughts of iniquity, Isa. 59. 7. So that look what thine affections are to, to that are thy thoughts. You may remember what was proved to you of the thoughts: if thou doest habitually set thy thoughts upon the things in this world, to be thinking of thy sports and thy pleasures, thine apparel, and thy fashions, thy meat and thy drink, thy meanes and thy living; if thy thoughts be set hereupon, thou art a man that never hast repented since thou wert borne; thou hast yet no part nor interest in Christ, thou art yet no better then a damned wretch, heire apparent of hell and everlasting destruction. Thus it is with thee, if thy thoughts be habitually thus set; but if thine affections be set here below, so without question are thy thoughts.

1. As the affections are, so are the thoughts.

First, because if thine affections be earthy, so are thy thoughts: the affections provoke thee to be thinking of such things as thou hast most minde to. Haman did mightily affect honour, and therefore his thoughts ran upon his honour, and promotion. The King had no sooner said, what shall be done to the man whom the King delighteth to honour? but presently his thoughts were a gog. Haman thought in his heart, whom would the King honour but me, Esther 6. 6. When Haman was affected with wrath against Mordecai, instantly such were his thoughts. He thought scorne, sayes the Text, Esther 3. 6. David speaking of his enemies that were ill affected against him, he says that their thoughts were against him, all their thoughts are against me for evil, Psal. 56. 5. So that if thine affections be carnal, thy thoughts are carnal, and thou canst not think seriously of the good of thy soul. Come and let me think seriously, how do I think to be saved? may not a reprobate pray as well as I pray? Hear the VVord as well as I hear it? believe as well as I believe? Did not wicked Esau that sought a place for repentance, carefully with teares, repent as well as I? Had not cursed Balaam as good meanings as I? he would not for a house full of silver and gold go beyond the Commandement of God. Alas, alas, your carnal affections will not suffer you to think seriously of your soules. Hast thou ever thought seriously, whether thou beest a new creature or no? whether Christ be in thee yea or no? what if I should dye now? have I evidences for heaven yea or no? The Scripture sayes thus and thus, so and so they must live that look to be saved: do I live so? God sayes such and such shall be damned, namely all that live in any known sin; God cannot lye; is there never a sin I know I live in? poor wosul soul, thy carnal affections have not suffered thee to think seriously of these things since thou wert borne. May be now and then thou hast some loose thoughts of some such matters, stragling thoughts, glancing, running thoughts of thy soul, and of heaven, and of death, but thou never doest seriously think of them. No, thine earthly affections do provok thy thoughts otherwise, the affections have such influence into the thoughts, that Macarius cals them affections. Is not this then a pitiful condition to set our affections here below? to be drawn away from thinking seriously of our souls? they drive thee to hell, and will not permit thee to think seriously whither thou goest, till thou art there. O grievous condition! will a Prisoner that is condemned to be hanged to morrow, be thinking how he may get him new cloathes, and a new suit? will he be thinking how he may purchase? how he may have a good supper? If he be thinking on such things when he shall be han-

hanged to morrow for all that he knows; he is ſure he is condemned, and the gallowes is built, and the halter is provided, and if he get not a pardon, it is certaine he ſhall be executed, and he knowes not yet whether ever he ſhall get it: may be he may, if he ſeeke hard; if he now be thinking of pleaſures and profits, and the like, when his life lies at the ſtake, you'le ſay he is wofully affected with theſe things, and wilt thou be ſo affected with the things of this life, when thou mayeſt be in Hell to morrow? thou art ſure the ſentence of damnation is upon thee yet, and thou ſhalt ſurely be damned being as thou art; wilt thou, I ſay, be thinking of eating, and drinking, and playing, and buying, and ſelling, and trading, and ſuch like? alas, thou art yet but a damned man? Take no thought, ſayes Chriſt, what ye ſhall eat, and what ye ſhall drink, but ſeek ye firſt the Kingdom of God. Matth. 6. 33. Let not the condemned priſoner take thought for a ſupper, but take thought how he may ſave his necke from the rope. This is the firſt: if thine affections be carnal, ſo are thy thoughts.

2. If thy affections be carnal, ſo are thy luſts.

Secondly, becauſe if thine affections be carnal, ſo are thy luſts. Its true, a godly man hath carnal luſtings, for he is partly fleſh: but then he hath good luſtings too, for he is partly ſpirit: the fleſh luſteth againſt the ſpirit, and the ſpirit againſt the fleſh; and theſe two are contrary the one to the other, ſo that he cannot do ſo well as he would. Gal. 5. 17. he hath ſinful luſtings, but he hath ſpiritual luſtings to crucifie them: but if thine affections be earthy, thy luſts be all earthy, nay thy luſts they are ripened, and ſtrengthened. The carnal luſts properly and eſpecially are the firſt offers of the heart unto carnal affections. So that when they are come to be carnal affections, they are ripened. And therefore the Apoſtle does uſually call the carnal affections by the name of luſts. The Gentiles walked in luſts, exceſſe of wine, revelings, &c. 1 Pet. 4. 3. that is, they walked in their carnal affections; becauſe the luſts are then ſtrengthened when they come to be affections. Now beloved conſider what a hideous condition it is, to ſet our affections on the Earth, it ſtrengthens our luſts. We give a knife to a cut-throat to ſtab us, cheriſh a company of vipers in our boſome to poyſon us. We encourage fierce enemies to battel againſt our ſouls. So S. Peter can tell us. Dearely beloved, I beſeech you as ſtrangers and pilgrims abſtaine from fleſhly luſts which war againſt the ſoule. 1 Pet. 2. 11. they war againſt the ſoul, they are the Divels Infantry, yea Cavalry too, they are his Souldiers to murder the ſoule with ſpiritual death and eternal damnation. If ever thou loveſt thine own ſoul, thou wouldeſt kill ſin in the cradle, ſupplant it and take it by the heele, as Jacob did Eſau in the wombe, thou wilt never overcome it elſe. Deny it the firſt entrance, as the Angel ſhut the door upon the Sodomites, caſt out the bondwoman with her brat too, as Sarah did Hagar, and her little one, as Gregory ſpeakes. Thou wilt never be able to ſubdue it otherwiſe. Thou wouldſt crucifie thy luſts, and marke the firſt riſings thereof, thus thou wouldſt do, if thou hadſt a care of thy ſoul. But wilt thou let thy luſts grow, and get armour to kill thee? wilt thou let them gather ſtrength and ripeneſſe to damne thee? there's not a luſt of them, but it comes like an armed man to fight againſt thy ſoul; now if thou ſet thine affections too on the things of this life, thou doeſt ſtrengthen it, and weapon it yet more. What a wretched miſery is this! thy luſts war againſt thy ſoul to undoe it, and yet thou doeſt ſtrengthen them, yea thou doeſt increaſe them, helpeſt their forces. O fooles, when will ye underſtand? do we not ſee how we are overpowred by our luſts? do they not every day conquer us in the open field? There's not a prayer we make, but deadneſſe of heart gets the day like a Conquerour. Not a duty we performe, but lukewarmeneſſe proves victor. Nay our luſts do not onely overcome us, but they lead us in triumph. Some of our luſts carry us up and down from gaming to fretting, from fretting to revenging, from revenging to ſwearing,

They are like Rirpis fibræ, as Chryſoſtome compares them, like the ſtrings at the roots of the Tree. Apud Damaſcen. 2 parall. c. 27.

Gregory.

ſwearing, from ſwearing to lying. From one ſin to another, as they liſt. And our luſts are ſo ſtrong, that war againſt our ſouls, that we are not aſhamed to lay down our bucklers, and ſay, we cannot reſiſt. I was angry, alas, it is my nature, and I cannot maſter it. I rap out an oath now and then, alas, I was provoked, and I cannot helpe it. I muſt ſay and do as ſuch an one would have me, he's my friend, I cannot deny him. Thus our luſts have given us mortal wounds, and have murdered our ſoules, and all this is becauſe our affections are earthly, for they increaſe all our luſts, and make them more able to vanquiſh us.

Thirdly, if thine affections be carnal, ſo be thy purpoſes. Men purpoſe according as they affect. He that affects ſuch a good bargaine, will purpoſe to make it; he that affects pleaſure, will purpoſe to take it; he that affects any thing, will purpoſe to have it. Firſt men conceive a thing to be good, then they affect it, and then they ſpend thoughts of it, and then they purpoſe to have it if they can. Barnabas exhorted them all that with purpoſe of heart they would cleave unto the Lord, Acts 11. 23. He joynes theſe two together; their purpoſe and their affection to God: becauſe they could never cleave unto the Lord, but it muſt needs be with the purpoſes of the heart. Well now; conſider what enemies we are unto God, what enemies too to our own ſoules, that ſet our affections here below; we can never have reall purpoſes to amend or turne unto God. We may purpoſe and purpoſe a thouſand times over, but ſtill we are broken off from our purpoſes, they all come to nothing, as long as we affect the things of this life. Can the fire have a purpoſe to freeze? can the ſtinking dunghil have a purpoſe to ſmell well? can a Swine have a purpoſe not to wallow in the mire? No. How can this be, when they are affected with contrary qualities? there is no counſel in ſuch purpoſes as theſe. Without counſel purpoſes are diſappointed, Prov. 15. 22. If thou doeſt purpoſe to do this or that, and not conſult whether thou be able to do it yea or no, no wonder though thou beeſt diſappointed of thy purpoſe. Thou art carnal, and haſt a purpoſe to be ſpiritual, thou art full of earthy deſires, and haſt a purpoſe to hunger after Chriſt; Thou art a company keeper, a worldly and a proud foole, thou haſt a purpoſe to be otherwiſe: alas, ſuch purpoſes as theſe will ſurely be diſappointed, becauſe they are purpoſes without counſel: thou ſhouldeſt firſt take counſel how to crucifie thine affections: if this thou wouldeſt do, thy purpoſes would ſtand. What an egregious ſin is this then, to ſet thine affections on things that are carnal? thou art vaine, and haſt no purpoſe to be otherwiſe; thou ſecure, and haſt no purpoſe to ſhake off ſecurity: no purpoſe to give over thy carnal appetites, and thy cuſtomes, and the luſts that thy conſcience does know of: thy own conſcience can point thee out many luſts that thou liveſt in, and thou haſt no purpoſe to leave them; O how does this provoke the Lord Jeſus to wrath! Which of us does thus purpoſe in his heart? I abſolutely purpoſe henceforth to uſe all the meanes under heaven for the ſaving my ſoul. I have guld it to this day, now I purpoſe to do ſo no more; now I will every day examine my conſcience, every day keep company with the godly; I will never ſort with my old company more. I have uſed my body like an idol, now I purpoſe to mortifie it, &c. Alas, our affections will not let us. It is certaine, thou never haſt a good purpoſe to God for thy ſoul, as long as thine affections are earthy. All thy purpoſes are inſtar palea, ſayes a Divine, they laſt for an hour, or a day, or a health, like the chaffe which the windes drive away.

3. If thine affections be carnal, ſo are thy purpoſes.

Car. in Pro. 15. 22.

Fourthly, becauſe if thine affections be carnal, ſo are thy devices and contrivings. When a man ſets his affections on any thing, as he ſpends many thoughts thereupon, and purpoſes to have it if he can, ſo he deviſeth with himſelfe whereby to attaine it, Davids enemies whoſe affections were ſet againſt him, they deviſed how they might croſſe him. All that hate me, a-

4. If thy affections be carnal, ſo are thy devices.

gainſt me do they diviſe my hurt, Pſal. 41. 7. What a company of devices hath the glutton to ſatisfie his palate? the revengeful perſon to ſatisfie his wrath? the covetous perſon to ſcrape himſelfe maintenance? its endleſſe to recount what innumerable devices men have to compaſſe what their heart does affect. Phalaris deviſeth new torments; Nero deviſeth new cruelties; Sardanapalus propounds a reward by a Cryer to him that could deviſe out new pleaſure; the wicked Lawyer and troubleſome Pariſhioner deviſeth new quillets and put-caſes to fetch over his poor neighbour, the proud Minion deviſeth new paintings of the face, new waſhings of the body, new curlings of the haire, new deckings of their neck, new ſangled attires, and the like; the covetous deceiver deviſeth new couſenages, new cony-catchings, polings, rackings, gullings, &c. the Uſurer new uſuries, new covenants and reaches. It were long to rehearſe what deviſes are in men to fulfill their unruly affections. Theſe wretches are abhorred of the Lord. Solomon ſayes there be ſix, yea ſeven things, which the Lord hates and abhorres, Prov. 6. 16. And in the next verſe ſave one, he ſayes that a heart that deviſes wicked imaginations is one of them. The Lord numbers theſe men among the damned crew of the Heathen, inventers of evil things, Rom. 1. 30. Wo unto them that deviſe iniquity, ſayes the Prophet Micha 2. 1. Now ſee thy woſull condition; who ever thou art, whoſe affections are carnal, thy devices are all carnal, thou doeſt not deviſe how thou mayeſt beſt ſerve Almighty God, how thou mayeſt beſt overcome ſinne, how thou mayeſt beſt glorifie Chriſt. Which of us does ſet his head a work every day, how he may beſt pray, and beſt repent, and beſt heare, and beſt do every good duty? alas there is little ſuch deviſing among us, becauſe our affections ſtand not this way. If our affections were ſet upon God, we would be ſtudying and contriving how to purge all our families, how to propagate the glory of God in the Pariſh, how to exhort, and reprove, and provoke one another to godlineſſe. A liberal man deviſeth liberall things, Iſa. 32. 8. he deviſes how he may relieve Gods poor Saints; how he may ſet the poor on worke, how he may help forward the Goſpel with his purſe, if he can finde how: an humble man deviſeth humble things, a peaceable man deviſeth peaceable things, a holy man deviſeth holy things: if our affections were ſet right, we would all lay our heads together how the Pariſh may beſt be reformed, how our ſcandalous houſes may beſt be removed, how the Word that we heare from Sabbath to Sabbath, may beſt be put in practice among us: thus it would be, if our affections were ſet upon God. But becauſe our affections are not ſet ſo, hence it comes to paſſe our devices are carnal.

The

The IX. Sermon.

Colos. 3. 2.

Set your affections on things that are above, &c.

THere remaines the fourth head, which is the extremity of the affections, and that is zeale. Zeale is due onely to God, and the things of his worship; and therefore hence we may see, how infinitely they sin, that set their affections on things here on earth, because they rob God of his due; zeale, which is the extremity of the affections, is due only to God and the things of his worship. Phineas was zealous for his God, Num. 25. 13. he gave the zeal of his affections to no other but God. Now, what is zeal?

The extremity of the affections is zeal. and it is due only to God.

Zeale is a high strain of all the affections, whereby the heart puts forth all its affections with might upon that which it absolutely affects; five things therefore there are, which concurre to the making up of zeale.

Zelus quid. 5. Things in zeal.

First, a high measure of the affections. Every measure of the affections is not zeal, a man may affect a thing coldly and luke-warmely, that is not zeal. As a covetous man may have luke-warme good affections to the word. But this is not zeal. I say, zeale is a high measure of the affections. Zeal is a metaphorical word in the Original, it's taken from the seething of water over the fire. Every measure of heat in the water is not seething. No, seething hot is a high measure of heating. The Apostle confesses how the false Apostles affected the Galatians. They zealously affect you, sayes he, Galat. 4. 17. he confesses they did affect the Galatians, and he confesses they did highly affect them, in a very high measure, if it had been as well, as it was high: they zealously affect you, that is, they highly affect you. Clavasius a Casuist for the Pope, having run through all the Alphabet of questions, in the end of his Book concludeth with zeal. Zeal, sayes he, is a high measure of heat of affection, such an one sayes he, as I have shewn unto Christ in writing this Book. It's a most devillish saying, for his Book is little else then a hellish rhapsody of blasphemies to Christ, and magnifyings of his holy father the Pope. But therein he sayes right. That zeal is a high measure of affection.

1. A high measure of affections.

Clavasius his fervor Divinæ charitatis.

Secondly, as zeal is a high measure of the affections, so it is of all the affections. I do not say any one of the affections alone, or of sundry together. But it is a high measure of all the affections. Bonaventura and other of the Schoole make it only of love; Ludovicus Vives makes it to be compounded of two affections, indignation and pitty. Others to be mixed of anger and love: this is not not so; for zeal is a high strain of all the affections. And therefore the Apostle sets it as a generall height of the affections in generall. It's good to be zealously affected in a good thing, Gal. 4. 18. he does not onely say, it's good to be zealous in love, or zealously angry, but generally it's good to be zealously affected in a good thing. Sorrow for sinne is good, and therefore it's good to be zealously affected with it, Desire of grace is good, and therefore it's good to be zealously affected with it. So that then we may be said to be zealous for God; when our love to him is earnest, neſt, our deſire of him is earneſt, our joy in him is earneſt, our indignation againſt what ever may diſhonour him or diſlike him, is earneſt: when we think nothing too good, nothing too dear, nothing too much to beſtow upon him. A man may love God in a luke-warm meaſure, hate ſin in a luke-warme meaſure, grieve for his corruptions, deſire faith and repentance, delight in good duties, pity the miſeries of others, fear to tranſgreſſe Gods Commandment, a man may have all theſe affections thus in a luke-warm meaſure: as this is diſpleaſing to God, ſo it is not zeale. Zeale is a high meaſure, the higheſt ſtraine of all the affections.

2 Zeale a high measure of all the affections. In prol. sen. dub. 3.

3. With all the might of the ſoule.

Thirdly, as zeale is the higheſt meaſure of all the affections, ſo it is with all the might of the ſoule. For when a man does zealouſly affect any thing, his affection is mighty upon it. Thou ſhalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy ſoul, and with all thy might, Deut. 6. 5. that is, thou ſhalt love him zealouſly. Nimrod was a mighty hunter, Gen. 10. 9. that is, he was zealous at his hunting. Woe unto them that are a mighty to drink Wine, Iſa 5. 22. that is, that are greedy and zealous in the purſuit of their appetite in that kinde. David danced before the Lord with all his might, 2 Sam. 6. 14. that is, he did it zealouſly. Zeale is, when the heart raiſes up its affections with all its might on a thing. And therefore luke-warmneſſe is called negligence in the Scripture: Curſed is he that doth the work of the Lord negligently. As he that fights negligently, ſhewes not all his might in his fighting, ſo he that goes about any duty of Gods ſervice negligently, his heart does not ſhew all its might in it. It puts not forth all the might of its affections upon it. Lukewarmneſſe then is the negligence of the affection, and curſed is the man that does the work of the Lord negligently, ſayes the Text. But zeale is the might of the affection.

4. The putting forth of all the affection.

Fourthly, as zeale is with all the might, ſo it is the putting forth of all the affections. When the heart affects a thing, and puts forth all its affections upon it, reſerving no part of its affections for any thing elſe, this we call zeale. Herod affected the preaching of Iohn, but he did not affect it zealouſly, he did not put forth all his affection upon it, he reſerved a main part of his affection for his pleaſure. And therefore he was not zealous in hearing. Hence it is that the Scripture calls luke-warmneſſe deceitfulneſſe, as Divines do obſerve; Curſed is the deceiver, Mal. 1. 14. that is, curſed is the luke-warm perſon that offers God leſſe then he hath; offers ſomewhat, and reſerves back ſomewhat, that puts not forth all his affections upon God and his Service. Zeale is the putting forth of all the affection. As when the heart affects God, and affects nothing in competition with him, this is to be zealouſly affected towards God. When the Iewes had crucified Chriſt, and perſecuted Paul, and forbidden him to preach; the Text ſayes, the wrath of God was come upon them to the utmoſt, 1 Theſ. 2. 16. That is, the zeale of Gods fury, and anger and vengeance was on them. He kept nothing back, he was not angry a little, nor wroth a little, but he put forth the affection of his wrath to the utmoſt upon them. So when the heart puts forth the utmoſt of its love upon God, and the utmoſt of its delights upon his Word, and the utmoſt of its fear on his name, and the utmoſt of it's affection on his Commandements, then it is zealous; But if he keeps back ought to beſtow it elſewhere, its a deceiver and a luke-warm heart.

5. Upon a thing that the heart does abſolutely affect.

Fifthly, as zeale is the putting forth of all the affection, ſo it is upon a thing which the heart does abſolutely affect. A man may affect a thing, when he does not affect it abſolutely. He affects ſuch or ſuch a thing, but he affects it not abſolutely. He affects it perhaps with a degree of affection, as farre as twelve pence will go, he places may be a groats worth of affection upon a quire of paper. If he be aſkt five pounds of ſilver for a quire of paper, he does not affect it at that rate, and therefore he does not affect it abſolutely. But if a man a man have a true zeal of affection to a thing, he affecteth that thing with abſolute affection; Let it coſt what it can, he affects it; let it coſt him all charges, and all pains, and all difficulties, yea though it coſt him his life, he will have it, when he does abſolutely affect it. So that then is a man zealous for God and for grace, when his affections ſtand abſolutely that way. May be hee'l be glad ſo he may get it at an eaſie rate; but if he cannot, alas, he muſt have it, he concludes upon that, though it coſt him ſighes, groanes, every dayes ſtrivings, every dayes labour, praying, meditating, repenting, parting with all his luſts, although never ſo dear. O his ſoul does affect it on that manner, he muſt and he will have it, rather then life. This man is zealouſly affected towards grace, and towards God, becauſe he affects it abſolutely. Thus Job was zealous in affecting Gods Word, he eſteemed it above his neceſſary food, Job 23. 12. He does not ſay above his daily food, for ſo he might do and not be zealouſly affected therewith; but he affected Gods Word above his neceſſary food, above all food abſolutely, without which his life could not conſiſt; without which a man dies: ſuch food as this, comes neareſt of all outward things to be abſolutely affected. A man affects it above lands, and above livings, above his ſilver, and his gold, above all his pleaſures and gamings, a man will part with them all, rather then part with his neceſſary food. Yet Job affected Gods Word above it. And therefore he affected it zealouſly. This is the laſt thing in zeal. It is upon that which does abſolutely affect.

Albeit, now it may partly appear by the very definition of zeale, that it is due only to God; a man muſt not be zealous about any thing, nor zealouſly affected with any thing, but only with God and his worſhip. Nevertheleſſe we may yet further prove it.

Zeale is due only to God.

First, becauſe zeal is the religious part of the affections of the ſoule. Now the religious part of them are due only to God.

1. Becauſe it is the religious part of the affections.

I profited in the Iewes Religion, being zealous of the traditions of my Fathers, ſayes Paul, Gal. 1. 14. he makes zeal the character of his Religion. Seeſt thou a man zealous then after profits, and moſt earneſt to get means and maintenance and the things of this life? that man makes gain his Religion. Seeſt thou a man zealous after any thing? that's his Religion. Zeal is the religious part of the affections, and therefore it's due only unto God.

2. Becauſe zeale is the moſt of every affection.

Secondly, as zeal is the religious part of our affections: So alſo it is the moſt of every affection, and therefore only due unto God. Zeal is the moſt of every act that a man does. That which the mind minds moſt, and ſtudies moſt, that it minds zealouſly; that which the memory remembers moſt, which the heart wills moſt, it wills zealouſly. That which a man feares moſt, and loves moſt, and deſires moſt, that it does zealouſly. Now if zeal be the moſt of every act of the ſoule, it muſt needs be Idolatry to place it any where elſe but in the ſervice of God. Doeſt thou meditate moſt, and think moſt of the World? thy thoughts are idolatrous. Doeſt thou talke moſt and conferre moſt of the things of the World? thy words are idolatrous. Doeſt thou earke moſt and care moſt? doeſt thou love moſt, and rejoyce moſt in any things of this life? thine affections are idolatrous. Doeſt thou ſorrow moſt for croſſes, and loſſes, and diſgraces, and the like, more then thou grieveſt for thy ſinnes? thy grief is idolatry. That's the hearts Idoll, which it doth affect moſt. How often is God in Scripture called the moſt High? the moſt High, Acts 7. 48. If he be the moſt high, then the moſt high of every act, and of every affection muſt be for him. The very Heathen call God, Deus Optimus Maximus, God the moſt good, and the moſt great: ſo likewiſe he is the moſt terrible, and the moſt holy, and the moſt juſt; and therefore the moſt of our affections muſt needs be due unto him. Zeale is the moſt of every one of the affections, and that onely is ſuitable ſutable to God. The affections muſt be ſutable to the thing we affect; but nothing of all the affections is ſutable to God beſides zeal; for zeale is the moſt of every one of them.

3. Zeale is the peculiar pitch of every affection.

Thirdly, as zeal is the moſt of every affection: So it is the peculiar pitch of every affection. There cannot be two moſts. The ſuperlative degree cannot be two; Doctiſſimus properly is a term peculiar to one body. The moſt learned man in the World, is a peculiar word, peculiar to one. There may be ten learned, a thouſand learned, there maybe many learned, but moſt learned is a peculiar title. So zeal being the moſt of the affections, it muſt needs be peculiar to ſome one thing, which cannot be any other but God. Chriſt gave himſelf for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purchaſe to himſelf a peculiar people, zealous of good works, Tit. 2.14. Thoſe people that are zealous of good works, ye ſee they are people peculiar to Chriſt. They can be no other people but Chriſts people thatare zealous of good works. No people under Heaven are truly zealous of good works, but only his people. This is peculiar to Chriſt, to have ſuch people: Becauſe zeale is peculiarly due unto him. Thou canſt not poſſibly be one of Gods people, if thou beeſt not zealous for God. A zealous beleever, and a zealous repenter, and a zealous profeſſor: Zealous in praying, and zealous in hearing the Word. Zealous people are peculiar people to Chriſt. Under-love, and under-joy, and under-hope, and under-fear, are not peculiarly due unto God. For I may love my health too, and I may delight in the bleſſings of this life, and I may fear a temporary evil, I may lend mine under-affections to ſome things elſe beſides God; but my zeal being the moſt of my affections, muſt be given to God; zeale is peculiar to him. Thou art a worldling then, thou art none of Gods if thou beeſt not zealous for him. Thou art of thy father the Deviil, thou art none of Gods, unleſſe thou be zealous to him. Zeal is his peculiar.

4. Zeal is the moſt ſpending part of the affections.

Fourthly, as zeal is the peculiar pitch of every affection: So it is the moſt ſpending part of the affections. A man muſt ſpend himſelf upon nothing but God; nothing elſe will quit charges. Now zeal is the ſpendingeſt ſtrain of every affection: It moſt ſpendeth the ſpirits, it moſt buſieth the body; you may gather what a ſpending thing zeal is, by the paſſage in the Pſalmiſt. David ſayes thus, My zeale hath conſumed me, becauſe mine enemies have forgotten thy words, Pſal. 119.139. David was ſo zealous for God, that he did even ſpend himſelf to ſee how his enemies diſhonoured his God. A childe of God is like a faithfull ſervant to his Maſter, he is willing to ſpend himſelf in his ſervice. So he is content to ſpend himſelf in his employments for God. Paul when God employed him for the ſoules of the Corinthians, he ſayes thus, I will gladly ſpend and be ſpent for you, why? what was the reaſon? I abundantly love you, ſayes he, 2 Cor. 12.15. that is, he was zealous in his love to their ſoules; God had employed him for the good of their ſoules, and he was ſo zealous in this employment, that he could even ſpend himſelf, and be ſpent for them. And indeed zeal it ſelf is a very ſpending thing. Thou art the Deville Martyr, that ſpendeſt thy ſelf upon the things of this life; thou art ſo wedded thereto, that thou ſpendeſt thy parts, and thy wits hereabouts, thou ſpendeſt thy thoughts and thy time hereupon, thou ſpendeſt thy ſpirits, and thy ſelf this way. The voluptuous man ſpends himſelf as much at his ſports, as a Miniſter ſpends himſelf in a Pulpit, as a godly man ſpends himſelfe in good duties. As for Gods Service, thy prayers are ſo cold and ſo negligent, thou ſpendeſt thy ſelfe not at all in them. Thy repentance is ſo overly, it ſpends thee never a jot to go thorow it: thou art ſo eager after thy pleaſures, they ſpend thee; ſo earneſt after the world, that ſpends thee, becauſe thou art zealous about ſuch things. But it is otherwiſe with thee in the Service of God. This is another ſtrong reaſon, why zeale is due properly to God, becauſe a man must spend himselfe upon nothing so much as upon pleasing of God, and doing his will, and seeking his glorie. It is true he may spend himselfe in his calling. But the greatest part of the spending lieth in this, that he may walke with God in his calling. He spendeth himselfe in belabouring his heart to work in obedience, to follow his businesses with faith, to goe about his earthly employments as before God, to glorifie God in all his wayes. A man may ground himselfe upon nothing so much as upon God. Zeal to God makes him a kind of Martyr for Christ.

5. Zeal is the impatient part of the affections.

Fifthly, as zeal is the spending part of all the affections, so likewise zeal is the impatient part of all the affections. It is true, we may desire a good report among men, but our affection must not be impatient; if we cannot have it without bating an inch of a good conscience, our desire must be patient without it. We may grieve for a losse or a trouble, but our affection must not be impatient: if we see Gods providence hath sent it, our griefe must bee patient under it. Wee may affect these outward blessings of God, but our affections must bee patient of a privation, but our affections must be zealous to God; because zealous affections are impatient of the contrary. We must so hate sinne against God, as to be impatient to endure it: so feare to offend him, as to be impatient of any boldnesse that way: So love the glorie of God, as to be impatient of any dishonour to his Name: So zealous to reprove sinne in a neighbour, as not to suffer sin in him. Thou shalt rebuke thy neighbour, and not suffer sin on him, Leviticus 19. 17. that is, thou shalt be zealous in rebuking. An high looke and a proud heart I will not suffer, Psal. 101. 5. that is, I will be zealous against it. I have not suffered my mouth to sin, Job. 13. 30. that is I have been zealous in the ruling of my tongue. Zeal is the impatient part of all the affections, look what thine affections do zealously affect, they will not suffer the contrary. And therefore the zeale of thine affections must be unto God. Indeed if thine affections be lukewarme to God, thou mayest wish that God might be glorified; but if he be not, thou canst endure it: Thou mayest pray to God for grace to heal thee of thy deadnesse; though he do not, thou canst bear it. But if thine affections were so far hereto, as to be zealous they would be impatient, thou couldst never endure it. Zeal is the impatient degree of the affections, whereby when the soule does affect a thing, it is impatient without it. And therefore zeale is due only to God. Thus ye discerne the evidence of this truth, that the zeal of our affection is due properly to God.

The X. Sermon.

Colos. 3. 2.

Set your affections on things that are above, &c.

THE Uſes of this are theſe.

Uſe 1. God demands the zeale of our affections.

First, hence we may learne, that God demandeth the the zeale of our affections. If the zeale of our affections be due unto God, I beſeech you take notice that God demandeth his due. Give unto the Lord the glory due unto his Name; and ſo God demandeth his due in our affections. If I be a Father, where is my honour? if a maſter, where is my fear? Mal. 1. 6. he does not only call for ſome honour, and ſome love, and ſome fear, but he calls for his part. Where is my part? ſayes he. Where is my fear? Gods part of thy fear, as I have ſhewed, is the zeale of thy feare; Gods part of thy love, and thy joy, and thy hope, and the reſt, is the zeale of the ſame. This now God demands of thy ſoule; where is my feare? may be thou loveſt him a little, and his Commandements a little, may be thou feareſt him a little, to offend him and diſobey him, thou feareſt a little; this is not Gods part. The zeale of thine affection is Gods part; and he calls for his part. Where is my feare?

We are bound to give God our affections.

Secondly, hence we may learne, that we muſt upon paine of Gods infinite diſpleaſure, give him the zeale of our affections, whenſoever we pray, to pray to him zealouſly, bleeding for our ſins, and melting under our wants, and yearning for his graces. Whenſoever we praiſe him, to praiſe him thus zealouſly, rejoycing in his mercies, and admiring his goodneſſe. Whenſoever we enter his Courts, to enter with zeale, reverencing his footſtoole, trembling at his Word; in all our wayes ſeeking how we may be moſt zealous of his glory; for if God demand the zeale of our affections, there is no keeping back. Ananias was ſmitten dead for keeping back a little peece of mony, when God did demand it. Curſed is he that keeps back a blow when God does call for it, God demandeth our zeale, and wo is us if we keep back.

Ier. 48. 10.

3. On paine of damnation

Thirdly, hence we may gather that we are in the ſtate of damnation, if we doe not give God the zeale of our affections: if God require it, upon paine of damnation, and we are bid to give it him upon paine of his everlaſting diſpleaſure, then certainly we muſt needs be in ſtate of damnation if we doe not give it. Now this is proved by foure arguments.

First, that man is in the ſtate of damnation that never repents. I need not prove that, ye know it well enough; he is ſure to periſh that never repents. Though thou haſt taken up all the outward duties of religion, thou never repenteſt unleſs thou be zealous; if thou be zealous, then thou haſt drawn out of Chriſts wine-ſeller, as Bernard obſervs on the Canticles, Introduxit me rex in cellas

In Cant. Serm. 39.

Iam vinariam, the King hath brought me into his wine-seller, he expounds it of the souls drawing of zeal from Christ: but if thou beest not zealous in repentance, thou never repentest. Be zealous and repent, *Rev.*3.19. First, he sayes be zealous, and then he saies repent. First, thou must resolve to be zealous, or else thou doest not repent: if a man have wrong'd a neighbour though never so mean, he must be sorry for it, or else he does not repent of it: if a man have wrong'd a Noble-man, he must be more sorry: for as the wrong is the greater, the greater the party wronged is, so the greater is the sorrow that is required to repentance. If a man have wronged the King, it must be greater sorrow yet, till the sorrow be somewhat answerable to the greatnesse of the King who is wronged. But if a man have wronged a God, this must be the greatest sorrow of all sorrowes, otherwise thou doest not repent. Repentance is the rending or breaking of the heart, so sayes the Prophet Ioel, it is not a luke-warme, or a little griefe that will break the heart. Repentance is the humbling of the soule, sayes David, it is not a little bowing, and a little bending will humble it before God. Repentance is the mortifying or the killing of sinne, as Paul calls it: alas, sin is like the heart of Oke that will be a hundred yeeres a dying, so sin will be long a dying, it is not a little pricking and a little compunction will kill it. Repentance is called repentance unto life, in the Scripture; it is not a little chafing, and a little rubbing, and a little aqua vitæ will fetch a man from death unto life: No, no, Beloved; thou never repentest unlesse thou be zealous. And therefore the Apostle makes zeal a part of repentance, 2 Cor. 7.11. No zeale, no repentance: no repentance, no salvation.

2. That man is in the state of damnation that is not a beleever in Christ; if a man be not in Christ by a lively faith, he cannot be saved. The Prophet prophesying of Christ saith thus. Unto us a child is borne, and he shall be called wonderfull, the Prince of peace, and the zeale of the Lord of Hosts shall performe this, Isa. 9.6,7. Never is Christ conceived in any man under Heaven, but the zeale of the Lord of Hosts does performe it: Does he enlighten the mind, or purge the the heart, or cleanse the conscience? zeal does performe it. Can I be so in love with Christ, as to deny my selfe for him, and not be zealous to him? Can I count all my parts, and all my gifts, and all that I have, as Paul did, to be drosse and dung, for the worth I find in Christ, and not be zealous of him? Can I hunger after him, and pant for him, and be sick of love till I have him, and not be zealous towards him? Thus we must do, otherwise we are not in Christ. And therefore Moses confounds faith and zeal, as if they were all one, and both in one. Phinehas was zealous for Gods sake, *Numb.*25.11. That is, he was zealous and faithfull both, for so the Psalmist expounds it, that was counted to him for righteousnesse, sayes he; that was speaking of his zeal in executing of judgement, that was counted to him for righteousnesse. Now ye know nothing can be counted to a man for righteousnesse, but only faith, and therefore by zeale there is meant faith. This is an undeniable argument, if a man have faith. hee is zealous, otherwise he hath no faith. If he have no faith, he cannot be saved

Thirdly, that man is in the state of damnation that loves not God. He that loves not the Lord Jesus Christ, let him be Anathema Maranatha, that is, let him be accursed and accursed, for it is the greatest curse in the world, it is the curse of the Gospel, Let him be accursed and double accursed, that loves not Christ. Now a man never loves God, if he be not zelous; qui non zelat, non amat, He that is not zealous in love does not love; love is tearmed zeale in the Scripture. Iehu, indeed the truth was, he had no love to God, he thought he had though; and therefore when he would tell Iehonadab, he had love to God, he tels it in these word. Come and see my Zeale I have to the Lord of Hoſts, 2. King, 10. 16. That is, ſee the love that I bear to the Lord of Hoſts; zelus debet eſſe non modò in affectu, verumetiam in intellectu, is a ſaying; zeale muſt be in the minde, and zeal muſt be in the affections, both are required to this zeal that I ſpeak of. If thou beeſt not zealous it is moſt certaine, thou haſt not a jot of true love. Zeal is more ſeen in that affection then any, if there be any; and therefore if there be no zeale in thee to God and his wayes, there is no love, thou art yet under wrath.

Auguſt.

Fourthly, that man is in the ſtate of damnation, that was never taught of God: Chriſt promiſes that all that are his ſhall be taught of God; taught of God to be holy as he is holy; taught of God to love one another; taught of God to walke in all newneſſe of life. Every man look what he is taught in, therein he is zealous. Paul before he was converted, he was taught in the ceremonies and traditions of his Fathers, and therefore therein was he zealous. I was taught, ſayes he, according to the perfect manner of the Law of the Fathers, and was zealous, Acts 22.3 Alas poor ſoul had he been better taught, he had been better zealous. I doe not ſpeake of the outward teaching of the care only, but alſo of the inward teaching of the heart, his very heart; ſuch was the policy of Satan, his very heart was taught in thoſe things, and therefore he was zealous of them. The covetous mans heart is taught to be earthy, therefore he is zealous for the world. The proud mans heart is taught to be provd, therefore he is zealous for his credit and eſteem. The voluptuous mans heart is taught to be vaine, therefore he is zealous of his pleaſures. Alas, ſuch were never taught of God. The Devill teaches them, and their luſts teach them, and the examples of others teach them. Alas, if thou beeſt not taught of God, how to walke in newneſſe of life, thou canſt not be ſaved; it is better to be unborne then untaught; and this as you ſee, cannot be without zeale unto God.

Sapit unuſquiſque quod didicit.

Prov.

Fifthly, that man is in the ſtate of damnation, that cannot yet be pittied. If thou beeſt zealous for the things of this life, and not zealous for Heaven, zealous for thy pleature, and not for Gods glory, thou art not to be pittied; and thou wilt have pleaſures, take them, and thou wilt to Hell, go, who will pittie thee; Deformitas ſceleris aufert miſericordiam. It is true, it would pitty a mans heart to ſee a poor ſoul weeping and howling for his ſins, and yet goe to Hell. It would pitty a man to ſee a blind Papiſt, whipping himſelfe, praying on his Beads, giving all his goods to the poore, confeſſing his ſins to his Confeſſor, faſting and afflicting his body, zealous in his blinde ſuperſtition, and all to ſave his poor ſoul, and yet goe to Hell; it would pitty a mans heart I ſay, to ſee ſuch a man go to Hell, as how can he otherwiſe? yet it would pitty a man, becauſe he is zealous for God, in the blindneſſe of his zeal: As it pittied the Apoſtle to ſee his brethren goe to Hell, that were blindly zealous for God. Brethren, my hearts deſire, and prayer to God for Iſrael is, that they may be ſaved; for I bear them record, they have a zeale of God, but not according to knowledge, Rom. 10. 1, 2. It pittied him that ſuch as were blindly zealous for God ſhould periſh. But whom will it pitty to ſee thee go to Hell, thou haſt no zeal at all, that way? No, no, thou art zealous after the things of this life, and after thy luſts, as God told Jeruſalem, Who ſhall have pitty upon thee O Jeruſalem? Thou haſt forſaken me, ſayes he, Jer. 15.5. Who will pitty our drunkards and our whoremongers? who will pitty you that are zealous in your ſins and abominations? ye are not ſo much as the objects of pity.

Is it ſo, that the zeale of our affections is due only to God? Is it ſo that God does demand it? and that we are bound upon pain of death and damnation to give it to God? Is it ſo that we never repented, we never beleeved, never were in Chriſt, never loved God, never were taught of God, never can be pittied, unleſſe we give the zeale of our affections unto God? Then, O then, let us conſider the lamentable condition we are in, as long as the zeale of our affection runs otherwiſe. I beſeech you conſider theſe eight things, which may convince you what a wofull condition ye are in.

Zeal is the fire of the ſoule.

Firſt, zeal is the fire of the ſoul. Look what thou art moſt zealous upon that ſets thy ſoul in a fire. Every man and woman in the world is ſet on fire, either of hell, or of heaven. Now if heaven have not ſet thee on fire, hell hath ſet thee on fire, thou art ſet on fire of one of theſe two. As it is the bleſſedſt thing that can be to be ſet on fire of heaven, to be zealous for the glory of God, and the laving ones ſoule; zealous for the getting of grace, and zealous in the duties of Religion: ſo on the contrary, it is the curſedſt thing that can poſſibly be, to be ſet on fire of Hell. Thou which art a ſwearer, a lyar, a filthy ſpeaker, whoſe mouth talketh of vanity, thy tongue is ſet on fire of Hell; the tongue is ſet on fire of Hell, ſayes the Apoſtle, James 3. 6. Thou which art a voluptuous man, that loveſt thy pleaſures, and delighteſt in vanity more then in better things, thy heart is ſet on fire of Hell: Thou which yeeldeſt to the temptations of Satan, the Devil tempts thee to goe proudly in thine apparell, and thou yeeldeſt: the Devill tempts thee to ſmother thy conſcience, and thou conſenteſt. The Devill tempts thee to put off thy better obedience till another time, and the temptation takes hold; there is ne're a temptation of Satan but it is a fiery dart, the fiery darts of the Devill, Eph. 6. 16. Well does the Apoſtle call them fiery darts of the Devill, ſays Saint Chryſoſtome, τοιαῦται γὰρ αἱ ἐπιθυμίαι; for ſuch, ſayes he, are the ſinfull luſts and affections; they are all fiery, ſet on fire of Hell; this is one miſery, and this not a ſmall one; zeale is the fire of the ſoule; and if it be not ſet upon God, it is ſet on fire of Hell. Chryſ.

Zeal is the running of the ſoul.

Secondly, zeal is the running of the ſoule. If thou beeſt not zealous for God thou runneſt away after the things of this world; thou doeſt not onely go after vanities, but thou runneſt; not onely goe after thy pleaſures and thy profits, but thou runneſt. As the affections are the feet of the ſoule, ſo zeale is the ſwift running pace of theſe feet. I will run the way of thy Commandements, ſayes David, that is, I will be zealous in it. It is a long way to Heaven, eſpecially now ſince the fall, it is a very long way to Heaven, and death will overtake us before ever we can get there, unleſſe we run; and therefore Saint Paul commands us to run faſt enough, leſt we never get there. So run that ye may obtain. 1 Cor. 9. 24. Now had we not need to ſet our zeal right for that way we run, that our zeal ſtands. If the zeal of our affection ſtand to Godward's, we run on-wards to Heaven; but if it ſtand to the things here below, we run on-wards to Hell. I reade of Tiberius Nero, who, when his brother Druſus lay ſick in Germany, he ranne two hundred miles in twenty foure houres to viſit him. But we may finde ranker runners then ſo in ſinne; ſome in drunkenneſſe and good fellowſhip, as they call it; others in ſecurity and hardneſſe of heart: others in one ſinne, and others in another; and as they runne themſelves, ſo if there bee any that are ſtricter then themſelves, they wonder that they runne not with them to the ſame exceſſe of ryot, 1. Peter 4. 4. Marke, runne not with them, where note, themſelves runne into ryot. May be ſometimes, they have ſudden and violent affections to good, as if they were all on a fire for the preſent, like the young man in the Goſpell, he came running to Chriſt, and kneeled downe to him, ſayes the Text, Marke 10. 17. O he was all upon the haſte, he does not goe to him, but he runs; as many men and women have very good moods and violent pangs of goodneſs now and then, but alas, it was nothing but a flaſh, for by and by he was as ready to be gone, as ever he was haſty to come; and then he ran on in his ſecurity and covetouſneſſe of minde. Do ye not ſee how faſt many of you run on in arerages with God? If we could ſee Gods debt-book, might we not there read. Item, ten thouſand oathes thou haſt ſworne. Item, mil- Tiberius Nero.

lions of millions of filthy words thou haſt ſpoken. Item, a hundred millions of millions of wicked thoughts thou haſt thought. Item, a thouſand lazy prayers thou haſt made. Item, twenty hundred Sabbaths thou haſt prophaned. Item, forty Sacraments thou haſt unworthily received: Thus ye have run on, as if ye thought every day ſeven yeares, till ye are in Hell. Thus it is with you, when your zeal is ſet any where elſe then on God.

Zeal is the predominant element in the ſoule.

Thirdly, zeal is the predominant element in the ſoule. Look what the ſoule is zealous unto, that is the predominant temper of the ſoule: if thou beeſt zealous for God, Chriſt is predominant in thee: if thou beeſt zealous for the things of this world, the world is predominant in thee, Non datur temperamentum adpondus, ſayes the Philoſopher, there is no temper but ſomething is predominant. You never heard of a ſoule that had as much of the world in him as of Chriſt, and of Chriſt as of the world: No, as he is zealous to one thing, ſo one thing or other is predominant in him. Men pleaſing is predominant in one; pride predominant in another, and pleaſure predominant in a third. Whatſoever a man is zealous unto, that is his predominant element: Now if thine affections, if the zeal of them be not ſet upon God, then ſomething or other in the world is predominant in thee. O what a miſery then is it to be leſſe zealous for God then for the world! the world is predominant in thee; this is the Character of one that yet is no better then a reprobate; Lovers of pleaſure more then lovers of God, 2 Tim. 3. 4. when pleaſure is predominant and not God. He that loveth father or mother more then me, is not worthy of me. &c. ſays Chriſt Mat. 10. 37. when carnal relations are predominant, and not ſpiritual, this I ſay, is an evident character of a wicked man: for what difference is there between a godly man and a wicked man? both have ſin in them; this is the difference: a godly man hath ſin in him, but grace is predominant; and therefore he is called a godly man: A wicked man hath many good graces in him, but ſin and wickedneſſe is predominant, and therefore he is called a wicked man; the denomination is from the part that is predominant. The beaſts of the earth, becauſe the earth is predominant; the fiſhes of the Sea, becauſe the water is predominant; a Brick-houſe, not as though there were no wood in it, but becauſe Brick is predominant. Marke all thy thoughts, which is predominant in thee, the world or Chriſt; marke all thy ſpeeches, which is predominant earth or heaven; mark all thy cares, which is predominant to buſie thee moſt? O what a wofull eſtate art thou in, when ſin and corruption is predominant in thee? If thou be more zealous after the things of this life then after grace and holineſſe, without which no man ſhall ſee the Lord: Thou canſt never enter into Gods kingdome, becauſe ſin is predominant in thee.

4. Zeale is the ſelf-cruelty of the ſoule.

Fourthly, zeale is the ſelfe-cruelty of the ſoule: If thou beeſt moſt zealous to God, thy zeale is a holy cruelty to thy ſelfe. Maſter, ſpare thy ſelfe, ſayes Peter to Chriſt, Get thee behinde me Satan, ſayes Chriſt; he was zealous for the redemption of the world, and he would not ſpare his own life. Zeal is a holy cruelty of the ſoule, it will ſpare nothing, nor life, nor credit, nor living nor any thing. M. Fox that was zealous in his love to the poor, he was in a holy manner cruell to himſelfe, to give the very cloathes off his back, rather then the naked ſhould not be covered. Love is as ſtrong as death and as cruell as the grave, Cant. 8. 6. Durus ſicut inferi zelus, as Ambroſe expounds it; zeale is as hard as the grave. A man that is zealous, is a hard man to himſelfe that he may be free unto God; not as though true zeale were hard and cruell indeed unto his own ſoule, but I meane, to his owne fleſhly deſires and reſpects, he is the merciſulleſt man to his owne ſoule, under Heaven. Now then ſee what a wofull eſtate thou art in, if thou beeſt not zealous for God: For if the zeale of thine affections gad any where elſe, thou art the cruelleſt man to thine owne ſoule in very deed, and in truth, as poſſibly can be: Thou squandrest away Gods mercies, thou treasurest up Gods wrath, thou livest in those sinnes which thine owne conscience can tell thee are sins, thou bestowest thine affections upon the things of this life, which should be given to God, thou damnest thine owne soule. That time which God vouchsafes thee to get grace in, thou wastest it away upon vanity; thou art more earnest for the good of thy carkase then for the everlasting weale of thy soule; thou partest with Christ, rather than with thy lusts: O thou art durus ut inferi, thou art as cruell as Hell to thine own soul. Thou knowest that whosoever comes to the Sacrament unworthily or unpreparedly, or not a new creature, he eats and drinks his own damnation: thou knowest this well enough, thou knowest that the Lord sayes so in his Word. Yet thou art so cruel to thy own soul, that for all this thou wilt venture: thou knowest that he that comes to this supper without a wedding garment, shall be cast into utter darknesse, where is weeping and gnashing of teeth; thou knowest this full well, and thou canst not deny it. Yet thou art so cruell to thy own soule, as to come hither without it: thine affections are so eager after the things of this life, the very zeal of them all, that thou art even cruell to thine owne soule, Durus ut inferi, as cruell as Hell it selfe to thy selfe. O the cruelty of thine earthly zeale; it makes thee fearlesse, and witlesse to sin against God, which the Angels of Heaven durst not doe for a thousand worlds. It makes thee sinne against Christ, and cast off his yoake without which thou canst be never saved; it makes thee choak the motions of Gods Spirit, and strangle thine owne conscience, Durus ut inferi zelus, may we well say; this zeale is as cruell as Hell, and yet it is in every one of us all, that is not zealous for God.

5. Ambrose Zeal is the brand of the soule

Fifthly, zeale is the brand of the soule. When a man is zealous in any passion, what ever it be, we see it sets a brand upon a man; we call him a choleriek man, that is zealous with anger; he is very touchy, say we. We call him a fretfull, envious man, that is zealously given thereunto. We call him a melancholy man that is much in his sadnesse. Zeale which is the Much of every affection, it sets a brand upon a man. So when a man is zealous for good, it sets a good brand upon a man, as Æmilius for his goodnesse, was called Æmilius the good. Antoninus for his piety was called Antoninus the pious: so in Scripture one Barsabas was called Justus the just. So it should seem too, that Simon was a noted man for some passionate and affectionate forwardnesse, and therefore he was called Simon Zelotes, that is, Simon the zealous, Luke 6. 15. And so we see though it be counted a mockage by the ignorant world, it is observed by them which are without, that Gods people are zealous. Look what ever a man is zealous in, that is able to brand him. Now if thou beest zealous for the world, or zealous after thy pleasures or any thing else in the world, it brands thee in the forehead for a carnall wretch: as Elymas the Sorcerer, Judas the Traytor: It stigmatizes thee for a worldling, or a drunkard, or a company-keeper, or voluptuous, or what ever it be thy zeal is most in. Every man is more zealous for one thing then he is for another, either for God, or something else in the world: the question is, whether art thou most zealous for? if thou beest more zealous for any thing else then thou art for God, it brands thee for a wretch. Such an one a very wordling; such an one a very muck-worme; such an one a very spend-thrif; such an one a very gamester and a royster; such an one a very tatler; such an one an Orlando Furioso; such an one a hard man: Look where thy Most is, that does truly brand thee before God and good men that are able to discerne thee. Acts 1, 23.

The

The XI. Sermon.

Colos. 3. 2.

Set your affections on things that are above, &c.

zeal is the tranſporting of ſoul out of it ſelfe.

THE ſixth is, zeale is the tranſportation of the ſoule out of it ſelfe. When a man is zealous in a paſſion, he is tranſported out of himſelfe, the paſſion hath command of him, and not he of his paſſion. As a man that is all on fire with anger, or with choler, it tranſports him out of himſelfe, and he is under the command of his anger, his anger rules him; it is well for him now if his anger be good; but if it be carnall, what a wofull condition is he in! If a mans zeal be good and for God, he is happy. As David was zealous for God, he was tranſported out of himſelfe, he was not his owne man. No, ſayes he, I am thine, Lord ſave me, for I have ſought thy precepts, Pſal. 119. 94. he ſought Gods precepts with ſuch zeal, that he was not his owne man, he was under the command of his zeal, his zeal was to God, and it did captivate him to God. I am thine, ſayes he. He was at Gods diſpoſe, not at his owne, for his zeale tranſported him out of himſelfe. *H*imſelfe would tranſgreſſe, but his zeal would not let him. *H*imſelfe would be careleſſe, but his zeal would not ſuffer him. He muſt doe as his zeal would have it. He had not the command of himſelfe. No, he was at the command of his gracious zeale. It was well for him it was good: for now on the contrary, if a mans affections be ſet upon the things of this life, he muſt have pleaſures, and he muſt have his living and his maintenance, and he muſt have this, his affections are ſet on't, he is zealous after them: this man is not his owne man, he is a ſervant of his luſts. As David ſaid, I am thine Lord: So he may ſay on the contrary, I am thine world: I am thine, pleaſure, I am thine, Satan, I am at thy command and thy ſervice. As the text ſayes, Paul a ſervant of Jeſus Chriſt, Jude a ſervant of Jeſus Chriſt, for they were zealous for Chriſt, and their zeal made them not their owne men: ſo I may ſay of a wicked man. Eſau a ſervant of ſinfull pleaſure and delights, Demas a ſervant of this preſent World, Diotrephes a ſervant of his own ambition; for they were zealous of theſe things, and their zeale made them ſlaves thereto. Whoſoever committeth ſinne is the ſervant of ſinne, John 8. 34. ſayes Chriſt to the Jewes; ſervant? ſay they, we were never ſervants, we are free: ſervants ſayes he, yea, ye are the ſervants of ſinne, ye goe about to kill me, ſayes he. Are not ye the ſlaves of ſinne, when ye will be obedient to your luſts, to doe ſuch an ill office as to murther me? I know there be two kindes of ſlaves and ſervants; ſome that are in arcta cuſtodia cloſe priſoners; Such ſervants of ſin are they, that are kept ſo cloſe, that they cannot goe one ſtep beyond prophaneneſſe. Some in libera cuſtodia, are falſe priſoners. When a man luſts hold him in a longer chaine, like Birds in a larger Cage, which may be is free to be a profeſſour, and come to Church and hear, and pray, and be civil; and when he is once at the length of his Chaine, his luſts pull him backe: the former are the affections Gally-ſlaves, chained to their ſeates and their oares; The latter are their ſluggiſh meſſengers, to go up and down of their errand. And therefore the Devil which takes all advantages of a mans affections, is ſaid to hold him captive at his pleaſure, 2 Tim. 2. 26. O ſayeſt thou, I am not the Devils captive at his pleaſure, I will not ſweare, nor ſwagger, nor be drunken as ſome will; alas, alas, it is not the Devils pleaſure to have thee a drunkard or a ſwearer, it is his pleaſure to uſe his ſervants ſome for one ſervice, ſome for another: it is not his pleaſure to imploy thy tongue in ſwearing? no, He'l imploy thy tongue onely in talking civilly of the things of the World. It is not his pleaſure to uſe thee for drunkenneſſe and whoredome, but to go on in ſecurity, and formality, and preſumption. O what a hideous caſe art thou in, the zeale of whoſe affections is not ſet upon God! What will not thine affections command? and then if they command, thou art not thine own man, thou muſt obey. Let covetouſneſſe command; how wilt thou curtaile thy prayers to God in the morne? how ſeldome wilt thou be thinking of God all the day? how wilt thou carke, and pinch, and ſpare? Let mirth and jollity command thee, how wilt thou jeſt, and toole, and hoyt, and play, and giggle, and mock, any thing for paſtime? Let revenge command thee, how angerly wilt thou look? how ſnappiſhly wilt thou ſpeak? how churliſhly wilt thou bend thy fiſt? or how baſely wilt thou ſtudy to do a diſpleaſure? how apt to miſconſtrue what thy neighbour doth? how ready to entertaine any flying rumour of him? thus thou art not thine own man, but haraſed, and hurried up and down by thine unruly affections, till they have undone thy ſoul for ever. O conſider then the wofulneſſe of this thy ſlavery, when the zeale of thine affections is thus disjoyned from God. Conſider quickly if thine affections keep thee in ſervice long, they'l keep thee ever; the longer a man ſtayes in ſervice, the more foole he is. Proverb. Alterius ne ſit, qui ſuus eſſe poteſt; In the Law of God it is written, that if a ſervant after ſeven years bondage did ſtill love his Maſter, the Law ſayes thus, let his Maſter boare his eares, and make him ſerve for ever, Exodus 21. 5. well, take heed, thou loveſt to live on as thou doeſt, and thou likeſt thy ſlaviſh courſes too too well, take heed, I ſay, leſt thine eares be nailed to thine affections, and thou be made a ſlave for ever. I feare me, we have many of ſuch ſlaves, their eares boar'd with an awle, and their ſoules then bound prentice for ever to the wayes of Death.

ὅτι χαλεπὸν τὸ δουλοις, ſayes Ariſtotle, ſervants have no leiſure.

Seventhly, zeale is the ſtrength of the ſoule, zeale carries all the ſtrength of the ſoul with it, leaves none behinde. And therefore the Scripture puts theſe two things together, ones zeale and his ſtrength. Lord where is thy zeale, and thy ſtrength? ſayes the Prophet Iſa. 63. 15. If he aske where his zeale is, he askes where his ſtrength is? for zeale is the ſtrength of the ſoul. Ye know Jacob wreſtled with God for a bleſſing, and his effectual fervent prayer prevailed, but how does God expreſſe it? he expreſſes his zeale thus. By his ſtrength, he had power with God, Oſe. 12. 3. his prayer was a zealous prayer, and therefore it was a prayer with ſtrength, by his ſtrength he had power with God. He prayed, and he prayed with ſtrength, he laid all his ſtrength that he could on the duty, and by his ſtrength he had power with God. Look what a man is zealous unto, all his ſtrength goes to it, he leaves none behinde. O the miſery of a carnal heart, that is not zealous for God, he hath no ſtrength at all left for God, or the ſaving of his ſoul. Would he pray? alas, he hath no ſtrength to pray with. His prayers are as weak as bul-ruſhes. Would he reſiſt ſin? he hath no ſtrength to reſiſt it with. His ſtriving to reſiſt it is nothing able. O how hardy is he to commit ſin, the charges and the coſt that is in drinking does not terrifie the drunkard from his drunkenneſſe, the coſt that is in gariſh apparel does not terrifie the proud from their vanity in cloathes. The diſgrace that is in ſin does not terrifie the Adulterer from his luſt. The fear of fathers and mothers diſpleaſure does not terrifie the ſpendthrift from his ryot. No, wicked men are hardy that way, becauſe their zeal goes that way. But to that which is good, How weake is thy heart? Ezek. 16. 30. nihil metuendum videt, metuit tamen; the leaſt croſſe look of a father, or a mother, or a great man ſcares him. One twelve penny charges affrights him. One petty difficulty damps him, becauſe his zeale ſtands towards another point; take him at the plough, there he can be ſtrong to labour, he'l toile, he'l ſweat, he'l hold out. Take him at prayer, he is as weake as water; take him at a Tale or a Story, he'l remember it well, and repeate it after you, his memory is ſtrong; take him at a Sermon, his memory failes him; take him in a buſineſſe to manage, his wit is ſtrong, his parts ſtrong, he hath an excellent reach; but take him in mortification, he is as weake as a man without underſtanding. This is the miſery of thy ſoul, when thy zeale is not ſet upon God. The Devil is the ſtrong man, Mat. 12. 29. and thou haſt no ſtrength to encounter him; thy luſts are ſtrong to inthrall thee, and thou haſt no ſtrength to be free, and yet thou piſſeſt at theſe things: Men think nothing of the Devil, as though he were nothing but a ſcare-crow, they defie him every hour in the day, they jeſt at him, ſaying, the Devil is a foole, they'l paint him on their wals, and call for him as though they would give him a challenge. I remember a pretty Proverbe, that I read the Germans have, Non pingendus eſt Diabolus in pariete, quia ſponte ſuâ venit. Paint not the Devil on the wall, he'l come ſoone enough of his own accord. I am ſure, he comes too ſoone to beguile men, too ſoone to bewitch and befoole men, too ſoone to diſarme men from all ſtrength to that which is good. If he can once ſet thine affections on the things of this life, he hath gotten the victory, and thou art not able to recover.

8. Zeale is the confidence of the ſoule. Superant omnes quæ cupiunt nimis, ſayes Lucian.

Eighthly, Zeale is the full confidence of the ſoule: that does a man chiefliеſt truſt to, which he is zealous upon. He that is zealous for the world he truſts to the world, otherwiſe he would not be zealous for it. He truſts to have pleaſures, and he truſts to have goods, & he truſts to be eſteemed one that is zealous about them. What, do you truſt to beare all before you? as we uſe to ſay, when we ſee a man hot and zealous upon any thing; the ſoul would not be zealous but that it verily truſts to prevaile. Thus ſhall mine anger be accompliſhed, and they ſhall know that I the Lord have ſpoken it in my zeale, Ezek. 5. 13. God was confident of the fulfilling of his wrath, why? becauſe he had ſpoken in his zeale. Indeed God may well be ſo, were he never ſo little angry; but the words do expreſſe the nature of zeale. It's the full truſt of the ſoul to ſpeed. A wiſe man will not be hot upon any thing, unleſſe he truſt to go through ſtitch. If zeale then be the full truſt of the ſoul, what a mad man art thou not to be zealous for God? Thou truſteſt to the World, and truſteſt thy pleaſures, and truſteſt thy paſſions, thou doeſt not truſt God. If thou truſtedſt the Lord God, thou wouldeſt be zealous for God. Alas, alas, thou canſt not truſt God, thou never laboureſt to pleaſe him. He that depends on a man, and muſt be for to truſt him for help and aſſiſtance, he will not offend him. Alas, what truſt can he have to him, if he offend him continually? when the Sydonians and the Tyrians had offended King Herod, their Country being nouriſhed by the Kings Country, Acts 12. 20. they laboured to pleaſe him again. So if thou wouldeſt truſt Almighty God, thou wouldeſt labour to pleaſe him, and to be zealous for his Name, and not make him thine enemy by thy ſins and iniquities. Thou which blaſphemeſt his Name with thine oaths, and abuſeſt his Creatures with thine intemperance, and prophaneſt his Ordinances with thy careleſneſſe and neglect, & diſpleaſeſt him al the year long, Alas, how canſt thou truſt him? thou makeſt him thine enemy; canſt thou truſt one that he'l befriend thee, that vowes he will hang thee? canſt thou truſt he'l help thee at all hands, that is provok't to undoe thee? thou art a damned man, if God do not pardon thee. Thou art a woful wretch, better thou hadſt never been borne, if God give thee not grace. And canſt thou truſt God he will be good to thee? what and diſpleaſe him day by day? offend him every foot? No, no, thou mayeſt truſt him, he'l confound thee. Thou which art a lyar, thou mayeſt truſt him what he ſayes in the Apocalips. All lyars ſhall be caſt into the lake of brimſtone. Thou which art a ſwearer, mayeſt truſt him, he'l never hold thee guiltleſſe. Thou which art a drunkard, and a company-keeper, and a whore-monger, mayeſt truſt him, thou ſhalt never inherit the Kingdom of Heaven; Thou which talkeſt idly and improfitably, mayeſt truſt him, he'l call thee to an account at the day of judgement. Thou which hardeneſt thy neck againſt the reproofes of the word, mayeſt truſt him, he'l deſtroy thee without remedy; this he hath paſt his word he will do, and herein thou mayeſt truſt him: thou canſt never truſt him for mercy or grace or any good thing; thou diſpleaſeſt him daily, and makeſt him thine enemy. And how canſt thou truſt him? what thinkeſt thou? does not he know how little thou careſt for his Commandements? how little thou reſpecteſt his Ordinances? how baſely thou uſeſt him in thy wayes? indeed if thou wert zealous for his glory, and zealous to pleaſe him in holineſſe of life, and zealous to obey him, and ſeek him, then thou mightſt truſt him. Thou canſt never truſt him otherwiſe. By this time thou mayeſt ſee what a woful condition thou art in, if the zeale of thine affections be not ſet upon God. Rev. 21. 8

thou

But many poor ſoules may demand, how then ſhall I know whether the zeale of mine affections be ſet upon God? I anſwer thee: There are ſeven ſignes whereby thou mayeſt know it. Signs whether the zeal of the affections be ſet on God.

The firſt, if thine affections be not able to God-ward: a man may have a little hope, and a little griefe, and a little joy, and a little pitty, and no body ſee it. But if it be zealous, it will quickly be notable; every one, when once it is zealous, every one will note it. When Epaphras was zealous to ſave ſoules in Coloſſe, what ſayes Saint Paul of him? I beare him record, he hath a great zeale for you, ſayes he, Col. 4, 13. Paul could not but note it in him; he ſaw ſo many ſtrong expreſſions of it. 1. Sign, if thine affections be notable to God-ward.

This holineſſe and forwardneſſe is very remarkable. But if on the contrary there be no notable expreſſions of grace in you, alas, there may be ſome goodneſſe, ſome pitty, ſome griefe, ſome motions; but this is no zeale, it is not remarkable. If a man be zealous for the World, his ſcraping and ſparing is notable, his toyling, and ſtudying, and talking that way is very notable. I will beare him record, he is a worldling; the world is ſo much in his ſpeeches, the world is ſo much in his courſes, and ſo much in his face. Look upon his wayes, he is ſo combred with thoughts of the world: Look into his family, there be ſo few good duties of grace, and ſo many tokens of the world: Look upon his meetings, his diſcourſes of edifying are ſo ſcarce, and of the world are ſo copious, I will beare him record, he is a worldling. Were we zealous for God, there would be divers ſignes and expreſſions of our zeal unto God. Saint Paul when he would make it plain to the Corinthians, that he was an Apoſtle to them, he tels them, truly the ſignes of an Apoſtle were wrought among you, 2 Cor. 12, 12. If we were zealous for God, ye might anſwer, truly the ſignes of true zelots are wrought among us: ye that profeſſe Chriſt, what ſignes of true zelots are there in you? if your brethren be ſecure and grown dull, do ye labour to quicken them? if the Goſpel do not thrive, do ye labour to further it? if grace be little ſtirring in the Pariſh, does Heaven ring with your groanes and your prayers? if zeal were exiſtent among you, it would be notable and remarkable among you, we might ſay, I beare you record it is ſo, nay the wicked without would obſerve it; we beare them record, they keep a great ſtir about Heaven; our lives would convince them. May be they would hate us and reproach us the more; but this is certaine, our lives would convince them, as Chriſts did the Centurion, doubtleſſe this is a righteous man, Luke 23.47. So your lives would convince all their conſciences; doubtleſſe they are ſtrict men, doubtleſſe they are humble, and meek, and religious. Thus it would be, were we zealous. But if our Religion be not notable, hardly notable to our ſelves, we can hardly tell whether we have true faith, and repentance, and zeal at all, yea or no: much leſſe notable to others, it is to be feared ye are not zealous for God.

2. Signe, if thou beeſt impatient of ſin.

The ſecond ſigne of zeal towards God is, to be impatient of ſin. Zeal, as aforeſaid, is the impatient part of the affections: if a man do affect a thing but a little, he can be patient without it; but if he affect it very deep and with zeal, O his affections are ſet on it, and he is impatient if he ſpeed not. So that if thou beeſt zealous againſt ſin, thou art impatient of ſin, thou canſt not ſuffer it. Zeal is impatient of what ever is contrary to it. That this is the nature of zeal, you may ſee by the poor blinde zeal that was in Paul before his converſion: he was zealous to God, as he thought, and thinking that the Church of Chriſt were contrary to all men, enemies to God and man, therefore now in the blindneſſe of his zeale he perſecutes that way unto death; Concerning zeal, I perſecuted the Church, Phil. 3. 6. It was a woful kinde of zeal to perſecute the Church, but yet there you may gather the nature of zeal, it cannot abide that which is contrary; and therefore if thou beeſt zealous againſt ſin, thou canſt not abide ſin; bitter journey, riding, ſtudies, prayers, exhortations, any courſe thou wilt uſe, rather then abide it: thou canſt never abide any thing that is diſpleaſing to God, but reſiſt it to the utmoſt, and this reſiſting will be,

1. Zeale cannot abide any ſin.

Firſt univerſal: if thou beeſt zealous, there is no ſin thou canſt poſſibly abide. Nothing is cold but the fire does reſiſt it; ſo nothing is ſin but zeal does reſiſt it to the utmoſt. I eſteem all thy precepts concerning all things to be right; I hate every falſe way, Pſal. 119.128. This is zeal indeed, there is never a falſe way that a man can abide that is zealous. To be zealous againſt one ſin, and luke-warm againſt another, this is not zeal.

2. In any perſon.

Secondly, general in all manner of perſons.

1. In friend.

Firſt, in a friend as well as in an enemy. If thou beeſt zealous, thou wilt finde fault with thy friends when they ſin, as well as obſerve a fault when thine enemy offendeth. Men are apt to obſerve when their enemy ſinneth, O how unconſcionable is he! thus he hath done, and ſo he hath done; but if thou beeſt zealous, when thy friend does tranſgreſs, thou wilt not abide it. Fire will not only labour to conſume the water that comes to put it out, but alſo the wood that comes to maintain it. So it is with zeal, Do not I hate them that hate thee? ſayes David to God, Pſ. 139.21. He could not abide to count them his friends that were not friends unto God, though otherwiſe they were very friends unto him, and may be ſaved his life, and were patrons and benefactors unto him, he could not wink at their ſins, becauſe they were his friends: though thy friend be a ſwearer or a carnal wretch, yet if he be thy friend, and thou dependeſt upon him, thou canſt ſee it and not ſee it; but if thou beeſt zealous, all his ſins thou wilt count diſcourteſies to thee.

2. In childe.

Secondly, in ones childe as well as a ſervant; you ſhall have many, they are angry at every ſin a ſervant commits, but if their children do ſin, they connive; it was no ſuch great fault, alas, he did it unwittingly, and what would ye have a childe do? ſay they: they can excuſe it in their children, and leſſen it; but if thou beeſt zealous, thou canſt not abide ſin in thy ſon any more then a ſervant, thou wilt correct him, and curb him, and threaten him, and counſel him, and never endure he ſhould ſin, if thou canſt poſſibly help it. What my ſon, and be wicked? what do I love God, and ſhall I ſuffer my loynes to diſhonour him? Son, know thou the God of thy father, otherwiſe I count thee a baſtard, and no ſon. This brake old Eli's neck, becauſe he ſuffered his ſons to be wicked, when he by godly ſeverity might have remedied it. A zealous man when his son hath committed things worthy of death, will not spare him, Zach. 13. 3.

Thirdly, in ones own wife, or husband, or father, or mother, as well as in a neighbour, zeal cannot abide it; husband, thou doest not love me, as long as thou livest thus; wife, thy heart is not with me, as long as thou doest thus; how canst thou love me, when thou doest not love God, nor thine own soul? This is the meaning of our Saviour: If any come to me, and hate not father and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and sisters, yea, and his own life, he cannot be my Disciple, Luke 14. 26. A zealous man cannot abide to yeeld to sin, for the best of them all. 3. In wife or husband.

Fourthly, in a rich man as well as in a poor man: if thou beest zealous, thou canst not abide sin, neither in the rich, nor in the poor: if poor men offend, and if beggars be idle and ungodly, then thou wilt complaine; On, the poor are so wicked, they break down our hedges, who would relieve them? they will not be orderly, they lye drinking in Ale-houses, and spend it a way on the por, therefore who would relieve them? But if the rich be keepers of company, and vain in their pleasures, thou art not so zealous against their sins, alas, this is no zeal: but let a wicked man be as great as King Ahab, Micaiah will deale roundly with him. Nehemiah will not spare Lords nor Nobles when they sin, Neh. 13. 17. For a Magistrate to punish poor Malefactors, and not the Gentry, when they do transgress, is this zeal? no it is cursed partiality. 4. In a rich man.

Fifthly, in ones self, rather than in any body else: true zeal is more zealous against sin in ones self than in all the world besides; otherwise, sayes our Saviour, it is hypocrisie, and not zeal. Thou hypocrite, first cast out the beame out of thine own eye, and thou shalt see cleerly to cast out the mote out of thy brothers eye, Matth. 5. 7. Zeal I say, is like unto fire, it is hot it self first, before it heat others: may be the fire meets with many other things that it is not able to heat, as the bottome of a kettle of water, the fire cannot heat it, nevertheless the fire will be sure to be hot of it self. So it is with thee: if thou be zealous against sin, thou wilt be like unto fire, rather suffer cold to be in any other, than suffer it to be in it self; so thou wilt rather suffer sin in any body else, than suffer it in thy self: thou wilt not suffer sin any where else by thy good will, but above all things thou wilt not suffer it in thy selfe. This is the second signe of zeale towards God, it is impatient of sin. 5. In ones selfe.

The third signe of zeal towards God is, it cannot be quiet till it is assured of Gods favour, and of Christ. Thou art never earnest for God, if thou canst possibly be quiet without assurance of Christ and of Heaven: the reason is plain, I need not expresse it. I know many a childe of God is not assured hereof, but there is never a childe of God under Heaven, but he is restlesse till he be. Alas, he is never zealous for God, if he be quiet without assurance of Gods love in Christ Jesus. Can I zealously love him whose love to me I am not assured of? for all that I know he will cut my throat, he will turne the forest enemy I have, I cannot zealously love him. No more canst thou zealously love God, as long as thou art quiet without the assurance of his love. For all that thou knowest, God does not love thee, God he may damn thee and cast thee to hell for ever, and turne the forest enemy in the world to thy soul, for all that thou knowest, and therefore thou canst not zealously love him: if then thou be a zealous lover of God, either thou art assured of his love, or thou canst never be quiet without it: give diligence, sayes the Apostle, to make your Calling and Election sure, for if ye doe these things, ye shall never fall, 2 Pet. 1. 10. ye shall never fall if ye make it sure, but if ye can be quiet without the assurance of Election and Gods love, yee may fall, and for all that I know, breake your necks for ever, and perish for evermore. Goe to then, examine your selves, what does your conscience tell you, are yee not sure of Gods favour, nor your election to life? yee hope well yee say, but yee are not as- 3. Signe of zeal towards God, it cannot be quiet without assurance of Gods favour.

sured of it, neither does it break your sleep a jot, nor hinder your sports, and your pleasures, and your mirth, it is certaine ye were never zealous for God. What a woful thing is this! hast thou but one soul, and art thou no more careful of it? art thou to live either for ever in Heaven or Hell, when thou diest, in all torture and torment world without end? and art thou no more diligent to make sure work before hand? perhaps thou mayest be saved; yea, but perhaps thou mayest be damned. And hast thou no more love to thy soul, than to be quiet with uncertainties? O how many be there among us that have no assurance from God, what he means to do with them? whether to save them, or to destroy and to damne them? how many go blundring on in an uncertaine opinion, and conjecturall hope of Gods favour, and have no certainty at all of the same? how many that are haunted with feares and terrours, and doubts this way, and never labour to be sure? how many that have had pretty assurances a good while ago, and now they have lost them, and yet they sit idly, and go dreaming on in the duties of religion, as if they could shift well enough, though they never recover again? this is no zeale: if thou beest zealous, thou canst never endure to be under uncertainties, never to be quiet till thou hast gotten the assurance of Gods love.

4. Signe, gladnesse to further, & be furthered in the wayes of God.

The fourth signe of zeal towards God is gladnesse to further, and to be furthered in the wayes of God. If thou beest zealous, thou art glad to be reproved, and told of thy sins; glad that the Minister should meet with thy corruptions, and rip them up in the Pulpit: as a Patient is glad that the Physitian should hit right on his disease. When Peter had met with those three thousand in the Acts, and told them plainly they were murderers of Christ, as ye may read in the Chapter, the text sayes, they gladly received the Word, Act. 2. 41. Peter laid a greater sin to their charge, then we have unto yours. We have told you that some of you are adulterers, and some of you drunkards, &c. which is bad enough, and ye are offended hereat; but Peter told them they were murderers of Christ, and they gladly received the Word; they were not angry with Peter, but with themselves, and were glad to be told of it, a signe they were zealous. A zealous man is glad to further, and to be furthered in all goodnesse, he is glad to meet with the godly, that so he may be quickned by conference; glad to hear news of a Sermon, that so he may go to it and be edified; glad of every opportunity both of doing and receiving good; glad to go to a Sacrament, which is Christs feast: so were the good Israelites glad at the Sacrament of the Passeover, they kept that feast with great gladness, 2 Chro. 30. 21. Glad that there was one, glad they were at it, they were very glad, sayes the text. If thou beest zealous, thou wilt be glad of a Communion, and glad to be at it. When thou hast been at a Sermon, thou wilt be glad that ever thou wert at it; O the Word does thee such good, that thou goest home with all gladness of heart, yea, though the Word did never so much contradict thy corruptions. As the good people in Nehemiah, when they had been reproved, and rebuked in the Congregation, and told of their sins, and made to cry out unto God, they went home and eat their meat with all joy, glad that thy understood the words that were told them, Nehem. 8. 12. Thus thou wouldest do if thou wert zealous towards God: but if thou goest about the duties of Gods worship, as sorry pieces of businesse, if thou doest not delight in prayer and in hearing the Word, if thou canst sit wearisomely, and when will the Minister have done, a man may see it in thy countenance, thou art not joyful to heare, this is a signe thou hast not one scruple of zeal towards God. The poor impotent man in the Acts, when Paul was a preaching, he lookt so merrily and so greedily upon him, as if he would faine have it faster than Paul could deliver, he was a faithful hearer: The same heard Paul speak, and Paul stedfastly beheld him, and perceived he had faith to be healed, Acts 14. 9. He perceived he had faith; how did he perceive it? he perceived it by his countenance, he could give a shrewd ghesse by his looks: while Paul was preaching, he looked so cheerfuly and so greedily upon him, as if he drunk-in every point that he said. The man without doubt was zealous to heare.

The fifth signe of zeale towards God, is rejoycing to see the forwardnesse of others. I rejoyced greatly, sayes John to the elect Lady, I rejoyced greatly, that I found of thy children walking in the truth, 2 Ioh. 4. Nay, if you be zealous, though it may seem a disparagement to thee, that others should be as gracious and famous as thy selfe, yet thou wilt joy in it: it seemed to be a disparagement to Moses, that Eldad and Medad of low rank in the Church, that such as they should prophesie in the Camp. Before Moses was counted the only Prophet of the Lord, but now Eldad and Medad prophesie as well as he: this I say, might have seemed a disparagement to him, yet he was so far from repining thereat, as that he was glad for to hear it; would God that all the Lords people were Prophets, Num. 11. 29. I confesse a good man may be discontented hereby at the first, flesh and blood was striving in good Joshua himselfe at that time, Moses forbid them, sayes he. But a godly soul will check himself, and pull down his spirit, and force his heart to be glad, and rejoyce in the goodnesse of others, though it be a seeming disparagement to him. A good Minister rejoyceth to hear of another Ministers gifts, that out-strips him. A good man rejoyces to see others that are better, and better beloved than himselfe, though younger and inferiour, and meaner otherwise. But if thou doest not joy to see men zealous for God, it is certaine thou art a wretch: may be thou thinkest much, thine eye is evil, because they are so good & so godly, and the like; this is an argument of a graceless heart: may be thou art apt to judge hardly of such and such, because they are holyer and precisер than thy selfe. O but if thou wert zealous, thou wouldest rejoyce for to see it. Hast thou a better gift than another? thou art bound to help him; hath he a better gift than thou? he is bound to be helpful to thee. It is a good saying of Austin, Tolle invidiam, & tuum est quod habeo; tollam invidiam, & meum est quod habes. Take away envy, and look wherein I excel thee, is thine. I will take away envy, and then look wherein thou excellest me, is mine. If thou be zealous; thou wilt rejoyce howsoever. Be he a childe, thou wilt rejoyce that he is better gifted than thy self; nay, for that may a carnal heart do, and be proud, he may rejoyce that his childe is better memoried, better witted, better gifted than himself. O thinks he, this is my childe, this is my son, this is my daughter, never a father or mother hereabouts can say they have such a childe. This is nothing but pride. But be it a servant, yea, be it a stranger, be it one whom thou counteſt thine enemy, thou wilt rejoyce in his gifts; so God may be glorified, no matter though I be disgraced, yea, I count it my honour, that my shame in the world may be the stirrup for Gods honour to get up: thus thou wilt reason, if thou hast a spirit of true zeale. It is greatly to be bewailed how many symptomes of atheisme are amongst us in this regard: For men are so far from rejoycing in the forwardnesse of others, that they grumble, and they thunder at nothing so much, as that any should be forward and zealous for God; they had rather have an hundred boone companions, than one zealous man, rather be acquainted with twenty that are carnal, than one one that is holy in his wayes. I thank God, sayes one, we have ne're a Puritan in our Parish. I am glad we can say, we have none of these singular fellowes in our town, sayes another. I speak not of such as the Law does count Puritans, enemies to the State and the Church, it is a blessing indeed there be none such: But of the godly, that are called Puritans by the impure tongues of the wicked; the State hath no better friends under heaven, the Kingdom no better subjects in the world, than are they: for these are they that pray away God's judgements from the Land, that are earnest with the Lord in prayer for the King and Council, and the Church, while the men of the world by their drunkennesse, and whoredomes, and covetousnesse, and security, and contempt of Gods word, are pulling down vengeance on the Nation and provoke God for to plague us. But these are they that most people have little joy in. O my brethren, where we have ten or twenty such Puritans in our Parish, I would to God we had an hundred. I tell you the day will come, that the worst drunkard in the towne would give a world, if he had it, he were such a Puritan. In this sense the very Heathen may sayes, that every good man is a Puritan: Integer vitæ scelerisque purus, An entire man of life, and a pure man, pure from the sins that others do live in. Had ye any zeale towards God, ye would be glad that all the Country were such Puritans.

6. Zeale to Gods Church and people.

The sixth sign of zeale towards God is zeale to Gods Church and his people. Paul before his conversion, you may know his zeale was not right, because his zeale was against the Church. Concerning zeale, sayes he, I persecuted the Church, Phil. 3. 6. his zeale was against the Church, and therefore not right: but after his conversion he had a zealous care of all the Church, his zeale was then to the Church. If the Church were not well, O how it troubled him! if the Church were well, O how it comforted him! if the Church were any where persecuted or infected with errours and doctrine of Devils, then he was frequent in prayer for it, often would he labour, and sigh, and mourne for it, and be writing for the good of it. Now the Saints and the people of God, these are the Church. Unto the Churches of Galatia, Gal. 1. 2. that is, unto Gods people in Galatia. To feed the Church of God, Acts 20. 28. that is, the people of God, Greet the Church that is in their house, Rom. 16. 5. that is, the Saints that are in their house. In all Churches of the Saints, 1 Cor. 14. 33. these are the Church of God. Now if thou be zealous for God, thou wilt be zealous for Gods Church. Examine thy self, Doest thou mourn for the troubles and disquietments of Gods Church, that the Church is so afflicted in all parts of the world? Does it prick thee to the soul? Doest thou go to God, and put him in remembrance? Remember the Children of Edom, O Lord, how they said, down with it, down with it, even to the ground: remember Lord the Tobiahs, and Sanballats of these times, remember Lord how they cry, down with thy people, down with them, root them out, &c. This is an infallible sign to try thy heart by. If thou be zealous for God, thou wilt zealously affect the Church of God. Nehemiah cannot smother his griefe, but it would shew it self in his face, even at the Kings elbow, when Jerusalem lay waste. Uriah cannot finde in his heart to eat and drink freely, or take the pleasure of his own house, as long as the Ark of God and Israel, and Judah abode in tents. Thou must needs be affected with the Church, if thou beest zealous for God. If thou beest zealous for God, thou must needs love there where God loves. God loves the very gates of Sion, he loves his Church better than he loves all the world besides. And so wilt thou, if thou beest zealous for him. The Church is the whole company of his Saints upon earth. One Saint is dearer then a million of other men. It is a good saying of Syracides, κρεῖσσον εἷς ἢ χίλιοι, Eccles. 16. 3. One just man is better than a thousand others. Though he be a beggar in the world, he is better than a thousand wicked, though they be all Lords and Nobles. Because he is one of Christs redeemed; and so thou wilt love him, and affect him. Thou wilt love him, if thou beest zealous to God-wards, I say, thou wilt love a childe of God, albeit in a leather-coat, more than father and mother, wife and children, friend or patron, so they be not Saints, I meane with more spiritual love than thou lovest them all. And therefore much more the Churches of the Saints.

The seventh signe; shewing most zeale, when the Lord threateneth to be going away.

The seventh is, if thou beest zealous for God, then thou wilt be most zealous when the Lord threatens to be going away. If ever men will buy any thing at the Faire, they'l buy when they are all break-

king up ſtandings, taking up their wares, and packing away. If ever they'l be forward to buy, then they will. God is now perchance ſhuting up ſhop-doors, is now packing up his commodities, and his graces to be gone. The doores of his Sanctuary have been open a long time, and the Shop-windowes of Heaven have ſtood broad ope this many a year. And we ſee plainly the dead of the Market is come, no body buyes almoſt; How long hath he preached, and ſcarce any converted? How many Sermons, and Market dayes have we had? we can hardly ſee one drunkard converted, one adulterer converted, one worldling converted, one unprofitable profeſſour converted. O that we could ſee it! but alas we cannot; our commodities ſticke upon our hands, we can have no vent for grace, nor Goſpel, nor Chriſt, nor mercy, nor any thing. The dead, the dead of the Market beloved, the Market is dead. God is now ſhutting up to be gone; and as we may juſtly fear, to remove away his Candleſtick, to take away the power of his Ordinances, and to withdraw his ſpirit from ſtriving any more with us, our ſtubbornneſſe is ſo great. We are grown to deſpiſe his reproofes, to be incorrigible under his word, to be malicious againſt his rebukes; what encouragement hath he to ſtay? Now if ever ye will be zealous, now ye will; now ye will come in, and be wrought on, or never: now your proud hearts will ſtoop, or never. Now ye'l cry hard, and pray hard, and beg hard, or never, Δεινὸς παντὸς παρελθεῖν, καὶ τὸν καιρὸν τῶν πραγμάτων. It's grievous to come a day after the Faire, as we ſay. I meane now is the laſt pinch, in all probability it is ſo, either now let us look to it, or never. It will be grievous to come a day after grace. No man can repent without grace of God, and therefore if he come a day after grace, he cannot repent, vid. Ezek. 24. 13.

Meditate of thy grievous iniquities whereby thou haſt diſhonoured God; meditate of the unutterable mercy of God, that hath not conſumed thee. the world by their drunkennesse, and whoredomes, and covetousnesse, and security, and contempt of Gods word, are pulling down vengeance on the Nation and provoke God for to plague us. But these are they that most people have little joy in. O my brethren, where we have ten or twenty such Puritans in our Parish, I would to God we had an hundred. I tell you the day will come, that the worst drunkard in the towne would give a world, if he had it, he were such a Puritan. In this sense the very Heathen may sayes, that every good man is a Puritan: Integer vitæ scelerisque purus, An entire man of life, and a pure man, pure from the sins that others do live in. Had ye any zeale towards God, ye would be glad that all the Country were such Puritans.

heart look upon God and his wayes, let his commandements be ever in ſight, they will heare thee: whenſoever thou prayeſt, meditate with thy ſelfe; if I pray luke-warmely, God will ſpue me out of his mouth. Whenſoever thou heareſt the Word; meditate with thy ſelf, I muſt take heed how I heare, otherwiſe my hearing is abominable. Whenſoever the Sabbath is coming, meditate with thy ſelfe, O I muſt call it my delight, and ſpend it in Gods worſhip publick and private, or elſe God will conſume me. While I was muſing, the fire kindled, ſayes the Pſalmiſt: what's the reaſon thou art ſo luke-warme in good duties, as thou art? the reaſon is plaine, thou uſeſt not to meditate, thou canſt be content to hear the Word at a Sermon, and let the Miniſter warm thee for an hour, thou canſt talke of the Word; but when thou art alone, thou doſt not meditate of the word; if thou wouldeſt put the Law of God in thy thoughts, and meditate of it, when thou art ſolitary, it is a fiery law. From his right hand went a firey law, Deut. 33. 2. Gods law is a fiery law, and his Goſpel too is a fiery Goſpel; were it often in thy thoughts, it would heat thee. Know it for a certain, we can never have a jot of ſaving grace or of zeale, if we be not frequent in this duty: thou makeſt a Chriſt of the world, if that can have more roome in thy thoughts than Gods word; thou canſt never be zealous nor gracious at all, if thou beeſt not uſed to meditation, thou art carnal and earthly; why? becauſe thy thoughts are of that ſort; the thoughts are incentiva vitiorum, ſayes Hierome, they are the incentives and ignicles, and the bellowes to kindle ſin in thy heart, whereas were they heavenly, they would kindle zeale in thy ſoul.

2. A conſtant practiſe of godlineſſe. Philoſ.

The ſecond meanes is, a conſtant practice of godlineſſe. Mortus eſt cauſa caloris, ſayes the Philoſopher, Motion is the cauſe of heate. Be ever in action, if thou wouldſt be zealous, be alwayes ſtirring in the works of Religion and godlineſſe: you ſhall ſee men labour and toile naked in their ſhirts in froſt and cold, and be hot for al that. Labour ſtirs up the ſpirits, and heateth the blood; labour will not ſuffer a man to be cold; if Peter had been rowing in his boat, when he ſtood ſtill in the High-Prieſts Hall by the chimney corner, he had had little need of that fire to have heated him; and therefore, if thou deſireſt to be zealous, labour in reading of the Scriptures, labour in hearing and applying the Word to thy heart, labour in examining thy conſcience, and repenting of thy ſins, and labour in praying and calling upon God, this will kindle the heate of zeale in thee, Aske and ye ſhall receive, that your joy may be full, Joh. 16. 24. mark that, your joy may be full, your comfort may be full, your love may be full, and your hope may be full, that is, that it may be zealous; For zeal is the fulneſſe of every affection in its kinde. O ſayes one, I am ſo dull, and ſo dead, I pray indeed, but my prayers are dead; and I hear, but my hearing is dead, I ſee my corruptions, abundance of vanity in my heart, abundance of vanity in my thoughts, abundance of vanity in every thing that I do, and I am ſo dead; Lord what ſhall I do? dead art thou? and doeſt thou wonder thou art dead? thou wilt not labour to be quickened, thou art loth to be at the paines to be quickened, thou goeſt idly to work, Otium mors eſt, & vivi hominis Sepultura, as Seneca ſpeakes, Idleneſſe is death, idleneſſe is the burying of a man alive. Thou art idle, and wilt not labour with God to be quickned. When David was poring and blundring, and looking upon the vanity of his minde, O he was as dead as a timber-log, it deaded his ſoul quite and cleane to ſee his corruptions, but what does he do? he laboured with God againſt it; he laboured with faſting and meditating, and praying again and again, that the Lord would be pleaſed to quicken him, nine times in one Pſalme, Turne away mine eyes from beholding vanity, and quicken thou me in thy way, Pſ. 119. 37. Quicken me, O Lord, according to thy word, in one verſe. Quicken me according to thy judgements, in another verſe. O Lord quicken me according to thy judgement, in another verſe. Quicken thou me. O Lord, according to thy loving kindneſſe.

Seneca.

Pſal. 119. Ver. 154. Ver. 156. Ver. 149. Ver. 159. Ver. 88.

Again

Againe, Quicken thou me after thy loving kindneſſe. Againe, Quicken me, O Lord, according to thy Word, in another verſe. He never would let his heart alone, till he had gotten life and ſpirit, and quickning again. As long as thou art lazie in good duties, no wonder though thou be dead; labouring and striving in good exerciſes will heate a mans ſoule, and make it more zealous. Ver. 107.

The third meanes is keeping good company, as Cleopas was heated by being in Chriſts company, Did not our hearts burne within us, ſayes he, while he talkt with us in the way, Luke 24.32. As the bawdy Poet ſaid of his ſweetheart, Accede ad ignem hanc. Come to this fire, a whore inflames an adulterer, one wicked man heats another unto luſt and to ſin. So every childe of God is a fire for to heate thee. Would'ſt thou be zealous? ſort with Gods people, keep company with the Saints, and ſuch as excell in grace and vertue. Two are better then one, for if they fall, the one will lift up his fellow; but wo to him that is alone when he falleth, for he hath not another to help him up. Again, if two lie together, ſayes the Wiſe man, then they have heate; but how can one be warme alone, Eccleſ. 4.9,10,11. Doeſt thou complaine, I have no zeale, I would be glad to be zealous, but I am exceedingly lukewarme; do what I can, ſo I am, and ſo I am likely to be: alas, doeſt thou ever look to be otherwiſe, as long as thou canſt company with vaine perſons, ſuch as may be will talke of Heaven now and then, but there is no heate nor warmeth in their ſpeeches, they are dead-hearted themſelves, and ſo are their ſpeeches, dead and without life. O but I live in a place that is wicked, and there's ſcarſe one godly man in the houſe where I dwell, and I can finde none for to warme me. Doeſt thou ſo? ſo did Obadiah in Ahabs Court, there was nee'r a good Courtier to converſe with, and therefore what did he do? he made uſe of Gods Prophets in private, 1 King. 18.4. and though he might not be ſeen in their company for feare of loſing their lives, he hid them in a cave, and there he would have a bout with them in ſecret. Thou which neglecteſt the ſociety of the Saints, never expect to be zealous. Thomas was very faithleſs and full of his doubtings: One reaſon was this, the Diſciples of Chriſt had meetings together, and Thomas was not with them, ſayes the Text, John 20. 24. The coales that lie together in the hearth, you ſee how they glow and are fired, while the little coales that are fallen off, and lie by ſeparate from their company, are black without fire. If ever thou deſireſt to be zealous, make much of the fellowſhip of the Saints: thou canſt hardly come where two or three Saints are met together, but thou ſhalt finde Chriſt in the midſt of them.

The fourth meanes is, Shunning the occaſions of ſin. Moſes would not leave ſo much as a hoofe behinde him in Ægypt, Exod. 10.26. that there might be no occaſion for the people to turne back into Ægypt; had he left but a hoofe behinde there, that were an occaſion to go thither to fetch it. Abraham would not take ſo much as a thread or a ſhooe-latchet of the King of Sodome, when he offered him, leſt there ſhould be any hint to the fleſh, to diſtruſt in God. Thou canſt never be zealous, unleſſe thou ſhun the occaſions of ſin: If the heart have but an occaſion once to be vaine, its a thouſand to one, but ſo it will be, deadneſſe will ſteale on't upon the leaſt occaſion. Give a theefe but an occaſion of having a booty, his fingers cannot hold. When David had given occaſion to the enemies of the Lord to blaſpheme, the Lord told him he would puniſh him, 2 Sam. 12.14. Why? becauſe if they had but an occaſion, they would be ſure for to take it. Let no man put an occaſion to fall in his brothers way, Rom. 14. 13. Alas, if the fleſh have no occaſion, it will lay hold on it; it is not enough to keep out of a ſin, but thou muſt go far from it, not only from ſin, but alſo from all occaſions of ſin. Keep thee far from a falſe matter, Exod. 23.7. One thinks I may go ſo far and not ſin. Thus far I may do, and ſo far is this lawful; but let me tell thee, if thou goeſt ſo farre, thine owne heart will have occaſion to goe further, and then thou art undone: Nimia licentia ſumus omnes deteriores, ſayes Terence. We are all the worſe for taking too much liberty: if once it be an occaſion to the fleſh, thou art gone. Zeale cannot abide the occaſions of evill; the leaſt occaſions will choak it.

4. Shunning the occaſion of ſin.

Gen. 14. 23.

Nemo diu tutus, periculo proximus.

Terent.

The fifth means, is to eſchew the beginnings of ſin; Peter did but begin to rebuke Chriſt, Maſter ſpare thy ſelfe, he began to rebuke him ſayes the Text. Matth. 16. 22. But Chriſt did ſo hate the very beginnings of that ſin, that he ſaid, Get thee behind me Satan. The Devill was in that beginning of ſin. The Scribes and the Phariſees began to reaſon, ſaying, Who is this that ſpeaks blaſphemies? And Jeſus condemned theſe beginnings of reaſonings, Luke 5. 21, Thoſe that were invited to the Feaſt in the Goſpell, they came not, but fell to excuſes and were caſt into utter darkneſſe for their labour. But how came they to fall into that ſin? the Scripture ſhewes plainly, becauſe they did not eſchew the beginnings of the ſinne; they all with one conſent began to make excuſe, Luke 14. 18, principiis obſta, ſet thy ſelfe againſt the beginning of ſin; if thou ſuffer thy heart to begin once, it will be ſure to goe farther. The Spirit of God hath a good phraſe, fall into ſin. He that ſtands, let him take heed leſt he fall: A man that ſtands upon a high rocke, if he doe not looke to the beginning of his fall, he cannot ſtop himſelfe till he is quite fallen downe to the bottom, and if not by meer hap he catch hold ſome where, which it's a thouſand to one if ever he do; if he do not, I ſay, it is a wonder if he break not his necke. Thou canſt never have the life of grace in thee, unleſſe thou take heed of the beginnings of ſin.

Exhortation to be zealous

Be exhorted all ye that fain would fear God, to be zealous.

Elſe you can never be revenged on your worſt enemies.

Firſt, conſider, ye can never be revenged on your worſt enemies, unleſſe ye be zealous; ye would be glad to be revenged on your ſworne enemies. Sampſon begged hard of the Lord, that he might be revenged on the Philiſtims for his two eyes; but thou haſt worſe enemies than the Philiſtims were to him. Sin, the World, the fleſh, and the Devil, theſe are the worſt enemies that ever mortall man had, it is good to be revenged on them; thou canſt never be revenged on them, except thou be zealous; there is no enemy beſides that it is lawfull to be revenged on, but onely upon theſe, on theſe thou mayeſt lawfully: theſe have done thee much ſpight, they have brought thee into the eſtate of wrath and damnation, they have made thee accurſed, and lyable to hell-torments for ever, they have pluckt out the two eyes of thy ſoul; now if thou wouldſt be zealous, thou mayſt be revenged upon them. The Apoſtle puts zeale and revenge together, yea, what zeal, yea, what revenge, 2 Cor. 7. 11. If thou beeſt zealous, thou mayſt be revenged upon ſin that hath done thee ſo much miſchiefe: it hath troubled thy peace, defiled thy conſcience, diſabled thee from worſhipping of God, hindred many good things from thee. Never hadſt thou any hurt, or any ſorow, or any evill, but thou maiſt thank ſin for it: Juſt cauſe haſt thou to be revenged upon ſin, there is an in-bred deſire of revenge in a man upon thoſe that wrong him; the Heathen could ſay, Juven. Sat. 13. Eſt vindicta bonum vitâ jucundius ipſâ.

Revenge is ſweeter than life it ſelfe: Here it is true, and no where elſe. All other revenge is a damnable premunire againſt God, vengeance is mine ſayes he, and who is he that revengeth himſelfe to intrench upon Gods right? but here revenge is commanded, yea it's ſweeter then life: here revenge and ſpare not, and this is the way, get zeal and be as hot as a furnace in anger againſt ſin, and beat it as Moſes did the Iſraelites Calfe, into duſt and powder; hath thy filthy couſening heart deceived thee ſo often, hereby thou mayeſt be revenged on it, be zealous to ſearch it, and curb it and tame it; have thy luſts been greedy, and proud, and ſenſuall; this humour they muſt have, and this fashion they must follow, and this pleasure they must take, and this liberty they must use. O if thou wouldest be zealous, thou mayest easily be revenged on thy lusts; hereby thou mayest be revenged on the Devill, and spight his kingdom to advance Christs; hereby thou mayest be revenged on thy flesh, that hath played the traitor so often with thee, thou maist afflict it, and master it and block it, and subdue it: hereby thou maist tread upon the world that hath so often entnared thee, thou mayest scorn it and contemn it, and all the glory of it, and count it as drosse and dung in comparison of Christ: hereby thou mayest trample Satan under thy feet. It is a strange thing how little men study to be revenged on these enemies; let our own brother give us but a crosse-word, we are at daggers drawing to be revenged; but the Devil may baffle us, and the Devill may tempt us, and beguile us, we put it all up: Let a servant but anger us a little, and offend us but in a peece of service, or an errand, O we are so revengefull, and ready to make them smart for it! but sin may crosse us in our souls, and rob us of Christ, and deprive us of grace, and mercy, and peace, and all; yet we are good friends with it, we take nothing amiss; alas, these men are monsters and mad men, one day thou shalt see that sin and thy lust, and Satan, whose temptations thou hast been led by, &c. they are the worst enemies in the world; and if ever thou desirest to be revenged upon them, O endeavour to be zealous.

2. Zeal inables us to doe good unto others.

Secondly, consider thou wilt never be able to doe good unto others, unlesse thou be zealous. When men goe dreamingly on in Religion, they can never do good upon others: what do others thinke? they think basely and meanly thereof, as if it were a matter of nothing; but when they see a man zealous, this affects them indeed, if any thing will do it. When a man is zealous at a game he laugheth exceedingly, he is as merry as he can stand on his legs: another man that shall see it, will be apt to demand what fine merry pleasant game is that? so it is with ambitious men, when a man is zealous for a living, he rides through thick and thin, through frost and snow all the night long, this friend he seeks to, and that Noble man he flyes to, to help him in his suit: what will folks say? certainly he is going about some great living or other, he is so eager about it. So if thou wouldst be zealous for God, and fervent in religion, men would be compelled to conceive better of godlinesse, and of Christ, then thou mightest provoke others to godlinesse. Zeal is provoking grace, Your zeal hath provoked very many. 2 Cor. 9. 2. As zeal in charity provokes, so does zeal in every good worke provoke. Where Theodoret observs the wisdome of Paul, for he provokes the Macedonians by the zeal of the Corinthians, and the Corinthians by the zeale of the Macedonians; for zeal does mutually provoke one another. O what a deal of good mightst thou do in the house where thou dwellest, in the Parish where thou livest, in the Countrey where thou art, if thou wouldst labour to be zealous! I knew an old man, whether he be dead now or alive, I know not, that used constantly to go to the labouring men in the field, and catechize them and pose them in Religion, as they were reaping and working; he would go to mens shops where he was acquainted, and stir them up to have care of their souls, and by this means, brought above forty men and women to seek out for Heaven, that before had no more care that way, then if they had been like a company of beasts. Wouldest thou not be glad to do good? thou wilt never be able to do it, except thou be zealous. Paul had women, and sundry private Christians that are said to labour with him in the Gospel. This, this beloved, would cause Religion to thrive here among us.

Theodoretus in locum.

3. Peoples zeal incourageth Ministers.

Thirdly, consider I pray you, thou wilt discourage us that are Gods Ministers, except thou be zealous. If men would be zealous in hearing, and zealous proficients, it would make us go cheerfully on in our callings. When Titus told Paul the fervent minde of the Corinthians, it encouraged the Apostle when he told us your fervent minde, we rejoyced the more, 2 Cor. 7. 7. τὸν ζῆλον ὑμῶν, so it is in the Originall, when he told us your zeal. Saint Paul was cheared to hear that. What greater discouragement to a schoolmaster, then that his Scholars should be dull and not profit? What greater disheartning to a Captaine, then that his souldiers should be faint-hearted, and without life? and what greater grief to a Minister, then that his people should be sensleſse and liveleſse? It made Jeremy weary of his life: It made the Prophet Micah lament bitterly. Woe is me, I am like the Grape-gleaners: It made the Prophet Isay cry out, I have laboured in vain. On the contrary, when the people are zealous and forward, and drinke in the words of eternall life with all greedineſs, and bring forth fruit with abundance, this makes a Minister go merrily on in his function. Zelo Ecclesia Dei congregatur, saith Saint Ambrose; It is zeale that does gather a Church, the zeal of the Minister, and the zeal of the people; the Lord quicken us in his mercy, that we may encourage one another daily: Let us be encouraged by you; when ye are reproved, be not offended. You think the Minister spights you, alas, we have no reason to wish any of your fingers to ake, much lesse to wish that your souls should perish. When S. Paul commanded that the incestuous Corinthian should be delivered to Satan, did he wish him any hurt? No, deliver him unto Satan, sayes he, for the destruction of the flesh, that the spirit may be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus, 1 Cor. 5. 5. οὐδεὶς οὕτως ἐφίλεσε τὸν πεπτώκοτα ὡς Παῦλος, &c. sayes Chrysostome. No mortall man loved that offender in Corinth, more than Paul did, sayes he, when he would have him delivered unto Satan. It was onely that he might know he was a damned wretch unleſse he amended, and that the devill should have him unleſs he were humbled. What was his reason? his reason was this, that his soule might be saved in that day. O the Minister preaches damnation so often, he is unmercifull to our soules. O my brethren, we intend you the greatest mercies of heaven in so saying, it is, that ye may not run into damnation, but may repent and believe the Gospel. Do not thus discourage us whom God hath sent to you as his Ministers to labour in the word and doctrine among you, but stir up your selves to be zealous in hearing and obeying, that we may give up an account of your soules unto God with all cheerfulneſs.

Mic. 7. 1.

Ambrose

Chrysost.

4. Zeal makes a man excell. Proverb.

Fourthly consider, you can never be excellent if ye be not zealous. A Christian should strive to excell: aut Cæsar aut nullus; nothing but the best should suffice a Christian. Wouldest thou then be excellent? get this same zeal: zeal runs after the best things; Covet earneſtly the best things, 1 Cor. 12. 31. The Word in the Originall is ζηλοῦτε, Be zealous after the best things: wouldest thou be excellent in prayer, and excellent in the duties of religion? be zealous therein. A Christian is like fire: fire mounts up absolutely aloft, and ascends above all. So does a Christian: he is better than all the men of this world put them all together: like Iob, there is none like him in all the earth. Every man elſe faine would be excellent, a wordling strives to excell others in wealth, a politician to excell others in wisdome, a scholar to excell others in learning, a tradesman to excell others in his profession. He is of a base spirit that does not desire to excell in some thing: and shal not a Christian then desire to excell in grace?

5. Zeal makes men like Angels.

Fifthly, consider I pray, who ye may be like if once ye be zealous; ye may be like unto the Angels of heaven, they are spirits and flaming fire, sayes the Apostle Heb. 1. 7. If thou art zealous for God, thou art a bodily Seraphim; though thou canst never be without sin as long as thou liveſt in this world, yet as Gregory speaks, in the mouth of zeale, thou mayest swallow up thy sins; nothing will devour and consume sin so well as true zeal. O get a coale of this fire then from Gods Altar, and heat thy heart with it, and while thou mayest be like the blessed Angels of God, be not like the brutish sons of the old Adam. Zeale is it that maketh an Angel to be an Angel. Angeli ſine zelo nihil ſunt, ſayes Ambroſe, the Angels are nothing without zeale. If thou hadſt zeale unto God, then thou mighteſt be like unto Angels. Ambroſ.

Sixtly, Conſider what infinite need thou haſt of true zeale. Suppoſe a great froſt, and a tedious cold Winter were a coming, and then no firing were to be had, would not men buy as much fewel as they could get, and ſtack it, and ſtore it, that they might have it at their need? otherwiſe they were not able to live, nor to dreſſe their own ſuſtenance, they would certainly ſtarve if they ſhould have no firing in ſuch a cold time. Beloved, I ſpeak to ſuch as have eares to hear, ther's a cold time of Religion a coming, and the wrath of God is ready to break forth, to plague mens ſoules with key-coldneſſe this way, becauſe they have deſpiſed the zeale of the Lord, and no firing to be had then, God knowes how ſoon the power of Gods Word may be taken from us. You who love your own ſoules, look about, lay up ſome firing, and be not ſlothful in all this buſineſſe; do all diligence to ſtore up grace for your ſelves, this will help you to zeale, not ſlothful in buſineſſe, fervent in ſpirit, Rom. 12. 11. ζεοντες, ſo it is in the Original, zealous in ſpirit. If ye will not be ſlothful in buſineſſe, ye ſhall quickly be zealous in ſpirit. O get quickly the ſpirit of prayer, to be zealous in prayer by faith, it will be the beſt ſtring to your bow, it will be your onely thing left; nothing left you but prayer in ſecret unto God, had not ye need to be diligent for that? When a poor cripple hath nothing to truſt to but onely his begging, he will ply that. When a poor day-labourer hath never a foot of ground, nor any thing but only his fingers ends to maintaine him and his family, he will be ſure to imploy them; alas, if he ſhould have a wound in his hands, or he ſhould loſe the uſe of his fingers, what ſhall he do? when a mans houſe leanes mainly upon one pillar, he will look to that pillar. Thus it is with thee. Thou ſhalt have little elſe beſides prayer, thou muſt get it out of thy fingers ends. Now we that are Gods Miniſters ſtudy all the week long to quicken you here when you come to Gods Houſe, while ye are thinking of other matters; but if God ſhould once take away us from you, all the work lies upon your backs, and ye have little elſe beſides Prayer and Gods Word for to help you. O therefore be not ſlothful in this buſineſſe, get a ſure hold in Chriſt, that ye may be able to hold in the evil day. No matter though the world do deride you; for if ye have true zeale, ſayes Chryſoſtome, ye will feare praiſe or diſpraiſe no more than if you were all alone in the World, and no man beſides you. If no perſwaſions can prevaile with thee to the trading for this zeale that I ſpeak of, heare what the Lord Jeſus doth peremptorily threaten: It ſhall come to paſſe that I will ſpue thee out of my mouth.

6. We have great need of zeale.

The

The XIII. Sermon.

Colos. 3. 2.

Set your affections on things that are above, &c.

HItherto I have shewen how the affections must be set upon God, and especially the zeale of them. I have shewen the woful estate of that soul, that doth not set its affections this way, together with sundry uses of the point. Now let me perswade you with motives to this duty, namely, to set your affections on God. The Apostle in this place useth five strong perswasions hereto, as the words may also be construed.

In the context are these motives to set our affections on God.

1. Because else we deny our interest in Christs resurrection.

First, by a strong obtestation, as a mother perswades her childe, as ever thou art my childe do this for me. If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things that are above. If ye be risen with Christ, set your affections on things above, q. d. as ever ye be risen with Christ, do it, as he beseeches the Philippians, If there be therefore any consolation in Christ, if any comfort of love, if any fellowship of the Spirit, if any bowels and mercies, fulfill ye me joy, Phil. 2. 1, 2. q. d. as ever ye acknowledge any comfort in Christ, as ever ye believe any communion of the Holy Ghost, any mercies and bowels in God, fulfill this exhortation: this is a strong perswasion indeed; for if this cannot prevaile with you, ye deny all the comforts of Christ, ye deny all communion of the Spirit, ye deny all the mercies of God, and therefore it is strong; as a mother counts it a strong intreaty to her childe, as ever thou art my childe, as ever thou take st me to be thy mother, obey me in this; for if her childe will not yeeld, he must needs deny the wombe that bare him, and the paps that gave him suck. Wilt thou deny the Lord Jesus? wilt thou deny his resurrection, and all interest in it? if thou wilt not deny it, set thine affections on God, as ever thou art risen with Christ, be sure for to do it. Wilt thou set thine affections upon the things of this world, when Christ intreats thee as ever thou art his, to set thine affections on him?

2. Because we are dead to the things of this world.

Secondly, The Apostle here perswades by a strong argumentation; for ye are dead, sayes he, verse 3. Set your affections on things above, not on things on the earth, for ye are dead, ye are dead to the things of this life; will ye set your affections to those things ye are dead to? ye are dead to the things of this life, if ye be Christs, and therefore not set your affections on them; mortui non mordent, as we say, dead men bite not one another with slanders and reproaches; did ye ever see a dead man go up and down drinking and bowzing, whoring and gaming, and carking and caring? He as soone believe that a dead man can do this, as a true Christian. I confesse that corruption may carry a good Christian into sin, but he is dead to these courses, he cannot set his affections hereon, he is dead; and will ye set your affections on the things of this world, now ye are dead? Bring a childe of

God

God to your drinkings, and your whiffings, his affections are dead, he hath no heart to them: bring him to your sportings, and your vain merriments, and your fooleries, you shall see him so dead to them that ye shall have no delight in his company. S. Paul makes this an argument ab absurdo. How shall we that are dead to sin, live any longer therein? Rom. 6. 2. How is this possible? I shall as soon believe it, as that a dead man should walke along your streets in a winding sheet: What? know you not this, sayes he, what a Christian, and yet his affections on such courses as these? this is impossible, how shall we &c. So that this is another strong perswasion, because ye are dead therefore set not your affections below.

3. Because Christ is our life. Ut vitam redimas. Horat.

Thirdly, the Apostle here perswades by a strong reason, Christ is your life, verse. 4. Life is sweet, it is true, and a mans affections are strong to his life, vestes ac omnia vendes, thou wilt part with cloaths, and part with moneys, and part with lands, and part with all for thy life: thine affections are strong set to life. Now Christ is thy life, or else thou art but a damned wretch: if thou beest a true Christian, Christ is thy life, and wilt not thou set thine affections on thy life; his Commandements are thy life, his Word is thy life, his ordinances are thy life, his promises, his favours, his bloud, are thy life, and wilt thou not set thine affections on thy life? If thou beest a true Christian, thou'lt pray for life, and repent for life, and sanctifie the Sabbath for life, and put up an injury, and be obedient to God for life. All thine affections conspire together for life: thou lovest thy life, and thou desirest thy life, and thou rejoycest in thy life, and thou feares't that which is hurtfull to life, and hatest that which is contrary to life; all thine affections will be to thy life; and therfore set thine affections on Christ, for he is thy life.

4. Because Christ will bring us to glory.

Fourthly, The Apostle here perswades by a strong deduction. When Christ shall appear, then ye also shal appear with him in glory, verse 4. this is an excellent motive to set thine affections on God, because he will bring thee to glory, every man affects glory. Now all the glory of this world is a blaze, as our proverb is, a good proverb it is, it is but a blaze, and not worthy thine affections, none but base hearts will affect this; thou art the child of wrath and damnation from the cradle to the coffin, thou art going to hell and confusion, if thou beest not a new creature in Christ: and wilt thou affect to be a Gentleman, affect to be a King or a Lord? wilt thou affect to get credit, and honour, and repute among men, to be praised by mens mouthes? this is even as if a theefe should affect credit as he is going to the gallowes. Set thine affections then upon God and upon Christ: when he appears hee'l help thee to a Kingdome of glory. Christ is the King of glory, who is the King of glory? It is the Lord of hosts, he is the King of glory; set thine affections on him then. The vulgar have a pretty saying, He that is in favour with the King, is halfe a King. What may not such an one doe? what may not such an one have? if he be in favour with a King? potens potentum amicitia, Potent is the favour that a man hath with him that is potent. And therefore set thine affections upon Christ, let thine affections be in favour with Christ; what is that then thou canst not have? thine affections are potent, if they be in favour with him; all power is given to me in heaven and earth, sayes Christ, Matth. 28. 18. Christ is very potent: if thine affections be not set on him, he is potent enough to damn thee; if they be, he is potent to save thee, and when he appears, then shalt thou appear with him in glory.

5. If our affections be not set on Christ, they are out of order.

Fifthly, the Apostle here perswades by a strong illation or inference. Mortifie therefore, sayes he, mortifie your earthly members, inordinate affection, &c. verse 5. Marke, he cals the affection, when it is not set aright upon God, he cals it inordinate affection; if thine affections runne more after the things of this life, than after Christ and his VVord, and his commandements, and his Ordinances, thine affections are diſorderly, they are all out of order. Order is to be obſerved in all things, and wilt thou ſuffer diſorder break in upon thy ſoule? diſorder turns all topſie turvie; diſorder will undoe a whole Kingdome: if a Kingdome be out of order, it muſt needs go to wrack. If a family be out of order, it muſt needs be brought to nought; nothing can ſtand without order; no art can conſiſt without order; and certainly thy ſoule cannot ſtand without order; if thine affections be out of order, thy ſoule is in civill wars, and cannot ſtand, but muſt periſh. Now if thine affections be not ſet upon God, they are all out of order. VVhat's the reaſon that men are ſo forgetfull of their ſoules? if their bellies do hunger, they remember to fill them; if their backs be naked, they remember to cloath them; if their markets be not made, they remember to diſpatch them; but their ſouls may periſh and be damned, they doe not remember them. What's the reaſon of this? their affections are out of order. Ordo eſt mater memoriæ, order is the mother of memory; a man can never remember his buſineſſes, if all be out of order. Saint Paul rejoyced to behold their Order in Coloſſe, Colos. 2.5. He was glad to ſee that all their affairs were in order; why? then he hop't all would go wel with them. David prays God to Order his ſteps: Order my ſteps in thy Word, and let not any iniquity have dominion over me Pſal. 119. 133. He knew that his luſts would be like maſterleſſe hounds, he ſhould have no hoe with them, if his ſoule were out of order. Order my ſteps in thy word, ſayes he, and let not any iniquity have dominion over me. If thine affections be out of order, alas, every luſt will dominier, every corruption will be like a maſterleſſe hound, as we ſay. Job ſaith, that death is out of order, Iob. 10.22. And Aquinas and other Divines thence do obſerve that hell is out of order; and wilt thou ſuffer a diſorder to come among thine affections? alas they will be ſo buſie about the things of this life, that thou ſhalt find no while for better imployments, no while for repentance and amendment, no while for bethinkiug thy ſelfe of thy wayes to provide for thy ſoul. Diſordered perſons are buſie bodies, ſayes the Text. We hear there be ſome among you that walke diſorderly and are buſie-bodies, 2. Theſſ. 3. 11. If thine affections be diſorderly, they will be ſo buſie, that thou ſhalt never finde leaſure to traffick for Heaven, or the ſalvation of thy ſoule. Beloved, this muſt needs then be a ſtrong perſwaſion to ſet your affections above, becauſe otherwiſe thine affections are all out of order. Thus farre the Apoſtle here helps us with motives expreſſed in the context.

Other motives to ſet our affections on God.

That which the Apoſtle begins, let the theme of my Text go further in the ſame. Many and ſweet motives there are that may be ſtirred up to this duty by, to ſet our affections on God.

1 Becauſe it is eaſie to proſecute that we affect.

The firſt motive is taken from the eaſineſſe that our affections put us in, to proſecute any thing we affect: if our affections be ſet on a thing, they make it eaſie to proſecute; if thou affect the things of the world, thine affections make it eaſie to labour and to toyle, eaſie to riſe early, eaſie to ſit up late, eaſie to travell, and go through any other difficulty: the covetous man thinks his labour to be eaſie, ſo he may gain and get profit; the voluptuous man thinks it eaſie to hunt and to hawk, and ride himſelf out of breath, ſo he may have pleaſure and delight. Take thine eaſe, ſayes the Rich man in the Goſpell, Take thine eaſe, eat, drinke, and be merry, Luke 12.19. He thought it eaſie to pull down, and to build up, eaſie to gather in his harveſts and his wealth, eaſie to be an Epicure and a drunkard, and voluptuous, why? becauſe his affections were ſet hereupon: Is it ſo that thine affections are able to make any buſineſſe eaſie? O ſet thine affections upon God, repentance will be eaſy, mortification will be eaſy, and ſelf-denial will be eaſie, and to ſuffer all the reproaches of Chriſt wil be eaſie, if once thine affections were ſetled that way; knowledge is easie to him that understandeth, Prov. 14.6. The scorner seeks it, sayes Solomon, and he cannot finde it, the worldling seeks it and he cannot finde it; it is hard, sayes one, to know how to pray and be holy, it is hard sayes another to know how to repent and give over my sinnes, and be strict, and I cannot do it. No? that is, because thine affections are bent another way: but if thine affections were set upon Heaven, this knowledge were easie. Come unto me ye that labour, sayes the world, I will make it easie to travell, and carke, and care; come unto me, sayes pleasure, I will make it easie to be merry and to laugh: come unto me sayes the flesh, I will make it easie to be revenged on him that does wrong thee; I will make it easie to obtain this and that. So sayes the Lord Jesus, Come unto me ye that labour, and I will give you rest, my yoke is easie, Matth. 11.30. What ever thou affectest come to it, and thou shalt finde it to be easie. A man would wonder how the labouring man will sweat and worke till he is faint to get a little maintenance, the reason is this, he affects it. One would wonder what dangers Alexander did run through to enlarge his kingdome and his power, the reason is this, he affected it. One would wonder how Baals priests cut themselves after their manner with knives, and with lancers, till the blood gushed out upon them, 1 Kings 18.28. the reason was this, they affected will-worship. Any thing is easie when a man does affect it: wouldest thou perswade a man to any hardship under Heaven? do but turn his affections unto it, and thou hast prevailed: Flectere est victoria, sayes Austin, do but bend a mans affections, and thou hast prevailed with him. O sayst thou, I find it so hard to be zealous, so hard to be heavenly, so hard to depend upon God; what is the reason of this? thine affections are earthly; if thine affections were set right, it would be the easiest of ten thousand. My heart hath such a haunt, and I find it so hard to break my selfe of it; I am cholerick, and I find it so hard for to bridle it; I am poor and afflicted, and I finde it so hard for to beare it; alas, alas, it is the easiest thing in the world, if thine affections were to it. Wouldst thou not be glad to count it to be easie to serve God, easie to walke in all holinesse? no such treasure as to live at ease, as we say. I know thou wouldest be glad to finde it easie to abandon thy corruptions, and please God better than thou doest: O labour then to set thine affections on God, and all things are easy. Should we perswade thee to part with thy geegawes, thou art so loath, it is a hard task to perswade thee, that is, because thou wilt be proud still: should we perswade thee to discard wicked company out of thy house, thou keepest an Alehouse, and thou art loath to thrust them forth of thy house, that is, because thou wouldest fain have their custom, thine affections are that way, and therefore it is not easie to perswade thee, but set thine affections aright, and every difficulty is easy.

Lactant. de dott. Christ.

2. A man is not ashamed of what he affects. Agesilaus. Philopam.

The second motive is taken from the shamelessenesse of the affections: if thou beest once deeply affected with any thing, thou wilt never be ashamed of it: See a proud phantasticall fool that affecteth his long locks, and his love-lock. Every one that is sober-minded and sees him, is ready to say, what a humerous fool is yonder man, what a ruffian he is? how like a Mastiffe or a Bedlam does he look? yet the fool is not ashamed thereof, because he affects it. See a light-headed wretch that is ever a fooling, and ever a jesting, and ever a toying, and playing, and this sport, and that sport. Every grave man that beholds him is apt for to say, what a vain man is this? I never saw such a light-headed sot in my life; yet the wretch is not ashamed thereof, because he affects it. The Swearer swears and is not ashamed; the worldling covets, and is not ashamed; the mocker mocks and is not ashamed; though every man in his wits that does view them, marvels at their madnes, and how desperate they be, all cry shame on them, yet they are not ashamed because they affect it, Thou hast a whores forhead, thou refusest to be ashamed, Jer. 3.3.

The whore whoſe affections are ſet on her lovers, and her adulterers, cannot be aſhamed, but ſhe dares go on for all the ſhame of the earth; why? becauſe ſhe affects them. Nero was not aſhamed of his villanies in the open market of Rome. Veſpaſian was not aſhamed of his ſtinking covetouſneſſe by urine. If it be thus, O why doeſt thou not ſet thine affections on God, and on Chriſt and his lawes? thou couldeſt never be aſhamed hereof, if once thou didſt truly affect them. When Davids affections were ſtirred to dance afore the Ark of God, and put off his garment to do it the better, fie upon thee, fy upon thee, ſays Micol, fie for ſhame, what art thou not aſhamed to make thy ſelf vile on this faſhion? I wil be more vile yet, ſays he, if this be vileneſſe, to rejoyce before God; if this be eſteemed a vileneſſe, I will be more vile yet: he could not be aſhamed, becauſe his affections were ſet upon Gods Arke. Out you Puritan, you are a vile companion, to be ſo preciſe as you are: you muſt be reproving and talking of the Scripture upon every occaſion; out you hypocrite you, are you not aſhamed to do thus? No, no, he is not aſhamed, he can never be aſhamed: If this be to be a Puritan, to be holy and ſtrict againſt ſin, I will be more a Puritan yet; If this be to be an hypocrite, to be labouring to draw others from their luſts, I will be a more hypocrite yet. If this be ſingularity, not to do as the men of this world doe, I will be more ſingular yet; I will ſpeak of Gods teſtimonies and it were before Kings; and I will not be aſhamed, Pſal. 119. 46. Impudence, and not to be aſhamed, is a very great matter; if it be in ſin, it is deſperate, it is a ſign a man is deſperately affected towards ſin; but if it be in good, it is admirable; it is a holy kinde of impudence, it is a ſign a man is deeply affected towards good, ſo affected that nothing can make him aſhamed. Never will a man be aſhamed of that which he affects; fie for ſhame, will you be rich and take in ſuch profits? will you be in ſuch credit? fie, will you be a Lord and a Nobleman in ſuch honour? will you be learned and gather ſo much knowledge? He conceives they are all fools that ſay ſo; though peradventure they doe not affect ſuch things, yet he does, and therefore he will not be aſhamed of them. So if thine affections be ſet upon Chriſt, thou wilt never be aſhamed of his croſſe, never aſhamed of his badge, never aſhamed of his Word. The children of the Devill are not aſhamed of their abominations; they can drinke, and be drunken, and vomit, and reele, and not be aſhamed; they can be proud, and carnall, and have no more religion in them than the ſtock, and not be aſhamed. Ageſilaus will not be aſhamed of his halting, Philepæmenes will not be aſhamed of his deformedneſſe, when they hold it their credit to be thus as they were. O therefore ſet thine affections on God, and thou ſhalt never be aſhamed of his wayes.

What the affections be upon, they will hanker after that.

3. The third motive is taken from the hankeringneſſe of the affections. Look what thou ſetteſt thine affections upon, that thou wilt hanker after. If thou ſet thine affections on the things of this life, thy heart will ſo hanker after them, that they will haunt thee what ever thou goeſt about; they will haunt thee at prayer time, and haunt thee at Church time; they will haunt thee in the Sabbath, and haunt thee at the Sacrament; like the Flie in Albertus that was ever hankring after the bald head: though he flapt it off againe and againe, yet ſtill it would be hankring, he could never be rid of it, it would ſtill be a hankring. Who would be thus troubled with his affections? he cannot go by an Alehouſe, but his affections water to go in; he cannot ſee a paire of Tables, but his affections hanker after a game; he cannot meet with an injury, but his affections itch to revenge; he cannot ſpeak well nor do any thing which is commendable, but his affections muſt be ſwelling with pride. Who, I ſay, would be thus troubled with his affections? Though God had forbid Lots wife to look back upon pain of his heavy diſpleaſure, nevertheleſs her affections did ſo hanker after her houſe, and her countrey, and her ancient ancient acquaintance, that she looked behinde her, Genesis 19.26. Her carnall affections did so haunt her every step she tooke, that they never lind, till that she lookt back. They are greedy dogs, they look to their own way, Isay 56.11 Thine affections if they be not set right, they are like greedy dogs in the Kitchin, that are ever looking to the platters, be the Mistris eye never so little off, they are licking instantly. So thine affections are ever hankring after that which thou affectest: and therefore thou art best to set thine affections on God: for look where they are set, there they will be hankring. If ever thy heart be turned to God, and thine affections converted to him, they will ever be hankring and looking after God. At that day shall a man look to his Maker, and his eyes shal have respect to the holy One of Israel. Isay 17.7. At that day, that is, when God shall convert them, then their hearts shall ever be hankring and looking after God. Oh then set thine affections on God, if ever thou desire thy heart should hanker after God. It is the brand of a wretch, thou art yet no better then a wretch, till thus it be with thee. If thine affections be ever hankring after thy pleasures and thy copemates, and thy vanities, thou art never well but when thou art at them. The Sermon is quickly tedious, and Prayer tedious, and godly discourses are tedious unto thee: why? because thy minde hankers about other gates matters, as long as it is thus, thou canst not not be saved. Look unto me, sayes Christ, and be ye saved all the ends of the earth, Isay 45.22. Ye can never be saved, unlesse ye hanker and look after me, sayes the Lord; as the Heliotrope or the turn-sol that ever looks towards the Sun, so a gratious heart does after the Lord. God counts it an honour unto him, that the soule should be ever a hankring and ever a looking after him; Æstimari nos putamus toties, quoties aspici, sayes Seneca; it is a true saying; we think we are esteemed when men do look after us; So God counts it an honour to his Majesty, when our souls do hanker and look after him. It is true, the things of this life may chance to draw away our minds now and then, and make us look after them, but if we have any grace, so much as the grain of a Mustard-seed, our souls will ever be hankring and looking after God. So it was with Jonas, though his corruptions had made him to look off from God, nevertheless he could not abide to be in that case, his heart is again looking and hankring after God: oh for the light of his countenance, oh for his grace and his Spirit, oh for power and strength yet to be resolute for God, Yet will I look again towards thy holy Temple. Ionah 2.4. Let God afflict me, I cannot but look to him; let God fling me into the Whales belly, I cannot but hanker after him; let him cast me into the belly of hell, yet will I look againe, sayes he: his affections were set upon God, and therefore did his heart ever hanker and look after God. This is a sweet motive to perswade us: if we would once set our affections on God, our souls would ever hanker and look after God.

Senec de tranq.

4. Our affections spur us on to what we affect. Melan. in Eth. Lud Viv l. 3. de anima.

The fourth motive is taken from the spurrings of the affections, they spur a man on to that he affects: they are animi calcaria, as Melanchthon does call them, they are as it were the spurres of the soule. What is the reason that men go on in any businesse like lazie jaded Asses? sayes Vives, because they have no affection to it. What is the reason they go so sluggishly on to good duties, they sit so senselessly still in their seats at a Sermon, they kneel so lumpishly, and dead-heartedly in prayer to God? because they have no spurs in their sides, they have no affection to these things. Now if we would set our affections on God, we would feel in our bosomes a certain spur that spurs us to every good word and work? a gracious heart is said to stirre up it selfe. Exod. 36.2. God counts those prayers no prayers, that are not full of these spurrings and stirrings; there is none that calleth upon thy name, that stirreth up himselfe to take hold on thee, Isay 64.7. Doest thou call upon God, and hast thou no spurrings nor stirrings in the duty, doest thou not spur up thy ſelfe to pray with good life? the Lord ſayes thou doeſt not call upon his name at all. As ever thou deſireſt to be ſtirred up and ſpurred on to good exerciſes, ſet thine affections on God, they are the ſpurs of the ſoul: the ſoul goes cheerfully on, when it goes with affection.

The fifth motive is taken from the heartineſſe of the affections; and therefore the heart is many times and often in Scripture put for the affections. My heart, ſayes Deborah, is towards the Governours of Iſrael, Iudges 5.5. that is, mine affection is towards them, O ye Corinthians, our mouth is open unto you, our heart is enlarged, 2 Cor. 6,11. that is, our affections are enlarged. Look what ever thou affecteſt, thy heart is ſet upon it; this motive is ſtrong to perſwade, for if the affections be in a manner the very heart of the ſoule, this may well move us to ſet our affections upon God; wilt thou ſettle thy heart any where elſe but onely upon God? O how heinouſly does the Lord take it at thy hands, that thou haſt no more heart unto him? He gives thee his Word, and thou haſt no heart to it; he gives thee his Sabbath, and thou haſt no heart to it; he gives thee his Sacrament, and his Ordinances, and his Sanctuary, and his Commandements, and thou haſt no heart to them. O the Lord is ſo angry with thy ſoule, that he cals thee a foole and a ſot, and he repents that ever he hath vouchſafed theſe things to ſuch wretches as thou art. Wherefore is there a price in the hand of a foole to get wildome ſeeing he hath no heart to it, Prov. 17. 16. Wherefore ſayes God, and to what end is a price put into your hand to get wiſdome? Ye might have gotten wiſdom a long time, or ere now, how to be new creatures and in Chriſt, how to get grace, and peace, and mercy with God; ye have had abundance of prices put into your hands, a price of abundance of Sacraments, and Sabbaths, a price of abundance of Sermons and exhortations, many mercies and favours, many threatnings and warnings, health, ſtrength, life, liberty; ye have had a fair time to get grace and holineſſe in Jeſus Chriſt; prices have been put into your hands, but ye have had no heart nor affection to them. The Lord is exceedingly wroth with you, he caſts the foole in your face, and repents that ever he hath lent you theſe things; wherefore is a price put into the hand of a fool, ſeeing he hath no heart to it? no heart nor affection to make uſe of it. Wherefore? ſayes he, to what end? wherefore is a price put into a fools hand, that ſees not the worth of it? better he had been ſent to hell quick and never heard Sermon; better he had been damned many yeeres ſince and never had the meanes. What will ye be drunkards in ſpite of preaching? and adulterers, and fornicators, in ſpite of Gods threats? mockers and deſpiſers of them that are good, lovers of pleaſures more than lovers of God, in ſpite of the Lord Jeſus? O h this does wofully provoke God, that ye ſhould have no more heart nor affection to theſe things than ye have. Set your affections then upon God, if ever ye will be wiſe to eſcape the vengeance to come; your affections are your heart, be not ſo rebellious as to deny your heart unto God.

6. Affections are the ſoftneſſe of the heart. Phi. Jud. l. de ſacrif. Abel & Cain.

The ſixth motive is taken from the ſoftneſſe of the affections; the affections are the ſoftneſſe of the heart, Affectus ſunt fœmineus animæ partus, ſayes the Philoſopher, they are the feminine and ſoftly brood of the heart. Thy heart is a ſoft heart where thine affections do ſtand; if thine affections be ſet upon the things of this life, thy heart is a ſoft heart thereunto, thy heart is ſenſible of every profit, ſenſible of every vaine pleaſure; the things of this life can eaſily ſink down into thy heart, if thine affections be to them. O let thine affections then be ſet upon God: what wilt thou have a ſoft heart to the world? the things of the world may eaſily work on it; and wilt thou have a hard heart to God, that he may not work on it? Hardneſſe of heart is an argument that a man is damnably and deſperately impudent, and will neither obey God nor his Miniſters. So God tels Ezechiel, the houſe of

Iſrael

Iſrael will not hearken to thee, ſayes h', for they will not hearken unto me; for all the houſe of Iſrael are impudent and hard-hearted, Ezek. 3. 7. When their hearts were once hardned, they were ſo impudent, that they would not hearken and obey the Miniſters of God, nor God himſelfe. This is a lamentable condition then thou art in: if thine affections be earthly and carnall, the heart is quite hardned to Godward. Now then my brethren, we ſee here the reaſon why ye can refuſe to obey, and be divorced from your ſins: we ſee the reaſon why ye neither yeeld to God, nor his Miniſters, this is the reaſon, ſayes God, ye are impudent, and your hearts are deſperately hardned. And this is the brand the Holy Ghoſt ſets upon you; when your hearts are thus hardned, he cals you plainly, wicked men, and wicked women. A wicked man hardneth his face, Prov. 21. 29. Is it not a pitifull thing that a man ſhould go to hel & have no remedy to deliver him? to be damned, and have no remedy in the world to eſcape it? in ſuch a caſe is thy ſoul, whoſe heart is thus hardned. He that being often reproved hardneth his heart, ſhall be deſtroyed without remedy, Prov. 29. 1. Haſt thou not been often reproved? I know thy conſcience cantell thee thou haſt been often reproved, haſt thou not hardned thy heart? I know thy conſcience can witneſſe that thou wouldeſt not leave off thy courſes; but haſt hardned thy heart to this day, thou knoweſt I ſay true; well then, read what a pitious condition thou art come to, there is no remedy for thee to avoid the damnation of hell; thou ſhalt be deſtroyed without remedy, ſayes God, I confeſſe there is a remedy, but he ſhall be deſtroyed without it. The remedy that God uſes to deliver men from hell, is to reprove them for their ſins, but thou putteſt off reproofs, the preaching of the Word, but thou doeſt diſobey it; the blood of the Lord Jeſus, but thou doeſt defile it, and wilt not lay downe thy corruption for it, there is a remedy but thou wilt not uſe it; no, thy heart is hardned, and thou ſhalt be deſtroyed without remedy: aſſure thy ſelfe of it, for the mouth of the Lord hath ſpoken it. I ſpeak to you who ſpeak evill of the good way, and call it all to naught; your hearts are all hardned on this manner; when divers were hardned, ſayes the Text, and ſpake evil of that way, Acts 19. 9. They that ſpeak evill of the wayes of God are all hardned. O, ſayeſt thou, I do but ſpeak againſt Puritans, and Hypocrites, God forbid, yea God forbid indeed; but does not thy conſcience witneſſe thou ſpeakeſt evill of the wayes of the Lord? Thou knoweſt the Lord commands exhorting and reproving one another, and thou ſpeakeſt evill of it: what hath he to doe to reprove me? ſayeſt thou. Thou knoweſt God hath commanded us to walk ſtrictly, and preciſely, and purely, and thou ſpeakeſt evill of it: what muſt we be ſo pure forſooth? and ſo preciſe, and ſo ſtrict? Thou ſpeakeſt evill of the way of the Lord, and the Lord ſayes thou art the man that art hardned. I ſpeak to you that break the limits of God. God hath commanded you a great while ago to repent and beleeve, and caſt away the evill of your doings: Many dayes are paſt ſince ye were called hereto; yeſterday and to day thou art called and yet thou amendeſt not; thou art the man that is hardned. Again, he limits a certain day after ſo long a time, as it is ſaid, to day if ye will heare his voce, harden not your hearts, Heb. 4. 7. thou haſt broken this limit, and thou art not converted to this day, thou art the man that is hardned. I ſpeak to you who refuſe to amend your lives: ye do not only not amend, but alſo ye refuſe to amend,, ye are the men that are hardned: they have made their faces harder then a rock, they have refuſed to returne, Ier. 5. 3. When men refuſe to returne, they have hardened their hearts like a rock, and more too, ſayes the Text. Ye have refuſed, and it is not unknown to your conſciences that ye refuſe, therefore ye are the men that are hardned; ye are the men that ſhall be deſtroyed without remedy. I pray God help you with a remedy, and awaken your ſouls, that ye may be hardned no longer longer : for if ye be, ye ſhall be deſtroyed without remedy. I beſeech you conſider your poor ſouls, and underſtand, if perhaps ye may finde mercy.

Quint Schola cujuſque ordinis homines admittit, ſayes Quintilian, the ſchoole admits all ſorts of ſcholars. So I may ſay of you, the Schoole of Ghriſt admits all ſorts of ſinners among you, There is never a wretch among you all, but if now ye will be content to go to Chriſts ſchool, ye ſhall be admitted to learne. The Lord give you hearts ſo to do. O then ſet your affections on God; the affections are the ſoftneſſe of the heart, and this is the way for to ſoften them.

The XIIII. Sermon.

Set your affections on things that are above, &c.

A Beginning hath been made to perſwade you with motives that ye would ſet your affections on God. Five motives have been noted that our Apoſtle handles in this Chapter: and ſix motives that the theme it ſelfe does afford you. Give me now leave to go on in the ſame point, and to help you with more. For if this point be not copious with motives, no point can be copious, All perſwaſion is by moving the affections, what ever the theme be; now when the affections themſelves be the theme, the matter of neceſſity muſt be copious and abundant: other motives remaine to ſet your affections above.

Other motives to move the affections.

I. From the everlaſtingneſſe of the affections.

The firſt is taken from the everlaſtingneſſe of the affections. Our affections are everlaſting in our ſoule, eſpecially ſome of them, and thoſe that are not, when the ſoule is in hell, the very want of them are a little hell to the ſoule, for there ſhal be no joy, no delight, no hope, no comfort, no love; and as the ſtomacke when it wanteth its meat, it devoureth it ſelfe: ſo theſe affections, when the matter is wanting, they ſhall eat up, and devoure up the ſoule. There's no matter in hell to joy at, no matter in hell to delight in, no comfortable matter to hope for, no amiable thing for to love, and this ſhall vexe the ſoule with weeping and gnaſhing of teeth: nevertheleſſe, many of the affections, whether a man go to heaven or to hell, are everlaſting affections: joy, and delight, and love, and all the liking affections ſhall be everlaſting in heaven: fear, and horrour, and hatred and griefe, and deſpair, and ſhame, ſhall be everlaſting in hell, there ſhall be weeping and gnaſhing of teeth, ſayes the text, he does not ſay there ſhall be love or joy, &c. Now are the affections everlaſting in the ſoule? know this, nothing but God can hold the ſoule tack, as we ſay, everlaſtingly. It's true, we may affect meat for a while, and raiment for a while, and maintenance for a while, and houſes and wives, and husbands, and recreations for a while, till we die; but when death comes, death takes off theſe objects for ever. If thine affections were mainly set upon these things; when these are all gone, alas, where art thou then? thou art at a losse for ever and ever. As Zophar sayes of the wicked, though he had the World at will while he was living, yet sayes he, he shall perish for ever like his own dung, they which have seen him, shall say, where is he? Job 20. 7. Before, he was at his pleasures, and his profits, and his businesses in the world, there he was where his affections did run; but now when his pleasures are all gone, his house, and his lands, and his markets are all gone, alas, where is he? He is now at a losse. Zophar knew well enough where he is when he dies, he is in hell to be damned and tormented for ever; but he expresses it thus, to shew that now he is at a losse. Set thine affections then upon grace and upon the feare of the Lord; for though thou dyest, this cannot die with thee. It was a good answer of Stilpon, when he lost his country, and his children, and his wife, and his house, and Demetrius said to him, How now Stilpon, where art thou now? art thou not at a losse? ὁ δὴ τα ἔπε, at a losse? sayes he, No, no, I have vertue still, and righteousnesse still; so if thou shouldest lose means and maintenance, friends, stayes, hopes, health and all, thou couldst not be at a losse: were thine affections set upon Christ, thou wouldest have thy faith still, thy comfort still, thy peace of conscience still, assurance of heaven still. Thine affections are everlasting, and therefore set thine affections upon such things as are everlasting, otherwise thou shalt be at a losse one day for ever and ever.

The second motive is taken from the infiniteness of the affections; the affections are infinite, and therefore nothing in this whole world is able to satisfie them. He that loveth silver shall never be satisfied with silver, nor he that loveth abundance with increase. Eccles. 5. 10. give him tens, he would be glad with twenties; give him them, he could afford to have hundreds; give him them, he could desire thousands; when he hath thousands, he is never the nearer, nothing satisfies him. Give Alexander a world, he desires another. Take me a silly man, give him a Curateship, he desires a Vicaridge; give him that, he desires a Parsonage; give him that, he desires two Benefices; give him that, he desires a Prebendary, an Archdeaconry, and then a Bishoprick, and if he were Pope of Rome, he were not yet satisfied. Take a voluptuous man, give him pleasure to day, he desires more to morrow, from Cards to the Tables, from them to Bowles, from them to Huntings, and Hawkings, and so on, he is never satisfied till he dies; ἀοϱισία ὅτι τα πάθη ὡς τὸ πῦϱ, sayes Eustratius, the affections are infinite even as the fire: all the forrests and all the woods, and all the fewel under heaven can never satisfie the fire; give it faggots, it could burn logs; give it logs, it could burn whole trees; give it trees, it could burn whole houses; give it them, it could burn the inhabitants: Nay, Solom. compares the affections to the fire of hell, and the mouth of the grave, that can never be satisfied. Hell and destruction are never full, so the eyes of man are never satisfied, Prov. 27. 20. The eye is never satisfied with seeing, the eare is never satisfied with hearing, if it desires further, what newes? Prov. 30. 15. he compares them to the Horseleach, give, give, sayes the Horseleach, it's ever sucking, more and more, and more, it's ever desiring; the affections are infinite, there's nothing in this world can ever satisfie them; did ever any meales meat so satisfie the stomack, that it should never hunger more? did ever suit of apparel so satisfie the back, that it should never wish to be cloathed more? did ever rent so satisfie the Landlord, that he should never desire another day to receive more? The affections are infinite, nothing in the world can ever satisfie them. What good reason then is there to set thine affections upon God? God is infinite, and he can satisfie them. He filleth the hungry with good things, Luk. 1. 53. If the affections hunger after God, he will fill them, and satisfie them. If thine affections be set upon God, thou shalt have all satisfaction: Hath a neighbour wronged thee? thou needest not seek after revenge,

2. From the infiniteness of the affections.

Cap. 7. l. 10. Eth. ad Nicom.

Christ will make thee satisfaction. Hast thou had losses in thy estate, and disgraces in thy name, or troubles in thy mind? thou needest not disquiet thy self, Christ will make thee satisfaction. He that complains is not content, as we say, thou needest not complain, saying, O I have but a poor house to dwel in, poor dyet to feed on, poor apparel to put on, poor friends to rely on: if thine affections be set upon God, look what they want, Christ will make it up, he will satisfie thee, My people shall be satisfied with goodness, saith the Lord, Jer. 31. 14. Thou openest thy hand, and satisfiest the desire of every living thing, Psal. 145. 16. O ye poor souls, that have gone on in your drinkings and carowsings, and are never satisfied, that have followed your pleasures, and your vanities, and to this hour ye are not satisfied, what mean you to lose your selves in the things of this life? what mean you to befoole your own souls as ye do? Hear what the Lord Jesus sayes to you, Ho, every one that thirsteth, come to the waters, and he that hath no mony, come ye, buy and eat; yea, come buy wine and milk without mony, and without price; wherefore do ye spend mony for that which is not bread? and your labour for that which satisfieth not? Hearken diligently to me, sayes he, and eat ye that which is good, and let your soul delight it selfe in fatnesse, Isa. 55. 1, 2. Ho every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters. What? when ye are a thirst will ye go to broken cisterns? they cannot hold water to satisfie you, here be waters indeed, that Christ does afford you; when ye have mony in your purse to buy food, will ye buy that which is not bread? stones in stead of bread? will ye spend your strength and your health, and your wits, and your paines, and your souls too, upon the things of this life? alas, they can never satisfie you. If the fountains should run wine, the people would not be content, as the proverb is, Nemo suâ sorte contentus est, sayes the Heathen. Horatius. Had ye all the beer in the barrels, all the bread at the Bakers, all the corn upon the ground, all the wealth and riches, and honour in the earth, they can never satisfie you, your souls shall die beggers for all these, and go to hell notwithstanding all these; alas, ye buy them all at a dear rate: do ye not know what they cost Ahab? they cost him himselfe, he sold himself for them. Come ye hither, sayes Christ, set your affections here, here is mercy for nothing, and grace for nothing, and goodnesse for nothing, and the holy Spirit for nothing: can ye desire it at an easier price? Though ye have not one single groat of any worth, not one single farthing, or a brasse token of any righteousnesse of your own; yet come hither sayes Christ, ye may make as good a market as the best: Come and buy without mony, here ye shall have enough for to satisfie you. Boeth. Bene est cui Deus obtulit, sayes Boethius; it is happy for you, can you but see your own happiness, that God gives you such an offer as this. Here ye may have the pardon of your sins, will that satisfie you? here ye may have deliverance from hell and condemnation, will that satisfie you? here ye may have grace against your sins, and power to subdue them; here ye may have the love of God, and the favour of Christ, and the communion of the Spirit, will that satisfie you? I will promise you, here is enough for to satisfy you, be ye never so unsatisfiable. Here ye may have every manner of thing that is good; comfort against all troubles, sure promises against all doubtings, strength against all weaknesses, stayes and props under all sicknesses, assurance of Heaven, and a Kingdome as soon as ever ye die, we will warrant you ye shall be satisfied here. Old Simeon as soon as ever he had Christ in his armes, Lord let me now die, sayes he, q. d. Lord now I have enough; I care for no more in the whole world now, Lord now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace: I am well satisfied now I have Christ. Luke 2. 28. O then set your affections upon God and his Christ, and this will then satisfie you: your affections are infinite, and no thing can give them satisfaction but God that is infinite.

3. From the cloyednesse of the affections. The third motive is taken from the cloyednesse of the affections; as the affections are are infinite and can never be ſatisfied with the things of this life, ſo they are ſoon cloyed with any of theſe things: ſometimes affecting, ſometimes diſaffecting. Nothing can give a mans affections full content but only their God. If thou doeſt not ſet thine affections upon God, thine affections can never have content: the things of this life were never made for our affections to be ſet on; if thine affections were made to be ſet upon the things of this life, they could never be cloyed with them. Is the fire ever cloyed with burning? Is a ſtone ever cloyed with lying on the ground? is the Sun ever cloyed with ſhining? no, it is made for this end: Thou wert never made to eat and to drink, for thy ſtomack will be cloyed with meat, and cloyed with drinks: the ſweeteſt meats under heaven, if ye burden your ſtomack therewith, they will cloy it: thou wert never made to hunt and to bowle, to dice, and to card, becauſe thou mayeſt be cloyed with pleaſure; thine affections are ſubject to a cloy, if they be ſet upon the things of this life; they are monſters and devils incarnate, that are never weary with ſwearing, and lying, and playing, and company-keeping. I ſay, theſe men are all monſters: for if a man be a man, and he be not a monſter, he will be cloyed and wearied with his wayes. They are bad enough that the Prophet does ſpeak of, I am ſure they were curſed wretches, yet they were not ſuch damned wretches as never to be weary with their ſins; they have wearied themſelves to commit iniquity, Jer. 9. 5. They were weary with ſinning, and cloyed with their wayes, and yet they would on: on they went, but it ſeems they were not quite monſters to go on and never be wearied; there is nothing in this life thou canſt ſet thine affections upon, but it will weary and cloy thine affections, and therefore without doubt they are not the true objects of thine affections. What baſe Proverbs have the wicked, when they come from their ſports? ſometimes ye ſhall hear them ſay, I am as weary as a dog; when the drunkard hath barreld himſelf with his liquor, he is as ſick as a dog, otherwhiles, as we ſay, ſuch filthy mouthed ſpeeches we have, which ſhew they are cloyed now and then with theſe things; as the Poet ſayes of the Horſe and the Oxe, Optat ephippia Bos piger, optat arare Caballus, the lazie Oxe that is toiling at the Plough, he is weary with it, he could wiſh he were uſed like a Horſe to the ſaddle, that would be leſſe wearſome he thinks then the Plough; the Horſe that is toiled with its riding, O he is weary with it, he could wiſh he were uſed to the yoke, that would be a farre eaſier life. Thus mens wayes do weary and cloy their affections: the proud Minion is wearied and cloyed with ſuch an odde faſhion, O ſhe muſt have another; the gameſter is wearied with a kinde of ſport, he muſt have another; the delicate palate is cloyed with ſuch taſted meats, it muſt have others. Certainly thine affections are wrong ſet, when they are apt to be cloyed on this manner. O therefore ſet thine affections on God, there thou ſhalt never be cloyed. I know a man may ſet his affections to God-ward, and be weary, but then they are not right ſet when he is weary. They ſerved God amiſſe, when they ſaid, Behold what a wearineſſe is it? Mal. 1. 13. If they had gone a right way to worke, they had never been weary nor cloyed with ſerving of God. But ye brethren, be not weary with well doing, 2 Theſſal. 3. 13. that is, ſet your affections aright upon, and ſo be never weary with it: the affections will never be cloyed when they are truly ſet upon God: the fleſh will be weary, but the ſpirit cannot be weary. God gives the ſoule full abſolute content; the ſoule is at reſt when it is ſet upon God. As the ſtone is never cloyed with lying on the ground, becauſe there is its reſt, ſo God is the reſt of the ſoule. The greateſt glutton in the World will come at laſt to ſay, I have eaten too much; the greateſt drunkard, I have drunken too much: the greateſt ſpendthrift, I have ſpent away too much; his affections are cloyed: but ſet thine affection upon God, thou canſt never come to

Hor. Epiſt. 14.

In omnibus reebusmagis offendit nimium, quam parum. Cicero.

too much, never be godly too much, never be heavenly too much, never be in Gods favour too much, never in Chriſt too much, thy ſpirit can never be cloyed; too much of one thing is good for nothing, ſay people, it is not needfull to be too much pure and too much preciſe, leſſe would ſerve the turne: whoſoever thou art that canſt ſay or think ſo, it is ſure thou never knewest the meaning of grace. O ſay they, does not Solomon ſay, a man may be too much juſt, Be not righteous over much, neither make thy ſelfe overwiſe: for why ſhouldeſt thou deſtroy thy ſelfe? Eccl. 7. 16. Is it not enough to be weary of goodneſſe, but ye muſt miſconſtrue and blaſpheme the Word of God too? This is the meaning of Solomon. Solomon never ſaid ſo himſelfe, but he brings in thy filthy blaſphemous mouth, thus ſaying, Tuſh, be not thou righteous over much, why ſhouldſt thou deſtroy thy ſelfe? why ſhouldſt thou be ſo preciſe to be called a Puritan, to be hated and reviled, to deſtroy thine own credit, and thy pleaſure, and thy liberty? Indeed as it followes, we would not have thee overmuch wicked, &c. verſ. 17. A little pleaſure will doe well, a little vanity, a little liberty, a little revenge, a little gayneſſe of apparrell, a little mirth at the pot will doe well; but be not wicked overmuch. I ſay, theſe are thy helliſh ſpeeches, and none of Solomons. Solomon does but bring thee in ſpeaking, as the Prophet Iſaiah does ſuch as thou, Let us eate and drinke, for to morrow we ſhall die. O Beloved, if ye would ſet your affections on God, your affections could never be cloyed.

4. From the preciouſneſſe of the affections.

The fourth motive is taken from the preciouſneſſe of the affections: the affections are the precious motions of the heart, the heart counts that precious which moſt it affects. Now what a ſhame is this, to ſet thine affections then upon the things of this life? thou haſt a baſe heart to do ſo. Haſt thou a Kingdom to ſet thine affections upon? Haſt thou a God, and a Chriſt, and a Crown for ever and ever, all glory and honour to ſet thine affections upon? and wilt thou ſet thine affections upon droſſe and dung, and ſuch baſe things as theſe? doeſt thou not know that all thy vanities and thy pleaſures are baſe in compariſon of Chriſt? all thy ſilks and thy ſattins, all thy gentility and thy pomp in the world, are vile in compariſon of grace and of glory? Doeſt thou not know how God ſcornes all theſe things in compariſon of the excellency of his grace and favour? thou haſt a very baſe and a vile heart, if thou wilt ſet thine affections upon theſe things. So every wicked man is called a vile perſon, Pſal. 15. 4. The vile perſon will ſpeak villany, Iſa. 32. 6. Great Nineveh, the Prophet cals it vile, Nahum 1. 14. The vileſt men are exalted, Pſal. 12. 8. If we ſhould ſee a Lords ſon keep company with them that are meaner then is fitting, will ye not ſay he is baſe. If we ſhould ſee how Sardanapalus a King, would ſet ſpinning and wheeling with the Maids; and Domitian the Emperour ſit catching of flies, and hanging them up, would ye not ſay they are baſe? they do things unworthy themſelves: themſelves ſhould be Noble, and Honourable, and Royal, and yet ſhould ſo vilifie and debaſe their own ſelves on this faſhion. What, a Chriſtian be gaming, and hoyting, that might have joyes unſpeakable and glorious? a Chriſtian going to Alehouſes, or other baſe places, that might goe into the Courts of the Almighty? a Chriſtian complaine of the frowne of a man, whoſe breath is in his noſtrils, that might have the favour of Heaven? a Chriſtian angry at a trifle, a Chriſtian not able to indure the loſſe of a little earthly ſilver, that might have all the riches of glory? what a baſe man is he? what baſeneſs is this in thee? Ah, thou thinkeſt baſely of God, and baſely of Chriſt, and baſely of grace, and baſely of the Kingdome of Heaven, that ſetteſt thine affection more on the dirty and beggerly things of this life, then on him. The Proverbe of a foole is, He is penny wiſe and pound fooliſh, So thou art penny wiſe and pound fooliſh: wiſe for the things of this world, world, and foolish to the things of God. The best things of the earth compare them to grace, are no better than a penny to a pound: what a strange thing is this that we should be thus basely foolish? not affect a Sermon more then a Play; not affect the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ more then an earthly bargaine. There is a homely saying, but it is a most true one, A foole will not give his bawble for the Tower of London; his affections are more on his Hat and his Feather, then on any thing else, ὁ δὲ τὰ γελοῖα σπουδάζει. He is very serious about ridiculous things. Fie for shame brethren, let us not be so profanely conceited of grace, so basely minded as to set our affections here below, when we are called to set them on God.

The fifth motive is taken from the instability of our affections: if our affections be set upon the things of this life, they must be faine to repent of it at last, what ever come of it: whether we perish or not, whether we be saved or damned, it is certain we shall repent of it: if ever thou go to Heaven, God will make thee repent that ever thou hast been so vain, so carnal, so voluptuous, so proud, God will make thy heart ake for it. I abhor my selfe, sayes Job, and repent in dust and ashes, Job 42. 6. O I could even spit in mine own face, I could even be content to gnash my teeth at mine own soule, that ever I sinned thus and thus, now I repent it in dust and ashes, O that I had never done so; were it to do again, I would never do it for a thousand worlds: thus it shall go to heaven thou wilt be faine to repent it. And if thou go to hell, thine own horror and thine intollerable torments and plagues will force thee to repent it too, that ever thou hast set thine affections on earth; then thou wilt curse thine own self, and ban thine own thoughts, & fret and stampe at thine own madnesse, that thou shouldst set thine affections upon the things of the world, when thou mightest have had a Saviour, and a God, if thou hadst been wise, and wouldest have been ruled. Magni emitur pœnitentia, alas, such repentance costeth thee dear. When it hath cost thee thy soul and brought thee to hell, and utterly undone thee for ever, then thou learnest how to repent. When Dives was in hell, then he repented that ever he was so hard-hearted to Lazarus, Send Lazarus, &c. O he would now aske him forgivenesse: send such a poor wretch now, I will make him restitution. Lord send now thy Commandements and now we will obey them; Lord now send thy Ministers unto us, and we will hear them; send us one Sermon more, and now we will do it. As sure as God is in Heaven, you will repent it another day, that ever you set your affections thus on the things of this life. Beloved, were it not better by odds, not to set your affections thus at all, then when ye have done it, repent it, when all comes to all? Non admiseris cujus postea pœniteat. Do not commit that, if ye be wise, which ye must repent when ye have done it. This very Sermon, if ye will not hearken now to obey it, I say this very Sermon your consciences will be sure to vexe you withall. Such a Sermon I heard, and there I had a warning, then I was told of this vengeance I endure, but I would not listen. O wo is me and my rebellion, that I did not. I beseech you consider it, set your affections otherwise then ye do, set them graciously on God, or else ye will be forced to repent for ever.

5. From the instability of the affections.

The sixth motive is taken from the jealousie of the affections: Beloved, when a Husband suspects his wives affections are not to him, there is an affection of jealousie arises in his heart to revenge it: a man cannot abide that his wife should give her affections to another. So Beloved, God is a jealous God, when he sees he cannot have thy affections to him: he hath made thee his creature, he hath hired thee for his servant, nay he espoused thy soule as a wife and a spouse to his own Son; and if he may suspect that thy affections are otherwise set, he will be jealous against thee. This will be the grievousest revenge of all revenges that are possible. No revenge like the revenge for the turning ones affections ary. Let a man be wrong'd though never so much, nothing but anger and choler does arise to revenge it; but if he suspect the want of affection in his own wife, then it is not an anger alone that arises to revenge it, but a jealousie. Doest thou not know what jealousie is? I tell you, it is the revengefullest passion that ever arose in the breast. Jealousie is the rage of a man, therefore he will not spare in the day of vengeance: he will regard no ransome, neither will he rest content, though thou giveſt many gifts, Prov. 6. 34, 35. We have a good Proverb, From jealousie the good Lord deliver us. ζήλοιο παν ἀγριον ἦτορ, sayes Oppia, The heart of jealousy is wilde and all savage. A man is not only angry, but directly in a rage, that is jealous. So God expresses himself by a fury and a rage, saying, my fury shall break out against them, and I will not pity them. When thine affections go a whoring from God, he will be revenged on thee deeply; he will take no ransome; no ransome by Christ, no ransome in the world: couldest thou give him a whole world for the sin of thy soul, he will not accept it. What sayes the husband when he is jealous, what hast thou defiled my bed, and played the whore? and so forth. I will make you an example: he eats himself up, till he is revenged: he will marke every cast of her eye, every gesture of her body, every tread of her foot, every thing now shall be matter of suspition: she shall not speak to any man in the street, but he will suspect it is wantonnesse. She shall not be able to go one step out of doores, but he will suspect it is to her base lovers. So if we set our affections wrong upon other things besides God, God will never put it up at our hands. He will then be extreme to mark whatsoever is amisse; not one idle word, but he will be precise to observe it; not one vain thought, but he will be curious to note it; not one foolish fashion, but he will set it down in his note-book; he will then be extreame with thee. Ye have read and heard the Ten Commandements often and often. Ye know what is said in the second Commandment, Thou shalt not do thus and thus, For I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, and visit the sins of the fathers upon the children. If thou set up these Idols in thy heart, to affect the things of this life, take heed of this jealousie, I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, &c. He will visit not onely thy sins upon thee, but he will look what thy father hath done, and thy grandfather hath done, and thy great grandfather hath done. If any of them have been drunkards, he will visit it on thee: if any of them have been swearers and worldlings, and wicked, he will visit it on thee. From his jealousie the good Lord deliver us.

The seventh motive is taken from the Tyranny of our affections, if they be not set right, If our affections be not set upon God, they are the sorest Tyrants that can be to tyrannize over us. Philo compares the tyranny of our affections to the four hundred years bondage of the Israelites in Ægypt. Ye remember what woful and slavish bondage they were put to in Ægypt, in so much that they groaned under it, and cryed out unto God. Pharaoh played the Tyger-like Tyrant over them, and made them weary of their lives: so do the affections tyrannize over a man that is carnal and earthly, they do so besot him, and befoole him, that he knows not how to come out of his sins; they do so harden him and obdurate him, that no preaching nor counsel can convert him; they do so occupy and task him, and busie him, that he can find no while to save his own soul, or bethink himselfe of escaping of hell and damnation, he is in hell before ever he thinks on it seriously; they plague him like Tantalus, sayes he, and leave his soul in the lurch after all his vaine hopes, he can never be free for God. The Apostle speaking of the lust and affections of the world, how they allure men into vanity; he sayes they promise men liberty, but they are the servants and slaves of corruption, 2 Pet. 2. 19. A man would wonder how one should be in bondage with a pot or a pipe, with a bowle or a game, with a carnal friend, or an use he hath hath gotten; but ſo it is, that nor Miniſter, nor Sermon, nor warnings from God, nor any thing can free him: Still he is enthralled. Now conſider, are our affections ſuch tyrants, when they be ſet upon the things of this life? O let us ſet them upon God. If they can captivate us to God, and bring us into a golden bondage with grace and with goodneſſe, we are happy. Seeſt thou how the wicked are tyed to their ſins, and their luſts? ſo if thine affections were ſet upon God, thou wouldſt be tyed unto God. O it's an admirable tye, this, to be tyed unto God: This is it that the wiſeſt man in the earth adviſeth us to, My ſon, ſayes he, keep thy fathers commandments, binde them continually upon thy heart, and tye them about thy neck, Prov. 6. 21. Thine affections are theſe ſtay-bands, and theſe tyers; if thine affections be ſet upon the Word, they will tye it to thy ſoule; if they be ſet upon grace, and love to Gods Ordinances, his Sabbaths and his wayes, they will tye them to thy heart: if thou wilt not ſet thine affections upon God, thou art a very ſlave, a very ſlave unto Satan and to ſin; thou art not onely in a woful condition, as thou art, but they tye thee faſt to it; and if God may not be ſo much beholden to thee for thine affections to him-ward, he will intrap thee, and take thee by them, as a Beare is taken by the Collar, and hale thee to judgement. Thou haſt little affection, or none at all, to the Word: may be thou comeſt not to be reproved, and amended by the Word, but thou comeſt to have ſome knowledge, and ſome pretty ſentence to talk on, or ſome fine ſtory or paſſage to ſpeak on: as I live, ſaith the Lord, I will anſwer thee according to thy thoughts: may be thou comeſt that thou mayeſt ſcrape up ſome hopes to have mercy and heaven at the laſt; may be thou comeſt to ſnatch up ſome ſentence or other that may ſecure up thy conſcience: if there be ever a paſſage of mercy, that thou wouldeſt faine have; As I live, ſaith the Lord, I will anſwer thee according to thy thoughts, and thine own vain heart that which thou cameſt for in the Word, as I live, ſaith the Lord, thou ſhalt have it. Thou doeſt not come to learne how to be holy and be ſtricter than thou art, but though thou beeſt no ſtricter than thou art already, yet to have ſome hopes to be ſaved for all that.

TO THE CHRISTIAN READER.

IT was the saying of Solon, That there were many good laws made, but there wanted one law to make us put all those laws in execution: The like may be said concerning the Books that are written now adayes, There are many good Books written, but there wanteth one Book to make us to put those good books in practice. Such a Book were worth writing, and worth reading; and I know no reason but that this Book (if the Spirit of God write it in our hearts) may have this happy effect: is a Book that will teach us how to get into the state of grace, and how to get and keep a good Conscience: and whosoever readeth a book with a good conscience will make conscience to practice what he readeth: For a good conscience is, as Aristotle saith of Justice, * a Synopsis and Epitome of all virtues; It is a * Panacea to cure all soul diseases; It is * a Medicine to digest all book-surfetting.

There are four sorts of Consciences; Some bad and unquiet, some bad and quiet, some good and unquiet, some good and quiet. For a conscience to be bad and quiet is the worst temper that can be; Better have a bad unquiet than a bad and quiet conscience; better have a tormenting Tophet in the soul than a fools Paradise. The best frame of Conscience is the good and quiet Conscience; this is a

* Paradiſe upon earth, * a preguſtation and prelibation of heaven, a manſion for the Trinity to dwell in. Now this enſuing Treatiſe will teach us how to purchaſe this precious Jewel of a good and quiet Conſcience. A Treatiſe very neceſſary in theſe unconſcionable dayes, wherein moſt people make no conſcience to ſin againſt conſcience; and ſome have ſinned ſo long againſt conſcience, as that they have loſt all conſcience of ſin. As * St. Auguſtine ſaith of the name of a Chriſtian, ſo may I ſay of conſcience, Multi conſcientiam habent, non ad remedium, ſed ad judicium, Many have a conſcience for their condemnation and not for their ſalvation. Conſcience * it is the houſe of the ſoul; But this houſe lieth waſte and is much ruinated and decayed in theſe times, wherein * never more ſcience, but never leſſe conſcience. Conſcience * it is a private Judgement-day before the publick day of Judgement. And it is an ill preſage that moſt people will never ſtand upright in the Court of Heaven, becauſe they ſtand accuſed and condemned in the Court of Conſcience. Conſcience is Gods Preacher in our boſomes; And it is a moſt certain Rule; That that man that will not regard the Preacher in his boſome, Will never regard the Preacher in the Pulpit. And the reaſon why the Preacher in the Pulpit doth no more good, is becauſe the Preacher in the boſome is ſo much deſpiſed and neglected. And therefore I doubt not but this Book (theſe motives conſidered) will be very acceptable to all thoſe that have, or deſire to have a good and quiet conſcience. For as * S. Bernard moſt excellently ſaith, Every mans conſcience is his book; and all books are written to diſcover and amend the errours of the book of conſcience. Let thoſe that read this book of conſcience look into the book of their own conſcience, and amend all the faults of that book by this.

The reverend Authour of this Book was a Miniſter very conſcientious, and one that had a great ability given him by God to preach unto, and work upon, the conſciences of people, to awaken the ſleepy conſcience, to enform the erroneous conſcience, to ſettle the doubtfull conſcience, and to comfort the wounded conſcience; his ſermons were all dipt dipt in conſcience; And therefore a Subject of Conſcience muſt needs be welcome from ſuch a Preacher. It is true that this birth is Poſthumum opus, and cōmeth our after the death of the Autnour; But I hope it will be the more pleaſing, to revive the memory of him whoſe life and labours were deſervedly precious in the eſteem of Gods people. And if conſcience, though for a while blind, and dumbe, and feared, and put out of all office, will notwithſtanding at laſt be put into office, and made to ſee, ſpeak, and feel, to the utter deſtruction of an impenitent ſinner; Why may not a diſcourſe of Conſcience, though long ago preached, be ſuffered to revive and live for the ſalvation of thoſe that ſhall have grace to read it aright? eſpecially conſidering that theſe Sermons were perfected by himſelfe in his life time?

Much I could ſay in commendation of this worthy Divine, both in regard of his unwearieſome pains in preaching, conſuming his own body to ſave the ſouls of others, as also of his learning and exemplary piety; but I forbear. All that I will ſay is this; They that fully knew him did love and reverence him; and if any did diſeſteem him, it was becauſe they did not fully know him. He is now a ſhining ſtar in the firmament of Heaven. And there are hundreds of people that will bleſſe God to all eternity for his pains. He needeth not our praiſes, but our imitation.

All that I deſire from you that read this ſhort Treatiſe, is this: That ye would either get a good conſcience by the reading of this book, or bring a good conſcience to the reading of it. Labour to make an addition to the heavenly joyes of this faithfull ſervant of God, by making this book a means to bring thy ſoul to thoſe heavenly joyes which are at Gods right hand for ever more; which are joyes unſpeakable and glorious, ſo great that, * as S. Auguſtine ſaith, If one drop of the joyes of Heaven ſhould fall into Hell, it would ſwallow up all the bitterneſſe of Hell. And that God would make you heirs of this joy, is the prayer of your ſoul friend,

AN

ENQUIRY

After a mans Eſtate before GOD.

COLOS. 4. 8.

Whom I have ſent unto you for the ſame purpoſe, that he may know your eſtate and comfort your hearts.

THE eſtate of a man before God is the relation that he ſtandeth in unto God, as God is the free fountaine of all ſpiritual life and ſalvation, and determiner of mens everlaſting conditions either in heaven or in hell: So that when we queſtion about a mans eſtate, we queſtion, Whether he be in Chriſt or not; Whether he have true grace yea, or no, Whether he be one of Gods children or no, or whether he be yet no better then a reprobate. What a mans eſtate before God is.

There be three things to be conſidered in this definition of every mans eſtate. Firſt, it is a relation unto God; not as a man is in himſelfe, it may be rich, it may be poor in the world; but I ſpeak here as he is in relation towards God; Whether he be rich towards God, yea, or no. I do not ſpeak as a man is in regard of others; it may be he is a father or a ſonne, a maſter or a ſervant, a King or a ſubject: but in relation to God, Whether Gods ſervant or no, Gods childe or no. Salute Apelles, ſaith Paul; and he telleth us what eſtate Apelles was in before God, namely, in an eſtate of approbation, approved in Chriſt. And the ſame Apoſtle ſpeaketh on the contray of the unconverted Gentiles, that they were ſtrangers from the life of God, Epheſ. 4, 18. Secondly, as it is a relation unto God, ſo it is a ſtanding relation: That wherein he ſtandeth towards God, that is a mans eſtate before God. There is a difference between one that doth ſin, and one that is in the ſtate of ſinne: A childe of God may ſinne, but he is not in a ſtate of ſinne; you cannot call him a wicked man. So alſo

Epheſ. 4. 18.

there is difference between one that doeth ſome good actions, and one that is in a good eſtate: A carnal man may do ſome good things, but he is not in a good eſtate. The eſtate of a man is a ſtanding thing, it is the relation that he ſtandeth in towards God. Thirdly, it is the relation that a man ſtandeth in towards God as he is the free fountain of ſpiritual life and ſalvation. It is not every ſtanding relation towards God: For a man may be conſidered in relation to God as a Creatour, and ſo the heavens and the earth and the very brute beaſts ſtand in relation to God, as they are his creatures; but they have not this eſtate that we ſpeak of, which is a relation to God as the free giver of ſpirituall life and ſalvation. (He is free, he may chooſe whether he will give it or no.) Now this is a mans eſtate, the relation he ſtandeth in unto God, Whether the Lord hath given him his ſaving grace, yea or no; ſpiritual life in Chriſt Jeſus, yea or no; title to heaven and ſalvation, yea or no? this is the meaning when we ſpeak of a mans
Gen. 13. 13. eſtate. It is ſaid of Sodom, They were ſinners before God: that is they were in a bad eſtate, a ſtate of ſinne. It is ſaid of Zachary and Elizabeth, They were Luke 1. 6. both righteous before God; that is, they were both in a very good ſtate.

Obſerv. Miniſters are to enquire after the eſtate of their people.

All Chriſtians beleive that there is a God: It behoveth every one now to conſider in what eſtate he ſtandeth to his God. This is a great queſtion that we which are Miniſters ought to demand of our people, to know their eſtates.

Reaſons. 1.

Firſt, becauſe we are ſhepherds, and are bound to look well how it ſtandeth with our flock. If we do not labour to know your eſtates, we can never look well to your ſoules. Conſider that place in the Proverbs, Be diligent
Prov. 27. 23. to know the ſtate of thy flock, and look well to thy herds. Where the Wiſe man firſt requireth that we ſhould look well to our flocks, and then directeth us in the manner how, viz. by being diligent to know their eſtate, how it ſtandeth with them.

Secondly, we are Gods labourers; and we muſt know in what eſtate our work ſtandeth: elſe we may labour, and labour, and all in vain; we may preach and exhort and call upon our people to heare and believe, and obey; and all this may ſtill be in vain, if we do not enquire in what eſtate they are. This is the reaſon why Paul could not forbeare ſending and
1 Theſſ. 3. 5. enquiring how it ſtood with the Theſſalonians, in what ſtate they were in, how it went with their faith, whether they keept it or no, leſt the tempter had tempted them, and his labour ſhould have been in vain; for ſo it had been for all his preaching and teaching them, if they had not been in a good eſtate: therefore he ſent to know.

Thirdly, we are to take the care and the charge of your ſoules: Now then, how can we be quiet if we do not know in what eſtate your ſoules be? A good father cannot be at quiet if he do not know how it is with his children: How if they ſhould be ſick? how if undone? Oh it would comfort a good father to know his children to be in good caſe: But if it were otherwiſe with them, though it would grieve him much, yet he had rather know it then not; for if he know it, he can better tell what to do. So it was with the Apoſtle, his very bowells yerned upon the Philippians, Oh my poor people, thought he, I wonder what eſtate they be in. How if they totter? how if they miſcarry? how if the devil have tempted them to ſinne and to apoſtatize? how if they be in trouble of conſcience? He could never be at quiet
Philip. 2. 19. till he knew their eſtate: I truſt in the Lord Jeſus, ſaith he, to ſend Timotheus ſhortly unto you, that I alſo may be of good comfort, when I know your eſtate. He had a great care of their ſoules, and therefore it would comfort his heart to know what eſtate they were in.

Fourthly, we are teachers, and therefore we muſt know the eſtate of our people: otherwiſe we are ignorant what doctrine to provide for them, them, what points to handle among them. Paul in this Epiſtle to the Coloſſians, knowing onely their eſtate in the generall, delivereth abundance of generall precepts and exhortations unto them: he deſcribeth unto them the myſtery of Chriſt, admoniſheth them to continue ſtedfaſt therein, to embrace the preaching of the word, to beware of philoſophy and the vaine traditions and ſophiſtry of men, to take heed of doting upon ceremonies, which are all ended in Chriſt, to ſet their affections on heaven, to mortifie the deeds of the fleſh, to put off the old man; he warneth them to be loving and humble: he biddeth Wives do their duties to their Husbands, and Husbands to love their Wives; Children to obey their Parents, and Parents to encourage their children; Servants to obey their Maſters, and Maſters to deale well with their ſervants; all to continue in prayer, watchfulneſſe, thankſgiving; to walk wiſely towards them that are without, to be carefull of godly and holy communication: Thus knowing their eſtate only for the generall, he teacheth them in generall, and therefore now he concludeth, as if he ſhould ſay, I ſpeak ſomewhat generally becauſe I do not know your eſtates in particular; and therefore I ſend to you Tychicus, a faithfull good Miniſter, that he may learne your eſtates in particular, and deale with you anſwerably. It may be ſome of you want corroſives; it may be ſome of you want cordials; it may be ſome have need to be ſearched and humbled, ſome of you to be encouraged and comforted: I have ſent him to enquire into your eſtates in particular, that he may do accordingly. Whom I have ſent unto you for the ſame purpoſe, that he may know your eſtate and comfort your hearts. Col. 4. 8.

The uſe of this is threefold.

Firſt, for inſtruction. Hence we may ſee that a Miniſter doeth but his duty when he enquireth into mens eſtates, how they ſtand before God: It is not prying into other mens matters; it is not busi-bodineſſe in other mens affairs; it is not a ſpirit of meddling: No, a Miniſter doeth but his duty, when he doeth it. How can a Phyſician apply true and proper phyſick unleſſe he enquire into the ſtate of mens bodies? Now a Miniſter is a Phyſician to mens ſouls; and therefore he is to enquire of the ſtate of mens ſouls, how they ſtand before God. They are men of Belial that ſay, What? muſt the Miniſter know all? and, Can there be nothing done but the Miniſter muſt heare of it? Theſe are very evil ſpeeches. The Miniſter doeth but his duty when he is inquiſitive. Uſes. 1. Inſtruction. Jer. 8. 12.

The ſecond uſe may be for reproofe. If it be the duty of a Miniſter to enquire of mens eſtates before God, then thoſe people are to blame that will not make known their eſtates. What is the reaſon that ſo many men abide in a rotten eſtate, but becauſe they are loth to open truly and fully what they are to Gods Miniſters? Nay many are like them in the Prophet, who ſay to the Seers, See not. They would not have Gods Miniſters ſee what they do, nor ſee what they are. I confeſſe there be ſome that will open ſomething about their eſtates, but not all they know by themſelves: They keep in the maine; like ſome fooliſh clients who miſinforme their Counſel, making their Caſe better then indeed it is, and ſo their Cauſe miſcarrieth: So ſome keep in that which would give moſt light to judge of their eſtates: But this ought not ſo to be. I can tell you an example of one that being troubled about his eſtate before God, and ſome Miniſters being by, Oh, ſaith he, I will tell you all that I know of my ſelfe; I'le not hide a ſyllable from you: and if be yet no better then a wretch, I beſeech you tell me plainly that I am ſo; and if I be in Chriſt, I beſeech you prove it plainly unto me. This man took a right courſe, and thereby through Gods mercy came in a little ſpace to the aſſurance of his own bleſſed eſtate and condition. 2. Reproof. Iſa. 30. 10.

3. Exhortation. Thirdly, for exhortation. Let Gods Miniſters know of your eſtates, that they may be able to ſpeak to you accordingly. By this means they may ſpeak words in due ſeaſon, and likewiſe houſe-holders give every one his portion. If you had but a cut finger, would not you be glad to have the right plaiſter? and if you had a burning feaver, would you not deſire the right remedy? how much more in curing the ſickneſſe of the ſoul?

Now from the text it ſelfe, without any cutting up of the words, we may gather four Propoſitions:

1. That there is an eſtate that every man is in, either an eſtate of grace, or an eſtate of ſinne.

2. That this ſtate may be known.

3. That every man ſhould be willing to have his eſtate examined, that it may be known whether it be good or no.

4. That a man can never have true comfort till it be known that he is in a good eſtate.

1. Obſerv. 1. For the firſt, That there is an eſtate that every one is in, either of grace or ſin; See this in Simon Magus: I perceive, ſayes S. Peter, thou art in the gall of bitterneſſe, and in the bond of iniquity. See, he telleth him what eſtate he was in, viz. a very bad eſtate, in a deſperate and damnable condition. In this ſtate of ſin and miſery are all they that are not renewed by Chriſt Jeſus. And for the other, ſee an example, Rom. 16. 7. Salute Rufus choſen in the Lord: The text there telleth us what eſtate he was in, a very good eſtate; He was a man in Chriſt, a choice man, that is, a man in the ſtate of grace and ſalvation. In this eſtate are all they that are called and ſanctified and made new creatures unto God. Every man is in one of the two eſtates: there is no middle eſtate which is neither the one nor the other, but in one of theſe two are all the whole world. The reaſon is,

Acts 8. 23.

Rom. 16. 7.

1. From everlaſting the world was divided onely into two ranks, either Elect or Reprobates.

2. Here in this life the world is divided onely into two companies, either Godly, or Ungodly.

Matth. 25. 32. 3. At the day of judgement the Lord will divide the whole world onely into two ſorts, either Sheep or Goats.

2. Prop. Election may be known. II. For the ſecond Propoſition, This eſtate may be known: Eſpecially every man may come to the knowledge of his own eſtate before God. I do not ſay that every man may know whether he be elect or reprobate: yet this I ſay too, That a godly ſoule may know that it is elected to life. The Apoſtle exhorteth all that are godly to give diligence to make their election ſure, 2 Pet. 1. 10. He that attaineth to that faith which the Apoſtle calleth the faith of Gods elect, Titus 1. 1. and receiveth the word of God, as Paul ſaith the Theſſalonians did, and thence concludeth they were choſen of God, 1 Theſſ. 1. 4, 5. he may attaine to much aſſurance of his election. But though a godly may know he is elected of God, yet for reprobation the caſe is not alike: 1. Becauſe ungodlineſſe is not alwayes joyned with perſeverance. 2. Beſides, God hath many reaſons why he doth not reveale mens reprobation unto them: They would then be outragious in evil, deſperate in wickedneſſe; there could be no order or government in humane life: Beſides that, the form of Chriſts adminiſtration of his Kingdom could not be ſo as it now is: for Chriſt hath bid his Miniſters preach the Goſpel to every creature, to whole Pariſhes and Townes, and except none: Chriſt will not tell his Miniſters which be reprobates and which not, that they may preach unto all, and labour to work upon every ſoul; and there is none in a Pariſh but the Miniſter muſt look upon him as one who may be ſaved. Chriſt will not tell his people which be reprobates, that they may look upon every one, as one that may be wonne to the faith for any thing they know: Chriſt will not tell the reprobates themſelves that they are reprobates, that every one of them may come to the uſe of the means; How do they know but they may finde grace? yea and the Lord doth ſeriouſly call them; and it is their fault if they obey not. It is Gods infinite mercy, that election, which is ſuch a comfortable point, may be revealed to Gods children; and that reprobation, which is ſo intolerable and bitter, is not revealed to the reprobate. Nevertheleſſe let me adde, that ſome particular men have known their own reprobation, as Cain and Judas, &c. And there be ſhrewd ſignes of it: (I do not ſpeak it as though I meant to perſwade any man that he is one, but onely that he may take heed of them.) Shrewd ſignes of it.

1. Malicing the known truth is a very ſhrewd ſigne: As, when men know that godlineſſe is pleaſing to God, and yet they hate a man for it; when men know the Miniſter is commanded to rebuke ſinne, and yet they will ſpite him for ſo doing: this a very ſhrewd ſigne. Paul perſecuted the truth; but yet, ſayes he, I obtained mercy, becauſe I did it ignorantly, 1 Tim. 1. 13. intimating that if he had done it againſt knowledge, he had been in danger to have found no mercy. And therefore ye that mock and hate thoſe wayes which God hath commanded, I beſeech you, take heed leſt ye ſin unpardonably.

2. Abſolute apoſtaſie is a ſhrewd ſign too of reprobation: When men have been very forward in the profeſſion of the truth, and fall totally away and prove miſerably profane, as the Apoſtle ſheweth, Heb. 6. 6.

3. Finall impenitency. This is an infallible ſigne of reprobation, when a man liveth in ſin, dieth in ſin, and goeth away without repentance. Luke 13. 3. Except ye repent ye ſhall all likewiſe periſh. There be many of us have ſtood out long in impenitency; let us take heed leſt if we ſtay any longer we fall upon this great evil.

I return to the point: A man may come to the knowledge of his own eſtate before God. I do not mean, Whether he be in the ſtate of election or reprobation: but he may know, Whether he be in the ſtate of ſalvation or damnation, that is, Whether he be in the way that leadeth to heaven or hell, Whether he be in ſuch a caſe that if he die now, he ſhall be ſaved or not ſaved: Every man may thus know in what eſtate he is. That a man may know his eſtate, proved.

1. Becauſe the word of God ſheweth a man this: As for example, He that committeth ſinne is of the devil, Mark; the Apoſtle telleth us what eſtate that man is in that liveth in ſinne, in a very bad eſtate. So on the contrary; He that hath this hope purgeth himſelfe. Mark; the Apoſtle telleth us what eſtate that man is in who purgeth himſelfe; he is in a very good eſtate, in a ſtate of true hope in Chriſt. And ſo 1 Cor. 6. 10. the Apoſtle nameth divers who are not in the ſtate of ſalvation, but of damnation: if they die in ſuch caſe, they cannot inherit the Kingdom of Heaven. So that if a man will but ſearch the word, and believe that God doth ſay true, he may know his eſtate. Reaſons I. 1 John 3. 8. 1 John 3. 3.

2. Without this knowledge a man cannot have an accuſing or an excuſing conſcience in reſpect of his eſtate: but men may have, yea many men haue, a conſcience accuſing them of being in a very bad eſtate; and many men have an excuſing conſcience, that plainly doth witneſſe that they are in a very good and gracious eſtate. I and my people are wicked, ſaith Pharaoh. His conſcience did accuſe him of being in a bad eſtate. I am holy, ſaith David; I am thy ſervant. His conſcience told him he was in the ſtate of grace. So that ye need not go farre to know what eſtate you are in: there is that in your boſome that can decide the matter. II. Exod. 9. 27. Pſal. 86. 2.

3. Men cannot deſire nor flie from an unknown eſtate: But men are III.

commanded to flie from a bad eſtate, and ſeek out a good one: There-Matth. 3. 7, 8. fore they may know the one and the other. O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flie from the wrath to come? Bring forth therefore fruits meet of repentance, ſaith John to the Phariſees. He ſuppoſeth theſe men might eaſily know that they were in a very bad eſtate, or elſe how could he ſay thus unto them?

Before I come to the Uſes, let us conſider theſe three things:

1. That every man living is borne in a very bad eſtate. We all know it well; but oh that we would conſider it! We are all by nature
Eph. 2. 3. children of wrath. Now here lieth the queſtion, When did we change our eſtates? We are in the ſame ſtate of damnation wherein we were borne, except we are come out of it. I ſay, here lieth the queſtion, Whether we are come out of it or no, whether we have mended our eſtate.

2. Conſider that the greateſt part of the world never mend their eſtates: But as they were borne in a curſed eſtate, ſo they live and die in it. And I ſpeak not this of heathen onely; but alas! how many in the viſible Church
Phil. 3. 17. do ſo? How many were there in the Church of Philippi whom the Apoſtle could not think of without weeping, when he conſidered in what eſtate they
1 Cor. 1. 26. were? So in the Church of Corinth, not many wiſe, not many rich, not many noble called; but commonly the meaneſt in the eye of the world were in the beſt eſtate towards God. Nay more then ſo; Many of them who ſeek to get into a good eſtate, miſſe of it and periſh. See, Luke 13. 24. Strive to enter in at the ſtrait gate: Mark; it's a ſtrait gate, and letteth but few in: for many ſhall ſeek to enter in and ſhall not be able: Here and there a few, even where the conſtant miniſtery is.

3. Conſider that it is a marvellous hard thing to paſſe from ſtate unto ſtate, from a bad to a good eſtate. There is a very vaſt gulfe between the ſtate of ſinne and the ſtate of grace, and it is marvellous hard to paſſe it. Theſe things premiſed, the Uſes follow.

1. This point may be many wayes uſeful: Firſt, for inſtruction; If God hath made it poſſible unto us to finde out what eſtate every one of us is in, then ſure he would have us go about it and enquire after it. God might have left us to periſh in our naturall blindneſſe, never to have known in what caſe we had been untill we were paſt recovery. Firſt, we are all wanderers from God and from the wayes of peace, and therefore God might juſtly have ſuffered us for ever to have wandred, and never to have been able to finde out whether we had been right or wrong. Secondly, God hath dealt ſo with ſome: He hath ſuffred ſome to go on all their dayes blindfold
Matth. 15. 14. to hell. Thus the Lord dealt with the Scribes and Phariſees; Let them alone, ſaith he, they be blind leaders of the blind, they will both fall into the ditch. Ye ſee the Lord hath dealt ſo with ſome; and it is his mercy, he hath not dealt ſo with us. Sith God hath made it poſſible for us to know, it is our duty to enquire after it: And that yet further for theſe reaſons:

Reaſons.

1. Firſt, becauſe the Lord commandeth it: Examine your own ſelves
2 Cor. 13. 5. whether ye be in the faith; prove your ſelves: know ye not your own ſelves, how that Jeſus Chriſt is in you, except ye be reprobates? Where you ſee the Apoſtle commandeth the duty of ſelf-triall: And conſider how he preſſeth it upon us: 1. Do ye not know what eſtate you are in? then examine and enquire. 2. Do ye think ye are in a good eſtate? look ye prove it, and be ſure ye be not in an errour. Do ye object, ye do not know, neither can ye know? No? then your eſtate is very bad: finde out ſome good tokens in you, except ye be reprobates. This command makes it a clear duty.

2. But a ſecond reaſon to prove it our duty to enquire what eſtate we are are in, is, because without the knowledge thereof we can never have any true peace in our consciences: The conscience must needs be without peace so long as we are ignorant of what estate we are in: Being justified by faith we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. Rom. 5. 1. First the Apostle sheweth their estate; they were in a state of justification: and from the knowledge thereof they had peace. We are bound to get true peace to our consciences; Oh, what a lamentable maze are we in till our consciences have peace! and this they cannot have untill we are fully aquainted in what case we stand before God: Acquaint thy self with God, and be at peace. Job 22. 21.

3. Thirdly, we can never be fit for any duty of Gods worship as long as we know not what estate we are in: We can never be fit for any holy duty, to heare, pray, receive the Sacrament: Let a man examine himselfe, and so let him eat, &c. 1 Cor. 11. 28. First he must examine in what estate he is before he can be fit for that high service. So for repentance: Let us search and try our wayes, and turne again to the Lord: Lam. 3. 40. first finde our selves in an ill estate, and then returne. So for joy; It is a duty to rejoyce in the Lord: But we are never fit for rejoycing till we have proved what estate we are in: Let every man prove his own work; so shall he have rejoycing. Gal. 6. 4. We can never be fit for any duty, untill we know what estate we are in, because every duty varieth according as the estate of every man is. To instance in prayer; He that is not in the state of grace must pray one way, and he that is in the state of salvation must pray another way: the one, that he may be converted and brought home to God: the other, that he may be strengthened and increased in grace. And so for the duty of hearing, &c.

The second use is for direction; to let us understand by what means we may know what estate we are in. There be four means to know this. Use. 2. Of Direction.

1. By our outward and inward actions. I do not say, by our outward actions: For a man may be in the state of hypocrisie, and yet his outward actions may be good. Neither do I say by our inward actions alone: For a man may be in the state of selfe-deceit, and yet say his heart is good and his meaning and minde good. But I say, by them both put together. Our Saviour setteth it out by a tree; Every good tree bringeth forth good fruit: but a corrupt tree bringeth forth corrupt fruit. Matth. 7. 17. So if the heart bring forth the fruit of righteousnesse, joy in good things, patience, meeknesse, gentlenesse, love, obedience, godly conversation, &c. these evidence a good estate: but if the heart bringeth forth deadnesse, earthlinesse, impatience, evil conversation, &c. these are corrupt fruits and signes of a very bad estate. Means to know what estate we are in.

2. Ye may know what estates ye are in by your inclinations and dispositions, from whence these actions proceed. Are your hearts inclined heaven-ward and God-ward, as Davids, are ye bent to holinesse and self-deniall, &c. as a bow is bent to shoot the arrow? This is a signe of a good estate: as 1 Chron. 22. 19. there is a speech of setting the heart to seek God. Ye know when a man will do a thing indeed, we say, he is set on't. It may be ye do some good duties, make some fair offers of seeking God; but are your hearts set on't? or are they set on the world, and inclined earth-ward? The inclinations of every creature in the world do ever shew what the creature is. How do we know that a stone is heavy? Because it inclineth downward. How do we know a man is cholerick? Because he is inclined unto wrath: So a mans estate may be known by his constant inclination either to good or evil. Psal. 119. 112.

3. One may know what estate he is in by that reflexive act which is proper onely to man. There is an act in mans soule (we call it a reflex flex act) which no creature hath but onely man, whereby he can perceive what himselfe is and doth. When a man thinketh or speaketh, he can reflect upon himselfe, and perceive what he thinketh or speaketh: when he prayeth, he can reflect upon his own heart, and perceive how it carrieth it selfe all along in his prayers. I say, no creature in the world hath in it this reflexive act but onely man. The fire burneth, but it cannot reflect upon its own burning: Oculus non videt se videre, The eye seeth, but it doth not see that it doth see; that is, That creature doth not perceive what it doeth when it seeth. But every man hath this reflexive act in him, whereby he is privy to what himselfe thinketh, doeth, is. None knoweth the things

1 Cor. 2. 11. of a man, save the spirit of a man that is in him. This is the reason why some know not what estate they are in, because they choke their own spirit and hoodwink their consciences. Thine own heart knoweth how it is with thee, and would faithfully tell thee, if thou wouldst enquire of it and hearken unto it. Search with Gods candle, and thou mayst easily finde
Prov. 20 27. what is in thee. The spirit of a man is the candle of the Lord, searching all the inward parts of the belly.

4. Ye may know what estate ye are in by a certain kinde of feeling. As there is a kinde of bodily feeling whereby every man knoweth the estate of his body, whether he be sick or in health, so there is a spiritual feeling. The Luke 24. 32. two disciples did feel their heart burn: Paul did feel a great combat in him
Eph. 4. 29. between the flesh and the spirit: So if men be covetous and worldly, they may feel it. Yet indeed some men be past feeling: Their case is the worse because they cannot feel how bad it is; But for the most, they may easily feel what their estate is.

Use 3. Impediments. The third use is, to shew you the impediments that hinder this knowledge. I you would attain to know what estate you are in, then remove the impediments: which are

1. Vain thoughts. Men who are in a state of sinne and wrath, yet have many vain thoughts lodging within them keeping them from knowing it: God is merciful; and Christ died for sinners; and, There be worse sinners then they; why should they think so ill of themselves? and, they may be better all in good time: These vain thoughts hoodwink their eyes that they cannot see
Jer. 4. 14. their estate, nor resolve that it is so dangerous as indeed it is. O Jerusalem, wash thy heart from wickednesse: how long shall these vaine thoughts lodge within thee? They were in a very bad estate; and yet they had such vain thoughts that they could not see it.

2. Presumption is another impediment. Men pray, and heare, and do other good duties, and so take all to be well without serious examining.
Rev. 3. 17. This was the case of the Laodicean people: They thought they had that in them which they had not, and that their estate was good, when it was nothing so.

3. Another let are the Cares of this life: Whereby the heart is so occupied, that it doth not finde time to search its one estate. Therefore our Sa-
Luke 21. 34. viour saith, Take heed that your hearts be not overcharged with the cares of this life, lest that day come upon you unawares; intimating that these cares are great lets from considering our estates.

4. Another let is an Evil conscience, which affrighteth a man so soon as he beginneth to stirre, and maketh him afraid to go on to look soundly in-
John 3. 20. to his estate. He that doeth evil hateth the light.

5. Another let is Ignorance. There is none that understandeth, none that seek-
Rom. 3. 11. eth after God. Mark; they did not seek in what case they stood before God, because they did not understand.

6. Another let is Spiritual sloth and sluggishnesse of heart. Men cannot endure to take paines with their own hearts till they have made our a tru:

true judgement in what caſe they are; They begin and quickly give over; and ſo for want of diligence and pains-taking make nothing ſure.

The laſt uſe is for exhortation; That all men would beſtirre themſelves and ſet in earneſt upon this enquiry. That we may every one know in what ſtate we ſtand. Uſe 4. Of Exhortation.

1. Conſider, this is an enquiry about our ſouls. We enquire about our outward man, about the eſtate of our bodies, and worldly affairs, &c. Oh, let us not neglect this maine Enquiry, Am I in Chriſt, yea or no? Am I a new creature, yea or no? Doth my ſoul live to God or no?

2. Conſider, this is a queſtion about our everlaſting eſtate. We can never have comfort untill we have put this out of queſtion: and therefore this is a queſtion which all queſtions muſt give way unto. If ye be not in Chriſt, ye had need lay aſide all and look about it onely. How can men eat, drink, ſleep, &c. ſith the wrath of God abideth upon all unbelievers? Methinks our ſouls ſhould take no content, do nothing elſe but faint after Chriſt untill we know our intereſt in him. I ſay again, This is the grand enquiry, that buſineſſe which all buſineſſes muſt give place unto. Oh the ſloth of our ſouls! Let us in time awake and rouſe them up, and never reſt untill we know our own eſtate to be good before God, that ſo our hearts may have comfort, and that with God.

R A TREA

A TREATISE OF CONSCIENCE.

ROM. 2. 15.

Which ſhew the work of the law written in their hearts, their conſciences alſo bearing them witneſſe, and their thoughts in the meanwhile accuſing or elſe excuſing one another.

What conſcience is.

Have ſhewed you, That every man is in an eſtate before God. And that hath made way now to a Treatiſe of Conſcience; which will ſhew us what eſtate we are in before God. I deſire to handle it common-place-wiſe: And firſt I will tell you in brief what the conſcience of everyman is. I ſay of every man: For Angels and devils have a conſcience too: ye may ſee it in the ſpeech of the Angel to John, when John would have worſhipped him, I am thy fellow-ſervant, ſaith he, ſee thou do it not. Mark; He had a conſcience that could ſay, I am a ſervant, and therefore muſt not take worſhip to me. So for the devils: When our Saviour bade them come forth of the poſſeſſed, they ſay, Art thou come to torment us before our time. See; they had a conſcience that told them there would be a time when they ſhould be further tormented. But I am not to ſpeak of ſuch conſciences, but of the conſcience of man. Now the conſcience of man is the judgement of man upon himſelf as he is ſubject to Gods judgement. Divines uſe to expreſſe it in this Syllogiſme, He that truly believeth in Chriſt ſhall be ſaved: My conſcience telleth me this is Gods word; But I believe truly in Chriſt: My conſcience telleth me this alſo; Therefore I ſhall be ſaved. And ſo alſo on the contrary ſide. So that conſcience is a mans true judgement of himſelfe: If we would judge our ſelves; that is If we would bring our ſelves before the tribunal of conſcience to receive its judgement.

Rev. 19. 10.

Matth. 8. 29.

1 Cor. 11. 31.

Four Propoſitions.

Four Propoſitions are contained in that portion of Scripture which I have choſen to make the Subject of this enſuing Treatiſe, Rom. 2. 15.

1. That there is in every man a conſcience. [Their conſciences bearing them witneſs,] Every one of them had a conſcience bearing them witneſſe.

2. That the light which conſcience is directed to work by, is knowledge; [written in their hearts.]

3. That the bond that bindeth a mans conſcience, is Gods Law; [which ſhew the effect of the law written in their hearts.

4. That the office and duty of conſcience is to bear witneſs either with our ſelves or againſt our ſelves, accuſing or excuſing our ſelves or actions, [bearing witneſs, and their thoughts accuſing or excuſing one another.] I begin with the firſt.

Propo-

Proposition I.

There is in every man a Conscience.

THere was a conscience in all these heathen in the Text; their consciences bearing them witness. There was a conscience in the Scribes and Pharisees; being convicted of their own consciences. There is a conscience in good men: as in Paul; Our rejoycing is this, the testimony of our conscience. There is a conscience in wicked men: their minde and conscience is defiled. As it is impossible the fire should be without heat, so it is impossible that any man should be without a conscience. Indeed we use to say, Such an one hath no conscience: but our meaning is, that he hath no good conscience. But every one hath a conscience, either good or bad. The Lord engraved conscience in man when he created him at first. True it is, since the fall of man conscience is miserably corrupted; but man can never put it off: Conscience continueth for ever in every man, whether he be in earth or heaven or hell. The most base and devilish profanelings in the world have a conscience: Let them choke it or smother it as much as they can, let them whore it, or game it, or drink it away, as much as they are able for their hearts, yet conscience will continue in spite of their teeth.

1. There is in every man a conscience. John 8. 9. 2 Cor. 1. 12. Tit. 1. 15.

1. No length of time can wear this conscience out. What made Josephs Brethren to remember the cruel usage they shewed him, but conscience? It was about twenty yeares before; yet they could not wear it out.

2. No violence nor force is able to suppresse conscience, but that one day or other it will shew it selfe. What made Judas go and carry back the mony that he betrayed our Saviour for, and also to cry out, I have sinned, but conscience? No question but he laboured to suppresse it; but he could not.

3. No greatnesse nor power is able to stifle conscience, but that it will one day like a band-dog flie in a sinners face. What made Pharaoh cry out, I am wicked, but conscience? He was a great King; and yet he was not able to over-power conscience.

4. No musick, mirth or jovializing can charme conscience, but it will play the devil to a wretched soul for all that. What was the evil spirit of melancholy that came upon Saul, but conscience? He thought to allay it with instruments of musick; but it still came again.

5. Death it selfe is not able to part conscience from a sinner. What is that worm that shall never die, but onely conscience? and in hell conscience is as that fire that never goeth out.

I confesse, some seem to have lost conscience quite: They can omit good duties as though they had no conscience at all: they can deferre repentance and turning to God, as though they had no more conscience than a beast: but one day conscience will appear, and shew plainly, that it was present with them every moment of their lives, and privy to all their thoughts, and all their wayes, and set before them all the things that they have done. Be men never so secure and senseless, and seared for the present, conscience will break out either first or last: Either here, or in hell it will appear to every man, That he hath, and ever had a conscience.

Now the reasons why the Lord did plant a conscience in every man living are; Reasons.

1. Because the Lord is a very righteous Judge: And as he commandeth earthly Judges not to judge without witnesse: so he himself will not judge 1.

A TREATISE OF CONSCIENCE.

ROM. 2. 15.

Which ſhew the work of the law written in their hearts, their conſciences alſo bearing them witneſſe, and their thoughts in the meanwhile accuſing or elſe excuſing one another.

What conſcience is.

Have ſhewed you, That every man is in an eſtate before God. And that hath made way now to a Treatiſe of Conſcience; which will ſhew us what eſtate we are in before God. I deſire to handle it common-place-wiſe: And firſt I will tell you in brief what the conſcience of everyman is. I ſay of every man: For Angels and devils have a conſcience too: ye may ſee it in the ſpeech of the Angel to John, when John would have worſhipped him, I am thy fellow-ſervant, ſaith he, ſee thou do it not. Mark; He had a conſcience that could ſay, I am a ſervant, and therefore muſt not take worſhip to me. So for the devils: When our Saviour bade them come forth of the poſſeſſed, they ſay, Art thou come to torment us before our time. See; they had a conſcience that told them there would be a time when they ſhould be further tormented. But I am not to ſpeak of ſuch conſciences, but of the conſcience of man. Now the conſcience of man is the judgement of man upon himſelf as he is ſubject to Gods judgement. Divines uſe to expreſſe it in this Syllogiſme, He that truly believeth in Chriſt ſhall be ſaved: My conſcience telleth me this is Gods word; But I believe truly in Chriſt: My conſcience telleth me this alſo; Therefore I ſhall be ſaved. And ſo alſo on the contrary ſide. So that conſcience is a mans true judgement of himſelfe: If we would judge our ſelves; that is If we would bring our ſelves before the tribunal of conſcience to receive its judgement.

Matth. 8. 29.

1 Cor. 11. 31.

Four Propoſitions.

Four Propoſitions are contained in that portion of Scripture which I have choſen to make the Subject of this enſuing Treatiſe, Rom. 2. 15.

1. That there is in every man a conſcience. [Their conſciences bearing them witneſs,] Every one of them had a conſcience bearing them witneſſe.

2. That the light which conſcience is directed to work by, is knowledge; [written in their hearts.]

3. That the bond that bindeth a mans conſcience, is Gods Law; [which ſhew the effect of the law written in their hearts.

4. That the office and duty of conſcience is to bear witneſs either with our ſelves or againſt our ſelves, accuſing or excuſing our ſelves or actions, [bearing witneſs, and their thoughts accuſing or excuſing one another.] I begin with the firſt Propo-

Propoſition I.

There is in every man a Conſcience.

THere was a conſcience in all theſe heathen in the Text; their conſciences bearing them witneſs. There was a conſcience in the Scribes and Phariſees; being convicted of their own conſciences. There is a conſcience in good men: as in Paul; Our rejoycing is this, the teſtimony of our conſcience. There is a conſcience in wicked men: their minde and conſcience is defiled. As it is impoſſible the fire ſhould be without heat, ſo it is impoſſible that any man ſhould be without a conſcience. Indeed we uſe to ſay, Such an one hath no conſcience: but our meaning is, that he hath no good conſcience. But every one hath a conſcience, either good or bad. The Lord engraved conſcience in man when he created him at firſt. True it is, ſince the fall of man conſcience is miſerably corrupted; but man can never put it off: Conſcience continueth for ever in every man, whether he be in earth or heaven or hell. The moſt baſe and deviliſh profanelings in the world have a conſcience: Let them choke it or ſmother it as much as they can, let them whore it, or game it, or drink it away, as much as they are able for their hearts, yet conſcience will continue in ſpite of their teeth.

1. There is in every man a conſcience. John 8. 9. 2 Cor. 1. 12. Tit. 1. 15.

1. No length of time can wear this conſcience out. What made Joſephs Brethren to remember the cruel uſage they ſhewed him, but conſcience? It was about twenty yeares before; yet they could not wear it out.

2. No violence nor force is able to ſuppreſſe conſcience, but that one day or other it will ſhew it ſelfe. What made Judas go and carry back the mony that he betrayed our Saviour for, and alſo to cry out, I have ſinned, but conſcience? No queſtion but he laboured to ſuppreſſe it; but he could not.

3. No greatneſſe nor power is able to ſtifle conſcience, but that it will one day like a band-dog flie in a ſinners face. What made Pharaoh cry out, I am wicked, but conſcience? He was a great King; and yet he was not able to over-power conſcience.

4. No muſick, mirth or jovializing can charme conſcience, but it will play the devil to a wretched ſoul for all that. What was the evil ſpirit of melancholy that came upon Saul, but conſcience? He thought to allay it with inſtruments of muſick; but it ſtill came again.

5. Death it ſelfe is not able to part conſcience from a ſinner. What is that worm that ſhall never die, but onely conſcience? and in hell conſcience is as that fire that never goeth out.

I confeſſe, ſome ſeem to have loſt conſcience quite: They can omit good duties as though they had no conſcience at all: they can deferre repentance and turning to God, as though they had no more conſcience than a beaſt: but one day conſcience will appear, and ſhew plainly, that it was preſent with them every moment of their lives, and privy to all their thoughts, and all their wayes, and ſet before them all the things that they have done. Be men never ſo ſecure and ſenſeleſſe, and ſeared for the preſent, conſcience will break out either firſt or laſt: Either here, or in hell it will appear to every man, That he hath, and ever had a conſcience.

Now the reaſons why the Lord did plant a conſcience in every man living are; Reaſons.

1. Becauſe the Lord is a very righteous Judge: And as he commandeth earthly Judges not to judge without witneſs: ſo he himſelf will not judge 1.

without witneſſe, and therefore he planteth a conſcience in every one to bring in evidence for him, or againſt him, at Gods tribunall.

2. 2. Becauſe the Lord is very mercifull. We are wonderous forgetfull and mindleſſe of God, and of our own ſouls, and have need to be quickned up to our duties: therefore the Lord hath given every one of us a conſcience to be a continual Monitour. Sometime we forget to pray, and then conſcience putteth us in minde to go to God: ſometime we are dull in the duty, and conſcience is as a prick to quicken us. Sometime our Paſſions are diſtempred, and then conſcience checketh and commandeth us to bridle them. We ſhould never be kept in any order, if it were not for conſcience. Therefore hath the Lord in mercy given us a conſcience.

Uſe 1. The firſt uſe is, to condemne that diabolical Proverb, common among men: Conſcience is hanged a great while ago. No, no; Achitophel may hang himſelfe, but he cannot hang his conſcience: Saul may kill himſelfe, but Mar. 9. 44. conſcience cannot be killed. It is a worme that never dieth. As the reaſonable ſoul of man is immortal, ſo conſcience alſo is immortal.

Uſe 2. Secondly, this condemneth ſuch as go about to ſuppreſſe conſcience: Their conſcience maketh them melancholick and dumpiſh now and then, and they go about to ſhake it off. Alas! why do ye go about that which is utterly impoſſible? Ye may ſuppreſſe it for a while, and gagge it for a while; but ye can never ſhake it off. Conſcience ſticketh ſo cloſe that a man may as ſoone ſhake off himſelfe as his conſcience. And indeed his conſci-

1 Cor. 11. 28. verſe 13. ence is himſelfe: Let a man examine himſelfe, that is, his conſcience. Judge in your ſelves, that is, Judge in your conſciences.

Uſe 3. Thirdly, this confuteth that drunken opinion, That conſcience is nothing but a preſent fit of melancholy. No; It cauſeth, it may be, the preſent melancholick fit, but it is not it. Conſcience is a ſtanding power in a man that is evermore with him, and will evermore judge him and condemn him if he be guilty before God. It will be with him when his dumpiſh fit is over. Let him laugh and be merry; yet conſcience lies at the bottome of all, and

Prov. 14. 13. will ſpoile all the mirth. Let the drunkard be never ſo joviall; I will not believe but conſcience in the midſt of that drunken mirth, cauſeth ſome ſadneſſe within, and telleth him, this is a very wicked life. Let the carnal hypocrite daub up the matter with good duties, and good prayers, and good hopes; I cannot believe but there is a conſcience lieth at the bottome and telleth him he is rotten for all this. You may ſee this in Cain: He had

Gen. 4. 5. been at a good duty, ſacrificing to the Lord; but his countenance fell when he had done, conſcience did lie at the bottome, and did tell him God did not accept him. Conſcience is with evil men at Church, at Sermon, at Sacrament, and telleth them ſecretly that they are not the perſons to whom the bleſſing of theſe Ordinances belong.

Uſe 4. Laſtly, this may be for exhortation to the godly; That they would conſider this, that they have ever a conſcience within them; and that therefore they would labour alwayes to keep it void of offence: which was Pauls exerciſe, Acts 24. 16. Take heed you offend not your conſciences in duties of piety towards God, in your prayings, hearings, &c. no not in your callings, eatings, drinkings, liberties, recreations: Look alwayes to your conſciences, that you offend them not, becauſe they are ever with you. When two live ever together, they had need not offend one another; elſe there will be no quiet: You and your conſciences muſt ever live together: if ye offend them, ye are like to have very ill lives. Better live with a curſt ſcold, then live with an offended conſcience: ye had better offend the whole world then offend Conſcience. There are none whom ye are alwayes to live with; but Conſcience ye are alwayes to live with. Ye are not alwayes to live with your husbands, nor alwayes with your wives, nor alwayes with your parents or masters; there is a time when you must part: but Conscience and you will never part: Therefore labour to keep it void of offence. And thus much of the first Proposition, There is in every man a conscience.

Proposition II.

The light that Conscience acteth by, is knowledge.

THis knowledge is twofold; 1. Of Gods law, 2. Of our selves. II Propo-

1. The knowledge of Gods Law. To know Gods will, what is good, what is bad; what God commandeth, what he forbiddeth. Every man under heaven hath this Law of God in some measure writ in his Conscience. I confesse, Gods children onely know Gods Law to purpose, as it is a light to guide them in the way of salvation: but all the world have some measure of knowledge, whereby they may gather that there is a God, and that he ought to be worshipped and obeyed, and that he hath power over life and death. All the world have knowledge in some measure what is good and what is not, what is to be done, and what not, what is according to Conscience and what not: All the world have this knowledge in some measure; I do not say, enough for salvation, but enough to make them inexcusable before God, for no following that light, and not living according to that knowledge which they have. If there were not some light in this behalf, some knowledge of the Law of God in every man, conscience could do nothing. tion.

2. Knowledge of our selves: This also is the light that Conscience acteth by. There is in every man some measure of knowledge of himselfe, according to the measure of knowledge that he hath of Gods Law. Our Consciences look backward and forward; forward to Gods Law, and backward on our selves, Whether we be such as Gods Law requireth, yea, or no. First, ye may finde this in good men. This light did the Conscience of David go by: I was upright before God, saith his Conscience, and I kept my selfe from mine own iniquity. His Conscience had a light whereby he knew what he did. Secondly, ye shall finde this in wicked men. This light the Conscience of Achan went by: I have sinned against the Lord God of Israel, and thus and thus have I done. Psal. 18. 23. Josh. 7. 20.

These are the two lights that every mans Conscience goes by: It hath light in some measure to know the Law of God, what he should do, and what he should not do; and it hath light in some measure to know himself, what he hath done or not done, whether he hath done as he should yea or no. Now these two lights are necessary; as thus I prove;

First, the knowledge of Gods Law is necessary, For else Conscience cannot work. A drunkard might be drunk every day in the yeare, and yet Conscience could not trouble him, nor condemn him of sin, unlesse he knew the Law, That God hath forbid drunkennesse. And so the swearer. And so evil words and bad thoughts Conscience cannot accuse for, unlesse there be so much light as to know they are forbidden. And therefore Divines do all say, that the Synteresis is necessary to the exercise of Conscience. The Synteresis is this: When a man keeps in his minde the knowledge of the things contained in Gods Law: namely, That we must obey God, honour our Parents, not commit adultery, not kill, not steal, not lye, not covet, &c. Unless the knowledge of these be kept in mind, Conscience cannot work. And therefore when we would stir a mans Conscience, we appeal to his knowledge; Know you not, that the unrighteous ſhall not inherit the Kingdome of God? As if he had ſaid, Your own conſciences may condemne you to the pit of hell if ye be unrighteous, becauſe your Syntereſis can tell you that the unrighteous ſhall not inherit the kingdome of God. This is the reaſon why we ſay, that there is a naturall conſcience, and there is an illuminated conſcience; becauſe ſome have no light, but onely the light of nature, ſome have beſides the light of Gods word; which ſheweth that which nature ſheweth, and much more clearly, and teacheth many things more which nature cannot teach: And hence the conſcience of the illightned condemneth for ſuch things as the natural conſcience never ſtirreth about.

1 Cor. 6. 9.

Secondly, the knowledge of our ſelves is needfull; elſe conſcience cannot act neither. Though we know what Gods Law requireth and what not, what is good and what not, yet unleſſe we know whether we go with it or againſt it, conſcience cannot accuſe nor excuſe. As for example; A cloſe hypocrite, he knoweth well enough that the Lord hath condemned hypocriſie, and that hypocrites muſt have their portion in hell: yet if he do not know himſelfe to be an hypocrite, his conſcience can never condemne him for being one. And therefore both theſe knowledges are neceſſary, as well the knowledge of a mans ſelfe as of Gods Law. Many who had a hand in crucifying our Saviour, ſinned grievouſly; yet they ſinned not againſt knowledge, becauſe they knew not what they did: Father forgive them, they know not what they do.

Luke 23. 34.

Thirdly, It is a contradiction to ſay, a blind conſcience in act. The conſcience cannot be blind, and yet actually condemne. Indeed the conſcience it ſelfe may be blind, but it can never act and be blind: If it truly accuſe or excuſe, it muſt have ſome light. It is true, it may erroneouſly excuſe or accuſe, and yet have no true light: Seeming light is enough to do that: ſeeming knowledge is enough to make conſcience erroneouſly excuſe: As they who killed the Apoſtles, their conſciences excuſed them, and told them they did God good ſervice: they ſeemed to know it was good ſervice to God, and therefore their conſciences excuſed them, &c. Thus ye ſee that the light that conſcience worketh by, is knowledge.

John 16. 2.

Uſe 1. The uſe of this point is firſt, to let us ſee the infinite neceſſity of knowledge. As good have no conſcience at all, as conſcience without knowledge: for it cannot act and performe its office. This is the reaſon why ſo many thouſands go on in their ſinnes without repentance, becauſe being ignorant they have no conſcience to prick them thereunto: as Jer. 8. 6. No man repenteth him of his wickedneſſe, ſaying, What have I done? Why, what was the reaſon that conſcience did not prick them, and ſay, This thou haſt done, and that; Thus ye have rebelled? &c. The text anſwereth in the next verſe, My people know not the judgement of the Lord. The Stork knoweth her time, and the Turtle, and the Swallow; but my people do not know their duties.

Uſe 2. Another uſe is, to exhort us that we would labour to perfect the light of conſcience, that it may be able to guide us, and direct us unto heaven. Our conſcience hath knowledge enough by the light of nature to make us inexcuſable, and to clear the juſtice of God, though he ſhould damne us for ever: but there muſt be a greater light than that, that muſt guide us to heaven. O let us pray to Chriſt the true light, to ſet up this light in us, that we may never be at a loſſe in our way to happineſſe, never ſtep out of the right path, but our conſcience may be able to put us in again; never go ſlowly, but our conſcience may ſpurre us on faſter; that our conſcience may not be like the ſnuff of a candle in a ſocket, that flameth up now and then, and then is dark again, and again it flameth out, and is dark again: A man may ſee his book by it, but he cannot ſee to read; he may ſee his pen and ink

by it, but he cannot see to write; a woman may see her needle and cloth by it, but she cannot see to work: so it is with some mens consciences: Their light is so dimme that they can see the duties, but they cannot see to do them; they can see the commandements of God, but they cannot see to obey them. O labour to perfect the light of your consciences, that ye may see to walk by them. And thus much also of the second Proposition, The light that conscience affeth by, is knowledge.

Now I should come to the third Proposition which, as I first propounded them, was this, The bond that bindeth conscience is Gods law: But I will now a little alter the method, and make the other which was propounded last to be the third in the handling; and it is this.

Proposition III.

The office of Conscience is to beare witnesse, to accuse or excuse.

III. Proposition. The office of Conscience is to bear witnesse.

Conscience is put into this office by God himselfe. It is Gods officer; Not only his Register-book that shall be opened at the day of judgement, wherein is set down our thoughts, words and deeds; but it is a preacher also to tell us our duty both towards God and towards man: yea, it is a powerful preacher; it exhorteth, urgeth, provoketh: yea, the most powerfull preacher that can be; it will cause the stoutest and stubbornest heart under heaven to quake now and then; it will never let us alone till it have brought us either to God, or to the devil. Conscience is joyned in commission with Gods own Spirit to be an instructour unto us in the way we should walke; so that the Spirit and it are resisted or obeyed together, grieved or delighted together: We cannot sinne against conscience, but we sinne also against Gods Spirit; we cannot check our own consciences, but we check and quench the holy Spirit of God.

The office of conscience to our selves is, to bear witnesse: My conscience beareth me witnesse, saith Paul. Conscience is alwayes ready to do this office, if it shall at any time be invited unto it: For conscience looketh sometimes for inviting; sometimes it will not bear witnesse unlesse we invite it and call upon it so to do. But there will come a time when it will do it, and must do it, and shall do it, namely at death or at judgement: then it will beare witnesse whether men invite it or no. Now it may be suppressed and silenced and kept under from witnessing; but then it must beare witnesse, and shall, either excusing or accusing, acquitting or condemning, when God shall judge the secrets of mens hearts, as the Apostle speaketh. Rom. 9. 1.

The properties that are given unto conscience in the discharge of its office are four: 1. It is supreme; 2. It is impartiall; 3. It is faithfull; 4. It is privy. Four Properties of Conscience.

1. It is supreme: It hath highest authority; it is the most uncontrollable and ablest witnesse that can be: the greatest, weightiest witnesse in the world; better then ten thousand witnesses. Though all the world do condemne us, yet if our own consciences do not, we need not feare: And so on the contrary, if conscience do condemn us, it will be small comfort though all the world flatter and commend and excuse us. It is a supreme witnesse: Though all the Angels in heaven should come and beare witnesse, their witnesse is not so uncontrollable as conscience is. There is no appealing from the witnesse of conscience; we must be tryed by it. If conscience do accuse and condemn us, the Lord onely is greater then our conscience, 1 John 3. 20.

3. 20. and will give judgement with it when it doth its office. And if our conscience do not condemne us, we may be confident to stand before all the Judges and Kings in the World, yea, we may have confidence towards God, saith the text. 2. And as conscience is supreme in bearing of witnesse, so also it is supreme in commanding. All the commands of it are powerfull and supreme: it will not be slighted: it bindeth Kings and Princes: Nay, though God himself command the contray, yet can we not disobey conscience without sin. By this it appeareth, that when conscience doth witness, its witness is supreme; when conscience commandeth, its command is supreme.

2. Conscience as it is supreme in witnessing or commanding, so it is impartial in judging. It respecteth no persons, no estates, but accuseth the richest as well as the poorest, the greatest as well as the meanest. It made great Belshazzar so to quake that the joynts of his loynes were loosed, and his knees smote one against another, Dan. 5. 6. It made great Felix to tremble to heare Paul speak of righteousnesse and of judgement. Felix thought to scare Paul; but conscience scared Felix. So on the other side, it is impartiall in excusing. It will give evidence of the good works of the poorest in the world, as well as of the wealthiest. Art thou never so meane? thy conscience will be as ready to excuse thee if thou hast done well, as if thou wert the greatest. It is impartiall in its office: Others, it may be, dare not or will not accuse, but conscience spareth none, no not it self: Though its accusations do load and burden and torment it selfe, yet it will do its office.

3. Conscience also is faithful in its office and sincere. It alwayes speaketh of us as it thinketh: It may be deceived and mistaken for a time, but it never speaketh contrary to what it thinketh: It is a faithfull and sincere witnesse of our thoughts, words, actions, and courses, whether they be good or evil, so farre as it is illightned by Gods word. It ever giveth evidence aright; it never flattereth nor condemneth any without a cause: It is a faithfull and a very upright witnesse. Others may dissemble with us, and commend us and applaud us when we are naught, and call us good men and good women when we are nothing so: but this will tell us plainly how vile and sinfull we are; and if we say we are good when we are not, it will tell us plainly we lye. He that saith I know him, and keepeth not his commandements, is a lyar. Mark; though he say it, yet his conscience giveth him the lye. It is faithfull again in excusing. It beareth witnesse of every good duty we performe, and of whatsoever good is in us. Though all Jobs friends spake evil of him, and God himselfe by his outward judgements seemed to condemn him for a wicked man, yet still his conscience (like a faithfull witnesse) did not forsake him, nay, it offered to reason with God himself, I would reason with God: I know I shall be justified, and I will never forsake mine innocency till I die. Still his conscience stood for him and excused him. Thus on both sides conscience is a faithfull and sincere witnesse: it will not be corrupted to speak otherwise then it knoweth the matter is.

1 John 2. 4.

4. It is most privy to what it doth witnesse. It is more privy to what we have done then all the world: It can say more for us or against us, then all the world. Thou knowest all the wickednesse that thy heart is privy unto, saith Solomon to Shimei, 1 Kings 2. 44.

Use. The use of all this is; Seeing conscience is so supreme, so impartiall, so faithfull, so privy, we should take heed how we do any thing that might give it advantage against us. If we were to appear before an earthly Judge to answer for our behaviour, and should have a companion present continually with us, marking every thing in us, telling us of every fault, and witnessing it against us unto the Judge, how carefull would we be of doing any thing that might give him advantage against us? Lo, we have conscience as a continual watch-man, espying out all our wayes, and setting down whatever ever we do amiſſe, checking us for it for the preſent, and one day accuſing us before God, and ſetting all things in order before our faces; Oh how ſhould we then labour to get into Chriſt Jeſus, that our conſciences may be purged in his blood, and ſtudy all our life long to keep peace and friendſhip with them. Wo be to them who live in their ſinnes! They will need no other witneſſe to come againſt them to condemne them for ever, but this witneſſe conſcience which lieth continually in their boſomes.

This I have ſpoken for the office of conſcience, which is to bear witneſs either with us or againſt us: Now the parts of this bearing witneſſe are, firſt, its ſingle witneſſing; ſecondly, its judiciall witneſſing. By ſingle bearing witneſſe I mean that conſcience beareth witneſſe what we have done, and what we do, and what we intend to do, and what we are: By judiciall bearing witneſſe I meane, that conſcience doth paſſe ſentence on the ſame whether it be good or evil, whether it be concerning the action or the perſon.

Firſt, therefore of the ſingle bearing witneſſe of conſcience: And that is about three things: 1. What we have done; 2. What we intend to do; 3. What is the frame and bent of our heart. Of conſcience's ſingle bearing witneſſe.

1. It beareth witneſſe what we have done; what in our childhood, what in our youth, what in our riper age, what openly, what ſecretly. Thoſe things which ſeeme to be forgotten, conſcience will remember them to us: Like a writing in Marble, though it may be filled and choked with duſt, and covered with rubbiſh, yet when that is done away, and the ſtone ſwept clean, then the writing will appear legible; ſo though mens deeds may for the preſent ſeeme to be forgotten, yet they are written in their hearts with a pen of iron, and the point of a diamond, as Origen obſerveth upon Jer. 17. 1. Now the thoughts and cares of this life put them out of our minds; but the time will come when all worldly buſineſſe ſhall ceaſe, and the onely buſineſſe ſhall be to look into the records of conſcience. We uſe to ſay, Conſcience hath a very good memory. The chief Butler had forgot his promiſe unto Joſeph; but his conſcience remembred him of it two years after: I remember my faults this day, ſaith his conſcience. Adonibezek had forgot his cruelty; but his conſcience brought it to his minde: As I have done, ſo God hath requited me, ſaith his conſcience. Gen. 41. 9. Judg. 1. 7.

2. Conſcience beareth witneſſe of what we intend and purpoſe to do, whether againſt God or man. It will teſtifie every purpoſe and project of the heart, though it be never acted, though it die in the heart and never come to light. Men little think of this: Tuſh (ſaith one) I never did ſuch a thing, though I once intended it, or had ſome thoughts about it. Mark; thoſe very thoughts will conſcience bring forth and teſtifie what they were. Heare the Apoſtle, In that day God ſhall judge the ſecrets of men, &c. The moſt hidden things Conſcience ſhall bring to light, and Chriſt ſhall judge them. Rom. 3. 16.

3. Conſcience beareth witneſſe of the bent and frame of our hearts, what we affect moſt and love moſt, and rejoyce and delight in moſt, and deſire moſt and grieve for moſt, what our affections runne upon moſt, whether upon God or the world, whether upon heaven or the things of this life. Conſcience bare witneſſe to David, that his delight was in the law of the Lord, that God was his portion, that Gods ſtatutes were his counſellours. Conſcience bare witneſſe to the falſe teachers in Chriſts time, that they affected vaine glory and the praiſe of men more then the praiſe of God. Conſcience bare witneſſe to Demas, that notwithſtanding his faire profeſſion, his heart was ſet upon the world. Conſcience bare witneſſe to Jehu, that for all his ſeeming zeale, his heart was not upright. Pſal. 119. 77.

Object. 1. Jer. 17. 9. But it may be objected, How can this be? The heart is deceitfull above all things: who can know it?

Answ. Who can know it? That is, Who else can know it but a man himselfe? None under God can know the heart of man, but a mans own conscience, the spirit of man that is in him. I confesse, a man may be ignorant of some secret and particular deceit in his heart: but who knoweth not the generall standing of his own heart? or may know the chief bent of his own soul.

Psal. 30. 6. David in a particular deceit was ignorant: I said in my prosperity, I shall never be moved, never distrust God more, never be disquieted in my minde more. He was deceived in that particular; but he knew very well, the generall and cheife bent of his heart, that it was truly set upon God, and upon holinesse. 2. It is true, many men take it that their hearts are set upon God when they are not: but what is the reason? Not because they do not or may not know the contrary, that they love the world most: but because they will not know it, they are unwilling to believe it, they are loth to have any bad conceit of themselves. So that when Jeremy saith; The heart is deceitfull above all things: who can know it? his meaning is, What carnall man can abide to know the worst of himselfe? 3. It is not because they know it not, but because they will not heare the testimony of conscience: but when it telleth them truly how the case is with them, they gather all the rotten and broken pieces of arguments together to stop the mouth of conscience, and to perswade themselves to think well of themselves. 4. Men seeme not to know their own hearts, not because they do not know what they are, but because they are ignorant of Gods law whereby they should judge of themselves. They know their hearts are set on the world, and that the bent and frame of their affections are placed on earthly things: but they hope an under-affection to God will be accepted, to love God in the second place will serve the turne. They know they are carnall; but they hope such carnallity may be in a man and yet he be right.

Object. 2. Yea, but a mans heart may say on the contrary side, that he loveth the world more then he loveth God, when he doth not: how then doth conscience bear right witnesse? I answer, Answ. This ariseth either from the strength of corruption, and weaknesse of grace: We look into our selves, and see our corruptions violent, and our love to God small; and so we are deceived, not seeing the radicall power of this love of God, which in regard of its virtue is stronger then the other: As a foole, if he should feele hot water, would conclude that there is no cold at all in it; whereas there is radicall cold in that water, such as will expell all that heat in a little space. Or else this ariseth from anguish of spirit, which so disturbeth the minde that it cannot see its owne condition nor be capable of the comforts belonging unto it; as it was with the Israelites, Exod. 6. 9. otherwise doubtlesse we may know our own hearts; and when our conscience beareth witnesse its witnesse is right.

Use 1. I. Use, of reproof to those who stand out against the witnesse of their Conscience, and like hard-hearted felons plead still, Not guilty, though never so much evidence come against them, though conscience oft tell them, this they have done, thus they do, such they are. Oh stop not your eares against Conscience; stand not out against it, but believe its testimony, and make use of it to repent of the evil it accuseth of, while mercy may be had, before God himself cometh and joyneth with conscience to condemn for ever.

Use 2. II. It serveth for singular encouragement to all to abound in good works. Conscience will beare witnesse of them all to our unspeakable comfort in the time of afflictions, yea at death and judgement. Job felt it a sweet thing to have conscience give in testimony of his integrity and uprightnesse:

When

When his friends proved miſerable comforters, and God himſelfe ſeemed to write bitter things againſt him, yet his conſcience witneſſed that he had been eyes to the blinde, and feet to the lame, he had fed the hungry, and clothed the naked, and comforted the fatherleſſe. There is not a good thing that ever we do, but conſcience will afford us the ſweetneſſe and comfort of it in our troubles: Remember, O Lord, ſaith Hezekiah, that I have walked before thee in truth and with a perfect heart. Iſa. 38. 3.

We have ſpoken of Conſciences ſingle bearing witneſſe: Now followeth its judiciall bearing witneſſe; which is when it paſſeth ſentence upon the morall of our actions, whether they be good or evil, whether bleſſed or curſed. This is performed by a Logicall diſcourſe, by way of reaſoning on this manner, The word ſaith, Whoſoever looketh on a woman to luſt after her, hath committed adultery in his heart: That is the ſyntereſis. Now the aſſumption; But I have had wanton eyes and luſtfull lookings after a woman: That is the ſingle bearing witneſſe of Conſcience. Therefore I have committed adultery in my heart: That is the judiciary ſentence of Conſcience which it paſſeth on a mans ſelfe. So againe; Whoſoever crucifieth the fleſh with the affections and luſts, he is in Chriſt: But, ſaith conſcience, I crucifie the fleſh with its affections and luſts; Therefore I am in Chriſt. Though there be not the forme of this diſcourſe in our conſciences, yet there is the force of it: for when conſcience doth judicially witneſſe againſt any man, or for any man, it doth it by the word, and proceedeth in the way which is propounded. 2. The judiciall bearing witneſſe of Conſcience.

The uſe of this is, Firſt for comfort to the godly, who may hence gather the aſſurance of their ſalvation from the rule of Gods word, and the witneſſe of their conſcience, that they walk by this rule. The word ſaith, He that hungreth and thirſteth after righteouſneſſe ſhall be filled; He that doeth theſe things ſhall never fall, &c. Get the rule of your hearts and lives to meet, and ye have what ye deſire. O what infinite mercy is this to all godly ſoules, that the Lord hath planted this Conſcience in their boſomes, that they need not go farre for their comfort: their own conſciences and the rule, may preach it to them. Uſe 1. Matth. 5. 6. 1 Pet. 1. 10.

Secondly, The wicked on the other ſide, if they continue as they are, may hence gather arguments for their own damnation. If the rule and conſcience might be heard, they would ſpeak bitter things againſt them, and give a fearfull ſentence on them. It may be they can ſmother their conſciences now for a time; but they will one day read them a fearefull lecture. I ſpeak not now onely of thoſe who drown their Conſciences in their Cups, and ſear their conſciences by their groſſe ſinnes; but of thoſe who would ſeeme godly, and performe good duties, but with hypocriticall hearts and carnall mindes. O that they would heare but Conſcience argue a little in this manner; To be carnally-minded is death, that is, is an evident ſigne of a man that is in the ſtate of death and damnation; But, ſaith Conſcience, I am carnally-minded; or we are carnally-minded: Therefore we have an argument about us of death and damnation. And ſo alſo for all other ſinnes; There is not a wicked man under Heaven, but he may argue out of his own miſerable eſtate by his conſcience, or he might, if it were awaked, as one day it will be. Uſe 2.

Thirdly, this may ſerve for inſtruction. No matter what opinions men have of us in the world: The queſtion is, What is the judgement of our own conſciences upon us? It may be thou art taken for a man of great knowledge, and a forward man in godlineſſe; it may be the godly dare not judge otherwiſe of thee: but the queſtion is, What is the judgement of conſcience? Doth not thy conſcience tell thee thou art but a proud foole, conceited of thy knowledge, and loveſt to heare thy ſelf talk? And ſo for thy Uſe 3.

performance of good duties; what teſtimony doth Conſcience give of the 2 Cor. 1. 12. manner of doing of them? The teſtimoniall of Conſcience is above all teſtimonials in the world: all the good opinions of the world are not worth a ruſh without this: if Conſcience can ſay, that in our wayes we ſeek to pleaſe God, and allow not our ſelves in any evil way, this teſtimony is full and ſatisfactory, and onely this.

Yet further concerning this judicial witneſs of Conſcience: It is either about things to be done or omitted, or things already done or omitted. The judicial witneſſe of Conſcience about things to be done or omitted is double: 1. To judge out of Gods Law whether it be good or evil. 2. To counſel out of our own judgements, either to do it or forbear it, according as the nature of the action is: If it be good, Conſcience will counſel us to do it; if bad, to forbear it. The judiciall witneſſe of Conſcience about things already done is fourfold: 1. To approve; 2. To abſolve; 3. To miſlike; 4. To condemne. I begin with the firſt, the judiciall witneſſe of Conſcience about things to be done or omitted: where I ſhall conſider, firſt, the Office of Conſcience in this behalfe, viz. 1. To judge. 2. To counſel: and then the Adjuncts of Conſcience in diſcharging this office.

1. Conſcience judgeth. 1. Conſcience judgeth of the thing to be done, whether it be good or evil, lawfull or unlawfull. As we try the weight of gold by a paire of balances, ſo Conſcience trieth all our actions by Gods word. It is the Oracle of God: As the Jews went to Gods Oracle to enquire of the Lord, ſo our Conſcience is Gods Oracle to enquire of, and to determine of things, whether they be good or evil: It is a judge in the boſome. When the queſtion in Corinth was, whether women ſhould be uncovered when they pray, the 1 Cor. 11. 13. Apoſtle ſendeth them to Conſcience for judgement, Judge in your ſelves, ſaith he, whether it be comely or no; that is, Put it to the judgement of your own Conſciences. So ſay the Diſciples to the Jews, Whether it be better to obey God or man, judge ye; Put it to your own Conſciences. Thus ye ſee it is the office of Conſcience to judge of an action to be done, whether it be good or bad, lawfull or unlawfull.

2. Conſcience counſelleth. 2. The ſecond office of Conſcience is to counſel for the doing of that which is good, and forbearing of that which is evil. This is that faithfull friend in our boſome, that voice within us and behinde us, ſaying, This is the
Iſa. 30. 21. way, walke in it. Mark the words there; ye ſee theſe two offices of Conſcience. This is the way; there is the judgement of Conſcience: and walke in it: there is the counſel of Conſcience. Nay Conſcience doth not onely give good counſel, but if it have leave, it will bring arguments to perſwade to follow it: it will tell us the thing is well-pleaſing to God, of good report, that which will bring peace to our hearts. And ſo on the contrary, if it be evil, Conſcience will counſel us to forbear, yea bring arguments to diſſwade; O do it not; it will tend to the diſhonour of God, and be offenſive to others, and wound our ſouls, &c. It was Conſcience that withheld David from killing
1 Sam. 24. 10. Saul, and preſt him from it by a ſtrong argument, O he is the Lords Anoynted. It was Conſcience that withheld Joſeph from yeelding to the enticings of his Miſtriſſe, and yeelded him an argument to diſſwade him from it, How ſhall I do this great wickedneſſe, and ſo ſinne againſt God? It was Con-
Nehem. 6. 11. ſcience that diſſwaded Nehemiah from flying; ſhould ſuch a man as I flie? And if one argument will not ſerve, Conſcience will uſe more.

Uſe 1. The uſe of this may be firſt for Inſtruction. Hence we learne that natural men may have a Conſcience urging to good, and reſtraining from evil. There is no man ſo evil or ignorant, but he hath naturally ſome light with him by which Conſcience is ſet on work to adviſe, and to counſel, and to ſay, This is very good; do it: This is very ſinful, forbear it. This therefore is no ſigne of grace in any man, to have his Conſcience calling upon him to do good or diſſwading him from evil: The very heathen had ſo according to their light; yea and in many of them it was forcible to reſtrain them from many ſins which they were inclined unto. And ſo may many men be put upon many good duties, not for any love or liking of that which is good, but becauſe they would pleaſe and ſatisfie Conſcience, which otherwiſe will not ſuffer them to be quiet. It was Conſcience that kept Abimelech from defiling Sarah, and yet a carnal man.

Here then a queſtion may be asked, Whether a mere natural man can avoid ſin for Conſcience ſake. Object.

I anſwer, That this expreſſion, for conſcience ſake, may be taken two waves: 1. For Conſcience of the commandment of God and love to it; and ſo none but Gods children do obey for Conſcience ſake: and ſo it is meant when Paul ſpeaketh of being ſubject for conſcience ſake, and Peter ſpeaketh of ſuffering wrong for conſcience ſake. Or ſecondly, for conſcience ſake, that is, when Conſcience it ſelfe inforced by fear compelleth one to do a thing or not to do it: As we ſay, My conſcience will not ſuffer me. Thus carnall men come to Church for Conſcience ſake, &c. that is, Their Conſcience driveth them to theſe duties, and will not be quiet without they performe them. Anſw. Rom. 13. 5. 1 Pet. 2. 9.

Secondly, Sith a mere nattral man may have a Conſcience ſtirring him up to good, as well as the truly godly, it will not be amiſſe to give you the difference. The difference is in three things; Uſe 2.

1. A godly mans Conſcience ſmiteth him and ſtirreth him very kindly, ſo that he melteth before God. When David had numbred the people, the text ſaith, his heart ſmote him. The word ſignifieth, it ſmote him kindly, gave him a loving blow, made him ſpread forth himſelfe before God. A wicked mans conſcience giveth him a dead blow, a churliſh and ſullen blow. 1 Sam. 24. 10.

2. A godly mans Conſcience ſtirreth him reciprocally: He ſtirreth up his Conſcience, and his Conſcience ſtirreth up him; he ſpeaketh to his Conſcience, and his Conſcience ſpeaketh to him: The ſtirring is reciprocall; Commune with your own hearts. What haſt thou done, O my ſoul? Thus and thus have I done, ſaith the ſoul. Whereas a wicked mans Conſcience ſpeaketh to him, but he cannot endure to ſpeak to his Conſcience: his Conſcience ſtirreth him, but he hath no will to ſtirre his Conſcience; nay, he doth all he can to keep it quiet: But the godly as his Conſcience ſmiteth him, ſo he ſmiteth upon his Conſcience: I ſmote upon my thigh, ſaith Ephraim. The godly, when Conſcience ſtirreth them, they ſtirre it and provoke it to ſpeak out all it hath to ſay. Commune with your own heart, and be ſtill: They are ſtill to give it full audience, and call upon it to ſpeak on; What haſt thou more to ſay Conſcience? Pſal. 4. 4. Jer. 31. 19.

3. A godly mans Conſcience ſtirreth him to good; and he is reſolved to go to the utmoſt of what Conſcience ſtirreth him unto: that with Job, his conſcience may not reproach him all his dayes for not following it: Whereas it is otherwiſe with the wicked. Job 27. 6.

3. The third uſe is this; Seeing Conſcience is appointed by God to be our guide and our counſellour, it ſhould be our practice in every thing we do, to ask counſel of Conſcience whether we were beſt do it or no. I ſay, that Conſcience is Gods Oracle: Whatſoever we are to do, we ſhould (as David) enquire of Gods Oracle, May I go this way to work, or ſhall I take another courſe? Heare counſel and receive inſtruction, ſaith Solomon, that thou mayeſt be wiſe at thy latter end. Conſcience is a faithfull Counſellour; hear it. It is the great mercy of God that thou haſt ſuch a privy counſel: Thou canſt go no where but it is about thee to adviſe thee. Therefore as Rehoboam ſaid to his green heads, What counſel give you? ſo ſay thou to thy Conſcience, What advice giveſt thou Conſcience, in this caſe? my carnall Uſe 3. 1 Sam. 23. 2. Prov. 19. 20.

friends counsel me thus and thus; mine own carnall heart and lusts would have me go this way: but, Conscience, what counsel giveſt thou?

Use 4. 4. The fourth uſe is to reprove the cuſtome of moſt men, who with Ahab refuſe the counſel of that one true wholeſome Prophet, and have four hundred other Counſellours who will give counſel as they would have it: They regard not this good Michaiah; they ſlight the counſel of conſcience; their luſts and their carnall reaſon, and fleſh and blood are their counſelours; The counſel of conſcience, they ſay, is not good at this time; as he ſaid of Achitophels: They will heare conſcience at another time, but not now. But take heed; for if you reject the counſel of conſcience, it is becauſe the Lord hath a purpoſe to deſtroy you.

The Adjuncts of Conſcience, which ſhew themſelves in the diſcharge of this duty of judging and counſelling.

The adjuncts of conſcience. THe adjuncts are of two ſorts: 1. ſuch as reſpect conſciences ability to diſcharge its duty; 2. ſuch as accompany conſcience in the diſcharge thereof.

Of the former ſort are four:
1. An illightened Conſcience.
2. An erroneous Conſcience.
3. A doubting Conſcience.
4. A ſcrupulous Conſcience.

Of the latter ſort are two:
1. A faithfull Conſcience.
2. An unfaithfull Conſcience.

1. An illightened conſcience. Firſt, the illightened conſcience is ſuch a conſcience as is in it ſelfe rightly informed by Gods law, and doth direct and judge aright in matters both concerning our generall and particular calling, both towards God and towards man. And this illightened Conſcience is a great bleſſing of God: 1. becauſe it is the proper effect of the law of God; 2. becauſe it is a very great advantage to a man in the whole courſe of his life, when a mans conſcience is illightened to direct him in every caſe what he is to do.

Uſe 1. If an illightened conſcience be ſo great a bleſſing, then be thankfull to God for it if ye have it, and uſe it as a bleſſing. Some have it, and uſe it not as a bleſſing: The devils have it as a curſe; many wicked men have it as a curſe: It maketh their ſinnes the greater. Like as a colour, the more light ſhineth upon it the greater it is, green is more green, and white is more white, and red more red, &c. So it is with ſinne: the more light the conſcience hath, the greater is thy ſinne; thy drunkenneſſe is more heinous, and thy ſwearing, and the like, by how much committed againſt more light. Oh therefore make uſe of the light of thy conſcience, as David did: Pſal. 119. 105. Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my paths; What followeth? I have ſworne, and I will perform it, to keep thy righteous judgements. Mark; when his conſcience was illightened, he bound himſelfe to follow the directions thereof.

Uſe 2. 2. Is an illightened conſcience ſuch a bleſſing? O labour to get it; be not without it for a world. Thou wert better walk blindfold over narrow bridges and planks, better walk in the darke through a place full of downfalls and marle-pits, then walke without a conſcience illightened. He who walketh in the darkneſſe knoweth not whither he goeth, John 12. 35. O labour therefore to get a conſcience illightened. It is true, a man may have an illightened conſcience, and yet go to hell: but this is moſt certain; without an illighteillightened conscience a man cannot go to heaven. And if thy conscience be something illightened, yet labour for more light. It will prevent many a stumble, save thee from many a knock. Thou knowest not what case thou mayst be in, what difficult straits thou mayest be put unto: if thou hast not light in thy conscience to direct thee, what wilt thou do?

II. An erroneous Conscience.

2. An erroneous conscience.

SEcondly, an erroneous conscience is, when conscience not understanding Gods law, or misapplying it, doth judge amisse and direct amisse. So Josephs conscience for a while was in an errour when Mary was found with child: His conscience informed him that he must either make her a publik example or put her away privily. Here his conscience erred about this particular, untill the Angel had better informed him. There is a question here raised by Divines, and it is, Whether we ought to follow conscience erring or no? A question very necessary to be handled, partly because of mens ignorance in this kinde, and partly because of the frequency of the case. I answer thus;

Matth. 1. 19.

Quest.

Answ. First, we must not obey conscience erring or counselling to that which is evil; For our errour of conscience doth not make the transgression of the law to be no sinne; though an erroneous conscience lead us to transgresse it. 1. Because the law of God is above conscience; and therefore the commandment of Gods law standeth in full force though conscience command contrary to it. Suppose a man should think in his conscience he might not take an oath though never so lawfully called thereunto by the Magistrate, and in never so necessary a case, when as the word of God commandeth us to swear in truth, in righteousnesse, and in judgement; I must follow the commandment of God rather then conscience, because Gods law is above conscience. 2. Because if I follow my conscience when it is in an errour, I offend not onely against Gods law, but I offend also my conscience: For though for the present while conscience is erroneous it doth not take offence, yet when it cometh to see its own errour, then it will. Therefore this is our first answer, We must not obey conscience erring, or counselling to that which is evil. If our conscience should counsell us to tell a lye to help our neighbour, that is evil and against Gods law; and therefore if in doing it we do obey conscience, we sinne.

Secondly, we answer, That an erroneous conscience whatever it commandeth (though the law of God commandeth the clean contrary) yet we cannot disobey it without sinne. For this is is a constant rule; We alwayes sinne when we disobey conscience: If conscience erre not, then in disobeying it we sinne double, against the law and against conscience: if conscience do erre and we disobey it, we sinne too; for though we do not sin against the law, yet we sin against conscience, and so against the law too; not as though we were bound to obey conscience when it erreth, and yet sin if we disobey it.

Thirdly, Albeit it be alwayes a sinne to disobey conscience though it erre, yet it is not alwayes a sinne to obey conscience when it erreth. Let us consider three Propositions, and you shall see what I meane. First, If conscience think that to be commanded which is absolutely forbidden, or that to be forbidden which is expresly commanded, then we sinne which side soever we take: As if an ignorant man thinks in his conscience that he is bound to pray to Saints departed, which thing the Lord hath expressely forbidden bidden: if this man do pray unto Saints, he sinneth, because the Lord hath expressely forbid him to do it; if he do not pray unto Saints, he sinneth too, because his conscience telleth him he is commanded to pray unto them. The second Proposition is this, If conscience hold a thing indifferent to do or not to do, which yet is not indifferent, but absolutely commanded, then it is alwayes a sinne not to do it, but it is no sin to do it. The third Propositon is this, If conscience hold a thing necessary which God hath left indifferent, as if a man in conscience thought that he ought to pray four times a day (which thing yet God hath left indifferent) in this he is bound to obey conscience though it erre. And it is no sin to obey conscience thus erring; though it be a sin in conscience thus to erre.

Use 1. The use of this is, I. To let us see what a sacred sovereigne thing a mans conscience is. It is alwayes a sin to disobey conscience whether it erre or no, as it is alwayes a sin to disobey God. A man can never go against his conscience but he sinneth. 1. Because conscience is our guide: It is our inward and our inseparable guide; we can never come by any direction but by conscience; we can never let in the commandment of God, but onely by conscience: and therefore the Lord hath made it a very sovereigne thing. 2. Because we break a commandment through the loyns of a sin, when we go against conscience. Ajax light upon a beast and slew it: his conscience thought verily it was a man; Kill it not, saith conscience, it is a man: he goeth against his conscience and killeth it. His conscience here was in an errour, yet he as truly guilty of murder before God, as if he had indeed slain a man, because he slew a man through the loyns of this beast: His bloody minde looked at a man, and smote at a man, and slew a man. So when conscience is erroneous, and thinketh this is a commandment of God; it is not so, but he thinketh it so in his conscience; if he do contrary, he breaketh a commandement though it be none, because the errour of his conscience made it one to him. Was not Herod truly guilty of the murder of Christ? He thought in his conscience that Christ had been among the Infants slaine at Bethlehem. Thus conscience is a sovereigne thing: It is alwayes a sin to go against it, erre or not erre: and if it be a sin to go against conscience when it erreth, what a sin is it to go against it when it doth not erre?

Use 2. II. This may serve for a word of exhortation, to exhort men to beware lest they sin against conscience; especially when conscience is in the right. Conscience is as Gods face in a man: when conscience looketh on thee, the Lord looketh on thee. It is true, the Lord looketh on thee alwayes: but thou mayest see the Lords looking upon thee when conscience looketh on thee: And therefore thou never sinnest against conscience, but thou provokest the Lord to his face, when not onely God seeth thee, but thou seest him. Thy conscience sheweth thee the Lord; it presenteth God before thine eyes, commanding or forbidding, Wilt thou do the evil now? Wilt thou omit the good duty now? When conscience findeth fault, thou dost now provoke the Lord to his face. If it be such a sinne to sinne against conscience in an errour, it is much more a sinne to sinne against conscience, it being in the right. Thus much of a conscience erring.

III. A

III. A Doubting Conſcience.

A Doubting Conſcience is ſuch a Conſcience as ſo hangeth in ſuſpenſe that it knoweth not which way to take: it knoweth not which is the ſinne and which not. If it goes this way to work, It may be I ſhall ſinne, ſaith Conſcience: if that way, It may be I ſhall ſinne too, ſaith Conſcience. Such a man ſinneth which way ſoever he taketh. The reaſon is this, becauſe he doubteth. He that doubteth is condemned if he eat, ſaith the Apoſtle: for whatſoever is not of faith is ſinne. Suppoſe a man doubteth whether it be lawfull for him to do ſuch a thing, and doubting alſo whether he may lawfully omit the doing it; in ſuch a caſe, whether he do it or not do it he ſinneth, becauſe both wayes he doubteth. Yet here theſe rules are very uſefull; 3. A doubting conſcience. Rom. 14.23.

1. Rule; When Conſcience doubteth on the one part, and is reſolved on the other, we muſt refuſe the doubting part, and take that wherein we are certain and ſure. As for example; When one doubteth of the lawfulneſſe of playing at Cards and Dice; he is ſure it is no ſinne not to play, but whether he may lawfully play he doubteth: in this caſe he is bound not to play. So when one doubteth whether it be a ſinne not to call his family together every day to prayer; Gods Miniſters tell him he muſt or he ſinneth: I doubt of that, ſaith he. Do you ſo? but you are ſure it is no ſinne to do it: Therefore you are bound to do it, becauſe you are bound to decline the doubtfull part, and take that which is certain. And ſo of all other the like particulars. Rule 1.

2. When Conſcience doubteth on both ſides, which is the ſinne and which not, then a man ought to do that which is moſt void of offence. As for example; Say an Anabaptiſt among us doubteth whether it be a ſinne in him to bring his childe to Church to be baptized, or a ſinne to refuſe; here his rule is, That that which is moſt void of offence, and moſt agreeable to brotherly unity and concord, is to be taken, the balance hanging otherwiſe even; and the arguments to urge both the one or the other ſeeming of like weight, then this muſt be put into the ſcale and reſolve the doubt. Rule 2.

3. It is lawfull to do ſome things when yet our Conſcience doubteth of the lawfulneſſe of them. For we muſt conſider there are two kinds of doubting: there is a ſpeculative doubting, and there is a practicall doubting. Speculative doubting is to doubt of the lawfulneſſe of the thing it ſelfe to be done: Practical doubting is to doubt of the lawfulneſſe of the doing of it. Now this latter is not alwayes a ſin, but the other is: As for example; If a ſervant be commanded of his Maſter to attend on him on the Lords day, he knoweth not what his buſineſſe ſhould be, and perhaps doubteth it is not of ſuch moment as to be done on that day; yet he hath no reaſon to deny his attendance: in this caſe though he doubt of the lawfulneſſe of the thing done, yet he need not doubt of the doing of it, becauſe he knoweth not what the buſineſſe is, and hath no reaſon whereby he is able to juſtifie his refuſall. And ſo much alſo of a doubting Conſcience. Rule 3.

IV. A Scrupulous Conſcience.

THe difference between a doubting Conſcience and a ſcrupulous Conſcience is this; A doubtful Conſcience hangeth in ſuſpence, and doubteth which is the ſin, and which is lawfull; but a ſcrupulous Conſcience inclineth to the lawfulneſſe of the thing to be done, but yet not without many doubts ſcruples, becauſe of ſome difficulties which it hath heard of, and 4. A ſcrupulous conſcience.

which it knoweth not how to answer or resolve. The rule which here we must go by is this; When we incline to the lawfulnesse of the thing, we should labour to suppresse all difficulties and ambiguities which cause us to doubt. The Apostle includeth this rule in that word fully; Let every man be fully perswaded in his heart: Get all difficulties removed, all stumbling, and stickings, and hoverings, and scruples taken away.

Quest. But how if that cannot be done? how if we cannot get all scruples removed?

Answ. If that cannot be done, then it is lawfull to follow Conscience notwithstanding the doubts and scruples of it. Observe that place well, Deut. 13. 1. &c. the Lord commandeth, if a false Prophet should come amongst them to draw them from the truth, and should shew a signe or miracle to confirme his doctrine, and the signe should come to passe (which might put doubts and scruples into their consciences) nevertheless conscience inclining to the truth, they are bound to stand to that: for these doubts and scruples do not argue a want of faith, but onely a weaknesse of it.

Deut. 13. 1, 2, 3, 4.

Use 1. I. This sheweth what need we have to labour to have our consciences rightly informed. It is a comfortable thing for a Christian to have his conscience so fully illightened as that he can without doubting or scruple discharge the duties both of his generall and particular Calling: And it is a great disturbance to a Christians minde, when his conscience is so weak and ignorant that he cannot performe his duties without doubts and scruples whether he is right or no, especially in matters of greatest moment. It is a great misery to have our consciences blind, which should be our guide, and which it is a sinne to disobey. This is the reason why S. Paul doth so often speak, I would not have you ignorant, 1 Cor. 10. 1. and 11. 3. It is a very great misery that ones conscience should be ignorant what to do, what to hold, what to follow: I say it is a lamentable misery, that many who have followed the directions of conscience, should by it be led to death and damnation, to do things contrary to Gods word. What a misery was it for the Jewes to have zeal and not according to knowledge? &c.

Use 2. II. This should teach us to use the meanes truly to informe Conscience.

Prov. 19 1. Without knowledge the heart is not good; that is, it is most profane. There be three means to get knowledge. 1. Let us pray unto God that he would open our understandings; that as he hath given us Consciences to guide us, so also he would give our guids eyes that they may be able to direct us aright. The truth is, it is God onely that can soundly illighten our Consciences: and therefore let us pray unto him to do it. All our studying, and reading, and hearing, and conferring, will never be able to do it: it is onely in the power of him who made us to do it. Thy hands have made and fashioned me: O give me understanding, that I may learn thy Commandments. He who made our Consciences, he onely can give them this heavenly light of true knowledge, and right understanding: and therefore let us seek earnestly to him for it. 2. We must seek it in humility, alwayes suspecting our own knowledge. We are not too confidently and presumptuously to trust to our own judgement, and despise or neglect the judgement of others. The humble God will teach: Pride and selfe-conceitednesse blindeth exceedingly. 3. We must seek with sobriety, alwayes contenting our selves with that knowledge which is most necessary, and not be curious about vain and idle-brained questions, or solicitous to answer every objection that shall be raised up against the truth. A lover of the truth should not be ready to entertaine all objections against it, and never be settled till he can answer all that can be cast in; which will be never. It is not expected that there should be in every man such a ripenesse of judgement and such a measure of illumination as that he should be able to dispute with the most learned, or answer every objection that can be raised: But we must with that good Martyr say, Though I cannot dispute for Christ, I can die for him: We must be content with our measure, to be wise unto sobriety.

III. Those godly souls that have weak consciences must use them very gently: Scrupulosi non sunt rudgide tractandi, Those that are scrupulous are not to be handled rigidly. When a mote is in the eye, it is not boistrously to be dealt withal; that will make it worse. The eye is a tender part, and so is the conscience. Again, we must take heed of offending weak consciences. It may be thou knowest thine own liberty, that thou mayst do this or that; but thy brother is weak, and he doth not know it to be lawfull: O take heed of giving offence: Consider the Apostles words, 1 Cor. 8. 12. When ye sinne against your brethren, and wound their weak consciences, ye sinne against Christ. Consider also the practice of the Apostle, and the resolution that he had; If meat offend my brother, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, vers. 13. It is a grievous offence to offend the conscience of the weak; and therefore beware of it. They are very unchristian speeches, I know mine own liberty: If others be offended, what care I? why should I prejudice my selfe for them? It is true, another mans conscience cannot abridge me of my liberty: but yet I in charity ought to suspend the act of my liberty, when I know the using it will give offence to the weak. Use 3. Antonius.

IV. To admonish our selves, if conscience be so tender a thing, to be carefull that we offend not our own consciences. Conscience is quickly offended; but it is not so soon pacified. Every notorious step into evil, or neglect in duty, offendeth conscience; and conscience will keep a grudge a long time, and will give many a secret wound, deading the heart to duty, making faith and confidence in God dull: we cannot pray with courage, nor come before God with boldnesse. If our hearts condemn us not, we have confidence, saith John. 1 John 3. 21. An erroneous conscience will defile you; a doubting conscience distract you; a scrupulous conscience unsettle you: but above all other, an illightened conscience, if it have any thing against you, will exceedingly disable you; this stabbeth at the heart your confidence towards God. Go then and labour to purge conscience, else conscience will hinder you; whether you pray, or heare, or receive the Sacrament, &c. it will deprive you of comfort. If thou bring thy gift to the Altar, and there remembrest that thy brother hath ought against thee, leave there thy gift before the altar: first go and be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift. Matth. 5. 23. The case is greater and more dangerous when conscience hath something against us: there is no offering will be accepted untill conscience be satisfied. If thou shouldst be about to pray, and conscience should stand up against thee as an adversary, and tell thee thou hast been vain, and loose, and carnal all this day, thou hast not set thy selfe to keep close to God this day, thou hast fallen into this and that sinne this day; thou art not fit to pray till thou hast reconciled thy self to conscience: Alas, thy conscience will secretly undermine all thy praying. First, therefore reconcile conscience by humbling thy selfe, and breaking thy heart, and resolving, I have sinned, I will do no more. When conscience can say thy sorrow, and repentance, and resolution for new obedience is sincere, then thou art fit to pray, but not before. So whatever other duty thou goest about, be sure to reconcile conscience; else all will miscarry. Use 4.

V. A faithfull Conscience.

THus I have expounded the adjuncts of conscience which shew themselves in the discharge of its duty, namely, such as respect conscience's ability to the doing of it: Which, as ye have heard, are four: 1. An illightened conscience; 2. An erroneous conscience; 3. A doubting conscience; 4. A scrupulous conscience. Now followeth those which do accompany it in the doing of its duty: And they are two: 1. A faithfull conscience; 2. An unfaithfull conscience.

1. A faithfull conscience.

A faithfull conscience is that which doth alwayes advise and counsel aright when need is. This is a very rare conscience: It is rare to finde a conscience every way faithfull. For, to say the truth, conscience is alwayes faithfull in it selfe; for it knoweth not how to deale deceitfully with any man: but yet I may say as Solomon, A faithfull man who can finde? so, A faithfull conscience who can finde? It is a very rare thing. Not for any deceit that is in Conscience it self, but because men commonly would have it unfaithfull; therefore a conscience that will not let men make it unfaithfull though they would, such a conscience I call a faithfull conscience: and I say it is rare. But such a conscience there is; and it hath three Properties: 1. It is watchfull; 2. It is rigid and severe; 3. It is importunate.

Properties: 1. It is watchfull.

1. A faithfull conscience is watchfull, alwayes awake to apprehend every opportunity of doing and receiving good, or resisting evil. A when there is an opportunity to pray, to heare, to shew mercy, a faithfull conscience will remember us of it, and put us upon it; as also when there is any opportunity of quickning and edifying our selves or others. It was a watchfull conscience that made David say, I will never forget thy preceps: that is, I will never omit any opportunity to remember them to do them. It was a watchfull conscience that made Paul say, I became all things to all men, that by all means I might save some; that is, by taking all opportunities and advantages to do good. It was a watchfull conscience that made Peter say, I will not be negligent to put you alwayes in remembrance of these things; that is, I will neglect no opportunity. Again, a watchfull Conscience taketh notice of every motion and inclination to evil: it is awake to see when evil is conceived; to tell us of it, to oppose it, and to dissuade us from it: like a watchman on the top of a tower alwayes awake to see when any danger approacheth. It is Gods Minister with eyes on every side, to espy seasons of good, and stir up to make use of them; and of evil, and give warning to avoid them.

1 Cor. 9. 22.

2 Pet. 1. 12.

2. It is severe.

2. As a faithfull Conscience is watchfull, so also it is rigid and severe. In every cause it delivereth its judgement: nothing can escape its sentence: it will not favour our lusts in any particular. If there be any opportunity of duty to God or man, it maketh us to heare of it; though it be such a duty as none other will call upon us for, or it may be dare not put us in minde of; as of love, and care, and help towards inferiours; yet Conscience will: It titheth mint and cummin, and will tell us of the least duty. And so on the other side, it will not swallow the least sinne. As it will not swallow a camel, so it will straine at a gnat. A faithfull Conscience is faithfull in the least. If David sinne but in the lap of a garment, conscience smiteth him for it. It made Abraham so precise to a thread or a shoe-latchet; he would not take so much as that of the King of Sodom. It made Moses strict to a very hoof: It made Paul finde fault with the Corinthians about their hair: It made Augustine condemne himselfe for an apple.

Luke 16. 10.

2. It is importunate.

3. As a faithfull Conscience is watchfull and severe, so also it is importunate in all its counsels. It doth not onely deliver its judgement, but doth with importunity urge the following of its counsel. It will have no nay, but will be obeyed. It leadeth us bound in the spirit to do it; as Paul said, I go bound in the spirit. See how importunate this faithfull conscience was with the Psalmist: I will not give sleep to mine eyes, nor slumber to mine eye-lids, until I finde out a place for the Lord. It will not take any nay, say we what we will: say we be sleepy, say we be busie, say we be loth and full of excuse, it will be importunate, and that with vehemency. It will follow a man, if he will not hear it, with a Hue and Cry of inward checks. It will sometime promise, sometimes threaten, urge us with hope, fear, danger, &c. As we would be saved, we must do this, As we would escape the wrath to come, we must forbeare that. Thus importunate is a faithfull conscience.

Acts 20. 22.

I. We see here what a great blessing it is to have such a faithful conscience, such a faithfull friend in our bosome, which will be carefull to tell us of all our duty, and perswade us to it; and of every evil, and dissuade us from it. It will not flatter us in any thing, but tell us plainly, This ye should do; This ye should not do. It regardeth not what pleaseth us; but what is good for us, that it looketh to, and that it perswadeth to, and that it urgeth. O what what a blessing is this! This blessing had those willing Israelites who gave so freely and largely towards the building of the Tabernacle. The text saith, that their heart stirred them up: and their spirit made them willing. Mark; their heart (that is their conscience) stirred them up: Ye have bracelets; offer them, saith conscience: Ye have ear-rings and jewels, &c. part with them too, saith conscience, to further this pious work in hand. Their spirit made them willing; their faithfull friend in their bosome, conscience, overcame them with arguments and strong perswasions. This is a great blessing, to have such a faithfull conscience: It will make a man part with all his lusts, pride, selfe-love, covetousnesse, carnall delights, for Gods glory and our own true good. Use 1. Exod. 35. 21.

II. It is a signe that God meaneth well to that man to whom he hath given a faithfull conscience. O this is an Angel keeper indeed. Did not Christ meane well to his Church in the Canticles, when he gave her such a conscience as carried her on wheeles unto him? Or ever I was aware my soul made me like the Chariots of Amminadab. Return, return, O Shulamite; return, return. Return, return, saith conscience; and again, Return, return. Hath the Lord given thee such an importunate conscience as will have no nay, will not let thee alone in omitting good or committing evil, will not let thee slumber and sleep in security, but continually joggeth and awaketh thee? Hath he given thee a severe, a precise conscience, that will not favour thee in the least evil? It is a most comfortable signe that the Lord meaneth well unto thy soul. Use 2. Cant. 6. 12. 13.

III. Labour to be a friend unto conscience, that it may continue faithfull unto thee. True friends will deal faithfully and plainly one with another, and will be importunate to do one another good: Conscience will not deal thus with thee unlesse thou be a friend unto conscience. Now then are we friends unto conscience when we do what conscience requireth. As our Saviour said to the Disciples, Ye are my friends if ye do whatever I command you: So I may say of conscience. For conscience if it be truly illightned will command nothing but what Christ commandeth. If we deale so in our constant course with conscience, be willing to hearken to it, and be ruled by it, then if we be out of the way now and then, conscience wil be true to us, and be importunate with us for our good. Use 3. John 15. 14.

IV. Be sure thou stand not out against conscience when once it is importunate. It is a great sinne to stand out against conscience though it be not importunate; but it is a sinne a thousand times greater to stand out against it when it is importunate. The greatest standing out against conscience is the greatest sinne: it is a sinne which cometh neerest that against the holy Ghost, which accompanied with some other adjuncts, is the greatest standing out against conscience. There is no sinne that doth more harden the heart, then to do evil when conscience is importunate to dissuade from it. This sinne was the cause why Saul was rejected of God; I forced my selfe, saith he: He forced his conscience; his conscience was importunate Use 4. Maxima vis-lati conscientiæ maximè peccatum. 1 Sam. 13. 12.

to have him stay according to the commandment of God, but he forced himselfe to the contrary. I confesse, if conscience be importunate to the utmost, as it is with Gods children, men cannot with any force put it by, it will have no nay. Sometimes it is so with the wicked in some particular thing: but often conscience in them is importunate, and yet will suffer it self to be born down. Now to bear conscience down is a very high sinne, and exceedingly hardeneth the heart: therefore take heed of it.

VI. An Unfaithfull Conscience.

6. An unfaithfull conscience. THus I have handled a faithfull conscience. The second affection now followeth; which is an Unfaithfull Conscience. I do not meane such an one as is overtaken with evil (for the best conscience hath its failings) but such a conscience as so giveth in, that it suffereth a man to forsake God, and to serve the devil and his own lusts: This is an unfaithfull conscience; and it also hath three Properties: 1. It is a silent conscience. 2. It is a large conscience. 3. It is a remisse conscience.

Properties thereof.

1. It is silent. 1. A silent conscience, that conscience which knoweth how to judge, how to counsel, how to direct, yet is silent and saith nothing, is an unfaithful conscience; that knoweth what duties we owe to God and man, yet putteth us not upon them, nor is importunate for the performance of them; and so for sinnes, what we ought not to do, telleth not of the evil, disswadeth not from it, urgeth not arguments to cause forbearance; this is an unfaithfull conscience. It is like to a sleepy careless Coachman, who giveth the horses the rains, and letteth them runne whither they will: So this unfaithful conscience leaveth the rains on a mans neck, and letteth him runne whither he will, into any danger, any mischief, that he may do evil with both hands. Mich. 7. 3. Do ye not think Ahabs conscience was fast asleep, which let him sell himself to work wickednesse? and so Manasseh's conscience?

2. It is large. 2. A large conscience; which maketh conscience it may be of some great duties, but taketh liberty in other, which it counteth lesser. Thus Doeg's conscience would not suffer him to break his vow, to depart on the Sabbath day; but yet it suffered him to accuse David. Jehu's conscience 2 Kings 10. 29. made him zealous in Gods cause against the house of Ahab and the Priests of Baal; but it suffered him to maintain the high places which Jeroboam had set up. Thus Gamaliel's conscience made him speak well for Paul, and yet continue (it seemeth) in much other evil. This conscience will restrain from great staring sinnes, or from such sinnes as the man hath no naturall propensity unto: but others which seeme of a lower nature, or which are suitable to a mans particular desires, these conscience will swallow without remorse. As civil people, that cannot swallow down couzenage and injustice, and yet neglect of prayer, and other religious duties never troubleth them. And so some Professours, who cannot omit hearing Sermons, and talking of Religion, and yet can rest without the power thereof.

3. It is remisse. 3. It is remisse; that is, though it doth counsel and direct, yet it doth it with such coldnesse and remissenesse, that it is easily answered and put off. Thus it was with David. It cannot be thought but his conscience said, Plot not against Uriah's life: But he would, and so conscience let him do it. This conscience will be answered with every slight and idle excuse: As when conscience telleth one, Your wayes are not good: I wish you to repent, and make your peace with God; it may be the man answereth, Yea so I meane to do; but I cannot yet intend it: when I have dispatched such and such businesse

then

then I will do it. If Conſcience ſpeak again, Yea, but you were beſt to do it now; True, ſaith he, I know it, I know it. If God would give me repentance, I would repent: It is his gift; of my ſelfe I cannot do it. Or when it telleth him of family duties, it may be he anſwereth, I have no leiſure; ſo long as I go to God by my ſelfe, I hope it will ſerve turn. Or when it telleth him of his wickednesſe, it may be he anſwereth, Many worſe then I have found mercy: and I hope ſo ſhall I. This is the Conſcience that letteth a mans heart ſay, I ſhall have peace. Now Conſcience being remiſſe and cold, it is eaſily put off and anſwered with theſe idle and fooliſh excuſes, or with ſome other pretenſes like theſe, and ſo letteth the man go and live as before. This Conſcience is like Eli, which ſaid, Ye do not well, my ſonnes, but exerciſed no ſeverity to cauſe them to do otherwiſe. Deut. 29. 19

Uſe. By this we ſee the dangerous eſtate of thoſe men who have ſuch a Conſcience. There be many who live in many ſinnes, in carnall courſes, ſome in company-keeping and drunkennesſe, ſome in hatred and variance, ſome in chambering and wantonneſſe, ſome in covetouſneſſe and love of this preſent world: your Conſciences, no queſtion, can ſay, Ye ſhould do well to be more godly, to look more after Chriſt and after heaven, and ye ſhould do well to get the truth of ſaving grace; yet it may be they ſay nothing, or nothing to the purpoſe in this behalfe. Therefore is theſe mens caſe ſo dangerous, becauſe their Conſciences are ſo ſilent and ſo remiſſe. They have loſt the moſt ſovereigne remedy, namely, Conſcience. Conſcience is the moſt ſovereigne means (under God and his holy Spirit) to work repentance in men, that can be; and is it not dangerous to have it prove traiterous and unfaithfull? What good can the Miniſtery of the Word do unto you when every idle and falſe excuſe or pretence which the wiſdom of the fleſh can deviſe, can ſtop the mouth of your Conſcience when it calleth upon you to do what the word requireth? It muſt needs be dangerous, and ſo much the more, becauſe it is ſo pleaſing unto you: ye take delight in ſuch ſilent, and large, and remiſſe unfaithfull Conſciences; ye love not to have your Conſciences too buſie with you; ye like not that your Conſciences ſhould be too clamorous and importunate with you; ye would have them not too rigid and vehement againſt your ſins. It fareth with you as with many young men who have ſold themſelves unto folly, and think none their friends but paraſites that flatter them, or thoſe who connive and wink at their folly: but ſuch friends will ſoon prove foes, and ſo will ſuch moderate and quiet Conſciences. It is a dangerous thing to have ſuch a ſilent Conſcience; to want the cheif means under God of doing a man good. It was Conſcience that told the lepers, We do not well to hold our peace: It was Conſcience that never would let the prodigall ſon be quiet till he returned to his father, and ſaid unto him, I have ſinned againſt heaven and before thee, and am no more worthy to be called thy ſon: It is Conſcience that is the moſt powerfull meanes under God to quicken a man up to repentance and obedience; and therefore they are in a miſerable caſe that want this great help. 2 Kings 7. 9.

Queſt. But what are the Cauſes why mens Conſciences be ſo evil and unfaithful?

Anſw. The Cauſes hereof are chiefly theſe four:

1. Ignorance is one cauſe why a mans Conſcience is unfaithfull, when we do not labour to have Conſcience throughly illightened and informed. Who are more careleſſe and negligent of their duties both to God and man? who can with more freedome lye, ſteale, covet, ſin, &c. then thoſe that are ignorant of the law of God? They know not that they do ſo much hurt to their owne ſouls as they do. An ignorant minde hath alwayes an evil Conſcience. It is impoſſible Conſcience ſhould be faithfull where it is not illightned: and hence it cometh to paſſe that Conſcience is ſo negligent and unfaithful, becauſe we have been ſo careleſſe of informing it. Thy conſcience 1 Pet. 2. 15.

must needs be silent as long as thou art ignorant. Ignorance is soone put to silence.

2. A second cause is often slighting of conscience. It may be conscience speaketh not, or but coldly and remissely, because when it hath advised, and counselled, and admonished, thou hast neglected it and disregarded it from time to time. Though it judge and counsel, yet thou wilt not listen: Like Cassandra the Propheteſſe, who though her Predictions were true and certain, yet were they never believed: so though conscience speaketh true, yet men follow it not; and therefore it becometh silent when it is not regarded, but all its counsel, and advice, and perswasions slighted and neglected. Hence, I say, it cometh to passe that for want of imployment it is still and falleth asleep, till the time come that it must be awaked.

3. The third cause is that violence that is often offered unto it. Many times when conscience perswadeth to any good duty, or dissuadeth from any evil course, men will do against it and withstand it violently, and put off the wholesome advice of it: hence it cometh to passe that conscience having so many injuries offered unto it, beginneth to provide for its own ease, and so either it is silent and saith nothing, or else is soone answered and rebuked; as it was with Moses: When Pharaoh would never hearken unto Moses, but still fell to excuses, and at last to deny all, he would not let Israel
Exod. 10, 19. go notwithstanding all that Moses could urge, but said to Moses, Get thee from me; take heed to thy selfe; see my face no more; Moses then answered, Thou hast spoken well: I will see thy face no more. So it is with conscience; When men have been obstinate, and have refused to heare it, and would have it speak no more, Thou hast well spoken, saith conscience: henceforth I will trouble you no more, but let you alone to take your course: I will advise you no more; or if I do, I will not be any more importunate.

4. A fourth cause is, that men do wilfully stop the mouth of conscience: If it beginneth to speak, presently they busie themselves about other things; or if that will not do, they runne into company, and there spend their time, that the howlings of conscience may not be heard; and if still it be loud, they strike up the Drumme, and ring all the Bells, that the voice of it may be utterly drowned: and so conscience at last is content to stand by, to hear, and see, and say nothing. By this meanes many times it falleth out, that those who have had very turbulent and clamourous consciences not suffering them to be quiet, have at last tamed them, and put them quite to silence; or if they do speak, it is so coldly and remissely, that they care not whether they be obeyed or no. Oh these are damnable and devilish devices! Whoever ye be that do thus, ye are in a dangerous estate, and ye carry the brands of hell and damnation upon you. If ever you desire to avoid this dangerous estate, then shun the cause: Labour to have your conscience throughly illightened and informed by the word of God, that it may read you your duty. A friend that knoweth but little, can give but little counsel. Again, give heed evermore to the counsel of conscience. You know Achitophel took it ill that his counsel was not followed; therefore he made away himselfe in displeasure: So conscience will take it very ill if its counsel be not followed: it will strangle it self, and smother it self; you shall hear no more of it. Especially take heed you do not reject conscience, nor offer violence to it: If you do, you will make it unfaithfull and remisse; and then you lose the best means under heaven of your good: Then deadnesse of spirit succeedeth, and hardnesse of heart taketh place, and you deprive your souls of all possibility of cure. As long as a sick-man hath any possibility of cure, he is still under hope; but if ever he lose that, he is gone: Conscience is the possibility of the soul to amendment; and therefore if you dull conscience, and make conscience remisse and unfaithful, you take the rea-way to deprive your ſelves of all poſſibility of riſing again. Conſider theſe things, and have a care of your Conſciences.

And thus we have handled the office of Conſcience about things to be done and omitted, with its adjuncts, affections, and properties, in that behalfe. I come now to conſider the office of Conſcience about things already done or omitted, together with the affections of Conſcience in the diſcharge of that office.

The office of Conſcience about things already done or omitted.

THis hath four parts: 1. To approve; 2. To abſolve; 3. To miſlike; 4. To condemne; according to the good or evil of our actions or omiſſions. The judgement is not onely of the things, what they are; but whither they tend, and what they will produce.

I. An approving Conſcience.

FIrſt, when that which is done is good, Conſcience approveth it: as Paul ſaith, This is our rejoycing, the teſtimony of our conſcience, 2. Cor. 1. 12. When he had lived uprightly and ſincerely, his Conſcience approved of it: ſo when he had great ſorrow and heavineſſe for his brethren, his Conſcience approved it; my conſcience bearing me witneſſe, ſaith he. So at his latter end, we may ſee how his Conſcience approved the whole courſe of his life: I have finiſhed my courſe, I have kept the faith, &c. there is conſciences approbation of him: from henceforth ſaith he, is laid up for me a crown of righteouſneſs: there is Conſciences judgement concerning the iſſue of it. Conſcience ſo approveth every particular good action done by a faithfull man, that by it he may gather a teſtimony of the uprightneſſe of his heart: as Hezekiah; Remember, Lord, that I have walked uprightly before thee. Hereby we know that we are tranſlated from death to life, becauſe we love the brethren. Mark; Love to Gods children is a ſufficient teſtimony not onely of our uprightneſſe in that particular act, but alſo of the ſimplicity of our hearts in the generall, and that we are tranſlated from death to life. So when good old Simeon had now even finiſhed his dayes, ſee what an approbation his Conſcience gave of him; Lord, now letteſt thou thy ſervant depart in peace according to thy word. His Conſcience here gave a threefold bleſſed approbation of him. 1. That he had been Gods faithfull ſervant; thy ſervant. 2. That he had walked in the wayes of true peace and comfort; depart in peace. 3. That the promiſe of Gods word was his in particular; according to thy word.

Iſa. 38. 3.

1 John 3. 14.

Luke 2. 29.

II. An abſolving Conſcience.

THe ſecond part of the office of Conſcience is to abſolve and acquit. Thus Samuel pleading his innocency, had his conſcience teſtifying for him, Whoſe oxe have I taken? or whom have I defrauded? and his conſcience abſolved him as cleare and free from thoſe ſinnes. Thus alſo Job; If I have lifted up my hand againſt the fatherleſs, when I ſaw my help in the gate; If I rejoyced becauſe my wealth is great; If I have not given my bread to the hungry; or if I have rejoyced at the misery of mine enemy: then let it be thus and thus to me. His conscience absolved him as clear of those sins. Nay, the conscience of a childe of God doth not onely absolve him from the guilt of those sinnes which he never committed, but also from the guilt of those sins which he hath committed against God or against man. It can tell him he hath truly repented, and truly been humbled, and truly got pardon. Ye know, David had committed divers sins: yet when he had humbled his soul before God, and obtained pardon, his conscience telleth him as much and absolveth him, Psal. 103. 3. Blesse the Lord, O my soul, &c. who forgiveth all thy sins. Nay, though a childe of God have many infirmities daily and hourly, yet his conscience doth absolve him: It is no more I that do it, saith his conscience, but sin that dwelleth in me. If I distrust, it is no more I; for I fight against it: If I be overtaken by any weaknesse, it is no more I; for I labour against it, and do bewaile it.

III. A Misliking Conscience.

THe third part of consciences office in things done, is to mislike if we have done ill. There be imperfections in the best obedience of Gods
Rom. 7. 15. dearest servants: What I do I allow not, saith Paul: His conscience misliked something done by him. But that mislike of conscience which now I speak of, is of things that are ill done, that is, not done in truth and sincerity. Thus it is in all that are not renewed by the holy Ghost: The office of their conscience indeed is to mislike what they do: When they have prayed, their conscience can mislike it, and say, I have not prayed with a heavenly minde, a holy heart: When they have been at a Sacrament, conscience can truly mislike it, and say, I have not been a fit guest at Christs table &c. When they are crossed and tempted, their consciences truly mislike their carriage, and say, I do not fight and resist, but readily and willingly yield to every invitation to evil. Do ye not think that Jeroboams conscience misliked his altering Gods worship, his innovating Religion, his making Israel to sin? do not ye think his conscience misliked him for these things? Do not ye think that Nabals conscience misliked his griping? and Doegs conscience misliked his slandring? and Pashurs conscience misliked his opposing and misusing Jeremah? and the old Prophets conscience misliked his lying? Who would have thought but Balaam said well, What soever the Lord saith unto me, that will I speak, and, I cannot go beyond the Commandment of the Lord to do less or more; no, not for Balaks house full of gold? who would have thought but that this was well said? yet his own conscience could not choose but mislike it, being not spoken in sincerity. Many a man hath gone for a Christian twenty or thirty years, and every one liketh him; and yet it may be his conscience hath disliked him all the while.

IV. A Condemning Conscience.

THe fourth part of consciences office in this behalfe is to condemne if we have done evil and contrary to Gods Law. Conscience hath an office not only to mislike us, but also to condemne us: nay, it will hasten more Gen. 3. 7. to condemne us then God. We see it in Adam: When Adam had sinned his his conſcience condemned him before God did: he knew he was naked, that he had made his ſoul ſhamefully naked; his conſcience condemned him for an Apoſtate, before the Lord came to paſſe ſentence upon him. Nay it condemneth us oftner then God; God will condemne a ſinner but once for all, viz. at the laſt day; but conſcience condemneth him many thouſand times before that. Many men and women who do ſeem godly in the worlds eyes, God knoweth how many of them have condemning conſciences in their boſomes, for all their civilities, and formalities, and crying God mercy, and patched up hopes; many who would ſay that man were uncharitable who ſhould condemn them for ſuch and ſuch, who (it may be) have conſcience within ſo uncharitable, and ſaying plainly, Ye are ſo; like unto the conſcience of Pauls heretick, who is ſaid to be condemned of himſelfe. Tit. 3. 11.

I. This ſerveth for the praiſe of the juſtice of God: That he may be juſt when he judgeth, the Lord needeth no other witneſſe againſt us but our own conſciences: they make way for the juſt judgement of God. Ye may ſee this in this portion of Scripture which we have in hand; wherein is ſhewed both that God hath appointed a day wherein he wil judge the world, verſ. 16. In the day when God ſhall judge the ſecrets of all men according to my Goſpel: and then in the verſe going before, the Apoſtle ſheweth that now in the mean while every mans conſcience maketh way for this juſt judgement of God; their conſcience bearing witneſſe, and their thoughts in the mean time accuſing or excuſing one another. At the laſt day every man ſhall be judged according to his conſcience; a childe of God according to his; a carnal man according to his. The Lord ſhall abſolve all his children, and their own conſciences ſhall abſolve them. The Lord ſhall condemne all the reſt, and their own conſciences ſhall condemne them. This is the book that every mans life is ſet down in. Every paſſage of converſation both of the godly and the wicked, is recorded daily in this Book: And according to what is written therein will the Lord judge every ſoul at the laſt day, as Rev. 20. 12. The dead were judged out of thoſe things which were written in the Book according to their works. The Apoſtle there ſpeaketh prophetically, and putteth the paſt time for the future; they were judged, that is, they ſhall be judged. So that ye ſee that by the judgment of conſcience way is made for the juſt judgment of God. Rom. 2. 15. Uſe 1.

II. This ſhould be a means to keep us from ſin, and to keep us in a holy life: for according to our works ſo will be the evidences of our conſciences, whether they be good or evil. We had need to take heed what we write in our conſciences; for according to what is written there, ſo ſhall we be judged. Therefore if any ſin ſtandeth upon record in our conſciences, we had need get it blotted out by the blood of Chriſt. Repent, be humbled, beg for pardon, reſt not till thou ſeeſt this debt-book, conſcience, croſſed, and thy ſinnes ſtand there cancelled and diſcharged. Uſe 2.

THus I have ſhewed you the offices of conſcience about things heretofore done. Now let me ſhew you the affections of conſcience in the diſcharge of theſe offices. Ye have heard that conſcience hath four offices in things heretofore done; 1. An office to approve; 2. An office to abſolve; 3. An office to diſlike; 4. An office to condemne. The two former when we have done well and lived well; then the office of conſcience is to approve and abſolve: The two latter when we have done ill and lived ill; then the office of conſcience is to miſlike and to condemn. Now followeth the affections of conſcience in the diſcharge of theſe offices; and they are four: 1. A tender conſcience; 2. A ſleepy conſcience; 3. A benummed conſcience; 4. A ſeared conſcience.

Firſt, a tender conſcience; that is, a conſcience touched with the leaſt ſin, and checking us for the leaſt ſin; as for vain thoughts, exorbitant paſſions, 1 A tender conſcience.

1 Sam. 24. 5. idle words, and the like. Such was Davids conscience, which smote him for cutting off the lap of Sauls garment. Such was Zaccheus his conscience, which troubled him for supposed sinnes: If I have wronged any man, saith he. He did not know; but his conscience was so tender that it made it mere full of Ifs. This tender conscience is a singular blessing of God: And if we desire to attain unto it, we must labour to see the odiousness of sinne, yea the malignity and exceeding evil there is in the least sinne: this will make us tender of it. Secondly, we must labour to mourn for every sinne though it seem little: this also will keep our consciences tender. And we have great

1 Sam. 6. 19. cause to prize a tender conscience. What got the Bethshemites by not being tender in conscience? They looked into the Ark, and because they durst venture upon it, the Lord smote fifty thousand of them at once. What

Num. 15. 32, 36. got the man that gathered sticks on the Sabbath for not being tender in conscience? He was stoned to death. Conscience should tender the least commandment of God, and so be tender of the committing the least sin. This conscience is a great blessing.

2. A sleepy conscience. The second affection of conscience is sleepinesse. A sleepy conscience is not so quick in smiting us as it ought: either it checks not, or else with such tenderness that it worketh not upon us; it maketh us never the more watchful against sin. This we see by many who can commit such sins without trouble or disquiet, as would bring others on their knees and make them walk sorrowfully long after. This sleepy conscience is very dangerous: it maketh men ready to fall into the same sins to morrow as to day, and next day as to morrow: it letteth them see their faults, but amendeth none; because this is such a conscience as doth not cause men to feel the burden of their sins. A man can never come to Christ as long as he hath a sleepy conscience; because it doth not cause sin to be burdensome. They who have this conscience can sleep for all it, and eat and drink and be merry for all it: Now a man can never come to Christ that is not burdened with his sin, that he cannot beare it, cannot be quiet for it, cannot sleep for it: then Christ calleth him, Come unto Matth. 11. 28. me, all ye that are weary and heavy laden, and I will ease you.

3. A benummed conscience. A benummed conscience; that is, such a conscience as is in a deep sleep. This differs from the former in degree. You know there is a lesse sleep, and there is a greater sleep: There is a lesse sleep, when onely the outward senses are bound; and there is a sleep when the inward senses are bound too. Now a benummed conscience is a conscience that is in a deep sleep; Preach to it, it mourneth not; cry to it, it listeneth not: This is a benummed conscience. Nor the greatnesse of sinne, nor the wrath of God denounced against it can move it. Men can know themselves guilty of such and such sinnes, and yet not lay them to heart: conscience never telleth them about it. Thus the Apostle speaketh of those who knew the judgement of God, that they which

Rom. 1. 32. commit such things are worthy of death, yet not onely do the same, but have pleasure in them that do them: Their consciences though informed, and in some measure knowing the evil of their courses and the severity of Gods judgement, yet let them go on still, and not onely commit the evil themselves, but delight to see others as bad as themselves. Such are our swearers, and drunkards, and company-keepers, &c. This is a very wretched conscience: the Lord deliver us from it.

4. A seared conscience. Fourthly, a seared conscience; that is, such a conscience as speaketh not a jote; seared with a hot iron, as the Apostles phrase is. 1 Tim. 4. 2. a senselesse conscience, a past-feeling conscience: when men can swallow down sinne like drink, oathes, contempt of God, his word and worship, mockage of Gods servants, hating to be reformed; such as sinne without any remorse. This kind of conscience is in four sorts of men: 1. In dissolute and prodigate persons; who like common strumpets have their souls lie open to every sin that that cometh by. 2. In obstinate sinners, such as, like Ahab, have sold themselves to work wickednesse in the sight of the Lord. 3. In Scoffers and Jeerers; who speak evil of them who runne not in the same excesse of riot with themselves, and nickname the godly. 4. In Apostates and Backsliders; who speak lyes through hypocrisie, and have fallen from the profession of the truth: All these men have a conscience seared with a red-hot iron. This is a great judgement of God: greater then this there cannot be: No outward judgement that can fall upon us is like unto it: not the plague, nor shame, nor beggery, no nor any curse besides hell it selfe is equall to it. By this the only meanes under God of repentance is taken away. Such may come to repent; but it is a thousand to one if ever they do. It is like a grave-stone lying upon their consciences, which keepeth them under untill the day of judgement: at which time God will awaken their consciences, and then they will be more furious in tormenting then the very devils themselves.

Ye that are not yet fallen upon this wretched conscience, I beseech you take heed that ye never do. But ye will ask me, How may we avoid it? Avoid it? alas, ye may avoid it if ye be carefull: for conscience never feareth before: if ever it be feared, it is ye your selves that do fear it. Indeed the minde of man may blind its own selfe; and the heart of man may corrupt its own selfe; and the affections of man may defile their own selves: but conscience never corrupteth it selfe, never feareth it selfe. But you will say, What must I do to avoid this fearing of conscience? Use.

First, listen to conscience well, that whatever it saith to thee from God, thou mayest do it. This was the course of the Psalmist: I will hearken what the Lord God will say in me (so some translate it.) Heare then and listen what the Lord God will say in thee, what thy conscience illightened saith in thee, and do it.

Secondly, when ever this conscience is quick, follow it. Nothing more feareth conscience then suffering quicknings to die. Blow the coles, if they do but smoke. As the Apostle saith, Quench not the Spirit; so quench not conscience.

I have hitherto shewed you that every man hath a conscience, and the reasons why God hath given us a conscience, the light that it acteth by, the offices of it, and the affections of it. Now from all these proceed two other adjuncts of conscience: 1. A quiet conscience; 2. An unquiet conscience.

A Quiet Conscience.

Concerning a quiet conscience three things are to be considered: 1. What a quiet conscience is; 2. How it differeth from that quiet conscience which is in the wicked; 3. The examination whether we have this quiet conscience or no.

1. For the first, What a quiet conscience is; It is that which neither doth nor can accuse us, but giveth an honourable testimony of us in the course of our lives and conversations ever since we were regenerate (I put that in too: for 1. we do not begin to live till we be regenerate, and 2. we can never have a true quiet conscience till then.) Such a quiet conscience had good Obadiah; I fear the Lord from my youth, saith his conscience: This was a very honourable testimony that his conscience gave him. Such a quiet conscience had Enoch: Before his translation he received this testimony, that he pleased God. Haymo saith, this testimony was the testimony of Scripture, Gen. 5. 24. where it is said that he walked with God. This is true; but this is not all: The text saith not, there was such a testimony given of him, but he had it: and that before his translation; but the testimony of Moses was after his translation: 1 Kings 18. 12. Heb. 11. 5. Dicente scripturâ inquit ille.

Therefore it was the testimony of his conscience that bore witnesse w[ith], that he pleased God. So that this is a quiet conscience, which neither doth nor can accuse us, but giveth an honourable testimony of us in the whole course of our life and conversation. Now to such a quiet conscience there be three things necessary: 1. Uprightnesse. 2. Purity. 3. Assurance of Gods love and favour.

First, uprightnesse is when a man is obedient indeed. Many will be obedient, but they are not obedient indeed, not humbled indeed, not reformed indeed. What it is to be obedient indeed ye may see Exod. 23. 22. But if thou shalt indeed obey his voyce, and do all that I shall speak, &c. Mark; that is obedience indeed, when we do all that God speaketh, and are obedient in all things. This is an upright conscience, when the heart is bent to obedience in all things. An example we meet with in Paul; I have lived in all good conscience before God unitill this day. His conscience could not accuse him of any root of wickednesse and corruption allowed and cherished in him: That is an upright conscience. Hast thou such a conscience as this? My conscience can truly beare witnesse there is no sinne I favour my selfe in, allow my selfe in, but condemne all, strive against all. Thus David proveth that his conscience was upright; If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear my prayer. The regarding of any iniquity will not stand with uprightnesse.

Acts 23. 1.

A second thing required to a true quiet conscience is purity. Though our heart be upright and stand generally bent to the Lords will, yet if we be guilty of some particular sinne, this will hinder the quiet of our conscience. Therefore saith Paul, I know nothing by my selfe; that is, nothing to accuse me; no corruption, no root of unbelief reigning in him: Infirmities he had many, and frailties he had many, and he knew them, but he knew nothing to accuse him. Whatever was amisse in him, his conscience told him he used all holy means against it. If thy conscience can truly say thus also of thee, then hast thou a truly quiet conscience.

1 Cor. 4. 4.

Thirdly, Assurance of Gods love, favour, and pardon. Though we have fallen into great sins, yet our consciences may have quiet, if we can be truly assured of Gods love and favour in the pardon of them. The Apostle proveth that the Sacrifices of the Law could not purge away sinne; but only Christs blood can do it. His argument to prove it is this, Because those Sacrifices could not free a man from having conscience of sinne; they could not purge the conscience: but Christs blood can. After assurance of pardon in Christs blood conscience can no more condemne for sin, how many or how great soever the sinnes were which have been committed. These are the three things required to a true quiet conscience.

Heb. 10. 2.

Furthermore a quiet conscience implieth two things: 1. A calmnesse of spirit: 2. A chearfull, merry and comfortable heart. These two I meane when I speak of a quiet conscience.

1. A calmnesse of spirit, or a quietnesse of minde, not troubled with the burden of sinne nor the wrath of God, nor terrified with the judgements due unto sinne. This quietnesse and calmnesse of spirit is promised to all them that truly hearken unto Christ and obey him; Who so hearkeneth to me shall be quiet from fear of evil.

Prov. 1. 33.

2. A chearfull, merry and joyfull heart. When our conscience giveth a comfortable testimony of us, it cannot but make our hearts joyfull. This is our rejoycing, the testimony of our conscience, saith Paul: The comfortable testimony which his conscience gave of him made him to rejoyce. A wicked man cannot truly rejoyce: no, though he be merry and jovial and laugh, yet his carnall estate is a snare, he can have no true joy; but the righteous sing and rejoyce, Prov. 29. 6. No mirth like the mirth of a good conscience. All other joy is but outside, painted, seeming joy: That is onely true joy, that is rooted in the comfortable testimony of an upright good conscience, which telleth a man his peace is made with God, and that whether he be in sickness or in health, God loveth him, whether he live or die he is the Lords. Thus ye see what a quiet conscience is.

How a quiet Conscience in the godly differeth from the quiet Conscience that is in the wicked.

THe second thing propounded to be considered about a quiet conscience, is, How it differeth from that quiet conscience which is in the wicked. 1. I confesse that the wicked seem to have a very quiet conscience: Many thousands of carnal people seem to live and die in quiet. Look into alehouses, lewd meetings, into all places; who so merry and brisk, and heart-whole (as they say) as they who have no living grace? Yet 2. this quiet conscience Job. 21. 23.
in them must needs differ from the quiet conscience of the children of God. Certainly the Lord will not give the childrens bread unto dogs; neither will he smile upon their souls; neither doth he pardon the sinnes, nor accept the the persons of the ungodly: And therefore if they have a quiet conscience, it must needs differ from that in the godly. Must not copper needs differ from gold? And we who are the Lords Messengers must teach you the difference: They shall teach my people the difference between the holy and the pro- Ezek. 44. 23.
fane. Now the question is this, Wherein lieth the difference between the quiet conscience of the righteous, and the quiet conscience of the wicked? Answ. The difference between them lieth in four things: 1. In the thing it selfe; 2. In the cause; 3. In the effect; 4. In the continuance.

I. In the thing it selfe. The quiet conscience in the godly is double; not onely apparentiall and nominall, but reall and substantiall: It is quiet and quiet too, peace and peace too: I create the fruit of the lips, peace, peace, Isa. 57. 19.
Mark; peace and peace too; peace in appearance, and peace in truth and substance also. But the peace and quiet of conscience which the wicked have is not such peace: It is peace and no peace; peace in appearance, but no peace in truth. Their god is the god of this world, and he perswadeth them they have peace: But my God, saith the Prophet, speaketh otherwise; There is no peace to the wicked, saith my God. They talke of a good Vers. 21.
conscience sometimes, and boast they have a good conscience; but the truth is, they cannot have true peace within: for saith the Prophet, The wicked is like the troubled sea which cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt. So doth a wicked mans conscience secretly cast up mire and dirt in his face: His peace can onely be outward and apparentiall.

II. There is a difference in the Cause. The quiet of a good conscience ariseth from one Cause, and the quiet of a bad conscience ariseth from another.

1. The quiet of a good conscience ariseth from a distinct knowledge of the word of God, and of the precepts and promises conteined in it: But the quiet of an evil conscience ariseth from ignorance: When men know not God nor his holy word, which should bind conscience, they feare nothing, because they see nothing; they know not the danger of sinne: Like a blind man standing before the mouth of a Canon, he feareth no danger, because he seeth none: so carnall men fear not, because they know not what cause they have to feare. Their very prayers that they make are an abomination to God, and they know it not: their good duties they do are all like

like cockatrices egs, and they know it not: they know not that they are in the bond of iniquite, in the snare of the devil. Their Consciences are quiet because they know not what cause they have to be otherwise. This is the difference; The quiet and peace of a good Conscience ariseth from light and from knowledge; the quiet and peace of an evil Conscience, from darknesse and ignorance.

Heb. 10. 22. 2. The quiet of a good Conscience ariseth from a due examination of our selves by the word, and purging of our Consciences. Conscience never can be good without purging and sprinkling; no, nor without a due examination: the quiet of a good Conscience ariseth from this. Whereas the quiet of a wicked mans Conscience ariseth from want of this: He never examineth his Conscience, but letteth it sleep till God awake it with horrour. I say, a wicked mans Conscience sleepeth, and that maketh it quiet, and he is not troubled nor molested with it. Like a Bailif or Serjeant fallen asleep by the way; the desperate debtour whom he lieth in wait for, may passe by him then, and finde him very quiet, and not offer to arrest him: or like a curst dog fallen asleep; a stranger may passe by him then, and not be meddled with: Such like is this quiet evil Conscience.

3. The quiet of a good Conscience ariseth from a good ground, from the works of Gods Spirit, from true saving grace, from righteousnesse. Rom. 14. 17. we read of righteousnes and peace: True peace of Conscience ariseth from righteousnesse: Whereas the false peace of the wicked ariseth onely from vain hopes and conceits; They are not guilty of such and such great sinnes; or, They are not so bad as some others: As the Pharisees Conscience was quiet; why? God, I thank thee, I am not as other men are, no drunkard, extortioner, nor like this publican. Or perhaps from this ground their peace ariseth; The Lord is very mercifull; and, The Lord Jesus died for sinners. Or perhaps this is their plea, They are good members of the Church; They have prayers in their families; They have been Professours of Christ Jesus so many yeares: From hence they dream of peace upon false grounds, when as the way of peace they have not known. When Conscience shall be awaked, then it will tell them how they have by flattery deceived their own souls, and that having no true righteousnesse they could have no true peace.

4. The quiet of a good Conscience ariseth from tendernesse and from life. Therefore the Apostle joyneth together, life and peace, Rom. 8. 6. True peace of Conscience ariseth from life: whereas the quiet of a wicked Conscience ariseth from scarednesse and benummednesse and deadnesse, when men being past feeling of sinne are not troubled at the committing of it. Thus we see the second thing wherein the difference lieth, namely in the Cause.

III. They differ in the effect. First, The effect of the quiet of a good Rom. 5. 1. Conscience is comfort and rejoycing: Being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. What followeth? By whom we have access by faith, rejoycing, &c. Mark! The peace of Conscience bringeth forth Rom. 15. 13. rejoycing. And so in other places peace and joy are joyned together. Gal. 5. 22. the evil Conscience, though quiet, wanteth this rejoycing. If carnall men had no more mirth then what the quiet and peace of their consciences doth help them to, they would not be so merry as most of them be. Secondly, Another effect of true peace of Conscience is, It sanctifieth the soul, it purgeth the heart, purifieth the life, and reformeth the whole man. It is the instrument whereby God sanctifieth his people more 1 Thess. 5. 23. and more: The God of peace sanctifie you wholly. Observe the title which the Apostle there giveth unto God, when he sanctifieth his people, he calls him the God of peace; he sanctifieth his people by peace: It maketh them think thus, We must not do this or this as others do; we shall lose the peace of our conscience if we do. This maketh them strive against sinne, deny their own wills and carnall appetites; If I should not do so, I should have no peace. This peace sanctifieth: But the peace which carnall men seeme to have doth not sanctifie the soul: they are never the more holy for the same. Again, another effect of the peace of a good conscience is, to put life into us in the performance of good duties: it maketh us with gladnesse and delight performe the duties of our generall and particular Callings: But the false peace of an evil conscience suffereth the wicked to be dead and dull to good duties. The true peace keepeth our hearts and our mindes: We should lose our mindes in the things of this life, but this peace doth keep them upon God; we should lose our hearts upon our profits and pleasures and affaires in the world, but the peace of conscience doth keep them upon heaven: Phil. 4. 7. The peace of God which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds. This doth the peace and quiet of a good conscience: but the quiet of a wicked mans conscience doth not do thus; it keepeth not his mind in this manner, but it is upon earthly things for all that.

IV. They differ in respect of duration and continuance. The quiet of a good conscience is settled and grounded in the godly; it never taketh them nor forsaketh them: the other peace is fading. Let a feeling Sermon come and rifle carnall men, it taketh away their peace from them; their consciences then flie in their faces, and then they see they are not right: Let losse of outward things come and light upon them, or any other affliction, it taketh their peace from them; conscience then breaketh out upon them, and sheweth them how they have deceived themselves with false peace, especialy at their death, then an evil conscience (that hath been quiet before) in stead of comforting will affright and amaze them. But if we have the quiet of a good conscience, it will make us heare the word with comfort, and not be troubled and disquieted by a searching Sermon, or the threatnings of Gods judgements: Nay, if we be in trouble, this will quiet us; if in affliction, this will comfort us: It will endure all our life, and be patient at our death; then especially it will shew it selfe a friend unto us, in standing by us to cheare and refreth us. Great peace have they which love Psal. 119. 165. thy law, and nothing shall offend them, saith David: nothing shall offend them or take away their peace: it is an eternall and everlasting peace. Thus you have seen how the true and false peace of conscience differ.

But here cometh a question to be answered, and it is this; Have all Gods children this peace of conscience? I dare say some of you look for this question, and long to have it answered. I answer therefore, No; they have it not alwayes. Job seemed one while not to have it: I have sinned, saith his conscience: What shall I do unto thee, O thou preserver of men? David seemed one while not to have it: Mine iniquities are gone over my head as a heavy burden; they are too heavy for me, Psal. 38. 4. His sinnes lay heavy upon his conscience for a fit. Hezekiah one while seemed not to have it: Behold, for peace I had great bitternesse. And therefore I say, the children of God have it not alwayes. But let me tell you; They might have it alwayes. 1. It is possible they should have it alwayes: Their sinnes of ignorance and infirmity do not break the peace of their consciences: cannot; for if they could, then no man should have true peace of conscience at any time. Nothing but willing and witting sinnes, sinnes against conscience, can break the peace of conscience: and as it is possible for the children of God to live without these, so it is possible for them alwayes to have peace; yea, they may have daily more and more peace. 2. As it is possible for the children of God alwayes to have peace, so they are commanded to keep their peace alwayes; and it is their own fault if at any Job 7. 20.

Job. 22. 21. time they lose it: Acquaint thy selfe with God, and be at peace, saith Eliphaz.
Col. 3. 15. So, Let the peace of God rule in your hearts, unto which ye are called. We are not onely commanded to have peace in our hearts, but also that it may rule there, that no corruption perk over it to hinder it: we are called to this peace, and commanded to have it; and therefore as it is a sinne in the Common-wealth when one breaketh the peace, so it is a sinne in the spirit to break the peace of conscience: we are all bound to the peace. 3. If the children of God have it not alwayes, then they feel the want of it: and in the want of that comfort, nothing else will comfort them. It is not all the peace and prosperity of the world that can comfort their hearts as long as they have not this peace; not all the mirth in the world can content them untill they enjoy this peace again, the peace and quiet of a good conscience: they faint for it, and long after it, they can have no strength without it;
Psal. 29. 11. The Lord will give strength unto his people; the Lord will bless his people with peace. It is not so with corrupt hearts: they can be without peace, and yet never faint; they can eat and drink for all that, and sleep and be merry for all that, yea and go about their profits and their earthly businesses as roundly as ever for all that: But the children of God, if they want the peace of conscience, they have no strength to do any thing almost, they faint till they have it again. 4. The godly alwayes have the seeds
Psal. 97. 11. of it in them: Light is sown for the righteous, and gladness for the upright in heart. Mark; it is sown in their hearts, and it will spring up at one time or other, to cheare them and to comfort them. As it is with the wicked; they may seem now and then to have true peace, but they have the seeds of horrour alwayes in them, which will sprout forth at last, and then they shall finde the worm of an evil conscience again: so on the contrary side, the godly may seem now and then to have no peace, but yet they have alwayes the seeds of true peace in them, which will in time shew themselves, and solace their souls for ever. 5. They never want peace as the wicked do want it: The wicked want it, and have no possibility of having
Isa. 59. 8. it: they go in such paths as wherein they shall never know peace, such paths as will never lead them unto it: still their conscience is able to say, they are not right, they are carnall and not spirituall; they know no true peace of conscience, neither can they: But the children of God walk in such wayes as will bring them to true peace of conscience ere they have done.

By this ye see what a good and quiet conscience is. It cannot be but that all must like it, and wish; O that we had it! Beloved, let us labour to get it and the assurance of it. No blessing under heaven is like it: It is a heaven upon earth. Happy are they who can shew they have it: and miserable are they who have it not. Dulce nomen pacis, Sweet and pleasant is the very name of peace, especially of the peace of a good conscience: If ye have it, no misery can make you miserable: and if you have it not, no happinesse can make you happy. It is Christs Legacy which he bequeathed to his
John 14. 27. Church; Peace I leave with you; my peace I give unto you. It is glorious and honourable: Beest thou never so meane in the world, thou art glorious if thou hast this peace: beest thou never so despised and disgraced among men, thou hast honour enough if thou hast this peace: Rom. 2. 10. To every one that doth good, glory and honour and peace. Mark how it is accompanied; namely, with glory and honour: But shame and confusion and dishonour is upon all them that have it not.

III. Exam-

III Examination, Whether we have a quiet Conſcience.

COncerning a quiet Conſcience I propounded three things: 1. What it is; 2. How it differeth from that quiet Conſcience that is in the wicked; 3. The examination whether we have this quiet Conſcience yea or no. The two former we have handled already: namely, What a quiet Conſcience is; and, How it differeth from that quiet Conſcience which is in the wicked. Let us paſſe on now unto the third, namely, to an examination of our ſelves, whether we have a true quiet Conſcience yea or no.

A quiet good Conſcience is ſuch a marvellous bleſſing, that it cannot poſſibly be but we muſt like it, and wiſh, O that we had it. Let us then examine our ſelves and ſee whether we have it or no. Many have peace and quietneſs (as hath been ſhewed already) ariſing from falſe grounds: they have peace of Conſcience becauſe they know not what belongeth to trouble of Conſcience; or if they know that a little (as ſome of the wicked do) yet they do not conſider that ſorrow which one day will burſt in upon them and ſink them utterly: Let us try then our peace by theſe notes.

I. If the quiet of our Conſciences be good, it is ſuch as we have carefully ſought for at the mercies of God in the blood of JeſusChriſt, when being pinched with the burden of our ſins we did fly to the promiſes of God to ſeek comfort, to the blood of Chriſt, to finde eaſe and to get aſſurance of Gods favour. If our peace come not this way, it is naught, and we were better to be without it then have it. It may be we ſpeak peace to our ſelves; but doth the Lord ſpeak peace to our Conſciences? I will hear what the Lord will ſpeak: for he ſhall ſpeak peace to his people, and to his ſaints: but let them not return again to folly (for that will break all their peace.) O go to God then, and hear whether he ſpeaketh peace to your Conſciences; whether it be God in Chriſt reconciling the world to himſelfe, that ſpeaketh it to you. It is not true peace without we have ſought for it at the throne of grace, without it be peace of Godsmaking. Now the Lord ſpeaketh peace to his people who come to him for peace, three ways. 1. He ſpeaketh peace to them by his word. This ſpeaking is thus; When the word promiſeth peace to thoſe who walk by ſuch a rule, and they walk by that rule, then Gods word ſpeaketh peace to their ſouls. The rule is ſet down Gal. 6. 15, In Chriſt Jeſus neither circumciſion availeth any thing nor uncircumciſion, but a new creature: and then followeth, As many as walk according to this rule, peace be upon them. 2. God ſpeaketh peace to his people in their Conſciences. This ſpeaking is thus; When the Conſcience can ſay, I am in Chriſt, I am engraffed into Chriſt, then the Lord ſpeaketh peace by the Conſcience, peace be with you all that are in Chriſt Jeſus: ſo alſo when the Conſcience can ſay, I hunger after righteouſneſs, I truly mourn for ſin, I deſire in all my wayes to pleaſe God. 3. God ſpeaketh peace by his Spirit. This ſpeaking is thus; When the word hath ſpoken peace by the promiſe, and when the Conſcience ſpeaketh, I am thus and thus qualified, and therefore I have peace, then the Spirit of God cometh in and witneſſeth, Yea, you ſay right; peace belongeth unto you indeed, and I ſay Amen to it. When the Spirit of God doth ſay thus, then the Lord ſpeaketh peace to the ſoul. The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace. Peace is the fruit of the Spirit: it ſpeaketh it to the ſoul, breedeth it in the ſoul. Now, beloved, examine your ſelves: Is your peace of this ſtamp? do ye ſeek it of God, and get it in the blood of Chriſt Jeſus? do ye get it by the word, and by your true-ſpeaking Conſcience, and by the holy Spirit of God? If ye get it on this wiſe, then it is true peace of Conſcience indeed. If ye get it by your own vain hopes and by your good meanings, &c. this peace will not hold alwayes: when your Conſciences come to be awaked, your peace will all vaniſh away and be no more. This is the firſt note to try and examine your ſelves by.

Pſal. 85. 8. 1 Pet. 5. 14. Gal. 5. 22.

II. If our quiet and peace of Conscience be good, it is accompanied with such a life as is agreeable to the will of God; it avoideth sinne, as the thing that disturbeth the peace. How can any man have true peace of Conscience, when his life doth not please God, but provoketh his wrath against him? It cannot be that he should have true peace who in his heart doth regard sinne: There is no peace to the wicked, saith my God. No, whereever true peace of Conscience doth inhabit, it dwelleth with godlinesse of life and unblamablenesse of conversation; as the Apostle Peter joyneth them together, 2 Pet. 3. 14. Wherefore, beloved, seeing ye look for such things, be diligent that ye may be found of him in peace without spot and blameless. Mark the words; In peace, without spot and blameless. If ever we would be found in true peace, we must live without spot and blamelesse. A wicked mans Conscience may seem to have peace, and tell him he hath served God; This day Prov. 7. 14. I have paid my vowes, saith the Conscience of the whore: but this is a rotten and deceitfull peace. True peace of Conscience is ever accompanied with such a kinde of life as is agreeable to the will of God in his word.

III. If our peace be good, it will make us endure to heare any point in Gods word with joy and delight. A wicked heart can heare points of mercy and comfort with joy: so long his peace lasteth: Every man that calleth upon the name of the Lord shall be saved; If we confesse our sinnes, God is just to forgive us our sinnes; If any man sinne, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous; Whoever shall confesse that Jesus is the Sonne of God, God dwelleth in him and he in God: Such points as these a wicked heart can read with delight (though if they were truly opened and expounded, they would yeild him cold comfort, yet he can heare them with delight in the lump:) But if a searching point or some terrible point cometh, he is afraid to heare that. Ahab had a quiet Conscience but onely when Michaiah did preach: Felix had a quiet Conscience no doubt, yet he trembled to heare Paul preach of death and of judgement, Acts 24. 25. One would have thought that Paul (a prisoner) should rather have been afraid: but Paul had true peace of Conscience, and therefore he could think and speak of death with great comfort, and of judgement with joy; So could not Felix. Beloved, this is a strong signe of a false peace, when some points of Gods word lay us flat and bereave us of our hold. Ye shall have many say, O they have such peace, and they have such a good Conscience, as quiet as can be, and as heart-whole as can be: By and by a sound searching point cometh and ransacketh them to the quick, and they are gone. I confesse they go and get some untempered morter or other, and dawb up their Consciences again; but they are gone for the time; This is a strong signe of a rotten peace. But a childe of God can hear any point, hear of death, of judgement, of any thing contained in the word, with delight and comfort. It is true, he may be amazed thereat: but he is glad at heart that he heareth it, and will make use of it, be it mercy or judgement. Sweet or bitter points all are welcome to him; even the bitterest points are sweet to him, because God and he are at peace; and therefore he knoweth there is no news from God but it is good.

IV. If our peace of Conscience be good, it will heal that base fearfulnesse which is in many, who dare not be in the dark, dare not go through a Church-yard in the night. Some will quake at the very shaking of a leaf, as the wicked in Job: which is nothing but a guilty Conscience. I grant Job 15. 21. this fearfulnesse is naturall to some; yet I say, the true peace of Conscience will cure it. I do not say this is a reciprocall signe of true peace of Conscience; for many wicked men may be bold enough: but I say, true peace of Conscience will cure this immoderate fearfulnesse in the godly.

But here two questions are to be asked. 1. Whether every true childe of God

God that hath true peace of Conscience can think of death with comfort, and be desirous to die.

Answ. 1. Peace of Conscience doth not take away naturall feare. It is the nature of every living creature to be very fearfull of death. The Philosopher calleth death φοβερῶν φοβερώτατον, the fearfullest thing of all fearfull things. Bildad calleth it the King of terrours. Nature loveth its own preservation; and therefore feareth the destruction of it. Peace of Conscience doth not take away all this feare. Iob. 18. 14. 2. Besides, peace of Conscience doth not take away alwayes all degrees of slavish feare of death. The reason is, because peace of Conscience may be weak, mixed with much troubles of Conscience. For as faith may be very imperfect, so peace of Conscience may be in some very imperfect. Good old Hilarion was very fearfull to die: He cried out to his soul when he lay on his death-bed, O my soul, hast thou served Christ these fourescore years, and art thou now afraid to die? Again, a mans love may be very imperfect. Perfect love indeed casteth out feare; but 1 Iohn 4. 18. imperfect love doth not. Hezekiah had peace of Conscience: Remember 2 Kings 20. 3. Lord, saith he, I have walked before thee in truth, and with a perfect heart. Mark; He had the peace of a good Conscience; his Conscience told him he had a sincere heart, and that his wayes pleased God: yet he was afraid to die: I do not think it was onely because he had no issue, though that might be some reason of it. 3. When a childe of God is afraid to die, it is not so much for love of this life, as out of a desire to be better prepared. This made David cry out, O spare me, that I may recover strength, before I go hence Psal. 39. 13. and be no more. And so Job; Let me alone, that I may take comfort a little, be- Iob. 10. 20, 21. fore I go whence I shall not return. These good men were then something unwilling to die: They might have many reasons; most likely this was one: That they might be better prepared, and more fit and ready for their departure. 4. Some of Gods people; as these, Job and David, at other times; I say, some of Gods people have such marvellous peace with God, as that, if it were Gods will, they had much rather die then live; I desire to be Phil. 1. 23. dissolved, saith Paul, and to be with Christ, which is farre better. It may be in regard of the Church, or the care of their Children and Charge God hath laid on them, they could be content to remain still in the body: nevertheless, they account their state after death much better; and were it put to them whether to die or to live longer here, they would choose death rather of the twain. Nay, Elias requested for himself that he might die: It is enough, 1 Kings 19. 4. Lord: take away my life. Not that they love death it self; for death is evil in its own nature, contrary to nature, a badge of sinne: but for the love they have to, and the assurance they have of, eternall life after death. 5. Nay there is no childe of God but may truly be said to love death, and to love the day of judgement, and the appearing of Christ Jesus. Divines use to put this as a signe of Gods children: Nay, the Apostle maketh this as a property of Gods children, to love Christs appearing: I have fought a good fight, saith Paul, I have finished my course: There he telleth us of his own peace; and then he telleth us of his reward; From henceforth is laid up for me a crown of righteousnesse, which the Lord 2 Tim. 4. 8. the righteous Judge shall give me in that day; and not to me onely, but to them also that love his appearing: that is, to all his children: For all the children of God love the appearing of Jesus Christ to judgement. Though all do not desire it with the same strength of faith, yet all desire it with faith. They believe that Christ hath destroyed him that hath the power of death, Heb. 2. 14. which is the devil; they believe Christ hath taken away deaths sting, which is sinne, and swallowed death up in victory; and may all say, Thanks 1 Cor. 15. 56. be unto God, who hath given us victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. 57. Neither do they so much question this, as their faith to believe it; saying,

Lord, help our unbelief. 6. Gods children have good reason to do so, and to check their own hearts whenever they doe otherwise. Whenever any distrust cometh, they should check it down again: whenever any feare ariseth, they should say, What? I feare Death, which is a thing so precious? Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his Saints. Is death precious, and shall I be so vain as to feare it? Thus ye see an answer to the first question, Whether every childe of God that hath peace of Conscience can be desirous to die.

II. Quest. Whether a wicked man that hath no peace of Conscience may not be desirous to die too? Answ. 1. The horrour of Conscience may make a wicked man desirous to die. He may have so much horrour of Conscience as that he may think, certainly hell cannot be worse: (Hell is infinitly worse; but he may not think so.) Thus Judas was desirous to die, when he went and hanged himselfe: Thus many in despair do make away themselves. I confesse, some in despair may be fearfull to die: as Cain was fearfull to die; it was feare of death made him speak thus unto God, It shall come to passe that every one that findeth me shall slay me, Gen. 4. 14. The reason was, because, though he were in despair, yet he was not so sensible of his horrour as Judas was: for Cain could go and build for all this, and train up his children in Musick and the like for all this; but Iudas was in a case more sensible of his misery. 2. Dolour of pain may make a wicked man desire to die. Thus it was with Saul: Saul had received his deaths wound, and was in most grievous pain: he could not die presently, neither could he live; but lying in very great pain between both, desired the Amalekite to stand upon him and slay him, 2 Sam. 10. 9. (though Osiander think the Amalekite lyed unto David to curry favour with him; but Josephus and others think he spake the truth.) Sure it is, that many wicked wretches having no peace of Conscience to sweeten and allay their torments, have been desirous to die: nay some have hastened their own death. 3. Malcontentednesse, and shame, and disappointment of their aims may also make wicked men desirous to die, and, if death come not soone enough of it selfe, to dispatch away themselves with cruel selfe-murder. Thus it was with Achitophel: when he saw his counsel was not followed, he haltered himselfe: He had no peace of Conscience to comfort him against all his dumps and discontents; and therefore he was desirous to die. 4. Wicked men, being vexed at something for the present, may seem to be desirous to die; and yet if death should come indeed, they would be of another minde, and be content death should be further off. Nay, Ionas (that strange man of a good man) O for a fit he would be dying, yea that he would, Lord, take my life from me: for it is better for me to die then to live. I suppose if God had taken him at his word, he could have wished his words had been in again. But thus it is often in the mouthes of wicked people; I would I were dead; and, I would I were out of the world: not for any peace of Conscience they have, nor for any desire of death, but onely for a momentany pang. If they were to die indeed, they would be loth enough to it. Like the man in the Fable: who being wearied with his burden of sticks, lay down and called for Death; but when Death came indeed to take him, and said, What shall I do man? thou calledst me: I pray thee, said he, help me up with my burden of sticks. When he was to die indeed, then he would rather have his own wearisome burden. It is but a fable; but this is the fashion of many. 5. When wicked men are desirous to die indeed, sometimes not out of discontent or any such like reason, yet it cannot be out of any true peace of conscience: They may go away like lambs, as we say; but it is in a fools paradise. It may be whilest they lived they thought to go to heaven: but when they die, then all their thoughts perish, as the Psalmist speaketh in another case.

2 Sam. 17. 23.

Jon. 4. 3.

To

To return therefore where we left; O beloved, is there any of you that want the peace of a good conscience? and do ye know what ye want? what a great benefit and blessing? That ye may see this, and fully know it, and by knowing it earnestly desire it, consider,

First, that it is the very head of comforts. A worthy Divine calleth it Abrahams bosome to the soul: Ye know what a blessing it was unto Lazarus to be taken from his sores into Abrahams bosome: The peace of a good conscience is like this bosome of Abraham: Who would not gladly lie in it? Such a man who hath it can never look upon another mans comfort, but a good conscience will say, Yea, and I have my comfort too. When Paul was commending of Timothy, see how his own conscience spake of himselfe at the same time: He worketh the work of the Lord, as I also do. Mark; his conscience would be putting in comfort for himselfe: Doth Timothy worke the Lords worke? yea and so do I too, saith his conscience: It is Musculus his observation upon the place. 1 Cor. 16. 10.

Secondly, A quiet conscience maketh a man to taste the sweetnesse of things heavenly and spirituall; It maketh the word to be to him, as to David; Sweeter then hony, yea then the hony-combe: I have not departed from thy judgements, O Lord, saith he (thus saith his conscience:) now what followeth next? How sweet are thy words unto my taste! yea, sweeter then hony unto my mouth. A good conscience maketh a man taste sweetnesse in prayer, when his conscience telleth him he prayeth aright: It maketh him taste sweetnesse in a Sabbath, when his conscience telleth him he sanctifieth it aright: so also in the Sacrament, when his conscience can witnesse he receiveth aright. What is the reason so few of you taste sweetnesse in these things? The reason is this; Because ye have not the peace of a good conscience: It would finde sweetnesse in every good duty, in every good word and work. Psal. 119. 103.

Thirdly, A good quiet conscience maketh a man taste sweetnesse in all outward things, in meat, in drink, in sleep, in the company of friends: it putteth a Better upon a very morsel, Prov. 17. 1. Brown bread and a good conscience, there is a Better upon it then upon all the costly fare of the wealthy without it. Bernard calleth a good conscience a soft pillow: Another calleth it a deare bosome friend: Solomon calleth it a continuall feast. It maketh a man taste sweetnesse in every outward thing. The healthy man onely can take pleasure in recreations, walks, meats, sports and the like: they yield no comfort to those that are bedrid, or sick, or half-dead. But when the conscience is at peace, the soul is all in good health; and so all things are enjoyed with sweetnesse and comfort.

Fourthly, It sweeteth evils to a man, as troubles, crosses, sorrows, afflictions. If a man have true peace in his conscience, it comforteth him in them all. When things abroad do disquiet us, how comfortable is it to have something at home to cheare us? so when troubles and afflictions without turmoile and vexe us and adde sorrow to sorrow, then to have peace within, the peace of conscience, to allay all and quiet all, what happinesse is this? When sickenesse and death cometh, what will a good conscience be worth then? Sure more then all the world besides. If one had all the world, he would then give it for a peaceable conscience. Nay, what think ye of judgement and the tribunal of Christ? Do but think what a good conscience will be worth then? When Paul was accused and hardly thought of by some of the Corinthians, this was his comfort; I know nothing by my selfe, saith his conscience: I count it a very small thing to be judged of you. Nay, he goeth further: His conscience telleth him he hath the Lord Jesus (who justifieth him) to judge him; he hath a sweeter Judge then his own conscience, even his Saviour, to judge him. O there 1 Cor. 4. 3, 4.

is no created comfort in the world like the comfort of a peaceable conscience. The Heathen Menander could say, β στοῖς ἅπασι συνέσεως θεός, Conscience is a little petty god. We may not give it such a big title: but this is most certain; The conscience is Gods echo of peace to the soul: in life, in death, in judgement it is unspeakable comfort.

Exhortation. Is there any then that want this? Let them above all things labour to get it: It is more worth then all things else. Whatever we neglect, let us not neglect this. It is safer to neglect body, health, meanes, maintenance, friends, and all that ever we have in the world, then to neglect this. The more we have the worse it is for us, if we have not this. Had we all the world good, it is like a Stone in a Serpents head or a Toads head, or a Pearl in an Oyster: not our perfection, but our disease.

Again, you who have a peaceable conscience, 1. Labour to maintain it. Be often in communion with God, be not strangers to him, the light whose countenance is the peace of your souls. It is the walking with God that breedeth true peace and preserveth it. It is said of Levi, that he walked with God in peace. Mal. 2. 6. O let us stirre up our selves to walke close with God, that so we may have peace; No sweet peace but in so doing. 2. We must take heed we do not trouble nor disquiet it, that we do not resist it, or offer violence unto it by committing sinne against the peace of it, but endeavour to maintain the peace of it by obeying the voyce of it. Get the voyce of God, which is wisdome; and to depart from evil, which is true understanding: All her paths are peace, Prov. 3. 17. We can not walk in any one path of true wisdome, but we shall finde in it peace: There is peace in humility, and peace in charity, and peace in godlinesse, and peace in obedience. Break any of these things, and ye break the peace. Ye heare what an admirable thing the peace of conscience is: O then, if ye have it, make much of it: nay, if ye have it, ye will for certain make much of it. The having of it will teach you the worth of it, and learn you to prize it, and make you above all things unwilling to leave it. And thus much of the fifth, viz. a quiet conscience.

An Unquiet Conscience.

I Have already handled a quiet conscience. I come now to speak of a troubled and unquiet conscience: Concerning which I shall shew you three things: 1. What it is; 2. The degrees of it; 3. The difference of the trouble that may be in a good, and that may be in a bad conscience.

What it is 1. What a troubled conscience is. It is a conscience accusing for sinne, and affrighting with apprehensions of Gods wrath. And here I would have you consider two things: 1. What are the causes of it; 2. Wherein it consisteth.

First, The causes of it are these five. 1. The guilt of sinne: When a man hath done evil, and his conscience doth know it, then doth the conscience Lev. 5. 4. cry guilty: when he knoweth it, saith the text, then he shall be guilty. This is that which woundeth and pierceth conscience; this is the sad voice of conscience. Like Judas; I have sinned in betraying the innocent blood: Like Cain; My sin Gen. 4. 13. is greater then can be forgiven. So the brethren of Joseph; We are guilty (say they) concerning our brother. It is like the head of an arrow sticking in the flesh, or Psal. 51. 3. like a dreadful object continually presenting it selfe before our eyes: My sin is ever before me, saith David. When we have transgressed Gods Law, and our conscience can cry guilty, when the guilt of sin lieth upon conscience: this is one cause of the trouble of it.

2. Any

2. Another cause is the apprehension of Gods wrath for sinne: When knowing that we have sinned and offended God, we apprehend his wrath in our mindes, and behold the revenging eye of his Justice against us. This is a very grievous thing, so terrible that no man or angel is able to abide it: As we see the Kings and Potentates, the mighty men of the earth, call for the mountains to fall upon them, and the hills to cover them from the wrath of God, Rev. 6. 15, 16 When we have incurred Gods displeasure and our consciences feel it, when his anger resteth upon us and our consciences feel it, this is another cause of the trouble of conscience.

3. A third cause of the trouble of conscience is the feare of death and of hell: When we know we have offended Gods law, and we know also what our sinnes do deserve, namely death and judgement and damnation for ever; this doth most trouble and disquiet conscience, when it fasteneth on the apprehension of it. The Apostle calleth it a fearfull looking for of judgement. When conscience looketh for nothing else but for hell and damnation, this must needs trouble conscience.

4. Another cause is privative, want of supportance; when God doth withhold from conscience the help of his Spirit. Ye know the Spirit can inable conscience to undergo all its troubles; the Spirit can prompt with mercies and the promises of God, and hold it up: but when the Lord bereaveth the conscience of this help, and doth not at all support it, this must needs also trouble conscience.

5. When God doth fasten on the conscience such thoughts as may affright and terrifie it; as thus, God doth not love me, Christ will not own me; I have sinned, I am a reprobate, past hope, &c. When such thoughts as these fasten on the conscience, it cannot choose then but be troubled. Thus I have shewed you what are the causes of the trouble of conscience.

Secondly, This trouble of conscience consisteth in two things: First, in want of comfort: It cannot apply to it selfe neither the promises of this life, nor of that which is to come. Conscience crieth, This belongeth not to me: This mercy, this comfort is not my portion. Secondly, In a terrour and anguish of minde from these three heads: 1. From the guilt of sinne; 2. From the apprehension of Gods wrath; 3. From fear of death, and of judgement. This is the three-stringed whip wherewith conscience is lashed. These ye shall finde upon the conscience of Adam and Eve, when they had sinned against God. Their conscience was whipped 1. With the guilt of sinne; they saw they were naked, Gen. 3. 7. 2. With the apprehension of Gods wrath; they hid themselves from the presence of God, vers. 8. 3. With the feare of some vengeance which they began to look for; I was afraid, saith Adam, vers. 10. This three-stringed whip ye may see also was upon the conscience of Cain after he had slain his brother: His conscience was whipt 1. With the guilt of sinne; My sinne is greater then can be forgiven: 2. With the apprehension of Gods wrath; From thy face, O Lord, am I hid: 3. With the expectation of death and of judgement; It shall come to passe, that every one that findeth me shall slay me. Thus I have shewed you what a troubled conscience is.

The Degrees of a troubled Conscience.

II. THe next thing I promised to shew, is the Degrees of a troubled Conscience. A troubled conscience hath divers Degrees: For some consciences are more troubled then other some. 1. The first degree is such a degree as may be in Gods children: and this ariseth not so much from the apprehension of Gods wrath, as from the guilt of sinne: Their consciences grieve and are troubled to think that they have sinned and offended the Lord God. Thus we see David could not be at quiet: Although Nathan had told him from God that his sin was forgiven, yet his conscience still troubled him: Against thee onely have I sinned, and done this evil in thy sight, saith he. I grant, the consciences of Gods children are troubled at the apprehension of Gods anger; but then it is his fatherly anger, not the anger of an enemy. Though for a fit they may seeme to apprehend that too, yet mostly it is for that they have provoked their loving Father to anger against them. A father may be angry with his childe out of love; and so the Lord may be with his dear children. The Lord was angry with me too, saith Moses, Deut. 1. 37. O let not my Lord be angry, saith Abraham the father of the faithfull. O God of hosts, how long wilt thou be angry with thy people that prayeth? saith the Psalmist. Sometimes the Lord is angry with the prayers of his people; but it is in love, because he would have them pray better, and obey better, and look to their standing better. Now the consciences of Gods people are very much troubled when the Lord is thus angry with them.

2. The second degree of trouble of conscience is such as is in the wicked, and yet not altogether without hope. The conscience is troubled, but yet so as it conceiveth hope: God is mercifull; and, Christ died for poor sinners, &c. Thus many a wicked man is troubled and affrighted in conscience, not for sinne, but for the wrath of God against it; yet he conceiveth for the present that the sinne is pardonable and may be forgiven: Christ may forgive; God may pardon. It is indeed but a poor ground of hope and comfort upon possibilities: but yet this ligatneth the trouble in the meane time, and it may be within a while shaketh it quite off: Like the wicked Jews, Isa. 57. 10. who were worried and wearied most grievously; yet they said not, There is no hope. There may be much horrour and disquiet in these consciences for a time: but there is a higher degree yet, a worse troubled conscience then this.

3. The third degree of a troubled conscience is, when it is for the present altogether hopelesse; such a conscience as is swallowed up in despair: when men thinking of their manifold sinnes, of the direful wrath of God, of the dreadfull torments of hell for ever, their consciences make them despair of all hope or possibility of avoiding this; bringing such thoughts as these, What a deale of time have I spent in sinne, wherein I might have made my peace with God, and have prevented all this? What a great and omnipotent God have I offended? What an infinite Judge have I provoked, who is able to revenge himselfe on me, and who will be my foe to eternity? conscience also bringing in thoughts of the torments and unsufferable paines to be endured in hell, and such swallow up in despair without all hope for the present or the future. Like the wicked man which Elphaz speaketh of, He believeth not that he shall returne out of darknesse, Job 15. 22. So these have no hope of escaping, expect to perish as Spira; O, saith he, I envy Cain and Judas: I would I were in their cases: They are damned; but I shall be worse for evermore. Now though to these all hopes be gone for the present, yet some of these troubled consciences scramble up againe with vaine hopes, and some do not. Cain got up againe, it should seeme: but Judas did not. Those that never get up againe, either 1. they live in intolerable horrour and vexation of spirit, as if they had a devil in them to put them to anguish, and often (being weary of their lives) do make away themselves, and so leap quick into hell: or else 2. they runne desperately into all abominable courses: Their consciences telling them, there is nothing to be expected but damnation, they give themselves desperately to commit sinne with greedinesse, saying with them in Jeremiah, There is no hope; therefore we will walk after our own devises, Jer. 18. 12. Or else 3. they grow grow fearfelesse of it. They see they are wrong, but they are not sensible of it. It may be they pray and read and heare; but their consciences secretly whisper, All is to no purpose. Conscience eateth and eateth like a worm, and they pine away in their iniquities, as the Prophet speaketh. A kinde of sorrow they have, but they cannot mourn; a kinde of sad dolour, but they cannot weep: Ye shall not mourn nor weep, but pine away in your sinnes, saith the text. I confesse there be more presumers in the world, who promise themselves that all shall be well with them; but yet there be despaires too, and very many, whose consciences are troubled with secret despair; though it may be not apparently to others. Levit. 24. 13.

Now the causes of these despairing consciences are these. 1. The greatnesse of sinne; when the heart thinketh secretly thus, Certainly the Lord cannot finde in his heart to forgive me. As it was with Cain: When he had lived in earthly-mindednesse, and then in formality, and then in discontent and in hatred, and then in hardnesse of heart, the Lord rebuked him, and yet his heart was so hard that still he went on in evil; then he murdered his brother; and lastly he despaireth; My sinnes are greater, saith his conscience, then can be forgiven. He thought God could not finde in his heart to forgive him. So when men sinne and sinne, and the Lord doth rebuke them, and yet they do sinne, and their consciences do check them, and yet they go on, at last they come to have secret despairs in their heart, that God now will not look towards them; whereas if yet they had a minde to stoop to Jesus Christ, they might be forgiven. Gen. 4. 13.

2. A second cause of despairing is multitude of temptations. Indeed the godly should not be so apt to think themselves forsaken of God by reason of temptations as sometimes they are: they should rather count it joy, as James speaketh, chap. 1. 2. But yet many of the wicked despair finally by this meanes: Because they do so often fall into temptation, therefore they conclude they are forsaken of God. 3. Ignorance of Gods word. When the guiltinesse of sinne meeteth with mindes not instructed in the doctrine of free grace and reconciliation by Christ; this is a cause of despair. 4. So also inured custome of sinning is another cause. When men are often quickned, and grow dead again; then quickned again for a fit, and then hardned again: in the end they fall to despair. These and the like are the causes of despairing consciences. And thus I have shewed also the second thing propounded to be handled, namely, the sundry degrees of troubld consciences.

III. The third thing is the difference between the troubled conscience in the godly and in the wicked. The consciences of Gods children may be troubled, and are many times; and the consciences of the wicked they are troubled too: now the question is, How do they differ? I answer,

1. That trouble in the conscience of wicked men is accompanied with impenitency, and sometimes with blasphemy: I would I were able to resist God, saith Francis Spira: like those in the Revelation who blasphemed God because of their torments. Sometimes it is accompained with cursings, as Isa. 8. 21. sometimes with infinite murmurings. But in Gods children it is not so: When their conscience is troubled, they justifie God, and cleare God, and give him the glory of all and submit under his hand, and subdue their hearts unto him: as David in his trouble did not fret and murmure against God, but saith he, If God have no pleasure in me, lo, here I am: let him doe with me what seemeth him good. So that the trouble of Conscience in the children of God and in the wicked doth much differ in this first respect. 2 Sam. 15. 26.

2. The trouble of conscience in the wicked ariseth onely from the apprehension of Gods wrath and feare of judgement for sinne, not for the sinne it selfe and from the love of holinesse: But that in Gods children ariseth chiefly for sin, and the want of the apprehension of Gods love unto them: How long wilt thou forget me, O Lord? for ever? how long wilt thou hide thy face from me? Psal. 13. 1. Mark, whence the trouble of the Psalmist came: This was his trouble, that God did hide his face.

3. Trouble of Conscience in the wicked never maketh them part with sin, never breedeth a hatred of sinne in them; but that in Gods children doth. True it is, that a wicked mans troubled Conscience may make him vomit up his sinne, like a dog that vomiteth up his troublesome meat: but he doth not vomit up his stomack to that meat; for when the trouble is over, he returneth to his vomit again. So a carnall man returneth to his deadnesse of heart again, and to his security again, when the trouble is over. Pharaoh, whilest his Conscience was troubled at the sense of Gods judgements, O then saith he, I have sinned: I pray Moses, let me have your prayers; and I will let you go. If the children of Israel could have packed up and departed while this trouble had lasted, they might have been gone. But when he saw there was respite, he hardened his heart again. Mark; His trouble of Conscience did not make him part with his sinne: But that in Gods children doth.

Exod. 8. 15.

4. That in the wicked driveth them from God: They have little heart to come unto him: They see nothing but wrath; and they rather go about to seek ease in other things then to seek his favour: as Saul sought ease in musick, and Cain in building Castles and Cities, and Judas in a desperate course. Their trouble fetcheth them not to God. But the trouble in Gods children worketh otherwise: In the midst of trouble of Conscience they rest upon God: as Heman crieth, O Lord God of my salvation, in the midst of the troubles of his soul. The eyes of Gods children are still towards heaven; they think still they should have some help from God: They pray and cry, and though God seemeth to neglect them, yet they cannot give over: They will not be beaten off from waiting on God, when he will speak comfort to them.

Psal. 88. 1.

5. That trouble that is in the wicked maketh their heart sullen; but that in the godly melteth their heart: My soul is like melting wax, saith David in his troubles of Conscience. His soul melted before God, and was even poured out before him, Psal. 22. 13. This is a kindly working. Thus ye see the difference.

Uses.

Use 1. 1. BY this we see what a miserable thing it is to have such a troubled Conscience. It is the greatest misery that can be: it is even a hell to men here upon earth: it is like a dismall ghost to terrifie the soul: it is like a burning Furnace in the bosome: it maketh the life bitter. In a word, the spirit of man is not able to beare it: The spirit of man will sustain its infirmities: but a wounded spirit who can beare? As long as a mans spirit is sound, it will beare any thing. Some have borne agues, fevers, stones, colicks, convulsions, rackings, torturings: as long as a mans spirit is sound he is able to beare any of them, all of them: but a wounded spirit who can beare? Never was there man that was able to beare a wounded spirit. We may see by many of Gods children how heavy it is: David roared with the anguish of it: a strange phrase. Heman was ready even to runne out of his wits with it: While I suffer thy terrours, saith he, I am distracted, Psal. 88. 15. Moses putteth himselfe into the number, We are even consumed by thine anger, Psal. 90. 7. Ethan complaineth that it was like a burning fever: How long, O Lord, wilt thou hide thy face? for ever? shall thy wrath burne like fire? Psal. 89. 46. If it be thus with Gods children, what may we think of the wicked? If we could search into the bosomes of some wicked men who are enemies to God, then we might see and understand the true weight and burden of this troubled Conscience. Cain crieth out of more then he can beare. Judas thought to finde more ease in hell then in his own heart: So terrible was the torture of his troubled Conscience, that he murdered himselfe, thinking verily that hell could not be worse.

2. See here what an infinite misery every sinner shall one day be in. Use 2. Though he be not troubled with this harpye for the present, though he be not yet gastered with this furious hag; yet the day will come when he shall: I say, the time will come when all ye that are wicked shall be haunted with this hellish agony of a troubled Conscience; either here before ye die, or when ye die, or at the furthest when your souls are departed out of your bodies: This is unavoidable to all that live and continue in sinne. Though for a while ye live in mirth, and pleasure, and security, and Conscience letteth you alone; though like Nabal, to day ye feast and make merry; yet there is a Conscience within you, an Abigail which to morrow will tell you of it, and then your hearts will die within you and be like [illegible] 1 Sam. 25. 37. stones, as cold and as heavy as a stone within you. As Samuel met with Saul; Because thou hast forsaken the Lord, the Lord also hath forsaken thee [illegible] 1 Sam. 15. 23. so Conscience will finde you out. However for a while ye slight and neglect it, or else perhaps suppresse it, yet it will finde you out; as it did Ahab, and then ye will say as he did, Hast thou found me, O mine 1 King. 21. 20. enemy? yea, I have found thee: Thou hast sold thy selfe to work wickedness in the sight of the Lord: thou hast been a profane beast, thou hast raged against heaven, and against God and Christ; and thy life hath been full of rebellions, &c. now I have found the out. The day will come when thy Conscience shall be like Iobs Messengers. Ye know what news the Messengers brought Iob; first news of one great evil, and then of another greater, and then of a third worst of all; cattel and goods taken away, servants dead, sonnes and daughters dead, I onely am left alive to tell thee: So, I say, the time will come when Conscience shall thus report, thy pleasures are dead; thy profits are dead; thy comforts are dead; thy heart is dead; thy soul is cursed, and must die for ever; and I onely am left alive to tell thee: And then he shall cry out, Cursed was I that ever I was borne: and cursed be the womb that bare me, and the paps that gave me suck. Then shalt thou mourn at the last, when thy flesh and thy body are consumed, and thy Conscience shall say, How have I hated instruction, and my heart despised reproofe? I have not obeyed the voice of my teachers, nor enclined mine eares to them that instructed me. Such dolefull messages Conscience will bring in one day; and then it shall hisse like a snake in thy bosome, Know now that for all these things thou shalt come to judgement. And so thy Conscience shall bray thee like a foole in a mortar, as it were with a pestill, and it shall pounce thee and beat thee and distresse thee for evermore. This is the moth that getteth into the cloth, and doth eat it: When thou with rebukes dost correct man Psal. 39. 11. for iniquity, thou makest his beauty to consume away, like as when a moth fretteth a garment. This will make thy face gather blacknesse, and thy spirit be overwhelmed for evermore.

I must adde another Use yet: For all this is the Law: and untill ye be in Christ ye are all under the Law, the curse of it, the rigour of it: And we are bound to tell you how ye shall finde it, if ye do not submit to the righteousnesse of Christ. But though we do preach the Law, yet we do preach it in the hand of a Mediatour, saith Paul, Gal. 3. 19. a terrible killing Law, but yet in a mercifull hand, in the hand of a Mediatour, to drive us to seek for mercy: and therefore

The third Use shall be, to call upon you to be humbled, and to see that Use 3. there there is no living for you in your sinnes. Go and stoop to Christ Jesus, who onely can purge your guilty consciences by his blood. I beseech you, consider, ye who yet abide in your sinfull estates and are yet in the flesh: I beseech you, consider what the event will one day be. If ye will not look out, your consciences will finde you out at the last, and then wo be to you. Your consciences will make all things grievous and bitter to you, even those things which in themselves are most sweet and good: When ye heare of heaven, of mercy, of the blood of Christ, these will but encrease your misery: conscience will say, You have no part in them. When you heare the word, any promise or comfortable passage in it, your conscience will say, Yea, this is my misery, I have no share in these things. This will be a hell unto you, and will torment you before your time. This will also make all outward good things bitter unto you: When you see wife, and children, and friends, then conscience will whisper and say, I shall not have these long: ere long I shall have none but damned company. When you see your goods, estate, and the like, conscience will mutter, Alas, ere long I shall be in a place where a drop of water shall not be afforded me to coole my tongue. When you see the light and other comfortable objects, O wo is me; I shall shortly be in a place where I shall see nothing but darknesse, utter and everlasting darknesse. Conscience will make your afflictions intolerable, your sicknesse intolerable, your death-bed intolerable, the face of death intolerable. I beseech you, brethren, consider these things, you that have not felt a troubled conscience untill this houre. Ye hardly know yet what it is: ye will know it to your sorrow, if ye doe not consider it. There is a phrase in Ezek. 30. 24. where God saith he will mak Pharaoh groane with the groanings of a man deadly wounded: So it will be with you, if you will not hearken and submit to Jesus Christ; conscience will make you groane with fearfull groanes; O wo is me, I am undone, without hope, without remedy. Consider this therefore, and be wise, before the things which concern your peace be hidden from you.

Exhortation. And let me the rather exhort you to this, in regard of the danger of the times. The Lords wrath is gone out, and his judgements do flie through the earth, and his plagues do fall on every side of us: What will your guilty consciences do now? oh you can never endure them. Ye had need of purged consciences now lest ye be quiet comfortlesse in the day of visitation. How miserable is their case who want the peace of conscience in the time of distresse? When troubles and afflictions are without, then how grievous is it to want peace and comfort within? When Gods mortall arrows are in your bodies, then to have the arrow of his wrath sticking in your soules, this will adde sorrow to sorrow, and make your estate much more uncomfortable and unsupportable. Beloved, peace of conscience is good at all times; but it is most precious when calamities fall on us: Then to have the peace of a good conscience that may bring us good news from Heaven, that all is well within, all peace there, this is such peace as all the world cannot give nor sell nor buy. Never more need of the peace of conscience then now. As one said of the books of faith, There be abundance of Bookes written of faith: buy them all up, saith he; ye will need every one of them ere long: So may I say of whatever may forward the peace of conscience; Buy it, purchase it, get it, as much peace as you can possible, ye will have need of it all ere long. Take heed of troubling your consciences or clogging them with guilt, lest the Lord cast you off, and lest ye be hardned, and so ye perish from the righ way. Do not think thus, O we are believers, and have no need of such threatnings. He who is certaine of his salvation knoweth assuredly he should be damned, if he should go on in sinne without repentance; This If is true enough;

M, M.

If

If the righteous forſake his righteouſneſſe, all his former righteouſneſſe ſhall be forgotten. And, Wo is me, ſaith Paul, If I preach not the Goſpel. In the ſtate of innocency there was uſe of threatnings: ſo is there now in the ſtate of grace. The Lord threatned Adam in innocency, If thou eat thereof, thou ſhalt die the death. Job was awed by threatnings not to lift up his hand againſt the fatherleſſe, for, ſaith he, deſtruction from God was a terrour to me. My fleſh, ſaith David, trembleth for feare of thee, and I am afraid of thy judgements. Let us have grace, ſaith the Apoſtle, whereby we may ſerve God acceptably with reverence and godly feare. Why? for our God is a conſuming fire. For be it that Gods children (that is, all believers) ſhall never fall finally away; yet this threatning is one of Chriſts inſtruments whereby he keepeth them from falling: and they alſo may taſt of much bitterneſſe if they grow indulgent to their corruptions. O therefore take heed of this curſe, that your conſciences may not dog you with the guilt of ſinne and the apprehenſion of Gods wrath. You will never be able to beare it, much leſſe in the time of affliction. O it is good being in a dry houſe when a great tempeſt is up: and it is ſafe being in a good harbour when a ſtorme beateth hard. A good conſcience is good at all times; but O how ſweet then! When Jonah fell into affliction, the want of peace in his conſcience made him look upon his affliction as upon hell, as though he had been in the belly of hell: They who follow lying vanities, forſake their own mercies, ſaith he. Mark; his conſcience dogged him with his fleeing from God, and forſaking his own mercies; Ye ſee he was miſerably diſtreſſed by it, till the Lord did deliver him. Be chary then of conſcience, and get it purged, that it may ſpeak peace to you in trouble.

Four Queſtions.

NOw I have declared unto you, What a troubled conſcience is; What is the cauſe of it, and wherein it conſiſteth; How many degrees there be of it; How the troubled conſcience of the godly differeth from the troubled conſcience of the wicked; The miſery of a troubled conſcience; and, What a deal of miſchief it doth one, eſpecially in affliction: Now I ſhould leave this point, but that there be ſundry queſtions to be anſwered about it.

I. Suppoſe a man be rid of this trouble, and have peace of conſcience, how ſhall he maintaine it, and keep out troubles from it?

II. Whether and how the peace of our conſcience dependeth upon our care and obedience?

III. What manner of obedience it is that peace of conſcience doth depend on?

IV. If a man have no peace, but onely a burdened conſcience, what muſt ſuch a man do to be freed from it, and to attain true peace?

I. Queſtion; How a man may keep peace of conſcience.

I begin with the firſt: Suppoſe a man have peace of conſcience, what muſt he do to keep and maintain it? I anſwer, Firſt, We muſt labour to prevent troubles of conſcience by taking heed that we do nothing contrary to conſcience. We muſt not be drawn by friendſhip, or credit, or the love of any luſt, to do that which conſcience forbiddeth. Nothing ſhould be ſo deare unto us as the peace of conſcience: nothing for the love of it ſhould make us do ought againſt our conſcience. How miſerable are thoſe comforts, delights, ſatisfactions, which we get to our ſelves in ſuch courſes as our own hearts do condemne! However they ſeem comforts for a while, and contentments for a while, and delights for a while, while, yet at last it will appear that miserable comforts are they all. Nothing that we get in any evil way will chear and comfort us in a time of need. What said Francis Spira at the time of his death, when seeing his wife and children about him, and thinking on the goods and estate which he had got for them by denying the truth which he had before maintained against the Romish errours? he cryed out in the horrour of his conscience, How terrible is the sight of these unto me! However before they had been comforts to him, yet now he could not endure the sight of them. O, thought he, I recanted for your sake; I yielded to superstition, and it was long of you: Therefore he abhorred now the sight of them. Wretched is he that alloweth himself in any course which his conscience findeth fault with. It is a good rule the Apostle giveth, Blessed is he that condemneth not himself in that which he alloweth: that is, Blessed is he that hath not a condemning conscience, that alloweth not himself in any course wherein his conscience doth condemn him. So that if we have peace of conscience, and desire to maintain it, let us never allow our selves in any course that our conscience may condemne us in. That is the first answer.

Answ. 2. Secondly, If we will maintain our peace, we must labour to have our hearts grounded in the assurance of the love of God: alas, it will fail us else, and leave us in trouble and perplexity in time of greatest need. Observe how the Apostle joyneth love and peace together, 2 Cor. 13. 11. The God of love and peace be with you. If he be the God of love to us, it is sure enough he will be the God of peace also: If we know once that God loveth us, then we may set our hearts at rest: As long as we doubt of his love our conscience can never have true peace: And therefore if we would maintaine true peace of conscience, let us labour to be assured of Gods love.

Answ. 3. Thirdly, We must use the exercise of faith in applying the blood of Christ; we must labour to purge and cleanse our consciences with it. If we find that we have sinned, we must run presently to the blood of Christ to wash away our sin. We must not let the wound fester or exulcerate, but presently get it healed. As there is a fountain of sin in us, so there is a fountain of mercy in Christ, set open for Judah and Jerusalem, and for every poor soul to wash in. As we sin daily, so he justifieth daily, and we must daily go to him for it: As every day we run into new debts, so the Lords prayer teacheth us every day to beg forgiveness: We must every day eye the brazen serpent. Justification is an ever-running fountain, and therefore we cannot look to have all the water at once. A fountain ever runneth anew; so justification ever floweth anew, and we must go to it. Christ is a Priest for ever after the order of Melch Sedec, O let us sue out every day a daily pardon of course! Let us not sleep one night without a new pardon. Better sleep in a house full of adders and venemous beasts then sleep in one sin. O then be sure with the day to clear the sins of the day: Then shall our conscience have true peace. But how if I have relapsed? what shall I do then? I answer, Every man that falleth doth not fall on all four, as we use to say; he doth not fall quite: There be degrees of falling. As in a sick man, though he be ill, yet he is not by and by dead; some life remaineth still, which will look out towards health again: so there is so much life in justification as to recover thee again. Be constant therefore in this course: Ever go to Christ, ever wash in this fountain, ever bring thy soul hither to be cleansed; and then thy conscience ever shall have peace.

Object. Sol.

Answ. 4. Fourthly, If we would maintain our peace, then let us labour to be constant in obedience to Jesus Christ. Whosoever keepeth his word, in him verily is the word of God perfected; and hereby know we that we are in him, 1 John 2. 5. Mark; Hereby our conscience may tell us that we are right, and speak peace to us, if we keep his word.

II. Question; How the peace of conscience doth depend upon our care and our obedience.

The

The reason why I raise this question is this, Because as our justification is onely in Christ, so our peace is onely in him; how then doth the peace of our conscience depend on obedience? The place of Scripture that occasioneth the doubt is, 1 Pet. 3. 21. The answer of a good conscience towards God by the resurrection of Jesus Christ. It is by Christ; how dependeth it then on our obedience?

Answ. 1. A good conscience doth not depend upon our obedience as the principall cause of it, but upon justification which we have by Christ, if we be in him: Rom. 5. 1. Being justified by faith we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. Ye see then that our peace is grounded upon our justification as the principall cause of it. If we should seek for peace from our works and obedience, alas, they are sinfull and defective; there is no peace to be found in them: Our conscience would be troubled at our best duties, at our weaknesse in prayer, our frailties in hearing, our slips in every holy service: There is nothing we do but our conscience might finde fault with it, and pick a hole in it; and therefore we had need to flie unto Christ for true peace. No wonder then that Papists have not true peace, but professedly say, that every man must doubt, and no man can be sure of his salvation. They must needs doubt indeed who trust to their own works: which can never bring true peace. The conscience must ever be quarrelling and finding of fault, and be without peace, if we trust to the best works. So that this is the first answer, All true peace dependeth upon justification by faith in Christ as the principall cause.

Secondly, We answer, That our peace dependeth upon our obedience in this sort, that we can have no peace except we be given to obedience. Those men that can sinne and yet be at peace, were never justified in their lives. A childe of God when he sinneth; as for example, if he should be tempted to lye, or to omit a good duty, which he knoweth he is bound to performe; yet this would much trouble his conscience; his soul would be ashamed, his heart perplexed, he would not know how to look the Lord in the face; I have sinned: what shall I do unto thee, O thou preserver of men? When David had sinned against God, I am troubled, saith he; Psal. 38. 6. and I go mourning all the day long. And therefore peace of conscience doth depend thus farre on obedience, as that a man cannot have peace unlesse he be obedient, and take heed of sinne, and labour in all things to be upright before God. Now if you ask me, But how doth our peace depend upon our obedience? I answer, It dependeth upon obedience as the removing cause: It removeth that which would hinder our peace. Sinne would interrupt our peace: now obedience removeth sinne. To this purpose the Apostle speaketh 1 John 3. 18, 19. My little children, let us not love in word and in tongue, but in deed and in truth: For hereby we know that we are of the truth, and shall assure our hearts before God: Hereby we shall assure our consciences that we are in him, if we take heed of hypocrisie: If we love in truth, and be obedient in truth, we shall thereby remove all our doubts and our feares, our troubles and perplexities of conscience. So that peace doth depend on obedience as the removing cause: It removeth that which otherwise would hinder peace. This is the first. Againe, our peace of conscience dependeth upon our obedience as the witnessing cause of it. Obedience is one of the witnesses of true peace; it witnesseth that we have peace with God. This is our rejoycing, even 2 Cor. 1. 12. the testimony of our conscience, that in simplicitie and godly sincerity we have had our conversation in the world. See here, it is the witnessing cause of it: Paul had peace of Conscience; his conscience was able to make him rejoyce: How? Because it gave testimony that his conversation was godly and simple and gracious. Though we be in Christ, yet we can

1 John 3. 14. Hereby we know that we dwell in him and he in us, by the ſpirit that he hath given us. Mark; we come to know it by obedience and by the fruits of obedience. Take away obedience, we can never know peace. They
Gal. 6. 16. that walk by this rule, peace ſhall be upon them and upon the Iſrael of God, ſaith the Apoſtle. Thirdly, our peace of conſcience dependeth on our obedience as the confirming cauſe: Chriſt confirmeth our peace to us by making us walke cloſe to him and obedient unto him. Paul ſheweth how it preſerveth peace, as a ſhooe preſerveth the foot: ye know if we ſhould walk without ſhooes, barefoot, our feet would be in danger of pricking and hurting: So doth obedience to the Goſpel preſerve our Ephes. 6. 15. peace: Stand, ſaith the Apoſtle, having your feet ſhod with the preparation of the Goſpel of peace. Mark; he compareth it to a ſhooe, which he would have us ſhod with; and then it will be the Goſpel of peace to us, and our peace ſhall be in ſafety. Fourthly, our peace dependeth upon our obedience, not onely as a ſigne of true peace, nor onely as a guard to it, but as a thing pleaſing to God, without the which we diſpleaſe God. For though God be pleaſed with his children alwayes in Chriſt, yet he is not
1 Theſſ. 4. 1. pleaſed that any in Chriſt ſhould be diſobedient to him. Ye have received of us how ye ought to walke and to pleaſe God, ſaith the Apoſtle. When Gods children walk in obedience, that is pleaſing unto God. So that peace of conſcience doth greatly depend on obedience: For otherwiſe conſcience will be troubled; O I do not pleaſe God; This is diſpleaſing unto God; and, This doth provoke God. Not as though there were any ſuch perfection in our obedience that can ſatisfie any tittle of Gods Law; but becauſe when our perſons are pleaſing to God in Jeſus Chriſt, then our obedience to God is pleaſing too in Ieſus Chriſt, and conſcience will ſay it. Thus much ſhall ſuffice for anſwer to the ſecond queſtion.

III. Queſtion; What manner of obedience it is that peace of conſcience dependeth upon?

The reaſon of this queſtion is this; Becauſe it ſhould ſeem there is no ſuch obedience in this life as any peace of conſcience ſhould depend on. Doth not James ſay, In many things we ſinne all? Doth not our Saviour ſay, When ye have done all that ye can, ſay, We are unprofitable ſervants? If our conſcience can ſtill ſay that we are unprofitable, and that we do ſin in every thing that we do, yea in many things, in all the duties we go about; if our conſciences can ſay thus, How can any peace depend upon obedience? What obedience do you meane that peace of conſcience dependeth upon?

I anſwer, 1. Abſolute perfection in obedience is not required unto evangelicall peace. For if it were, no man could have peace; no not Paul, nor Abraham, nor any of the holieſt of Gods children: and therefore abſolute perfection is not required. If we ſay we have not ſinned, we make Chriſt a lyar, and his word is not in us, 1 John 1. 10. Our conſcience can ſtill ſay we have ſinned; and it can ſtill ſay our obedience is imperfect: A halting leg can never go perfectly. A Jacob is called he that halteth; and every godly ſoul halteth; Though he do not halt between two, as wicked people do, yet he halteth in following after God. What purblind eye can ſee perfectly? or thick eare heare perfectly? He that hath theſe imperfections of body, can neither go nor ſee nor heare perfectly; So the beſt of Gods children have imperfections of heart and ſpirit and minde: their faith is imperfect, their love is imperfect; and therefore their obedience must needs be imperfect. But absolute perfection is not required to true peace of conscience; and therefore this doth not hinder it. 2. Though absolute perfection is not required to peace, yet such obedience is required as may be acceptable to God. So saith the Apostle, We labour that whether present or absent we may be accepted of him. 2 Cor. 5.9. Such obedience we must shew as may be accepted of him, or we cannot have true peace. If our endeavours be not acceptable, our conscience will quickly heare of it, and tell us so: If we pray coldly, or heare unprofitably, or live loosely, if we do not do that which is acceptable to God, our consciences will soone complaine. Nay though we do do the duties, if we do not do them in an acceptable manner, conscience will have matter against us still. 3. This acceptablenesse of obedience lieth in this, when our obedienc is sincere, universall, and total, and proceeding from the spirit of Christ Jesus dwelling in us. The Apostle giveth it this phrase, When we walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit, Rom. 8.4. That is our fulfilling the Law, when Christ hath fulfilled the Law for us, and maketh us sincerely to walk by it, not after the flesh but after the Spirit: when we do not favour our selves in one lust, nor suffer our selves in any beloved sinne; but whatever it be that is evil, our conscience can say we truly do hate it and labour to avoid it; whatever it be that is commanded us, be it never so contrary to our nature, yet our conscience can say, we sincerely set our selves to do it. So walking not after the flesh, but after the Spirit, this is sincerity of obedience, and this is required unto peace. 4. This sincerity of obedience maketh us to bewail our very infirmities, and to be humbled for them: not onely to be humbled for greater sinnes, but also to be humbled for our infirmities. If we be not soundly humbled for our very infirmities also, they will hinder the peace of our conscience: We can have no peace except our conscience can witnesse that our infirmities do humble us, and drive us to Christ, and cause us to sue out a pardon. If conscience have not a pardon sealed for infirmities also, it will not be at peace. Christ bare our very infirmities: therefore we must be humbled for them, and go to him for pardon of them too, or conscience will not be at peace. Thus I have answered also this third question. Matth. 8.17.

IV. Question; How if a man have a burdened and troubled conscience, what must he do to be freed from it?

The reason of this question is this; Because men are ignorant about it. When men are troubled in conscience and burdened a little that way, presently they daub all with peace, and go a wrong way to work. This course the Lord doth complaine of in the false Prophets, who preached too much peace; They have healed the hurt of the daughter of my people slightly, saying, Peace, peace, when there is no peace. Jer. 8.11. And so they do more hurt then good: Like a Chirugion that skinneth the wound before he giveth searching salves to kill the matter of it: afterwards it breaketh out worse, and it is a hundred to one but it will cost the patient his life: So it is with many men: A man cannot roar a little for his sinnes, I have been a sinner, and what shall I do? I have been a beast, &c. But, O, say they, believe man, Christ died for thee, and the promise is to thee, and God will pardon thee. Thus they heale him slightly with Peace, peace, and it may be there is no peace to him yet; he had need to be searched more deeply: they skinne the wound, and it is a thousand to one but it loseth the mans soul, by giving a cordiall where a corrosive was necessary. And therefore great reason that this question should be answered, If a man have a burdened troubled conscience, what must such a man do to be freed from it?

I answer, 1. Let him take heed that he meddle not too much with the secret will of God, what his decree and purpose is from eternity. As soon as an arrow is shot into the conscience, and the conscience cometh to be humbled, commonly the heart layeth about it, And how if God have reprobated me? and what if he have appointed me to wrath? how then? Beloved, ye must take heed of this: If your hearts fasten upon reprobation, that will marre all; that will quite discourage a poor soul from going to God.

2. Understand the word right. Do not think that because God hath not in particular named thee, therefore he hath excluded thee. Gods promises are made in generall to all that believe; and they are to be applyed in particular to all them that believe: why then shouldst thou exclude thy self when God doth not exclude thee? Wouldst thou have Christ? Christ to justifie thee? Christ to sanctifie thee? Christ to rule thee? Wouldst thou be under Christs regiment, and live at his will? Come and welcome: no soul
Rev. 22. 17. is excepted. Whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely. Ye see there is a Quicunque vult, Whosoever will. Indeed if thou hast not a will to be in Christ; but thou wilt do thus and thus, and thou wilt have thy will, and this lust, and that friend, and such a course, and, Tush, this is too strict; nay, if you be there, thou art not for Christ: I have nothing for thee but hell and damnation. But if thou wouldst have Christ indeed, and be in Christ indeed, thy heart in Christ, thy will in Christ, thy whole self in Christ; then arise, he calleth thee. Thus understand the word right, the Gospel doth not exclude thee, whosoever thou art.

3. Thou must not for feare of shame or losse, &c. keep from restitution wheresoever thou hast done wrong, or satisfaction wheresoever thou hast cozened, or reformation wheresoever thou art accustomed to any evil, or the doing any thing that may procure ease and quiet to thy conscience. It may be one is troubled in conscience for his wronging his neighbour in twenty pounds, and if he would make restitution he might have found peace: but he will not; nay, he daubeth up his conscience some other way. Another it may be suffereth disorders in his family and foul abuses, which if he would redresse, he might have peace: but he will not. Another, if he would down with his pride; another, if he would be acquainted with Gods servants, or if he would take any paines in good duties, be more diligent for the work of repentance, &c. but these things will not be done: Men plaister up their consciences (I know not how) some other way, and so go to hell for not taking the right way. But if any of you be troubled in conscience, keep back nothing, hold back nothing that may make for your true peace and quiet.

4. Thou must wait on God: Cast thy self at his feet, humbly desire him to give thee the true peace of conscience. But wait Gods leisure, knowing thou hast deserved to be utterly deprived of it: and thus doing thou
Isa. 30. 18. shalt finde it to thy great comfort at last. Blessed are all they that wait for him; That is, when the Lord will be mercifull. He will do it with judement; he will do it when it may do thee the most good, when it may bring himself most glory: therefore it is fit thou shouldst wait for his time of comforting. Now because many do misconstrue this waiting Gods leisure, (As for example, one is dead to all good duties, O, saith he, I wait the Lords leisure till he quicken me: My heart is much hardned, saith another; but I wait the Lords leisure till he be pleased to soften it. Thus men are lazie in the meane while; and yet they think they wait the Lords leisure. O beloved, this is not the waiting the Lord meaneth; this will not stay conscience, conscience is guilty for all this waiting) therefore I beseech you consider what waiting I meane. 1. Wait upon the Lord, and keep his way; thou dost not wait else, unlesse thou keep praying, and striving, and meditating, and enquiring, and watching thine own heart lest it should slip aside. 2. Thou must wait as a servant waiteth upon his Master: If his Master calleth, he cometh; if he sendeth, he goeth; if he beckeneth, he Psal. 123. 2. taketh notice: So thou must wait. As servants wait upon their Masters,

ſo our eyes wait upon the Lord till he have mercy upon us. Be obedient in the meane time: go when he ſendeth; come when he calleth; obſerve when he beckeneth; be diligent to be doing his pleaſure. 3. Thou muſt wait onely upon God, not upon thy luſts too, and upon other things too; but thou muſt wait onely upon God: My ſoul, wait thou onely upon God, ſaith David, Pſal. 62.5. If thou wait upon any thing elſe, this is not to wait upon God. One waiteth a time to be revenged; another waiteth a time to ſatisfie this or that luſt: this is not to wait upon God at all. 4. Take heed of healing thy ſelfe, and comforting thy ſelfe, or daubing up thy conſcience thy ſelfe: If thou doſt ſo, thou doſt not wait upon God to do it: If thou doſt it thy ſelfe, and ſnatcheſt at comfort thy ſelfe before he do give it, then thou doſt not wait til he give it. Suppoſe a man hath done thee an injury; the Lord he will right thee if thou wilt wait: but if thou go and recompenſe evil for evil, and right thy ſelfe, thou doſt not wait upon God, as Solomon adviſeth, Say not thou, I will recompenſe evil; but wait on the Lord and he will ſave thee. Mark; thou muſt not ſave thy ſelfe, thine own credit, &c. by revenging, but wait on God for all. So here if thy conſcience be troubled, thou muſt wait upon God to comfort it: If thou goeſt and daubeſt up the matter thy ſelfe, and crieſt, Peace, peace, to thy ſelfe, thou doſt not wait upon God. Thus I have anſwered the laſt queſtion, How if a man have a burdened and troubled conſcience, what muſt ſuch a man do to be freed from it? And hitherto we have ſpoken of the two laſt ſubjects of conſcience, a Quiet conſcience, and an Unquiet conſcience; what they be, and, How they differ: and we have reſolved and anſwered the queſtions and difficulties about them. Prov. 20. 22.

Conſcience beareth witneſſe of our perſons.

COncerning the witneſſe of conſcience, I told you that conſcience beareth witneſſe of two things: 1. It beareth witneſſe of our actions; 2. It beareth witneſſe of our perſons. The former hath been declared unto you at large: I come now to the latter: Conſcience beareth witneſſe alſo of our perſons, whether we be good or evil, whether in Chriſt or in ſinne: And here I will ſhew you four things:

1. That every mans conſcience may inform him what ſtate he is in, whether of ſalvation or damnation, whether of grace or of nature.
2. How conſcience doth it.
3. When conſcience doth it.
4. How it cometh to paſſe then that ſo many thouſands miſtake and are ignorant and deluded about their eſtates.

1. For the firſt, That every mans conſcience may inform him what eſtate he is in, whether good or bad; (I ſpeak eſpecially of ſuch as live under the light of the Goſpel of Chriſt.) There are two rules: the one is Gods word, which pointeth out both eſtates; and the other is every mans conſcience, which is privy to the frame and ſtanding of every mans own heart, and which of theſe eſtates his ſtate is, conſcience is privy to this. I will inſtance in ſome ſorts of men. 1. The Jews, who contented themſelves with formality: they ſacrificed, they offered, they payed their tithes, they did that which Moſes commanded them, for the letter of it: now ye ſhall ſee their conſcience could tell them that they were not perfect nor upright with God: All their duties, and formalities, and gift, and ſacrifices could not make them that did the ſervice perfect, as pertaining to the 1. Every mans conſcience may inform him in what ſtate he is.

conscience, Heb. 9. 9. Mark; Their consciences could say they were not upright for all this. As they were not upright, so their conscience could tell them they were not upright. 2. Another instance we have in the Scribes and Pharisees: When they would have condemned the woman taken in adultery, their own conscience was privy that they were sinners themselves, John 8. 9. So also it is with a childe of God: His conscience is able to inform him that he is a child of God, and that he doth truly serve God. I thank God, saith Paul, whom I serve with a pure conscience. His conscience told him he was a true servant of God, and that he was God's: whose I am, saith he. So Davids conscience; I am thine; save me: for I have sought thy commandments. So the Church; My beloved is mine, and I am his. Ye see then how conscience can inform and tell us what estate we are in, whether we be godly or carnall, whether our conversation be in heaven or on earth, whether we be in Christ or out of him. The spirit of man knoweth what is in him. It is easie to know what our great thoughts of heart are upon, what our greatest purposes and projects and studies be; whether about God or the world: the spirit of a man must needs know it. And therefore every man may draw out from conscience a true conclusion how it is with him. The reasons are these:

1. The first is taken from the nature of conscience. The nature of conscience is such that it must needs be able to know what is with a man. Now his welldoings or his illdoings are with him: he was with himselfe when he did them. When thou art proud, or impatient, or careless in any duty, thou art with thy selfe when thou art so: All thy illdoings are with thee: and therefore thy conscience must needs know what thou art. Our transgressions are with us; and as for our iniquities we know them. Take a curser; and, as Solomon saith, Thine own heart knoweth that thou hast used to curse others. So it is with a godly soul: Thine obedience is with thee, and thy selfe-deniall is with thee, and thy care to walk before God, all is with thee; and therefore thou must needs know it. This is the nature of conscience; It is privy to what is with one.

Isa. 59. 12.

Eccles. 7. 22.

2. The second reason is taken from the equity of Gods judgements on the wicked. The Lord he will judge none to hell, but his conscience shall confesse he was one that walked in the way to hell and death. Ye may read it in the man that had not on a wedding-garment: When Christ did charge him with his not having on a wedding-garment, and did condemne him to utter darknesse, the text saith, he was speechlesse; that is, his conscience confessed that Christs judgement was just: I have not on a wedding-garment, saith his conscience; and it is my fault that I have none; and I am rightly condemned. Thus his conscience did know it; otherwise he could not have been speechlesse in his own defence. As Festus told Agrippa that he answered the Priests, It is not the manner of the Romans to deliver any man to die before that he who is accused have his accusers face to face, and have licence to answer for himselfe concerning the crime laid against him: So may I say, that the great Judge of quick and dead will not judge any man to hell, but he will have his accusers face to face, and if he can answer for himselfe, he may. Now if conscience be not privy to what estate soever a wicked man is in, his conscience could never accuse him face to face at the last day, nor justifie the Lord Jesus, and make the sinner stand speechlesse before God. He might answer, Lord, I do not know any such thing as is laid to my charge: I am not convinced that the case is thus and thus with me, that I am in such an estate as I am accused of. No wicked man shall be able to say thus: Therefore conscience can inform a man in what estate he is.

Matth. 22. 12.

Acts 25. 16.

3. The third reason is taken from the Lords manner of judging the godly. He will judge them and absolve them secundùm allegata & probata, as we say, according to the word and their own consciences. Ye may see the true forme of judgement which the Lord will go by, Matth. 25. Where the Lord convinceth the whole World who were righteous, and who were not, who to be judged to punishment, and who to life for ever; at last he concludeth, The wicked shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternall. As if he had said, Your consciences can say ye are wicked: ye did not feed, nor clothe, nor visit me: Go your wayes to hell. So for the righteous; Your consciences can say ye are righteous: Go ye to heaven. Thus the Lord will do. Now this could not be if conscience could not informe every one that is godly, that he is so: If conscience could not witnesse what estate they are in, this could not be. Thus ye see the truth of the first thing.

II. The second thing that I promised to shew you is, How conscience doth this. Ye have heard that it is able to informe every one what estate he is in before God: Now it followeth to consider, How conscience doth it. This it doth by comparing the word of God with our hearts, and our hearts with the word: As for example; They who have respect to all Gods Commandements shall never be ashamed, saith the word: But, saith conscience, I desire to know all my duty to God and man, and to performe all that I know: and therefore I shall not be ashamed. To him that soweth righteousnesse shall be a sure reward, saith the word, But, saith conscience, I plough up my nature and all the fallow-ground of my heart, and I sow righteousnesse: and therefore to me shall be a sure reward. So, To be spiritually-minded is life and peace. saith the word; But, saith conscience, I am spiritually-minded; my minde is set upon things that are spirituall: therefore I have life and peace. So conscience also judgeth of the state of sinne. Those that live after the flesh shall die, saith the word: But, saith conscience, my life is led after the flesh and the lusts of it: therefore I shall die. He that believeth not is condemned already; saith the word: But, saith conscience, I do not believe: therefore I am in the state of condemnation. The word saith, A good tree bringeth forth good fruit, and a corrupt tree bringeth forth corrupt fruit: But, saith conscience, my works and my courses are corrupt and naught: therefore so is my heart. Thus ye see that conscience doth it by reasoning: And this conscience can very well do; 1. Because conscience hath a very good judgement. It is a very wise and judicious faculty in the soul of man. Some make it an act of judgement. We do not take it so: It is not an act of judgement, but it is a reflexive faculty of the soul, having a very good judgement. Whether it be right to obey you rather than God, judge ye, saith Peter, Acts 4. 19. appealing to their own consciences to judge in the point. So that conscience is a faculty of a good judgement. Now if it be judicious, it must need be able to reason and to argue about our estate, and finde out whether they be good or no. It is the judgement of a man that is able to argue, and able to hold an argument: We thus judge, saith the Apostle, that if one died for all, then are all dead, 2 Cor. 5. 14. Mark; His proposition he would prove was, That all the Believers in Christ are dead to themselves, and alive unto God. Now ye may see how his judgement maketh here an argument; If Christ died for them all, then they are all dead: but Christ died for them all: therefore they are all dead. Judgement is able to make arguments: and therefore if conscience be a reflexive faculty that hath a very good judgement, it must needs be able to frame arguments, and so make out what our estates are. 2. Because there is naturall logick in every mans conscience: It can frame syllogismes, thus, As many as be led by the spirit of God, are the sonnes of God, saith the word: But, saith a godly mans conscience, I am led by Gods Spirit, and I am carefull to follow the leading of Gods holy Spirit: therefore I am one of Gods sonnes. And so on the other side.

2. How conscience doth this.

Prov. 11. 18.

Rom. 8. 6.

Rom. 8. 13.

John 3. 18.

side. Ye will say, How can a Country-mans conscience make syllogismes? It is onely of Scholars and such as have studied Logick in the Schools to make syllogismes. I answer, It is true; Artificiall Logick is onely among Scholars: But there is naturall Logick in conscience, which doth not stand upon forms. The godly people at Rome were never brought up at University: yet the Apostle telleth them they had Logick enough to argue themselves to be dead unto sinne and alive unto God through Christ; Likewise Rom. 6. 11. also, saith he, reckon ye your selves to be dead indeed unto sinne, but alive unto God through Jesus Christ our Lord. The Originall is, λογίζεσθε, Exercise so much Logick in your selves; Like good Logicians prove your selves to be dead unto sinne and alive to God. So that ye see there is naturall Logick in conscience: and therefore conscience is able to frame arguments about our estate, and to inform us what it is.

2. When conscience doth this.

III. The third thing I propounded to consider is, When conscience doth this. This is a very necessary point: and indeed so they are all; but this more especially. I have shewed that conscience is able to informe us what estate we are in, whether of grace or nature: but when doth it performe this? I answer, I need not so much speak of the godly, because they do mark conscience. But let me speak of such as are foolish, disobedient, serving divers lusts, who never had yet the washing of regeneration nor the renewing of the holy Ghost: I answer about them; 1. Their conscience must needs have a time when to do it. I do remember my faults this day, saith Pharaohs Butler, Gen. 41. 9. His conscience did informe him; and there was a time when his conscience did informe him. 2. Conscience would choose a time by it selfe: it would informe a wicked man solemnly and punctually of his rotten and cursed estate he is in. I say, it would have a solemne time by it selfe for this, if it could have it: but a wicked man taketh an order with his conscience that it shall not tell him solemnly how it is with him; neither will he finde a time to suffer it: As it was with Felix; When his conscience began to grumble against him, when Paul had told him of righteousnesse and of judgement, he trembled; his conscience began to stirre, and would then have solemnly dealt with him indeed: but he shuffled it off, and would not find time; Go thy way at this time, Acts 24. 25. saith he to Paul; I will hear thee at a more convenient time. And so he said to his conscience too. Conscience would take a solemn and set time to inform men what their estates are; but men will not suffer them: and therefore conscience is faine to take such sudden times as it can get. Ye will ask, What times be they?

Conscience interlineth.

I answer, First, when conscience interlineth: As for example, in the hearing of the word: While men are hearing the word, it may be the preacher preacheth of holinesse, and a wicked man heareth it; But I have it not, saith his conscience. Mark; his conscience interlineth. It may be the preacher is preaching how desperately careless men are of their souls, how they look to every thing more then to them; conscience interlineth, This is my case. It may be he is preaching against adultery; This sinne I have committed, saith a guilty conscience: or against rushing upon Gods Ordinances without preparation; This is my constant course, saith an evil mans conscience. It may be the preacher is preaching of conversion and becoming a new creature in Christ; This I am yet to seeke in, saith conscience. Thus conscience interlineth: Though the man heareth on, and it may be taketh little to heart, yet conscience interlineth a sudden information of his wretched estate. Like a bird that flieth by, or like a swift-shot arrow, that is presently out of sight, so it may be a man taketh very little notice of it. Like the forenamed Felix: as Paul was preaching of righteousnesse and temperance, I have it not, saith his conscience; and of judgement?

Acts 24. 25.

judgement to come, What shall I do then? saith his Conscience. Thus Conscience interlined and made him tremble on a sudden, like a sudden shivering of a cold, or a sudden startle of a man affrighted, and away it was gone quickly. I beseech you observe your own bosomes. Do ye not feel this now and then at a Sermon, when ye heare it? do not your Consciences interline our Sermons, and put in parentheses now and then? When you hear such and such a sinne reproved, condemned, And this is my sin, saith conscience: when ye hear these and these graces commended, And I never had these, saith Conscience: when ye hear these and these marks of a carnall estate, And these, or some of these, are in me, saith Conscience: do not your Consciences interline in this manner? As Paul was speaking to the Shipmen concerning God, his Conscience did sweetly interline thus, There stood by me this night an Angel of God, whose I am, saith his Conscience. And as he was writing to the Romanes, God is my witnesse, saith he, whom I serve in my spirit. But do not your Consciences interline oth rwise with you? If they do, I beseech you consider it: Your Consciences do then truly inform you of your rotten estates: listen to them. Acts 27. 23. Rom. 1. 9.

Secondly, when Conscience saieth a choking. As for example, in prayer: a wicked man prayeth; But I do not pray right, saith his Conscience. I humbly beseech thee, O Lord: Nay, but I do not beseech humbly, saith this Conscience. I desire to be sanctified and purged from my sinnes: Nay, but I do not hunger after any such thing, saith Conscience. I do not confesse my sinnes right, nor beg for grace right. Do your Consciences choke you thus? Now your Consciences inform you of your estates. Peradventure ye hardly perceive this choking at all: It is done in a moment, and is prevented by exaltation, because ye are not willing to heare it: and therefore it may be Conscience doth it by sudden flashes. It is said the Lord spake suddenly to Moses: so often Conscience speaketh suddenly to men, a word and a way. As David saith of the wicked, God shall shoot an arrow at them, and they shall be wounded on a sudden: So Conscience shooteth a quick arrow, and it woundeth men in the twinkling of an eye, and it is gone. Lord have mercy upon us, said one: But I should not say so vainly and in ordinary talke, saith Conscience. I do not hate this man for his holinesse and strictnesse: but you do, saith Conscience. And so when men are defending evil by a pretence; But this is false, saith Conscience. Thus Conscience choketh on a sudden, and is gone. I confesse, generally the men of the world mark not these things: They are such sudden sparklings of Conscience that men for the most part do not heed them: But these are Gods witnesses; and men shall know one day they were truly informed of their estates by these instantaneous Items of Conscience. Conscience choketh. Num. 12. 4.

Thirdly, when Conscience shooteth like a stitch in a mans side. As for example; Sometimes when men are about their Callings and their worldly businesse, then cometh Conscience like a sudden stitch in ones side, and giveth them a twitch, O how worldly am I! saith Conscience: Shall I never get this worldly-mindednesse cured? Many times Conscience speaketh while men are working, or playing, or eating, or buying, or selling.

Fourthly, so likewise when Conscience commenteth upon the judgements of God. Let an adulterer fall sick; Yea, this is for mine adultery, saith his Conscience. Let a Company-keeper be in want of outward things; Yea, this is my drunkennesse, saith Conscience: This is my wickednesse, my way, my doings which have procured me these things; this ague, this poverty, this shame, this discomfort. Thus I have shewed you how Conscience doth inform the wicked of their wretched estate; and when it doth it. It remaineth now that I speak something of the fourth point. Jer. 4. 18.

4. Why many are ignorant of their estate.

IV. How cometh it to passe then that so many thousands mistake, and are ignorant ignorant and deluded about their estates? The reason of this doubt is this; Seeing conscience is able to inform every one what his estate is, whether he be blessed or cursed; and seeing also that conscience doth it; and doth it by argument; and hath its time when it doth it: a man now would wonder that any should be ignorant of his estate, when his own conscience doth tell him how it is with him. For answer I will explain unto you two things: 1. The reasons why men are mistaken; 2. The reasons why they are mistaken though conscience inform them.

Reas. 1. First, they build upon false grounds which are not in Gods word. Some are so foolish that they build upon outward things, as health, peace, prosperity, successe, and the like. They prosper, and all things go well with them, and therefore sure God is at peace with them: This is not so; but they thinke so though. Some againe build upon grounds which men of corrupt mindes do give them, or which they take from the common opinion of most, thinking that to be faith and repentance which the most take so to be, or which a teacher fit for their palate taketh so to be. On the contrary side, weak Christians oftentimes mistake themselves by judging their estates to be bad, because God letteth them be poor and meane and comfortlesse in the world: Therefore they conclude God is angry with them, or that they are not that which they seem to themselves to be, because they are so crossed in all outward things. This is the first reason of errour in this kinde.

Reas. 2. 2. A second reason is the not-right understanding of Gods word: As when men judge of themselves by such places of Scripture as were not intended to be rules, and to be of use to such ends as they apply them: as Whosoever calleth upon the Lord shall be saved, Rom. 10. 13. Hence the wicked may falsely conclude, I call upon the Lord, and I pray unto him; therefore I shall be saved. And so on the contrary, a weak Christian who findeth not in himselfe those degrees of grace which some places of Scripture seeme to require, concludeth from thence against himselfe, Therefore I have no grace at all. This is a second cause of mistaking.

Reas. 3. 3. A third cause is the not trying and examining our own hearts. Some are loth to trouble themselves about it: They are loth to think so badly of themselves as that they are in such a course as wherein God will not love them. Nay, they cannot endure that others should discover their hearts unto them: They had as lieve they should shew them the pit of hell as shew them themselves. They look to some common gifts and graces that are in them, such gifts and graces may be in a reprobate, but they will not think so; as illumination, knowledge, the gift of prayer, of temperance, &c. These they look to, and these they speake of, though they have reigning lusts within in their hearts: As Jehu; Come, see my zeale, saith he, 2 Kings 10. 16. He doth not say, Come, see my pride and hypocrisie: but, my zeale. Jehu looked at his zeale, and so thought he was right. So on the contrary, weak Christians may sometimes look only at their sinnes and infirmities, and take no notice of Gods graces that are in them, and so may mistake their owne selves, and conclude amisse of their estates. Thus I have shewed you the reasons why men are mistaken about their estates. Now I will shew you the reasons why men are mistaken though conscience do tell them.

1. Because the speeches of conscience in the wicked many times, yea most times, are low speeches. The gnawings of conscience whereby they are told they are in a bad and a damned estate are like the Isai. 66. 24. gnawings of a very little worme that a man can hardly feel. Where their worme dieth not: The word in the Originall, תולעת, signifieth a very little worme that breedeth in scarlet, that a man can very hardly see or perceive: ſo men ſometimes do hardly ſee or perceive the condemning and gnawing of conſcience. Again, conſcience biteth ſuddenly, as I told you; it giveth a little nip, and away: Like a ſparrow that flieth by: it flieth ſo faſt by a man's eye, that he can ſcarce tell whether it be a ſparrow or no: So it is not eaſily perceived whether it be a condemning conſcience or no: it giveth ſuch ſudden nips, and away, that men ſeldome take notice. Beloved, there is never a wicked man under heaven; unleſſe he be delivered up abſolutely to a reprobate ſenſe, but hath a thouſand of theſe ſudden momentany nips every day in the yeare. Had he the heart to obſerve them (but he hath not) he might ſee his wretched eſtate, to trouble him, and provoke him to Chriſt, and to be converted that God might heal him; I ſay, had he a heart he might ſee it: but theſe nips are ſo ſecret and ſudden that he doth not. So likewiſe it is with the godly in regard of true comfort: Their conſcience ſuddenly flaſheth in comfort, and they many times do not obſerve it. As Job ſpeaketh of God, Lo, he goeth by me, and I ſee him not: he paſſeth on alſo, and I perceive him not: So doth the Lord go by his children in the ſudden flaſhes of comfort in their conſcience, but many times they ſee him not, perceive him not. Iob 9. 11.

2. Becauſe the devil blindeth mens eyes, therefore they do not ſee what their conſciences do ſhew them. Ye may read this of the wicked people in Corinth: St. Paul ſaith he commended himſelfe and the Goſpel to every mans conſcience in the ſight of God; that is, He did ſo preach, and ſo live, that every mans conſcience could not chooſe but ſay, Certainly Paul preacheth the truth, and Paul liveth right, and we muſt live as he ſpeaketh and doeth. He made their conſciences ſay thus, and to tell them they were not right if they did not. But mark what followeth: Some did not ſee this: Why? The god of this world, ſaith he, hath blinded their eyes. So the god of this world blindeth the eyes of the wicked, that what their conſciences ſhew them they do not ſee it nor obſerve it. So for Gods people; Though they be in a good and a bleſſed eſtate, and their conſciences can ſay it, yet Satan oftentimes hindereth them, that they do not perceive their own comfort. 2 Cor. 4. 2.

3. Men do not love conſcience. We ſhould love conſcience better than the deareſt friend we have under heaven. We would do much for a friends ſake: but we ſhould do a thouſand times more for conſcience ſake: Obey Magiſtrates for conſcience ſake; ſuffer diſgrace, reproaches, any thing, for conſcience ſake. It is better than all the friends in the world. But the wicked, they do not love conſcience: let conſcience ſpeak, they care not to heare it. They will heare friends, but they will not heare conſcience. Let their luſts call, and their profits and pleaſures call for this and that thing, they heare all: but they love not to heare conſcience. Nay, many wicked men are angry to heare talke of it. When Paul had made mention of conſcience, Ananias commanded he ſhould be ſmitten: Men and brethren, ſaith Paul, I have lived in all good conſcience before God untill this day. Smite him on the mouth, ſaith the high Prieſt Ananias. He was angry to heare him talke of a good conſcience. This is moſt certain; men do not love conſcience, nor to be curbed by conſcience, nor informed by conſcience: They had as lieve ſee the devil, as that their conſciences ſhould inform them of their eſtates, and tell them thus and thus they are. They are told rightly, and yet they are miſtaken, becauſe they do not love to heare conſcience of that Theme. Rom. 13. 5. Act. 23. 8.

Of a good and bad Conscience.

YE have heard concerning the witnesse-bearing of conscience about our estates. The next thing to be spoken of is that wel-known distinction of a Good and a Bad conscience. This distinction we read of in Scripture: Concerning a good conscience see Heb. 13. 18. We trust we have a good conscience. Concerning a bad conscience see Heb. 10. 22. Having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience. There be both the members of the distinction. Of them both briefly and in order; and first of a good conscience.

Concerning a good conscience. The goodnesse of conscience is twofold; naturall, and renewed. 1. The naturall goodnesse of conscience consisteth in those reliques of goodnesse which it retaineth since the Creation. Ye know, man depraved and corrupted his conscience by his fall: yet there be some reliques left, as reason, and knowledge, and reflexion. I do not meane reliques of any spirituall goodnesse in conscience: For as there is no spirituall goodnesse left in the other faculties of the soul, so neither in conscience. But the naturall goodnesse which I meane is nothing else but the veracity of conscience, whereby it is inforced according to the knowledge it hath, to tell the truth. Thus every wicked man hath a good conscience: Their conscience is good in that sense; their conscience hath this naturall goodnesse, that it telleth them the truth how it is with them. Nay, it is essentiall to conscience to be good in this sense. It is the essentiall property of conscience to speak according to its knowledge. It is the best faculty a wicked man hath: it is better than his minde, or heart, or will. There is more goodnesse in a wicked mans conscience than in any other of the powers of his soul: His conscience speaketh more for God than himself doth, and standeth more for God then himselfe will. Not but that as all the powers of the soul are desperately corrupted by sinne, so conscience is desperately corrupted as well as any of them: but I speak of the essentiall goodnesse of it, which can never be lost. The devils in hell have not lost the goodnesse of their essence: Nay, the essence is better than the essence of Gods Saints: their essence must be good, because that is Gods creature; nay, better then any mans essence, because the Lord made them a degree above man. And as man is a degree above beasts, so Angels are a degree above man: So conscience is a degree above other powers of the soul in its natural goodnesse. That conscience hath such a naturall goodnesse in it, see it in those cursed Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites, who brought the woman taken in adultery to Christ: Their conscience
John 8. 9. was good; they were convicted of their consciences: their consciences dealt honestly with them, and told them the truth, that they were wicked sinners themselves. This is the naturall goodnesse in conscience.

2. A renewed good conscience. I call it a renewed good conscience, because when a man is renewed, all the man is renewed; all his minde and the spirit of it is renewed, Ephes. 4. 23. That ye may be renewed in the spirit of your minde. If the man be renewed, all the minde must be renewed; and therefore the conscience must be renewed too; for the minde and the conscience ever go together: nay, conscience is mainly seated in the minde; and therefore if the minde be renewed, so is the conscience; and if the
Tit. 1. 15. minde be defiled, so is the conscience. To them that are defiled is nothing pure, but their mindes and consciences are defiled. Mark; When they are defiled they are defiled together: so when they are washed and renewed, they are washed and renewed together. Now this renewed conscience is either perfect or defective,

defective. 1. Perfect; I meane not perfect in every degree of goodnesse: For so no mans conscience in the world is perfect: But I meane perfect to every part and condition of goodnesse. 2. A defective good renewed conscience is that which faileth in some conditions of good life. We call it a weake conscience, which is apt to be polluted and defiled again. 1 Cor. 8. 7. Their conscience being weak is defiled. This is a defective good conscience, a conscience renewed, but imperfectly renewed.

I. To a good conscience that is soundly renewed five things are necessary. A sound conscience.

1. Knowledge of Gods will, and that which doth follow the true knowledge of his will, namely true humiliation and feare. By nature the conscience is blind and sturdy and venturous; and therefore it is necessary that it should be inlightened to understand the will of God and to please it: and again it is necessary that the heart should be humbled, or else it will not stoop to Gods will: and it is necessary also that this holy feare should fall upon the heart, that it may not dare to transgresse. S. Peter being to speak of a good conscience, premiseth all these as necessary thereunto: First he adviseth that Christians have knowledge to be able to give a reason of the hope that is in them; and then that they should have meeknesse and feare, for to do it with meeknesse and fear, saith he, having a good conscience. Mark; Knowledge and humblenesse and fear are required to make a good conscience; without them the conscience cannot be good. By nature we are all blind, and sturdy, and fearlesse of sinning: and therefore till we be cured of these evils, our consciences cannot be good. 1 Pet. 3. 15, 16.

2. The second thing is a watchfulnesse and warfare against sin: This is required too to a renewed good conscience. By nature we are drowsie, and careless, and secure, and do not stand upon our guard to wage war against our lusts and the desires of our flesh; and so long our consciences can never be good: and therefore this spirituall watchfulnesse and maintaining war against sin is requited to the having a good conscience: That thou mayest war a good warfare, saith Paul to Timothy, having faith and a good conscience, 1 Tim. 1. 18, 19. Some who seemed to have a good conscience, because they did not maintaine this holy warfare against sin and the flesh, they have lost it: Therefore this is another requisite required to a good conscience.

3. The third is tendernesse of conscience. By nature our hearts are seared, and dead, and unclean: and therefore we must get us tender and pure hearts, if we would have good renewed consciences. The end of the commandment is love, out of a pure heart and good conscience and faith unfeigned, 1 Tim. 1. 5. See how the Apostle compoundeth them together, a pure heart ... a good conscience. We must get our hearts purged and quickened, that they may be sensible of the least evil; and then our consciences will be good and be as a bridle to hold us from evil. A hard heart and a good conscience can never stand together.

4. The fourth is the cleannesse of conscience by the washing of Christs blood. This is the maine and the principall of all: Yea indeed, the blood of Christ is the sole and onely cause of a good conscience. I would not be mistaken: I named indeed other causes; Knowledge, and Humbling, and a holy Feare, a Combat against sinne, and Tendernesse: but I do not mean as though a good conscience were partly beholding to them, and partly to Christs blood: For it is wholly and onely beholding to Christs blood for its goodnesse; his blood is the onely price of it: But my meaning is this, That though Christs blood be the one onely cause of redemption, yet in the application of redemption the Lord useth all those forenamed graces, while he applieth it to the conscience. Therefore this now I adde; The washing of Christs blood, this is chiefly required to the goodnesse of con-conscience. We have two places of Scripture to prove it: The one, Heb.9. 14. How much more shall the blood of Christ purge your consciences from dead works? It is that onely can do it. The other text is 1 Pet.3.21. The answer of a good conscience towards God by the resurrection Jesus Christ. Where the Apostle first giveth this title to a renewed conscience, to be called a good conscience: Secondly, he nameth the cause that maketh it to be good, the power of Christs resurrection; When the resurrection of Christ Jesus is powerfull upon us, then conscience becometh good.

5. The fifth is quietnesse. By nature nothing is so fierce and violent, if it be once awaked, as conscience is: O it is unspeakly furious. Thus is conscience by nature: and therefore it can never be good untill we get it appeased with the assurance of the pardon of our sins, and so true peace and comfort established in it. This is the reason why the Scripture joyneth a good conscience and faith so often together: as 1 Tim.3.9. Holding the mystery of faith in a pure conscience. It cannnot be a pure or good conscience if faith be not held in it. As long as the conscience is not underpropped by faith, the conscience must needs be in a wilderness: Perhaps my sinnes are imputed unto me; perhaps they are pardoned: Perhaps they are covered, perhaps not. As long as the conscience lieth under these uncertainties, it cannot be firm and soundly good indeed: therefore we must labour for assurance of pardon by faith. Thus much of a good renewed conscience, that is perfectly and soundly renewed.

An infirm conscience.

II. Secondly, There is a good conscience renewed, but not soundly renewed, very much as yet defective and imperfect. The former conscience is called conscientia firma, a firm conscience: This is called conscientia infirma, an infirm conscience. Rom. 15. 1. We that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak. This infirm conscience is a good conscience too, and renewed, but cumbred with sundry imperfections; which in process of time by growth in grace are, for the most part, conquered in the godly. True faith is required unto this: For the Apostle calleth such an one a brother in Christ, one that hath this infirm conscience: It is good neither to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor any thing whereby thy brother stumbleth. And we must not set such an one at nought. Tush, what care I for him? I know I may lawfully do thus: and this is my Christian liberty; and shall I lose it for him, because of his conscience? Nay saith the Apostle, Why dost thou set at nought thy brother? Mark; The Apostle counteth such an one a Christian brother, and not to be set at nought: and therefore this is a good conscience too, differing as much as white from black, from such consciences as are weak through superstition of mind, and through pride of heart, because they will not be otherwise; or through affected ignorace because they love not to be better informed. These weak consciences are wicked; I speak not of these: I speak of a good conscience, a conscience renewed, but renewed imperfectly, having yet sundry defects and imperfections. The imperfections of it are

Rom.14. 21.

Rom.14. 10.

1. Imperfection of knowledge. It doth not yet soundly and clearly understand what is lawfull, and what is pure, and what is by Christian liberty indifferent. Paul saith, I know and am perswaded by the Lord Jesus, that there nothing unclean of it selfe: but to him that esteemeth any thing to be unclean, to him it is unclean. He speaketh of things that are indifferent: The Apostle had knowledge: but there were others who did not know this; O I may not eat this meat; I may not play at bowles, or use any other recreation: I should sin if I should, &c. This is one weaknesse in this kind of conscience, weaknesse of knowledge.

Rom. 14. 14.

2. The second imperfection is to be grieved where it needeth not be grieved; As when it seeth other do that which it self through mistake doth judge it to be evill, it is apt to be grieved and troubled to see it; If thy brother be

Rom. 14. 15.

grie ved

grieved with thy meat, now walkest thou not charitably. It may be thou thinkest it lawfull to eat such meat; but he thinketh otherwise, and so is grieved to see thee eat. This is another imperfection in this conscience, to be grieved and offended without just cause.

3. A third imperfection is in judgement: It is apt to judge and condemn another mans liberty: 1 Cor. 10. 29. Why is my liberty judged of another mans conscience? He speaketh of a weak conscience. It is apt to be judging and condemning my liberty, saith he; but why so? This is a fault and an imperfection indeed; O such an one sinneth, he doth so and so: yet it way be the thing is not unlawfull, but a weak conscience is apt so to judge it, and to condemne him that doth it, Let not him that eateth despise him that eateth not: and let not him that eateth not, judge him that eateth. Rom. 14. 3.

4. A fourth imperfection is this: A weak conscience is apt to be misled. So the Apostle intimateth; Take heed lest by any means this liberty of yours become a stumbling-block unto them that are weak: for if any man see thee who hast knowledge sit at meat in the Idols Temple, shall not the conscience of him that is weak be emboldened to eat those things which are offered to Idols? and through thy knowledge shall thy weak brother perish for whom Christ died? Where ye see that weak consciences are apt to be misled. The reason is this, Because when they see others whom they know to be more learned and judicious than themselves to do so and so, that may soon tempt them to do it, though their conscience be against it. 1 Cor. 8, 9, 10, 11.

The first use is this; If any have weak consciences, let them labour to strengthen them. Ye see what imperfections are in a weak conscience; how apt it is to be offended and to judge other mens liberty, how prone to misleading: therefore let every good soul labour to be strengthed. Use 1.

The second use is this; Those that be strong must be carefull that they offend not the weak. Though they do believe such and such Christian liberties they have, yet if they know the use of them will offend their weak brother, they should be carefull to abstain. Let no man put a stumbling-block or an occasion to fall in his brothers way. 2. Rom. 14. 13.

Thirdly, if it be such a sinne to sinne against the conscience of the weak, then what a sinne is it to sin against the conscience of all that are godly, whether weak ones or strong ones? Ye who walk after the flesh, and can have disorders in your families, and vanity in your mouthes, and apparent corruptions in your lives; Ye who can drink and be drunken, and keep company, and prophane the Lords dayes; ye offend the consciences of all that are godly: it is a grief to their soules to see it. Let me tell you; It is a sinne to be wicked however, and the high-way to hell: but to be wicked when ye have godly neighbours about you, your sinne now is double: For as you offend God, so you offend them too. Ye may remember what Christ saith, Whosoever offendeth one of these little ones which believe in me, it were better for him that a millstone were hung about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the Sea, Matth. 18. 6. Ah ye vile wretches! ye little imagine what fearfull vengeance ye pull on your own heads: It were better for you that a millstone were hung about your necks, and ye thrown into the Sea, then that ye should offend one of these little ones. Ye may call them what ye will; call them puritanes, precisians, uncharitable people, censurers: ye may call them as Satan teacheth you to call them: but it is certain, it were better a millstone were hung about your neck, and ye thrown into the Sea, then that ye should offend any one of Christs little ones: The Lord open your eyes that ye may repent and believe the Gospel your selves and be saved. 3.

4. Lastly, be exhorted, brethren, to labour after a good conscience. How excellent a thing is it that hath so many good ingredients! Illumination mination is one ingredient, and Faith is another, and Tenderneſſe another, and Pureneſſe another, and Quietneſſe another, and the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt another. It is like Aarons compoſition, which ſmelt ſweetly when he went into the ſanctuary: It is compounded of excellent conditions, ſuch as ſmell ſweet when we come before God: the Lord loveth that ſuch ſhould come near him. We may come with aſſurance to ſpeed if we come with a good conſcience; Let us draw near with aſſurance of faith, having our hearts Heb. 10. 22. ſprinkled from an evill conſcience. Mark; we may draw near with aſſurance if we come with a good conſcience. It will comfort us in all troubles, and ſupport us in all dangers: It maketh us happy: nay, there is no happineſſe without it. It will make us with quietneſſe and contentedneſſe of ſpirit undergoe whatſoever it ſhall pleaſe God to lay upon us. How can they want comfort that have this? It is a ſpring of comfort within them. This will remain with us when all other comforts will forſake us: When friends fail, and eſtate faileth, when credit and health and ſtrength and all fail, then a good conſcience, if we have it, will ſpeak peace to us, yea and it will effect it in us, comfort us, and faſten comfort upon us. Friends may ſpeak words of comfort and peace to us; but it may be we are not able to receive it: the Miniſter may preach peace; but it may be we are not able to take it: But a good conſcience ſpeaketh peace and effecteth it; it doth not only ſpeak it, but putteth it into our hearts. It proppeth us up in all miſeries, in ſickneſſes, yea in death it ſelfe. A good conſcience then maketh us hold up our heads when all the world ſhall be confounded: A good conſcience will bear us out againſt the King of terrours: It is onely a good conſcience that can look death in the face, and ſay, O death where is thy ſting? 1 Cor. 15. 55. 57. thanks be to God who giveth us victory through our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Yea, at the day of judgement, when the whole world ſhall be burning before us, when the great men of the world who go in ſilks and ſcarlet, and broidred hair, ſhall fear and ſhiver as a reed ſhaken with the wind, this will make us with boldneſſe undergoe the terrour of it. This will make us happy in all our diſtreſſes: When croſſes pelt us, and ſickneſs paineth us, and death attacheth us, we are happy men. What if we have the tokens of Gods wrath upon our bodies, ſo we have the marks of his love upon our ſoules? What outward calamity ſoever hapneth to us, yet if we have this good conſcience we are happy. O then let us labour to get it by faith and a holy life. If we would be ſafe in the flood-time, in the day of Gods wrath, we muſt be buſie now about the ark, we muſt provide before-hand for it: Nothing but this ark will ſave us in the deluge of Gods anger. It is in vain to trouble our ſelves about other things: Jubal was a merry man; he Gen. 4. 20. made Pipes and Organes: Jaball built tents; others planted vineyards: but Noah provided his ark. Many deſire comfort in ſickneſs, in death; but they do not provide for it before-hand: They look after their ſports or buſineſſes in the world; but this ark is neglected, this good conſcience, without which all mens labour is vain. Be they what they will be, in never ſo much credit and eſteem, they are yet moſt miſerable when troubles and afflictions come on them, as one day they ſhall and ſhall not tarry; than all their comforts will forſake them: When death looketh them in the face: when their hearts die within them. How full of pride and haughtineſs ſoever they were before, yet when they come to die, if their conſciences be awaked, they will with Saul fall down 1 Sam. 28. 20. to hear the name of death, and no ſpirits be left in them. Nay, if we want a good conſcience when we lie on our death-beds, and deſire good people to pray for us, Good Sir, I beſeech you let me have the benefit of your prayers to God for me: Alas, if thou haſt not a good conſcience, all the prayers under heaven will not help thee. See Heb. 13. 18. Brethren, pray for us: for we trust we have a good conscience. Mark; The Apostle telleth them they may pray for him with comfort, because he had a good conscience. As if he had said, If we had not a good conscience, it were in vain for you to pray for us. If ever God hear the prayers made for us, we must have a good conscience. Those that have not this good conscience shall never enter into the Kingdome of heaven: Though they had Moses, Daniel, and Iob to pray for them, yet all their prayers could not help them in the time of their distresse.

for

The bond of conscience.

NOw we must look back unto the four propositions which at the beginning I observed in the Text I am upon;

1. That there is in every man a conscience.
2. That the light which directeth conscience is knowledge.
3. That the bond which bindeth conscience is Gods law.
4. That the office of conscience is to beare witnesse, to accuse or excuse.

I have in the handling of these a little altered the method, and spake of the two first and the last. Now followeth the third, and that is conscience bond, which is Gods law: which shew the work of the law written in their hearts, &c. It is onely the work of Gods law that it beareth witnesse of, that it acculeth or excuseth for: The law of God is consciences bond. Nevertheless we must here distinguish: The bonds of conscience are either primary and supreme; or secondary and relative. The bond of conscience is Gods law.

1. The primary and supreme bond of conscience is onely Gods word and law: that only is the supreme bond of conscience: There is one law-giver, who is able to save or to destroy: who art thou that judgest another? that is, There is but one supreme Law-giver to bind the consciences of men, and that is God. And the reason is given, Because it is God onely who is able to save and to destroy. As if he had said, God onely hath power over life and death, either to save a man for ever, or destroy a man for ever, and to judge a man according to all that he hath done: and therefore he onely can make lawes to bind the consciences of men. Jam. 4 12.

2. Now the secondary or relative bond of conscience is, when others who have authority from God, bind conscience to this or that. I call this a relative bond, because it is onely in relation to the authority of God. For though men cannot challenge any doings or omissions contrary to their law to be sins, yet if they have authority from God to command any thing, then they become beams and parts of Gods law, and do by vertue of that bind a mans conscience.

This relative bond of conscience is twofold: First, other men may bind our consciences; as Magistrates, and Masters, and Parents: who though they cannot bind conscience as they are men, yet when they have authority from God, their commands have Gods seales upon them, and do bind, I say, in relation to Gods law, which biddeth us obey them; Rom. 13. 5. Ye must needs be subject, not onely for wrath but also for conscience sake. The Apostle there speaketh of Magistrates; and he telleth us that their lawes bind our consciences in relation to Gods, and therefore we must be subject unto them for conscience sake. Thus others may bind our consciences. Secondly, we our selves may bind our owne consciences; and that is by Vowes, which wee make unto God, or by our promises which wee lawfully make unto men. The vowes which we freely make unto God, these bind conscience to keep them: Numb. 30. 4. the vow of a woman is called the bond wherewith she hath bound her soul. Mark; she bindeth her soul and her conscience with it. So the promises which we lawfully make unto men, these also bind conscience: For though before we promise it was in our own power, yet when we have promised, we have bound our owne consciences to the performance, because there is Gods seal upon it; Gods law commandeth us to be true of our words. These are relative bonds, bonds only in relation to Gods law: Gods law is still the supreme bond of conscience. I will handle that first.

The law of God the prime bond of conscience.

1. The law of God whereby he willeth and commandeth and forbiddeth this or that in his word, this is the main bond of conscience: When this bindeth it, nothing else can loose it; and contrary, if this loose it, nothing else can bind it. It so bindeth conscience, as the observing and violating of it, is that which maketh conscience clear or guilty before God. This is it which maketh a man a debtour; I am a debtour, saith Paul, both to the Grecians and to the Barbarians: that is, I am bound in conscience by Gods command to preach the Gospel unto both. This is it that denominateth a man to be bound: I go bound in the spirit unto Jerusalem; that is, I knowing it to be Gods will, am bound in conscience to go. This is that which layeth a necessity upon a man; A necessity is laid upon me to preach; i. I am bound in conscience by Gods word so to do. This is that which layeth a kind of enforcement upon men; We cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard; that is, If we should not, our consciences would flie in our faces: We are bound by Gods will to do so, and our consciences lay a charge upon us, The only will and word of Almighty God is that which supremely bindeth conscience.

Reasons.

1. Because God only knoweth the heart; he seeth our thoughts, and he only can reach to the secrets of our spirits; and therefore he only can bind our conscience. For who else can tell whether we make conscience of a thing yea or no? perhaps we do, perhaps we do not. Nor man nor Angell can tell certainly: but God knoweth certainly, and he only; and therefore he only can bind our consciences. When the Lord doth command or forbid, the conscience is privy that God seeth it; and therefore now it is bound. The word of God is quick and powerfull; it pierceth even to the dividing asunder of soule and spirit, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart. That bindeth a mans thoughts and intentions; he cannot be free in these things: and the reason is given by the Apostle; All things are naked and open to the eyes of him with whom we have to do. As if he had said, We are conscious of Gods all-seeing power; he seeth our hearts and our thoughts, and all that is in us: and therefore his word doth bind us, yea it bindeth all our secrets: we cannot think a vain thought, but our conscience will cry guilty before God, because our conscience doth know that God knoweth all. Besides, the conscience cannot fear any law but only Gods law. Ye know when conscience is once in a doubt, it is fearfull, and beginneth to ask questions with it self, May I do this? or may I not do it? asking no questions for conscience sake. The conscience when it doubteth, useth to ask questions. Now this supposeth the law-giver to be able to see it: otherwise the conscience would not be thus afraid, if it were only the commandement of a creature, that could not search the heart. So that here ye see one reason why Gods law is the supreme bond of conscience; Because no eye can see it but Gods.

Heb. 4. 13.

1 Cor. 10. 27.

2. Because God onely hath power over conscience: It is his commandement onely that maketh any thing sin or not sin unto us. Augustine defineth sinne to be a thought, or word, or deed, or lust against the Commandement of God. Against thee, against thee onely have I sinned, saith David. He saith he had sinned onely against God. Why? you will say, say, he sinned also against man: Did not he commit adultery? that was a sinne against Bathsheba: and murder? that was a sinne against Urijah. True, he sinned against man relatively, in relation to the Commandement which saith, Thou shalt not injure thy neighbour, but primarily and principally the sin was against God. Conscience is like the Kings servant, whom none can arrest or attach without leave from the King: so no man can bind conscience without leave had from God: for conscience is only subject to his power: he only hath power over conscience.

3. Because conscience is Gods book. Now no creature can adde to Gods book or diminish from it. Ye may remember that dreadfull anathema at the end of Gods book; If any man shall adde to this book, God shall adde to him the plagues that are written in this book: And if any man shall diminish from this book, God shall take away his part out of the book of life. Rev. 22. 18, 19. Now conscience is also Gods book wherein his law is written. Nay, conscience is called Gods law: For it is said, that when the Gentiles which have not the law do the things contein'd in the law, they having not the law are a law unto themselves: that is, Their conscience is Gods law unto them. Rom. 2. 14. Like as the Bible conteineth Gods law for us Christians, so did their consciences contein the law of God unto them: yea, to us Christians may it truly be said, we are not to let Gods law be written only in our Bibles, but we must write it written in our consciences: our consciences are to be Gods books wherein his laws are to be written. And therefore if it be a sin to add a new law in the materiall book to bind men, then it must needs be a sin for any creature to put a new law into conscience, which is the spirituall book of God. It is God onely who can write lawes in this book: his book is above all the lawes in the world; and none but God can put in and put out: and therefore none but he can bind conscience. I speak it of an absolute, and supreme bond of conscience: For Magistrates may bind relatively; but not as they are their lawes, but by the law of God before made. Thus ye see the necessity of this truth, That Gods law is the absolute and supreme bond of conscience.

Uses.

1. THis serveth to direct Ministers how to convince the consciences of their people. If Ministers desire to work upon their hearers, they must speak to the conscience; they must shew them Gods authority, that it is Gods will, and Gods command. Tell conscience never so much, that we should do thus or thus upon other grounds and inducements, it starteth not at that, except it be convinced by the word of God, that it is Gods will, the commandement of the great God of heaven, the God of the spirits of all flesh, who will look for our obedience: This maketh conscience to startle, this affecteth it and bindeth it. St. Paul when he said that he approved himself and his preaching to mens consciences, what followeth? If our Gospel be hid, it is hid to them that perish, &c. As if he had said, This maketh all the world to startle, except they be reprobates, and men delivered over to Satan. It is easie to see what ministery affecteth most, and doth most good in the hearts of the people, namely, that which bringeth the clearest voice of Gods Spirit calling to obedience, and binding the conscience. They can hear with ease and great pleasure the Sermons of those whose doctrines are stuffed with humane discourses. Learning and policie never pierce conscience. Nay, let carnall Preachers preach never so much against peoples sinnes, they can make a sport of it, though they heare their sinnes Use 1. 2 Cor. 4. 2.

with humane learning declaimed against. When the Preacher doth not clearely preach the Lords voice, though he rip up sinne, yet if it be not in the demonstration of the Spirit of God, and shewing his cleare authority, the heart will not be affected. Conscience knoweth when it is bound, and when it is but dallied and jested with: And therefore if Ministers desire to have their ministery work upon the hearts of their people, they must shew them Gods authority, and confirme it by his word, and let them see that it is the commandement of the Lord, that which will one day judge them.

1 Cor. 14. 37. Let him know, saith Paul, that the things that I write are the commandements of the Lord. It is the Lord of heaven and earth that biddeth thee yield, and commandeth thee to give over thy base lusts: It is he in whose hands thy breath is; thou hadst best be obedient. I tell thee, thy Conscience observeth it; and if thou wilt not obey, it will roar like the roaring of the Sea one day against thee, and sting thee like a scorpion. The things that thou heares't, know thou that they are the commandments of God: and if thou disobey, thou dost disobey not men but God.

Use 2. 2. Is it so that the word of God onely is the supreme bond of Conscience? Then this teacheth us to have an eye to Gods word in that which we do, if we would satisfie Conscience. I say, have an eye to Gods word: not onely to do that which it may be is in Gods word; Conscience counteth that to be nothing: but to have an eye to Gods word. Conscience will not be satisfied with any obedience that we do if we have not an eye to Gods word. Whatever we have an eye to besides, Conscience knoweth it is nothing, if in all we have not an eye to the commandment of God: Though we do obey it, Conscience looketh upon it as if we did not obey it. It is onely Gods commandment and authority that bindeth Conscience: and therefore nothing satisfieth Conscience unlesse we have an eye unto that. If we do not aim at Gods will in doing what we do, Conscience counteth our obedience as no obedience at all. As for example; Ye that are husbands, ye love your wives: but is it because God commandeth it? It may be you love them because they love you, or because your affections are to them: Alas, this is nothing: Pagans and Reprobates can do so. But do you aim at the doing of Gods will, who commandeth you? O say you, The Lord doth command me, I do it. What of that? Do you look at his commandment when ye do it? If not; be humbled, and know ye must get grace to do so, or ye are not obedient to God, neither will Conscience set it down for obedience. Ye that are servants, ye serve your Masters: but do ye aim at Gods will? thus, O the Lord hath commanded me to be faithfull and painfull in my service. Doth your soul look to this? It may be ye serve them because they are kind, and because they pay you your wages, and the like: This is nothing to Conscience: Conscience looketh at the commandment of God; and if your souls do not aim at the commandment of God, it will not satisfie Conscience. Ye that are neighbours, it may be ye love one another, and be friends one with another: but doth your soul look at Gods commandment? is it because God hath commanded us to love one another? People seldome aime at God in these cases: They are friends with their neighbours: why? Their neighbours are friends with them. But they do not trouble their thoughts to aim at Gods commandment in it. Let me tell you; Conscience will not count this obedience: For Conscience feeleth no bond but Gods word: and if ye do not look at that; it is no obedience with Conscience; Conscience will never acquit you or absolve you for this; it accounteth of this obedience as no obedience at all. See 1 Cor. 10. 25. and so forward. There the Apostle handling that question of Conscience, at last concludeth, Whether ye eate or drink, or whatsoever ye doe, doe all to the glory of God, verse 31. Let your hearts look at that, and aim at that; in whatsoever ye do, still look at God: all is lost with conscience else. Though you eat never so soberly, and drink never so moderately, pray never so duly, Conscience counteth it all nothing if ye do not look at God: It is God onely and his word that doth bind it; and it will never give a discharge except your hearts look at him.

3. This serveth to confute our Antinomists, such as say the Law of God bindeth not the Conscience of the regenerate. Ye see here that the Law of God bindeth the Conscience: and therefore if the regenerate have any Conscience at all, (as certainly they have the best Conscience of all men) then it must needs binde their Conscience. Use 3. We confesse the Conscience of the regenerate is freed from many things by Christ. First, it is freed from the yoke and bondage of the Ceremoniall Law, Gal. 5. 1. Stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled with the yoke of bondage. Every mans Conscience is freed from that yoke of the Ceremoniall Law, because it ended in Christ. Secondly, the Conscience of the regenerate is freed from seeking justification by the deeds of the Law. Indeed the first Covenant was by the works of the Law; He that doth them shall live in them: But the second Covenant speaketh better things; He that believeth shall be saved. It is true, If God had not sent his Sonne we must have sought justification by the workes of the Law: Though it were impossible to finde it by reason of our sinnes, yet Conscience was bound that way. But that now Christ Jesus hath sealed up a new Covenant in his own blood, Conscience is freed from that former: Rom. 3. 28. Therefore we conclude, that a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the Law. For though justifying faith never be without the sincere doing of the Law, yet the deeds of the Law have no influence into justification: Conscience is freed from seeking justification thereby. Thirdly, the Conscience of the regenerate is freed from the rigour of the Law. They are bound in Conscience to use the Law as a rule of their life, and in sincerity to obey it; but are not bound by the Gospel to the rigour of it: that they are freed from; and so they are not under the Law, but under Grace. I grant that all carnall people, who are yet out of Christ, do all lie under the rigour of the Law: and as long as they submit not to Jesus Christ, nor get into him, they are bound in Conscience to keep it, though they cannot: They cannot sinne in one tittle, but Conscience will condemne them before God. They shall be condemned for every vain thought, for every idle word, for every the least sinne, for every the least lust, for any the least omission of good. They lie under the rigour of the Law, and they are bound in Conscience to keep it, and they shall be countable for every transgression, because they are under the Law. But the Conscience of the regenerate is free from this rigour, because they are under grace, and therefore they are delivered from the Law: The Lord hath delivered them by the body of Christ; and therfore they are not bound by the Gospel to all that obedience that the Law in rigour requireth. Fourthly, the Conscience of the regenerate is freed from the curse of the Morall Law. For though the Law doth condemne, yet their Conscience needeth not fear it, because they are in Christ: There is no condemnation to those that are in Christ Jesus, which walke not after the flesh but after the spirit. Indeed those that are not regenerate, not ingrafted into Christ, they are still in the mouth of the gun-shot: the Law doth condemn them, and they have no shelter, and their Conscience is bound by it; and they shall finde one day that by it their Conscience will condemne them to hell. It may be now for the present their Conscience is quiet, and they choke it, and so it letteth them alone: yet they are condemned in Conscience, and one day they shall finde it. But the regenerate are by Christ freed in Conscience from all this condemnation. Thus far we grant.

From what Christians are freed.

Antinomists. But the Antinomists, and I know not what Marcionites would have more. They cannot abide to heare that a regenerate person is bound to any sincere obedience to Gods Law as the Rule of their life: They cry out against the Morall Law, as once the Babylonians did against Jerusalem, Down with it, down with it, even to the ground: O ye do not preach Christ if ye talk of the Law. Beloved, these are drunken opinions, fitter to be preached among Drunkards, and Epicures, and Monsters, than among the peculiar ones of God. The Law of God doth binde the conscience of all the people of God, so that they are bound to make it a rule of life. Nay the Scripture calleth it Christs bond whereby he bindeth his people to him:

Psal. 2. 1, 2, 3. The Kings of the earth set themselves, and the Rulers take counsell together against the Lord and against his Anointed, saying, Let us break their bonds, and cast away their cords from us. Tush, we will not be tied by his Lawes, nor be so precisely strait-laced with such Commandements as these. Here the Laws of the Lord are called bonds and cords: Gods people are bound to him by them: But the wicked they stand out and refuse to be bound. Now if the Law be called a bond, I pray, what bond is it, but of conscience? It is not a bond like a prisoners fetters, to be put about their legs: This is a spirituall bond that bindeth the conscience. But let me prove it to you by arguments. There be sundry arguments to prove it.

Arguments. That Gods Law bindeth the conscience of the regenerate. Arg. 1. First, That which hath power to say to the conscience of the regenerate, This is thy duty, and this must be done, that bindeth the conscience: But the Law of God hath power to say thus to the conscience, This is your duty. Who can tell better than Christ? When ye have done all these things that are commanded you, say, We are unprofitable servants; we have done that which was our duty to do.

Luke 17. 10. Mark; He speaketh of Gods Law, things commanded: now the Law is nothing else but a Catalogue of those things that God hath commanded us. When ye have done all these things, saith our Saviour, know it is your duty. Here ye see the Law hath power to say to the conscience, This is your duty. But ye will object, we are under Faith; and do ye tell us of Law? I answer, as Chrysostome

Rom. 3. 31. answereth out of Paul, Do we then make void the Law through faith? God forbid: Yea, we establish the Law. See how the Apostle doth abhorre this thought: God forbid, saith he. As if he had said, Farre be it from me to teach such abominable Doctrine: No, no; we establish the Law. Heare what Christ saith himselfe, Think not that I am come to destroy the Law: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill it. O thought some, If we believe in Christ then we hope we shall have done with the Law. No, no, saith Christ; ye shall as soon pull the heavens and the earth out of their place, as disannull one tittle of the Law.

Arg. 2. Secondly, That which hath this authority that the breach of it is a sin, bindeth conscience: but the Law hath this authority, that neither regenerate nor unregenerate can transgresse it but they sinne: therefore the Law bindeth their consciences. For the regenerate and all are bound

1 John 3. 4. in conscience to take heed of sinne: Whosoever committeth sinne transgresseth also the Law. David was a regenerate man; yet when he had defiled Bathsheba, I have sinned, saith he. Joseph was a regenerate man; yet confesseth, if he should transgresse the Lords commandment, he should sinne: How shall I do this great wickednesse, and so sinne against God? But ye will object, This is Old Testament. What of that? I hope you will not take up the old damned Heresie again of the Cerdonians, and Cainites, and Apelites, and Manichees, and Severians, and other such cursed Hereticks condemned by the Church of God: Their heresie was, To hedge out the regenerate from the old Testament. And St. Augustine proved it against them; That the Morall Law of God was ever the rule of obedience, and shall so continue with the Gospel to the end of the world; and every transgression thereof is sinne. The breach of the Ceremoniall Law was a sinne once; but now it is not: because once it bound the conscience; now it doth not: But the breach of the Morall Law is still sinne: therefore still it bindeth the conscience. Do ye not remember what S. James saith now under the Gospel? he presseth it yet on mens consciences: He that said, Do not commit adultery, said also, Do not kill. Now though thou commit no adultery, yet if thou kill, thou art become a transgressour of the Law. And though ye may call it a Law of liberty in what sense ye please, yet he telleth you, Ye had best look to your words and deeds: for ye must be judged by this Law of liberty: So speak ye and so do as they that shall be judged by the Law of liberty. Jam. 2.

Thirdly, That which being observed doth cause the conscience of the regenerate to excuse, and being transgressed to accuse, that bindeth their conscience: (For what else do you make binding of conscience but this?) But the Law of God being observed, doth cause the conscience to excuse; being transgressed, to accuse; In many things we sinne all, saith the Apostle Mark; Our consciences do accuse us: as we do sin in many things, so our consciences do accuse us when we do so. I am a sinfull man, saith S. Peter, Luke 5. 8. His conscience did accuse him of sinne. Arg. 3.

Fourthly, That which is the condition of Gods Covenant of grace bindeth the conscience, yea of the regenerate: but sincere obedience to Gods Law is a condition of Gods Covenant of grace. See Luke 1. 72. To remember his holy Covenant, and the oath that he sware that he would give us, That being delivered out of the hands of our enemies we might serve him without feare, in holinesse and righteousnes before him all the dayes of our life. Mark; Sincere and universall obedience is a condition of the Covenant of grace, not onely for a manifestation to our selves that we are truly justified; as these upstart patritians do hold: but it is the condition of the Covenant of grace. Every Covenant hath its conditions annexed; and therefore it is called the book of the Covenant, Exod. 24. 7. the words of the Covenant, Exod. 34. 28. the tables of the Covenant, Deut. 9. 11. The reason is this; Because when a Covenant is made, the conditions are put into a book or a table and expressed in words. Onely here is the difference between the first Covenant of works and the second Covenant of grace: Both have conditions: but here, I say, is the difference; In the one grace giveth the Covenant, and grace giveth the condition of the Covenant; but a condition is annexed though: Now hence we may argue (and none but enemies to the Gospel can deny it) If the Covenant of grace do bind a mans conscience, then certainly the condition of the Covenant bindeth a mans conscience too: But the Covenant of grace bindeth the conscience of the regenerate; and therefore the condition of it bindeth. If you ask, What is this to obedience? the answer is, That obedience is the condition of the Covenant of grace, as the forenamed Scripture expresseth, Luke 1. 72. Thus ye see the Law of God bindeth the conscience of all the regenerate. This is the third Use. Arg. 4.

4. Hath the word of God supreme power to binde conscience? Then hence we may learne, that no creature can dispense with it, nor free conscience from guilt when a man transgresseth the word. What a damned usurpation is it in the Pope to offer to dispense? The Canonists say he may dispense de præceptis veteris & novi testamenti, (They are their own words) he may dispense with the commandements of the old and new testament. He dispensed with King Henry the Eighth, and undertook to free his conscience from guilt though he married his own Brothers Wife. Gregory the Second undertook to free subjects from being bound in their consciences to keep their oaths of allegeance to Leo the Emperour. O these are damned aspirings; and they plainly declare him to be Antichrist, who exalteth himself in this manner. The word of God is the supreme binder of conscience: Use 4. Azorius the Jesuit reports it.

And

And therefore not all the Angels in heaven can dispense with one tittle
Psal. 119. 89. word. For ever, O Lord, thy word is settled in heaven. Gods word is settled for ever in heaven; and therefore ye may as soon remove the heaven from its place as one tittle of the word from binding conscience. Doth the word say thus or thus? thou hadst best do it: If thou wilt not, all the whole world cannot help thee; thy conscience will condemne thee at the day of judgement without remedy. Hath the word convinced thee of thy sins, and made thy conscience say, I am a sinner, and am guilty before God? I tell thee then, Thy conscience is bound, and all the world cannot loose it. But hast thou been humbled and emptied of thy selfe, and doth the word pronounce pardon of thy sinnes in Christs name, and thy conscience can say, The Lord speaketh peace to my soul? I tell thee, Thou art loosed, and nor hell nor devil nor sinne nor flesh nor any thing can binde thee. Ye may see the power of Gods word in that speech of our Saviour, Whatsoever ye shall binde on earth shall be bound in heaven, Matth. 18. 18. That is, My word which ye preach is of that nature, that if that loose your conscience, it is looted indeed, and nothing can bind it; if that do bind it, it is bound soundly indeed, and nothing can loose it. O this is a terrour to the wicked! Doth the word
Prov. 29. 1. of God say, He that hardneth his neck, being often rebuked, shall suddenly be destroyed, and cannot be cured? O feare and tremble ye that harden your necks against the reproofes of the Almighty: his word bindeth over your consciences to Christs barre. Doth the word say, Whoremongers and Adulterers God will judge? If thou beest such an one, thy conscience is bound with this word, and it will apply it to the soul before the Tribunall-seat of Christ. Doth the word cry out against any of thy courses? thy conscience is bound as with chains, and it is not all thy vain hopes and excuses can loose thee. Again, this is comfort to the godly: Gods word is the supreme binder of conscience. O ye blessed of the Lord, the word of God tieth such a fast knot to your comforts that all hell cannot open it with their teeth: The word of the Lord Jesus is with you, who hath the key of David, that openeth and no man shutteth, and shutteth and no man openeth. Yea, but sayest thou, My sinnes are against me: What then? mark what the word saith, We have an Advocate with the Father: Thy conscience is bound to believe that. Yea, but I have a very naughty heart, and I cannot tell what to do with it: Mark what the word saith; Believe in the Lord Jesus, and thou shalt be saved: This bindeth thy conscience. But I offend daily: Mark still what the word saith;
Dan. 9. 24. Christ bringeth in everlasting righteousnes. If thou beest unworthy to day, there is righteousnesse for thee to day; if unworthy to morrow, there is righteousnesse for thee to morrow; if unworthy for ever, there is righteousnesse for thee for ever. This is Gods word, and thy portion; this bindeth thy conscience to lay hold on it. But I have abundantly sinned: What saith Christs word? I will abundantly pardon. O what comfort is this to every poor soul which the Lord Jesus hath humbled! His word is the supreme binder of conscience, above the Law, above Justice, above Threatnings, above all the world besides. His promising word is the supreme binder of thy conscience, if thou beest one of Christs: And therefore feare not; onely believe, and be thankfull, and give glory to God. This is the childrens bread; no stranger can intermeddle with it.

The secondary bond of Conscience.

YE have heard that the bonds of conscience are of two sorts: First, there is a supreme bond of conscience, and that is Gods word: of which I have already spoken. Secondly, there is a relative bond of conscience, which bindeth conscience indeed, but it is onely in relation to Gods word, because Gods word putteth authority upon it. And this latter is also of two sort: 1. Others may binde conscience; 2. We our selves may binde our own consciences.

I. Others may binde our Consciences.

1. Others may binde our consciences, namely, when they have authority conferred upon them from God, and so their laws and commands receive vigour and force from Gods Laws. Thus the laws and commands of Magistrates binde the conscience of People; of Parents binde the conscience of Children; of Masters binde the conscience of Servants: For though they do not binde conscience as they are the commandments of men, yet having Gods seal and authority upon them they do. I will set down some Conclusions whereby ye may know how farre the laws and commandments of others binde or not binde conscience.

1. Conclusion.

1. Magistrates have power to command us. Let every soul be subject to the higher powers: for there is no power but of God; and the powers that be are ordained of God, Rom. 13. 1. That Chapter doth most clearely prove this conclusion unto us.

Out of the first part of the Chapter we learne, 1. That Magistrates have power and authority to make laws, and to establish orders among men; and therefore they are called powers: 2. We learne that these laws of Magistrates receive strength and force from the Law of God: For the powers that be are ordained of God, saith the Text. 3. Those laws made by the Magistrate and confirmed by God have power to binde conscience, verse 5. Wherefore we must be subject not onely because of wrath, but also for conscience sake. And the violating of them is sinne. When their authority is confirmed by God, we cannot resist them but we resist the ordinance of God, saith the Apostle: nay, we may pull condemnation upon us if we do; They that resist shall receive to themselves condemnation, verse 2. So that this first conclusion telleth us what laws of men are to be obeyed; viz. 1. Such as do virtually flow from Gods word, though not expressely commanded in it; 2. Such as are good and wholesome and profitable for the Commonwealth: These though they are not particularly commanded in Gods word, yet are they by virtue of it injoyned: and therefore to neglect them and be disobedient unto them, is to neglect and be disobedient to God. Again, so farr onely are they to be obeyed (so farre onely, I say) as they virtually do flow from Gods word: for so farre onely they receive force from Gods Law. This is the first Conclusion.

2. Conclusion.

2. The commandments of Magistrates and those that are in authority lose their power of binding the conscience in four cases:

1. When they command that which though in it selfe it be not simply and absolutely sinfull and unlawfull, yet it doth put us upon a necessity of sinning: As for example, If a Magistrate command single life to all Ministers, this thing is not in it selfe simply unlawfull (for it is lawfull to marry, and it is lawfull not to marry) yet this commandment is unlawfull, because it would put Ministers upon a necessity of sinning: The reason is, because all have not this power. And therefore such a commandment as this would not binde conscience: For the conscience cannot be bound to impurity, or an apparent danger of impurity: and therefore though the thing be not simply unlawfull, yet the commandment is simply unlawfull, and doth not binde conscience. The Apostle maketh such a commandment to argue a seared conscience in the commander: and therefore none but a seared conscience can think it is bound by it, 1 Tim. 4. 2, 3.

2. The commandments of Magistrates lose their power of binding the conscience when they command things that are unlawfull in themselves, and contrary to the word of God. In this case they do not binde conscience, because Gods seal is not on them. We have an example of this in
Dan. 3. 16. the three blessed children: Who when the King commanded them to worship the image that he had set up, they did not conceive themselves bound in conscience to obey: they would rather suffer torment than obey it. So also Daniel, when he was commanded not to ask any petition of God for
Dan. 6. 16. thirty dayes space, but onely of the King, Daniel did not conceive himselfe bound in conscience, nay, he chose rather to be cast into the den of Lions than obey. In this case the answer of the Apostle, is necessary; who when they were commanded not to preach any more in the name of the Lord Jesus, thus they answered, Whether it be right in the sight of God to obey men rather than God, judge ye.

3. When mens laws and commands overthrow the liberty of Christianity, that Christian liberty which Christ hath purchased for us, then they lose their power of binding the conscience. But here I must tell you of a Caution; viz. That this liberty may be considered in a double respect: 1. In regard of it selfe, the liberty it selfe; 2. In regard of the exercise or use of this liberty. Now there is a very great difference between these two considerations: as there is a great difference between a man having a sword, and a mans wearing a sword. The Magistrate may restrain a man from wearing a sword at such or such a time, though he do not take his sword from him: so there is difference between the having our liberty and the using our liberty. There is a liberty purchased for Gods children, whereby all things are become lawfull unto them: All things are lawfull
Rom. 14. 14. unto me, saith Paul, 1 Cor. 6. 12. and there is nothing evil in it selfe: (he speaketh of indifferent things) Gods children are freed from the observation of meats, and drinks, and times, and garments. Now whatsoever commandment is made by the Magistrate contrary to this liberty, doth not binde conscience; for nothing can binde conscience when Christ doth loose it: Yet there may be a restraint of the use of this liberty; as for example, the Magistrate may command us to forbeare some kinds of meats at some certaine times; and so also for garments, and the like: namely, when the doctrine about meats and drinks and garments is pure. And therefore in such a case the command of the Magistrate bindeth the conscience,; otherwise not.

4. When

4. When they command things indifferent to be absolutely necessary, to make them idolatrous or superstitious, then in this case they are unlawfull and bride not the conscience to obey them. But when are they idolatrous? I answer; 1. When they are commanded either as morally necessary to Christianity, to the very being of Religion and true Worship of God, and with as much necessity as holinesse it selfe, then they are made superstitious and idolatrous: And in this case the caveat of S. John is to be kept, Babes, keep your selves from idoles. 2. When they are commanded as things meritorious, as pleasing to God for themselves, and not for him, then they are idolatrous. 3. When they are commanded for the substantiall perfection of Religion, as though Religion were imperfect without them, then they are made idolatrous, and lose their vertue of binding the conscience. But all such commands of things that are indifferent, which are commanded without respect to make them idolatrous, they may be obeyed. This is our second conclusion.

3. Conclusion.

3. Those laws and commandments of Magistrates which want the authority of Gods Law to confirm them (and therefore binde not the conscience) ought not to be disobeyed for all that, with scandal or contempt and by unreverent slighting or despising the Magistrate or his laws. He must be acknowledged a Magistrate under God for all that: 1 Tim. 2. 1. I exhort that supplications be made for Kings and those that are in authority. He speaketh there of heathen Kings; yet he calleth them Kings, because they have authority: and we ought to pray for them: what then should we much more when Kings and Magistrates subscribe to Christian Religion? Nay, though they command that which is meerly unlawfull, we must not rise up against them: for if we do, we rise up against God. We must obey them one way or other, either actively or passively: When they command that which is lawfull for us to do, we must obey them by doing: when they command that which is unlawfull for us to do, and therefore put them out, then we cannot actively obey them by doing, because they command against God; yet we must passively obey by suffering, not resisting to the penaltie, because the Lord hath given them authority over us. This is our third conclusion.

4. Conclusion.

4 Those laws of Magistrates which by Gods Law do not binde conscience, do yet in matter of scandal bind us to obedience. If the Magistrate shall command any thing beyond his power to command, yet not unlawfull for us to do, though such a command do not binde to obedience in case of conscience, yet in case of scandal it doth. Thus Christ was content to pay tribute though he needed not to have done it: The children, saith he, are free: Matth. 17. 27. nevertheless, lest he should offend the Magistrate, he did pay it. I will put an example of another nature; In a private wrong, though we are not expressely bound to it, yet rather than scandalously to contend, conscience doth binde us to yield. Needed Abraham to have condescended to farre unto Lot as to let him take his choice before him? No, rather then scandal of Religion should arise, ye may reade that he did it. Thus I have briefly made it manifest how farre the commands of the Magistrate do not binde conscience, and how farre they do.

2. Conclusion.

2. The commandments of Magistrates and those that are in authority lose their power of binding the conscience in four cases:

1. When they command that which though in it selfe it be not simply and absolutely sinfull and unlawfull, yet it doth put us upon a necessity of sinning: As for example, If a Magistrate command single life to all Ministers, this thing is not in it selfe simply unlawfull (for it is lawfull to marry, and it is lawfull not to marry) yet this commandment is unlawfull, because it would put Ministers upon a necessity of sinning: The reason is, because all have not this power. And therefore such a commandment as this would not binde conscience: For the conscience cannot be bound to impurity, or an apparent danger of impurity: and therefore though the thing be not simply unlawfull, yet the commandment is simply unlawfull, and doth not binde conscience. The Apostle maketh such a commandment to argue a seared conscience in the commander: and therefore none but a seared conscience can think it is bound by it, 1 Tim. 4. 2, 3.

2. The commandments of Magistrates lose their power of binding the conscience when they command things that are unlawfull in themselves, and contrary to the word of God. In this case they do not binde conscience, because Gods seal is not on them. We have an example of this in
Dan. 3. 16. the three blessed children: Who when the King commanded them to worship the image that he had set up, they did not conceive themselves bound in conscience to obey: they would rather suffer torment than obey it. So also Daniel, when he was commanded not to ask any petition of God for
Dan. 6. 16. thirty dayes space, but onely of the King, Daniel did not conceive himselfe bound in conscience, nay, he chose rather to be cast into the den of Lions than obey. In this case the answer of the Apostle, is necessary; who when they were commanded not to preach any more in the name of the Lord Jesus, thus they answered, Whether it be right in the sight of God to obey men rather than God, judge ye.

3. When mens laws and commands overthrow the liberty of Christianity, that Christian liberty which Christ hath purchased for us, then they lose their power of binding the conscience. But here I must tell you of a Caution; viz. That this liberty may be considered in a double respect: 1. In regard of it selfe, the liberty it selfe; 2. In regard of the exercise or use of this liberty. Now there is a very great difference between these two considerations: as there is a great difference between a mans having a sword, and a mans wearing a sword. The Magistrate may restrain a man from wearing a sword at such or such a time, though he do not take his sword from him: so there is difference between the having our liberty and the using our liberty. There is a liberty purchased for Gods children, whereby all things are become lawfull unto them: All things are lawfull

And therefore in such a case the command of the Magistrate bindeth the conscience,; otherwise not.

4. When

4. When they command things indifferent to be absolutely necessary, to make them idolatrous or superstitious, then in this case they are unlawfull and binde not the conscience to obey them. But when are they idolatrous? I answer; 1. When they are commanded either as intrinsically necessary to Christianity, to the very being of Religion and true Worship of God, and with as much necessity as holinesse it selfe, then they are made superstitious and idolatrous: And in this case the caveat of S. John is thoroughly to be kept, Babes, keep your selves from idoles. 2. When they are commanded as things meritorious, as pleasing to God for themselves, and to merit of him, then they are idolatrous. 3. When they are commanded for the substantiall perfection of Religion, as though Religion were imperfect wirhout them, then they are made idolatrous, and lose their vertue of binding the conscience. But all such commands of things that are indifferent, which are commanded without respect to make them idolatrous, they may be obeyed. This is our second conclusion.

3. Conclusion.

3. Those laws and commandments of Magistrates which want the authority of Gods Law to confirm them (and therefore bind not the conscience) ought not to be disobeyed for all that, with scandal or contempt and by unreverent slighting or despising the Magistrate or his lawes. He must be acknowledged a Magistrate under God for all that: 1 Tim. 2. 1, 2. I exhort that supplications be made for Kings and those that are in authority. He speaketh there of heathen Kings; yet he calleth them Kings, and saith they have authority: and we ought to pray for them: and therefore how much more when Kings and Magistrates subscribe to Christian Religion? We must obey them one way or other, either actively or passively: When they command that which is lawfull for us to do, we must obey them by doing; when they command that which is unlawfull for us to do, and threaten punishment, then we cannot actively obey them by doing, because they command against God; yet we must passively obey by suffering and submitting to their penalties, because the Lord hath given them authority over us. This is our third conclusion.

4. Conclusion.

4 Those laws of Magistrates which by Gods Law do not binde conscience, do yet in matter of scandal bind us to obedience. If the Magistrate shall command any thing beyond his power to command, yet not unlawfull for us to do, though such a command do not binde to obedience in case of conscience, yet in case of scandal it doth. Thus Christ was content to pay tribute though he needed not to have done it: The children, saith he, are free: Matth. 17. 25. nevertheless, lest he should offend the Magistrate, he did pay it. I will put an example of another nature; In a private wrong, though we are not expressely bound to it, yet rather than scandalously to contend, conscience doth binde us to yield. Needed Abraham to have condescended to farre unto Lot as to let him take his choice before him? No, rather then scandal of Religion should arise, ye may reade that he did it. Thus I have briefly made it manifest how farre the commands of the Magistrate do not binde conscience, and how farre they do.

Objections.

Object. 1. 1. But it may be objected; Conscience hath onely relation to God.

Answ. I answer, It is true, as the supreme and absolute binder of conscience: but it hath a relation also unto men in the second place, in as much as God putteth upon men such termes as conscience hath relation to, Acts 24. 16. Herein I have alwayes endeavoured my selfe, to have alwayes a cleare conscience both towards God and towards men. Mark; Conscience hath relation to both: For though it have it main relation to God and his word, yet in him it hath relation unto men.

Object. 2. 2. Again it may be replied; The Magistrates do not undertake, nor can they, to meddle with mens invisible spirits; for they are not able to see whether the spirit of man be obedient or no: and therefore how do their laws binde us in conscience? The Magistrate onely looketh at the body: mens thoughts and affections and consciences, are naked onely to God.

Answ. It is true, the Magistrate do h not undertake but onely to binde the outward man: nevertheless the conscience of the subject feeleth it selfe to be bound to obedience under pain of sinning against God, who giveth this generall precept, 1 Pet. 2. 13. Submit your selves to every Ordinance of man for the Lords sake, to the King. &c. The conscience feeleth this, and so it cometh to be bound.

Object. 3. 3. Again it may be replied; The conscience is not bound but onely by way of Religion. If I make conscience of a thing, then I make a matter of Religion of it: but what Religion is there in the commandments of Magistrates? Suppose the Magistrate commandeth us to get our armour in readinesse, to mend our high-wayes, to moderate expenses at nuptials, or the like; these are civill things and not religious, and therefore how can they bind conscience? We make conscience onely of Religion and the Worship of God.

Answ. Such laws do not binde conscience under the name of Religion, but under the name of civill discipline. And again, though they do not bind conscience per se and immediately, yet they do per aliud, and as subjoyned to an higher law. For though the breach of such laws be onely a civill fault in it selfe, yet in another respect it may be a morall sin, if the powers that are ordained of God be neglected and disobeyed. And therefore though the conscience do not regard civill laws as they are civill; neither do we make conscience of them as they are civills: yet as they are made by the Minister of God, and backed by his authority which the Lord hath set on them, so they do take hold of conscience; and not to perform them is contrary to justice and charity, and the profit and safety of the Common-wealth, and so a sin.

Uses.

Use 1. 1. This confuteth the Anabaptists, who deny that any obedience is to be given to the secular power. Ye see here that the laws of Magistrates have Gods seal upon them; and therefore we must yield obedience unto them: for they binde in conscience. Again, this confuteth the Papists, who teach that their Popes laws and commandments are of supreme authority, and require equall submission of spirit with Gods Laws: and also that the omission of them is death and damnation. Our Doctrine and Religion goeth between both: For we teach that Gods authority is onely supreme, and that he onely can make Laws under pain of death and damnation; and that the authority of Magistrates is secondary, and secondary obedience is to be given unto them. The Papists speak blasphemy in saying their Pope can make make law under pain of damnation to be kept: Our Saviour Christ maketh this a property onely of God: Feare not him that can kill the body, and there is all that he can do: but feare him who can cast both body and soul into hell: I say unto you, feare him, Luke 12.4. As if he had said, Men can reach no further than the body, and their punishments can go no further than the death of the body.

2. This teacheth us what to do if men should command any thing which Obj. is unlawful for us to performe: (Suppose there should be any such inhumane commands as are repugnant to Gods.) In this case ye see we must obey God rather then men; nay, suffer losse of goods, losse of liberty, yea losse of life, rather then obey the commandments of men in case they be contrary to the Commandements of God. You may read a memorable example in Ephraim; They were utterly destroyed for obeying their King rather then their God: The King commands to worship the Calves, and to go unto Bethel and not to Jerusalem to worship: they yielded to his commandment, and did so; O that not they, we shall displease the King if we do not. For this sin of theirs they were broken in judgement, Hos. 5 11. Ephraim is destroyed and broken in judgement, because he willingly walked after the commandment. Beloved, Gods commandment is soveraigne, and is the supreme binder of conscience: Whatever commandment is repugnant to Gods word, woe to us if we do it; nay, though it be to save our goods or our lives. It is true, we must give to Cesar the things that are Cesars; but so, as withall we must be sure to give to God the things that are Gods.

3. This comforteth Gods people against the calumnies and slanders of Obj. 3. wicked and ungodly men, that upbraid them for their disobedience to God. O say they, Ye are irregular and despisers of authority. Alas, this is common to the godly, that God is able to bear them out in obeying him rather than men. Gods word is the supreme binder of conscience; and therefore, whatever men think of such, they are absolutely bound to obey God. When men command us against the word of God, we know their authority is no ordinance of God; and therefore if they go beyond that, they do not bind us in conscience. If God had bound us in conscience to them, others might have taken it ill if we should not obey them: but now what can they have others to think ill of us? What boot were it for us to seek to please men and to displease God? If we were at liberty, then we might choose what we would obey: but now we are bound unto God, and must be obedient unto God, whatever men command to the contrary, let us do it therefore with chearefulnesse. By this we shew our fidelity to God; by this we satisfie conscience, which being bound unto God doth continually urge us to obey him. Why should we omit part of the exactnesse of our obedience which the word of God doth require? We have more to do than ever we shall be able to performe: we should therefore be carefull to do all that we may. By our obedience to God in this kinde we convince the conscience of others of our uprightnesse towards God: Though through the overruling dominion of their lusts and passions they rage at us, and their mouthes speak evil of us, yet we may have an evidence in their consciences within, which may testifie for us: their consciences will whisper within them, Surely they do well to please God rather than men: their consciences will be on our side, though their actions and tongues be against us. We have a notable example of this, Acts 4.15, 16. When the Rulers of the Jews had threatned the Apostles, and had reviled them with many bitter words, and had bidden them go aside for a while, then they concluded among themselves, Surely an evident signe is done by them, and we cannot deny it: So that their consciences acquitted them for good men. So when the wicked of this world have spoken evil of the wayes of the righteous, and blaſphemed the holy name after which the are named: yet when they are alone, and their conſciences at counſel within themſelves, then they conclude, Indeed they do well. Thus their conſciences give a good evidence of us, and accuſe them for not doing the like. And thus much ſhall ſuffice to be ſpoken of other mens binding of conſcience.

II. We may binde our own Conſciences.

II. We our ſelves may binde our own conſciences: And that is by thoſe vows and promiſes which we make to God of any thing lawfull and in our power. Thoſe vows and promiſes which we make unto God according to the warrant of his word they do binde our conſciences. They are our own before we have made them: as Ananias and Sapphira their gift was their own before they vowed it to the Church: While it remained was it not thine own? and when it was ſold, was it not in thine own power? Acts 5. 4. We need not vow unleſſe we will: but after we have vowed our vows are Gods words, and do binde the conſcience to the performance of them. Nay, we lye unto God, as the text ſaith they did, if we do not ſtand to the performance of them.

But it may be demanded, What vows are they which are unlawfull, and do not binde conſcience? I anſwer;

1. Such as we make of things impoſſible and beyond our power: Theſe are unlawfull, and do not binde conſcience.

2. Such as we make of things unlawful; when we vow to do that which is contrary to Gods Law: ſuch as Davids was, when he vowed the deſtruction of Nabals Family: This doth not binde conſcience: nay, we are bound in conſcience to break it. 1 Sam. 25 22.

3. Such as though they be of things lawfull and poſſible, yet we want freedome in the performance of them: a for a wife or a ſervant or a childe to make a vow, when their relation to ſuch as are over them will not ſuffer them to performe it: This bindeth not conſcience. Nothing bindeth conſcience but that which hath Gods ſeal upon it: but this hath not God ſeal on it; and therefore it doth not binde conſcience: indeed it bindeth us in conſcience to repent of it. Num. 30. 3.

4 Such as though they be lawfull and profitable, and in our own freedome, yet if there fall a greater conſequence before the time of performance, we are not bound in conſcience to performe them: as if a man upon the receit of ſome mercy ſhould in teſtimony of his thankfulneſſe vow a hundred pounds to good uſes, in the mean time his eſtate ſo decayeth, as that he ſhall undoe himſelfe and his family if he performe it; this is ſo great a conſequence, and contingently happned, that it freeth his conſcience from performing what he had vowed: Or if a man ſhould promiſe marriage to a woman, and before the time of nuptials ſhe be found unchaſt; this is a far greater conſequence, and he is not bound in conſcience to marry her. Theſe kinds of vows do not binde in conſcience: But all others do binde us.

1. Uſe; We may learn from hence never to vow but with good judgement and counſel. For either we muſt keep our promiſe, or not: If we muſt, that is a ſigne it is good, and therefore had need of deliberation: If we muſt not keep it, then it is a ſigne of raſhneſſe and inconſiderateneſſe; and beſides it may prove ſcandalous and offenſive to them to whom we make it, and alſo to them that ſhall heare of it: And therefore it requireth good judgement and advice to vow. What a raſh vow was that of good Jephthah? If thou wilt deliver Ammon into my hand, whatſoever meeteth me I will offer it for a burnt-offering. How if a dog had firſt met him? what a ſinne Judges 11. 30.

had it been? How if his daughter? what a thing had that been? And indeed it proved to be his daughter. Vows without judgement do but increaſe our ſinnes, and aggravate our tranſgreſſions againſt God.

2. Uſe; This teacheth us to keep our good vows whatſoever they be that we make. Indeed it is hard to keep a good, yea it is hard to make a good vow in that manner, as we ſhould: It requireth a great deale of faith, and ſelf-denial, and humility, and ſtrength of reſolution: But when we have made it, our ſinne is the greater if we do not then keep it; Better it is not to vow, than that thou ſhouldſt vow and not pay. Haſt thou vowed a vow? then deferre not to pay it: God hath no pleaſure in fools. As if the Holy Ghoſt had ſaid, It is the part of a foole to vow before he conſider and be abſolutely reſolved to performe, to be off and on with the Lord God of Hoſts: The Lord hath no pleaſure in fooles: Therefore pay all thy good vows, and be humbled for thy raſh vows. But we are fallen into bad times, when truth and equity is periſhed from among men: Every one is a deceitfull bow; yea, the beſt (almoſt) is a briar: Nothing ſo common as vows and promiſes; but few make conſcience of performing them. Nay, men are careleſſe of their grand vow which they have made unto God in their baptiſme. O this is a very fearfull ſin! Ye have all made a vow unto God in your baptiſme that ye would live otherwiſe than ye do, and ye make no conſcience to keep it. Baptiſme is a very weighty thing: If there were no other thing to binde you to holineſſe and obedience and faith, but onely the vow ye entred into in your baptiſme, did ye conſider what a vow it is, it would move you alone. It is ſaid of Apollos that he was fervent in ſpirit though he knew nothing but the baptiſme of John: Apollos conſidered what a vow he had made unto God in his baptiſme, that, though he knew nothing elſe, it made him zealous for God. Baptiſme is a very great binder of conſcience: It bindeth a man to believe, and to go out of himſelfe, and to ſubmit to Jeſus Chriſt. The wicked Phariſees ſaw this to be true: If we ſhall ſay that Johns baptiſme was from heaven, he will ſay, Why did ye not then believe? Beloved, was not your baptiſme from heaven? was it not an Ordinance of God? and did ye not ſolmnly then vow unto God? Why then do ye not believe? why do ye not deny your ſelves, your works, your wayes, and take up Chriſts croſſe? As Chriſt ſaith of John Baptiſt, Among them that are borne of women there hath not been a greater than John the Baptiſt; ſo may I ſay of bonds and of vows and covenants; Among all the vows and covenants that ever were made, there hath not been a greater than this of Baptiſme: And therefore ye had beſt look to the performing of what ye then vowed: If ye do not, ye are grievous breakers of covenant with God; which ſinne will ſurely ſtand againſt you for evil. It is moſt certain, that Baptiſme doth greatly binde us in conſcience to walk anſwerably to it in all righteouſneſſe and true holineſſe: And we can never be ſaved (though we are baptized) except we can anſwer with a good conſcience that we live as we vowed in our Baptiſme: 1 Pet. 3. 21. The like figure whereunto, even Baptiſme, doth alſo now ſave us; not the putting away of the filth of the fleſh, but the anſwer of a good conſcience towards God. Mark; Unleſſe we can anſwer with a good conſcience that we live according to our promiſes in it, our Baptiſme cannot ſave us. I pray, conſider that ſpeech of S. Paul, We are buried with Chriſt by Baptiſme into his death, that like as Chriſt was raiſed up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even ſo we alſo ſhould walk in newneſſe of life. Mark; There is the vow that we made unto God in our Baptiſme: And the Apoſtle there telleth us we are bound in conſcience to keep this vow; otherwiſe we had better have been without our Baptiſme. Do not think that God will be mocked: Ye are content to go for Chriſtians: but if ye be Chriſtians, conſider ye are under a great vow: and if ye do not keep it, Gods Covenant hath a quarrel againſt you, and ye shall be broken in judgement. There is no sinne that ye live in, no lust that your conscience telleth you hath entertainment in your hearts, but it is sacramentall perjury against the vow that ye made unto God in your Baptisme. Are ye dead to good duties? Ye vowed in your Baptisme ye would not be so. Do ye not daily mortifie and subdue your affections? Ye vowed in your Baptisme ye would. Do ye not daily fight against sinne and the flesh, like the faithfull Souldiers of Christ? Ye vowed in your Baptisme ye would. What a horrible perjury is this? Nay, it is worse: it is a sacramentall perjury. When the Apostles saw any sinne in the people, presently they tell them of Baptisme: as if they should say, Do ye live thus and thus, when ye vowed the contrary in your Baptisme? When there were divisions in Corinth; Some would be of Cephas, and some of Apollos, and some of 1 Cor. 1. 13. Paul: Paul then telleth them of their Baptisme; Were you baptized in the name of Paul? As if he had said, I pray, consider how contrary this is unto your Baptisme: Ye were baptized into Christ; and are ye thus divided among your selves? So when there was corruption crept into the people of Galatia, S.

Gal. 3. 27. Paul telleth them of their Baptisme: As many of you, saith he, as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ. As if he had said, This corruption of yours is contrary to your Baptisme: Ye were baptized into Christ, and ye have vowed to put on Christ; and do ye yield to such corruptions as these? So also when there was want of love and unity and affection between one another among the Ephesians, S. Paul telleth them of their Baptisme: O saith Ephes. 4. 5. he, There is one God, one faith, one baptisme. As if he should say, This is contrary to your baptisme: Ye were all baptized with one baptisme; and do not ye live in peace? and is there not unity of spirit one with another among you? What? and were all baptized with one Baptisme? Beloved, ye never do that which is not good but ye go clean contrary to your Baptisme. What? were ye baptized into Christ, and do thus? baptized into Christ and pray thus? baptized into Christ, and heare the word of Christ thus? serve God no better than thus? Your Baptisme bindeth you in conscience against every sinne, and every evil way: O let us take it to heart and consider it.

EDMUND CALAMY.

CHRIST'S ALARM TO DROWSIE SAINTS.

REVEL: 3. 1.

And unto the Angel of the Church in Sardis, write, Theſe things ſaith he that hath the ſeven Spirits of God, and the ſeven Stars, I know thy works, that thou haſt a name that thou liveſt, and art dead.

SAint JOHN being baniſht into the Iſle of Patmos, though the perſecuters of the Goſpell thought to doe him a diſpleaſure, yet the Lord turned it unto his great good: For the place of his exile was like Pauls third Heaven unto him, he was raviſht in the Spirit on the Lords day, and had abundance of revelations vouchſafed unto him, of the things that ſhould occurre in the Church, and out, from thence unto the end of the world. Before which he hath a charge given him to write to the ſeven Churches of Aſia, chap. 1. the Church of Epheſus, the Church of Smyrna, and of Pergamus, and of Thyatira, theſe foure are written unto in the ſecond Chapter; the other three are written unto in this: the Church of Sardis, and the Church of Philadelphia, and the Church of Laodicea. Now that which I have choſen to handle, and if God afford liberty, I deſire to goe through it, is the Epiſtle unto the Church of Sardis; wherein we may conſider foure things.

Firſt, The Inſcription, containing a ſpecification to whom the Epiſtle is ſpecially directed unto. And unto the Angell of the Church in Sardis, write.

Secondly, the Subſcription, containing a deſcription of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, the King of the Church: Theſe things ſaith he that hath the ſeven Spirits of God, and the ſeven Starres. I call it a ſubſcription, becauſe in our Letters we uſe to ſubſcribe our names, or to write our names beneath at the latter end. But it may be called rather a ſupraſcription, as Kings write their names above for honours ſake, ſo does Chriſt the King of Sion, write his Name above.

Thirdly, the ſubſtance or matter of the Epiſtle, I know thy works, that thou haſt a name that thou liveſt, and art dead. Be watchfull, and ſtrengthen the things which remaine, that are ready to dye, for I have not found thy works perfect before God, &c. ver. 1, 2, 3, 4.

Fourthly, the concluſion, He that overcometh, the ſame ſhall be cloathed in white raiment, &c. v. 5, 6.

Firſt, I ſay, the Inſcription, And unto the Angell of the Church in Sardis write. In which words Saint Iohn is directed whom to inſcribe this Epiſtle unto, and that is, unto the Church which is in Sardis: but especially unto the Angell of it, that is, the Minister, or Ministers of it: for that's the meaning of Angell in this place.

Secondly, for the Subscription, or rather suprascription, that containes the description of the Lord Jesus Christ, from whom the Epistle is sent, and he is described by two Royalties, the first is, in having of the seven Spirits of God. These things saith he that hath the seven Spirits of God, that is, that hath power to send the Holy Ghost unto all the elect: for so the Holy Ghost is called the seven Spirits that are before the Throne, *Rev.*1 4. He meanes there the Holy Ghost, not as though there were seven Holy Ghosts, but he is expressed in the plurall number in regard of the abundance of graces that he infuses into his Churches; and the number seven is rather taken then any other number, partly because this number is put for a perfect number, as implying the perfection of his influence, and partly because of the present businesse in hand, for here he writes to the seven Churches of Asia. Now the Lord Jesus Christ hath Spirit enough to send forth into them all. This is his first Royalty, that he hath the seven Spirits of God. Another Royalty of his is, that he hath the seven Starres, that is, the seven Pastors of these Churches; Christ hath them all in his hand, it is he that preserves those Ministers that are faithfull; he hath power to raise them up, to gift them, to protect them, to defend them; and they are called Starres, because they are to shine in the firmament of the Church.

Thirdly, for the substance and matter of the Epistle, it contains three parts.

First, a Reproofe, and the reproofe is in these words, I know thy works; that is, I know them all, and they are stark naught for the most part, what ever they seem; they may seem to be very good, but I tell you plainly, I know them all what they be, q. d. generally they are stark naught; and then he instances in particular, as for example, thy deadnesse of heart in religion, Thou hast a name to live, but thou art dead; that is, thou goest for an excellent Minister, and an excellent Church, ye doe professe Religion very fairly, and in a goodly manner, that to see to thou art alive, and thou art taken so too of all thy Neighbour-Churches; they all thinke and hope thou art alive; but the truth is, thou art dead, the grace of life is hardly in thee at all. This is the first, the Reproof.

Then secondly, here's a remedy annexed: for he does not reprove them out of any ill will, but for their good, and so he prescribes them a remedy, and the remedy is twofold. The first is, To strengthen the things that remain, that are ready to dye, q. d. as many of you as are not quite and cleane dead, stirre up your selves, quicken up your hearts: and this is amplified by shewing how they should doe thus; O be watchfull, sayes he, q. d. that is the reason why ye languish in this fashion, and ye will languish more and more because ye are not watchfull: therefore Be watchfull: and also by rendring a motive to presse this remedy; For I have not found thy works perfect before God; that is, thou art hardly sincere a jot, thou art full of hypocrisie, and rottennesse, and formality, and thou wilt lose all thy labour if thou dost not look well about thee: therefore shake up the selfe, and strengthen the things that remain. This is the first remedy.

The second remedy is, to repent, and this is amplified by shewing how, and that is two wayes: First Remember how thou hast received and heard; that is, consider how thou hast been taught, and bewail thy declinings: for thou art horribly departed from what thou hast learned in the Ministery of the word.

Secondly, Hold fast, that is, so bewaile thy warpings, and wanings, and degeneratings, that thou mayst get up againe, hold thee fast there when thou art up. Now lest they should neglect the using of this remedy, the Lord Jesus sharpens his speech with a threatning, telling them the danger if they will not be awakened: If therefore thou ſhalt not watch, I will come on thee as a thiefe, and thou ſhalt not know what houre I will come upon thee. This is the ſecond part of the matter of this Epiſtle, the Remedy.

Thirdly, another part of the matter of this Epiſtle is, a commendation of ſome particular perſons in the Church, that were not carried away in the deadneſſe of the times, and theſe he does praiſe very much, and he gives them an excellent promiſe; the praiſe is in theſe words Thou haſt a few names even in Sardis, which have not defiled their garments; that is, there be ſome among you, though they be but a few, that have not been ſooted and ſoyled with others bad examples; though others be dead, yet they are not dead too for company: and then the promiſe is to them in theſe words, They ſhall walk with me in white; that is, I will give them the grace of repentance, and I will keep them unſpotted unto my heavenly Kingdome and glory. And he addes a reaſon in theſe words: For they are worthy, not as though they did merit repentance and glory; no, but they are worthy in Chriſt, and Chriſt hath made them meet to be made partakers of this mercy. Thus you ſee the matter of the Epiſtle.

The Fourth and laſt things is the concluſion of the Epiſtle; and that is in the fifth and ſixth verſes, He that overcometh ſhall be cloathed in white raiment, &c. In which words we have the concluſion of the Epiſtle, and it conſiſts of two parts.

Firſt, a promiſe to every one that overcometh, He that overcomes, &c.

Secondly, a precept to command every gracious Saint to attend to theſe things. The promiſe:

Firſt, it is to be conſidered to whom it is made; it is made to him that overcometh: that is, ye know there is to be a holy warre againſt all manner of ſin, and all temptations, and all the policies of Satan, and all the alluring baits of the world, and all the inclinations of the fleſh. Now he that overcomes all theſe, which is no other but one that is borne of God, who alone is able to overcome, He that overcomes, this is the party to whom it is promiſed.

Secondly, what it is that is promiſed. Here be three things that are promiſed to him that overcomes: Firſt, White raiment; He ſhall be cloathed in white raiment; that is, he ſhall be preferred to everlaſting bleſſedneſſe, and he ſhall walke in triumph in a conquerours robe. Secondly, a permanent and laſting name in the Book of life, I will not put out his name out of the Book of life, that is, there be many hundreds that are written in the book of life in the judgment of men, and in the hope of men; but in the end the Lord blots them out, he makes it appeare, that their names are not there: But this man ſhall never be blotted out thence. As he hopes his name is enrolled there, ſo it ſhall for a certain appeare to be enrolled there, and it ſhall never be croſſed out. Thirdly, Chriſts confeſſing of that mans name before his Father and his holy Angels: And I will confeſſe his name before my Father and his holy Angels; that is, I will acknowledge him to be mine. Thus you ſee the firſt thing, the promiſe which is made to him that overcomes.

The ſecond part of the concluſion is a precept to command every gracious Saint to attend to theſe things, and that is in the ſixth verſe; He that hath an eare to heare, let him heare what the ſpirit ſaith unto the Churches.

Of theſe in their order, and firſt of the Inſcription.

And to the Angell of the Church of Sardis, write.

By the Angell he means not the Angels of Heaven, no nor the Angels of the bottomleſſe pit: he does not mean the Angels of heaven, becauſe they are perfectly holy, they have no ſin in them. Now the Lord Jeſus ſpeaks of ſuch an Angell here as hath much ſinned; for he reproves him exceedingly. Neither does he mean any Angel of the bottomleſſe pit, becauſe they are perfectly evill, they have no ſpirituall goodneſſe at all in them. Now the Lord Jesus speaks of such an Angell here, whom though he reproves for many things amisse, yet he commends him too for some gracious things; and therefore he can be no Angell of the bottomlesse pit. It remaines then, that a Metaphoricall Angell is here understood, and that is the Minister of the Church. Now as the Angels are called Ministers, Bless ye the Lord all ye his Hosts, ye Ministers that do his pleasure, Psal. 103 21. So the Ministers are called Angels, An Angell of the Lord came up from Gilgal to Bochim, &c. Iud. 2.1. that is, a Minister, Phinehas, or some Prophet or other, as it seems, came and preached unto the people. The point is this,

Jeſus

Some translate it so too, Which have received the Law by the disposition of Angels, and have not kept it, Act. 7. 53. And so 1 Cor. 11.10 Because of the Angels.

That Ministers are to be Angels, as it were.

Observ. 1.

There are Angels in some sense.

1. Angels are Spirits, ye know they are spirituall substances, as the Psalmist speaks: He maketh his Angels spirits, Psal. 104.4. they are spirituall creatures, their communion is spirituall, their food is spirituall, their delights are spirituall, their affections and mindes are spirituall: so a Minister though he be a Body as well as his people, yet he should be a spirituall man. I confesse every true Christian is spirituall, as the Apostle sayes: If any man be overtaken in a fault, ye that are spirituall, restore such a man in the spirit of meekenesse, Gal. 6. he speaks to every true Christian, he is a spirituall man: But a Minister should more especially be spirituall; nay, our own Titles will rise up in judgement against us, if we be not spirituall. Doe not we call our selves the Spirituality, as though the people were carnall in comparison of us? Now if we should be more carnall then they, out of our own mouthes the Lord will condemn us. The truth is, many of us may be called spirituall men, if we will: but we are mad spirituall men; as the Prophet Hosea speaks, The spirituall man is mad, Hos. 9. 7. Mad spirituall men indeed, when we are nothing lesse then what we professe our selves to be, when we are spirituall men in a mockery: ye know what a mock is brought up upon this name; people call a spirituall Pig, that is, the poorest of all the ten, that hath no substance in it that is given to the Minister: so many of us are spirituall in a mockery, having no reason why we should be so tearmed, but onely because there is no substance in us, no goodnesse, no holinesse at all in us; we whereas we should exceed others in it. We should be spirituall in a speciall manner, we should be like animæ separatæ, like spirits sequestred from bodily things, taken up with spirituall affaires, holding forth the fruits of the spirit; should be as Angels in our Parishes, labouring to draw people from all their carnall courses, endeavovouring to breed in them a savour and relish of all the things of the spirit of God: our Sermons should not be only morall, but spirituall; our carriage should be a spirituall walking; where we come, our discourse should be a spirituall, we should be like a company of spirits, for so the Apostle calls us, try the Spirits whether they be of God, 1 Joh 4.1. that is, try your Ministers whether they be of God, yea or no; whether their doctrine be the doctrine of life, that will make the soule live: whether their conversation be after the spirit, lest ye follow a false guide: whether their Ministery be the Ministery of the spirit. If any man think himselfe to be a Prophet, or Spirituall, 1 Cor. 14. 37. We cannot think our selves Prophets, except we be spirituall men. When our courses are carnall, we sinne against our callings: for we are to be as Angels by our places in this sense, lest our own profession hit us in the teeth at the last.

Secondly, the Angels are creatures of another world, not of this world, though they walk up and downe on Gods errands here, yet they are creatures of another world; and therefore they are called the Angels of Heaven, Mat. 24. 36. Heavenly Souldiers, Luk. 2. 13. True, every child of God is a heavenly creature, but a Minister should be in a more speciall manner, a creature of another world, crucified unto this, as Paul says, I am crucified to the the world, and the world unto me. The preaching of the word is called the Kingdome of heaven, ſo we that are the Preachers of it, ſhould be of heaven too, not only in regard of the newes we bring, but we our ſelves that bring it, ſhould be heavenly ones. When our Saviour Chriſt had told Nicodemus, that he muſt be gotten from above, O, ſays he, art thou a Teacher in Iſrael, and knoweſt not theſe things? How beautifull upon the mountains! The Miniſters of the Goſpell ſhould be men aloft, the world ſhould be a valley to them beneath, they ſhould not be Secular men. What care Angels for fine houſes, or great livings? They had rather be in the priſon with Peter, then with Herod at the Court. Doe Angels care for outward things? No, no more ſhould Miniſters. Paul was all for Jeſus Chriſt, I determined not to know any thing among you, but Jeſus Chriſt and him crucified, 1 Cor. 2. 2. He cared not though the great Philoſophers of Corinth took him for a Dunce in all humane learning; Jeſus Chriſt and him crucified, Paul included all his learning in that.

Thirdly, the Angels ſtand before God, as Daniel ſays, Ten thouſand times ten thouſand ſtood before him, Dan. 7. 10. So the Miniſters of God are to ſtand before God, as God ſaith to Jeremy, Thou ſhalt ſtand before me, Jer. 15. 19. The Miniſters of God are to ſtand before God, to know what his pleaſure is unto the people, what meſſage he hath for them Again, the Angels are Miniſtring ſpirits, ſent forth for the good of them that are heirs of ſalvation, Heb. 1. 14. So Miniſters, they are to miniſter unto them that are the heirs of ſalvation, to watch over their ſoules, to be uſefull to them in all their wayes. Again, the Angels pitch their tents round about them that are good, as the Prophet ſpeaks; ſo the Miniſters, they are the Churches Angels. Whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, all are yours, they are not their own: But as they are Chriſts, ſo next under him, they are theirs that are Chriſts, they are Miniſters by whom they beleeve, helpers of their faith; they are Gods ſervants to bring Jacob againe to him Angels are Gods meſſengers, they never come but when they are ſent from God: ſo it is ſaid of Miniſters, There was a man ſent from God, whoſe name was John Joh. 1 6.

The uſe of this is, Firſt, Here we ſee that the Miniſtry is no baſe Office; the world makes a matter of nothing of Gods faithfull Miniſters; vile men will Sirra them at their pleaſure, and take them up as if they were their diſhclouts. But beloved, here we ſee they are as it were Angels of God. The Apoſtle makes bold to call Chriſt himſelfe a Miniſter, Rom. 15. 18. Now I ſay ſayes he) that Jeſus Chriſt was a miniſter: the Apoſtle knew it was no diſparagement unto him. Solomon when he would chuſe him his Title, and might have called himſelfe, The King of Iſrael, and Judah, yet he rather takes this as honorable enough, The Preacher; Thus ſaith the Preacher, Eccle. 1. 1. The Office of a Miniſter is an Angels office. When Zachary perceived that his child ſhould be a miniſter, though yet he were a little babe lying in the cradle, he admires him: And thou childe ſhalt be called the Prophet of the Higheſt, for thou ſhalt goe before the face of the Lord to prepare his ways, to give knowledge of ſalvation for the remiſſion of ſinnes, to give light unto them that ſit in darkneſſe, and in the ſhadow of death, to guide their feet in the way of peace, Luk. 1. 76. 77. The Angels of heaven never go on greater errands then theſe. When they came to the Shepheards, what did they doe? they did but tell them of the birth of Chriſt, of peace on earth, and good will towards men. Now this is the Miniſters duty, let the world think what they will of us, as though our calling were mean, and they care not much whether they heare us or no, they will not regard what we preach. O beloved, conſider what an office we have, we are Gods Angels unto you, to declare unto man his righteouſneſſe, Job 33. 23. to pray men in Chriſts ſtead to be reconciled unto God, 2 Cor. 5 10. to gather the ſaints, Ephe. 4. 12. Theſe are no ſmall things, no mean imployments to treat between God and Man about eternall life, to be Chriſts Paranymphs, and the Uſe 1.

friends of the Bridegroome to deale about the getting of a wife for the Lamb, to cater for heaven, to bring in custome for the Kingdome of God. The whole world hath not a greater office in it; ye cannot despise either our persons or our message and be saved, as Paul sayes, Let a man so esteeme of us, as of the Ministers of Christ and the stewards of the mysteries of God, 1 Cor. 4. 1. q d. O take heed how ye slight us, or our Ministery, ye cannot have the mysteries of grace without us, ye cannot have saving knowledge, nor regeneration, nor faith without us. I doe not speak what God may doe extraordinarily; but this is Gods ordinary way: How can they believe on him of whom they have not heard? And how can they heare without a Preacher? Rom. 10 4 and therefore our office is no mean office, we are as the Angels of God unto you, and people should honour our Ministry when a Minister comes into the Pulpit, even as if an Angell did appeare. It is said when Samuel came to Bethlehem, the Elders of the town trembled at his coming, 1 Sam 16 4.

Use 2. Secondly, are Ministers Angels? then they must be holy; ye know the Angels are holy; When the Sonne of man shall come in his glory, and all his holy Angels with him, Mat. 25.31. They are holy all of them: so should the Ministers be holy; otherwise they may be Angels indeed, but they are evill Angels, Angels of darkneſſe; they are Devills if they be not holy. Every ignorant, graceleſſe, and unconſcionable Minister is ready to preſſe the dignity of his calling, and what an honourable office he hath; but he never considers what a Minister then he must be. If we be Angels, brethren, why then as we like this honourable Title, we must have a care to be holy, or else, I say, we are Devils. Thoſe Angels that are not holy, are Devils. Nay, our very calling ſuppoſes us to be holy, Let thy Urim and thy Thummim be with thy holy one, Deut. 33 8. ſo that our very calling will teſtifie againſt us, if we be not holy: We of all men ſhould labour to be holy; what, a Minister, and yet a drunkard? a Minister, and yet a whoremonger? a Minister, and yet without the feare of God? a Minister, and yet have a dead heart? O conſider what God ſayes, What haſt thou to doe to declare my ſtatutes, or that thou ſhouldſt take my covenant within thy mouth, ſeeing thou hateſt inſtruction, and haſt caſt my words behind thee? Pſa. 50.16,17. With what face can we here ſtand in a Pulpit, and preach againſt ſinne, and teach our hearers to make conſcience of all their waye, and denounce the judgements of God againſt them that doe evill, if we that condemn another doe the ſame things or as bad? How inexcuſable are we, if we can preach the ſtraitneſſe of heavens gate, and the narrowneſſe of the way, and the ſtrictneſſe of the account the people ſhall be forced to give at the laſt day, and lay heavie burdens on other mens ſhoulders, and we our ſelves not touch them with one of our fingers? Teach preciſely, and live looſely; teach graciouſly, and walke broadly? This is groſſe hypocriſie; not zeal and goodneſſe in the Pulpit, and be heartleſſe and luke-warm in our private duties unto God.

Again, we can never look to doe good, if we be not holy, as Jet will not draw if it be not clean: For how can we hope our people will follow our exhortations, if they ſee we doe not follow them our ſelves? When S. Luke had ſhewed how Barnabas exhorted the Christians to cleave cloſe unto God, Act. 11.23. preſently he gives a reaſon why he might well exhort them to doe ſo, For he was a good man, full of the holy Ghoſt and of Faith, *v.*24 When our hearers are met with for any of their ſinnes, when we rub their conſciences with our Sermons, preſently their eye is at us, and if they ſee us to be vain and worldly, this heals them again; though the word wounded them, yet this is an eaſe to them, O think they, he is as bad himſelf, and we ſee no ſuch holineſſe in him, and we are as faire for heaven as he, he loves his penny as well as we, he is as ready to quarrell as we, he is as proud, and ambitious, and fearfull, and idle, as we; he loves to ſleep in a whole skin, what will not he do rather then loſe his living? hee'l break the Sabbath, and teach others to doe ſo. Now, my brethren, how ſhould we abhor this! O it ſhould prick and ſpur us up to ſtudy holineſſe of life, that ſo our Miniſtery may be powerfull.

Thirdly, are miniſters Angels? Then they ſhould be apt to teach, ready to preach, and to labour in Word and Doctrine. It is ſaid of the Angels, that they have wings, One of the Seraphims came flying unto me, Iſa. 6. 6. They are ready preſt to do any thing that the Lord gives them in charge; ſo ſhould we be, or elſe how ſhould we beare the name of Angels? We muſt labour, that we may be fruitfull in all our labours among our people. Ye know the Angels are called Reapers, and ſo are Gods miniſters, I ſent you to reap, Joh. 4. 38. When a man reaps he gathers: nay Chriſt chuſeth good Miniſters for this end, that they ſhould bring forth fruit in their places, I have ordained you that ye ſhould go and bring forth much fruit, Joh. 15. 16. Nay, our Saviour Chriſt ſuppoſes that all his true Miniſters are fruitfull upon ſome. Every ſower though he have ſome high-way ground to ſow in, and ſome thorny ground, Matth. 13. 3. and ſome ſtony ground, yet he hath ſome good ground or other.

For firſt, a good Miniſter it is the deſire of his ſoul to ſee the fruits of his labours; As a Hen, many a Hen will hardly ever off from her eggs, till ſhe ſee a young chickens bill peep; nay ſhe will ſit ſtill till ſhe die before ſhe will off. What made Paul ſo deſirous to come to the Romans? Was it onely to ſee them, and to be among them, or to take his tythes or his maintenance? No, it was that he might have ſome fruit, Rom. 1. 13. And certainly, this is the ſtudy of every true Miniſter, that he may ſee his preaching fruitfull in the converſion and ſalvation of ſome, that ſome are weakened by his means, that ſome are quickned, ſome are made to leave their ſinnes, and to become new creatures unto God. 1.

Secondly, does not every man count it a miſery to be unprofitable? The Lord names it as a brand upon wicked men, that they are unprofitable, Rom. 3. 12. What a wofull brand is this, when we can live two, three, ſeven, ten, twenty yeares in a place, and our ſervices are unprofitable, no man delivered out of ignorance, no man purged from his filthineſſe by our means; when our Miniſtery is a dead letter, we preach without life, and no man is tranſlated from death to life by it; I ſay, this is to be unprofitable, like ſalt that hath loſt his ſavour. I confeſſe the beſt Miniſters may have little takings, as the beſt tradeſman may have little vent for his wares when his trading growes dead. 2.

Nay thirdly, this is the end of our gifts, that we may profit with them; as the Apoſtle ſays, The manifeſtation of the Spirit is given unto every man to profit withall, 1 Cor. 12. 7. Hath he given us knowledge? He hath given it us that we ſhould profit others with it. Hath he given us skill in the opening and applying of the Scriptures? He hath given it unto us, that we may do good with the ſame. And therefore, O how earneſt ſhould we be that our Miniſtery may profit, that our paines may be profitable and ſucceſsfull, that we may ſay with the Prophet Eſay, Lord, behold I and the Children whom thou haſt given me. 3.

Fourthly, this is the beſt argument that God hath of a certain called us to bee Miniſters in his Church. If we have called our ſelves, and run without ſending, then no marvell if we be fruitleſſe, and do little or no good. But if we find that God bleſſeth our labours, this is the beſt ſeal of our Miniſtry: as if the arrow hit, it's a good ſign it was ſent out of the bow; it may fall out of the bow of it own accord, but then it never hits, but when it is ſent out of the bow, ye know he that ſends it, will aim; and therefore now when it hits, that's a ſigne it was ſent indeed: ſo when a Miniſter converts peoples ſoules, this is a good ſigne that God ſent him; when a miniſter can ſay to his people, as Paul to the Corinthians, The ſeale of mine Apoſtleſhip are ye in the Lord, 1 Cor. 9. 2. 4. though I be not an Apostle unto others, yet doubtlesse I am to you: For the seal of my Apostleship are ye in the Lord. So the seal of us Ministers are ye in the Lord: though I have not converted others, yet doubtlesse I have converted you unto God, as he sayes, Truly, the signes of an Apostle were wrought among you, 2 Cor. 12. 12, &c.

5. Fifthly, this is that which will give us comfort, when we lie upon our death-beds, when we can say, we have been faithfull in our callings, and can shew a token of it, too, by blessing of our faithfulnesse in gaining of soules, as Paul saith to the Thessalonians, What is our hope, or joy, or crown of rejoycing? Are not even yee in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming? For yee are our glory and joy, 1 Thes. 2. 19, 20. This is a pledge of our glory. The promise is cleare, They that turn others into righteousnesse, shall shine as the starres, Dan 12. 3. I do not deny, but a wicked minister that hath parts, and is gifted of God with an Art of speaking to the conscience, may convert; and therefore it is not a naked argument. But when a man hath had this successe by his faithfulnesse, and hath set himselfe to doe it in Gods way indeed; what an unspeakable comfort is this! He is not the wisest Minister that can plot most for preferment, or can preach best for applause, or the like: No, no; but he that can most compose himselfe to do good, He that winneth soules is wise, Prov 11. 30 that is, as he had need to be a wise man, and to goe wisely to work that would doe it: so he is wise to himself, he layes up to himselfe a good foundation of a comfort against the world to come.

6. Sixthly, and lastly, if we can endure to be unprofitable, not to stirre up our selves, not to point and sharpen our Ministery that it may pierce into mens consciences, nor never study how to doe good, what a heavy woe will lie upon us? You read what was done unto the unprofitable servant, he was bound hand and foot, and cast into utter darknesse, where is weeping and gnashing of teeth, Mat. 25. 30 O then how carefull should we be to doe good, and to be effectuall Preachers, that we may say, these and these I have been an instrument of good to, by the mercy of God these and these have I begotten through the Gospell, then are we Angels indeed, that are sent out for the good of Gods elect. I confesse it is good to civilize our people, to abate their wickednesse, to make them professors, and I would to God we could see more of these effects rather then none. But to gather in Gods elect, this is an Angels work; the conversation of one soule is better then the civilizing of a thousand. And therefore let us be diligent and industrious, and preach in season and out of season, let us con the skill of preaching, not to tickle mens itching eares, not so much to make our people say, our Minister is a fine Schollar, a good Churchman, as to rouze up the consciences of our hearers, to pull down their hearts before God, to feed their soules with divine meat, with the good knowledge of the Lord, to shew them the severall wiles of Satan, as Paul sayes, Speake thou the things which become sound doctrine, that the aged men be sober and grave, &c. Tit. 2. 1. that is, so preach, as to good, to old men, to old women, to young men, to young women, to Masters, to servants, to all, as it followes there; we must look unto our life, that we defile not our Angels place, that we doe not undoe what we preach. Alas! If we doe not sincerely practise all that we doe deliver, if our lives doe not answer our teaching, we are like unto kine that give very good milk, but then put their feet into the paile, or throw down the paile when they have done. This is to make our preaching of no effect; and therefore as the Apostle sayes to Timothy, take heed unto thy selfe, and to thy doctrine, continue in them, for in doing this, thou shalt both save thy selfe and them that hear thee, 2 Tim. 4. 16. They are the best Ministers, that carry people unto heaven; when men thinke to send people to heaven, and not go themselves, suppose this should do the deed, yet what will it profit us, if our people go to heaven, and we stay behind, hind, and never come there? Nay, we cannot look they will go except they ſee us go before them; and therefore let us do nothing that may hinder the fruitfulneſſe of our Sermons. Thus ſhall we be Angels indeed.

Fourthly, another Uſe is, If Miniſters be Angels, then let us know that we are mainly for Gods elect, as the Pſalmiſt ſayes of every elect perſon, God ſhall give his Angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy wayes, Pſal. 91. 11. Marke, the Angels have the charge of the elect, they are their maine charge; may be they are to do many things towards others, but theſe are their principall charge; ſo it muſt be with Gods Miniſters, their chiefe charge is towards Gods elect, as the Apoſtle ſayes, I endure all things for the elects ſake, that they may alſo obtain the ſalvation which is in Chriſt Jeſus, which is eternall glory, 2 Tim. 2. 10. We that are Gods Miniſters, have all our gifts and graces for their ſakes; He gave ſome Apoſtle, and ſome Prophets, and ſome Evangeliſts, and ſome Paſtors and ſome Teachers. For what? For the perfecting of the Saints, for the work of the Miniſtery, for the edifying of the Body of Chriſt, Epheſ. 4. 11, 12. And therefore if we have any that fear God in our Pariſhes, we ſhould bend our main Miniſtery unto them, and for the adding of more to them; we ſhould not be like thoſe wretched Miniſters that count ſuch perſons the worſt of their flock, and they do moſt hate them, and oppoſe them, and jeere them: No, no, we ſhould moſt dearly love them, and tender them, and vend our ſelves unto them; nay, we ſhould not altogether in theſe bad times, ſtand declaiming againſt drunkards, murtherers, and ſo leave the Lords Saints without their portion. The truth is, ye that live in your ungodly courſes, ye that walk after your wicked luſts, and will not be gotten to forſake your curſed doings, we could be content to lay hell here before you in every Sermon, and ſpend our ſhot on you; all the houres that we have of preaching in the weeke, are little enough to tell you what a damned condition ye are in. But if ye will not enter in into the ſtrait gate, we muſt not neglect them that will; if ye will be filthy, be filthy ſtill, and if ye will to hell, and we cannot perſwade you to live out of your ſinnes. Though there be but two or three that are well-minded in our Pariſhes, we are to bend our ſelves chiefly unto them. Indeed as long as we have any hope of adding more to their company, we muſt preach points for them too. May be ſome of Gods elect are among you, and if there be, the Word will find them out. I ſay, this is our maine charge, to be groping for Gods elect, and when any of them appeare, to tender them moſt, ſo ſhall we ſhew our ſelves Angels indeed for the good of Gods choſen. More Uſes I might make, and very many too. Uſe. 4.

But I will content my ſelfe with one more, and that ſhall be to you that are hearers. If Gods Miniſters be Angels, then how ſhould you come to the hearing of the word of God? Even as if an Angel ſhould drop downe from heaven unto you. How ſhould you receive the Miniſters of God that deſire to be faithfull? Even as the Galatians received Paul, even as an Angel of God, Gal. 4. 14. yea even as Chriſt himſelfe; ye muſt not looke up into the Pulpit, as ſeeing nothing but a poor mortall man there, but as though an Angel of God were ſtanding there. How grave ſhould our meetings here be? how reverently ſhould ye ſit in your Pewes? how ſacredly ſhould we ſtand in our desks? how graciouſly ſhould we deliver Gods errands, and you heare them with feare and trembling? When a good Miniſter appeares in the Congregation, it is as if an Angel of heaven appeared unto you to ſpeak unto you. O in what a homely manner do we come to Church? the Majeſty of the Word is not ſeene; nay, we may ſpeak it with ſhame, neither by us the ſpeakers, nor by you the hearers; we do not come to the Word as if an Angel from heaven had ſpoken it. But generally, moſt people ſee little more then a poore mortall creature in the Pulpit, and ſo they deale with the Word accordingly, &c. 5. Uſe.

Thus ye have heard the first Doctrine; To the Angel of the Church in Sardis, write. I should now speake of the singular number, he does not say, To the Angels, though there were many Ministers in Sardis, yet he speakes unto them all as if they were all one. From whence we are taught, The unity that is between true and right ministers, they are all as one man. And then whereas he inscribes the Epistle, To the Angel of the Church, though he write to all the Church, and blames and condemnes all the Churches, yet he names none but the Angel; here we are taught, That a Minister shares in the good and in the evill of his Parishes: if they be good, it is to his praise; if they be evill, commonly he is guilty of it.

REVEL. 3. 1.

And unto the Angel of the Church in Sardis, write, These things saith he that hath the seven Spirits of God, &c.

These words are a translation, and ought not to be expounded.

I Have made an entrance into the words: ye have heard the Analysis of the whole Epistle, and a short exposition, or a paraphrase upon all the verses. Unto the Angel of the Church in Sardis, write. This is the inscription or superscription of the letter that Christ would have written to the Ministers and Christians in the town of Sardis. Where first ye heard this point of Doctrine, That Ministers are as the Angels of God unto their Parishes. When God sends his Ministers unto a people, it is as if he sent his Angels from heaven unto them. But I will not trouble you with any repetitions.

The next point I foretold you of, that ariseth out of these words, is this, That all the true Ministers of the Church are all one as it were, there is or ought to be an unity between them all, even as if they were all one Angel, Unto the Angel of the Church in Sardis, write, and yet the Town was a great Town, and there were many Ministers in it; so we may see it was in Ephesus, the text sayes, that Paul called all the Elders of the Church of Ephesus together, and said unto them, Take heed unto your selves, and to all the flock over the which the holy Ghost hath made you overseers, Acts 20. 28. he speakes to the Ministers there as to many, and yet S. John is to write to them all as to one Minister, Unto the Angel of the Church of Ephesus, write, Rev. 2. 1. noting thus much unto us, That Ministers should be all as one Minister; there should be a sweet harmony and a glorious agreement, and consent and unity between them all, even as if they were all one Minister; so that the doctrine is plaine. So again, John prophecying of John Husse and Jerome of Prague, and other Godly Ministers in succeeding ages, that should mightily strive against the primacy & domineering of the man of sin, sayes, There followed another Angel, saying, Babylon is fallen, Babylon is fallen, Rev. 14 8. he calls them all one Minister, intimating unto us how that they all agree in one.

1. I do not mean, first, that if one Minister be a drunkard, that all others should be so too; if one be a man-pleaser and a dawber, that all others should be so too; that if one be an ignorant Sir John, all others should be so too: every unity is not good, there is unity as our Saviour CHRIST shews, even among the very Devils in Hell. For if Satan be divided against Satan, how can his Kingdome stand? Mat. 12. 26. there is an unity among rogues and theeves, Come, say they, cast in thy lot among us, and let us have one purse, Prov. 1. 14. There was unity among Ahabs 400 false Prophets, they all hung together in a string, Goe up and prosper. All the prophets prophesied so, 1 Kings 22. 12. as the Messenger said to Micaiah, All the Prophets prophesie good to the King with one mouth, let thy word be like theirs; be not thou singular, be not thou an odd fellow by thy selfe, they all agree in one. There was unity among the Priests that were met together in a Synod for the condemning of Chriſt, they all were in one note, That he was worthy to die. The Prophet obſerves that there was unity amongſt all the blinde watchmen of Iudah: They are all ignorant, ſayes he, they are all dumb dogges, they cannot bark, ſleeping, lying downe, loving to ſlumber, they all looke to their owne way, every one for his gaine from his quarter, Iſa. 56. 10, 11. This is an unity the world is full of, nay and hell is full of, like the unity of Sodom againſt Lot, the men of Sodom compaſſed his houſe round, both old and young from every quarter, Gen. 19. 4. This is a Deviliſh unity, this is no true unity. True unity is in Bono, no matter how many are of one mind, and of one heart, and of one accord, if it be not an union in good, it is faction and no union, as Tertullian told the Marcionites when they brag'd of their Churches, forſooth they were the Church, ſaith hee, Waſpes have their ſwarmes: ſo when wicked Miniſters ſhall cry, The Church, the Church, I ſay, theſe are ſwarmes of Waſps, I do not mean ſuch a unity: when it is not in good, the greater the unity is, the leſſe union is indeed.

Secondly, I do not mean neither, that Miniſters ſhould thus hang together in one, that if one be a Boanerges, a ſon of thunder, another ſhould be ſo too. For Miniſters may be different in different auditories Husband-men ſow their ſeed according to the diverſity of their ground; the Phyſician tempers his Phyſick according to his Patients conſtitution: as long as people are of ſundry diſpoſitions, ſo certainly the Miniſters manner of preaching may be various. And therefore I do not mean ſuch an unity neither, that all Preachers ſhould be moulded alike; nay, the ſame Miniſter may and muſt differ from himſelfe, ſometimes come with cordials, ſometimes with corraſives, to ſing of mercy and judgment, to preach comfort to whom comfort, and vengeance to whom vengeance belongs, to ſome he muſt give milk, to others ſtrong meat. Paul had a rod as well as the ſpirit of meekneſſe. Zacharies Paſtor was to haye two ſtaves, the one called Beauty and the other cal'd Bands, and ſo he was to feed the flock, Zach. 11. 7 A Chirurgian hath aking tents as well as ſupplying oyle. The Apoſtle Paul when he was to deal with Elymas the Sorcerer, he ſet his eyes on him, and called him the child of the Devill; but when he was to deale with Sergius Paulus he was mild with him. Our Saviour Chriſt preach't the acceptable yeere of the Lord to ſome, and to o-other ſome as though he were not the ſame Preacher, he had nothing but woes in his mouth. There were two mountaines in Canaan, there was the bleſſing on mount Gerizim for ſome, and the curſing on mount Ebal for others. Heb 13. 16

Againe thirdly, we do not mean that all Miniſters ſhould be the ſame in gifts and parts, and meaſure of knowledge and ſanctification; for that can never be looked for, every Pariſh can never be provided for alike. Starres are of different magnitudes, ſome ſtarres are greater, ſome leſſer: The Angels are not all of one rank, ſome are ordinary Angels, ſome Arch-angels, ſome are Principalities, ſome are Dominions, ſome are Thrones, Col. 1. 16. and may be, thoſe that are meaneſt, ſo they be godly, and ſent of God, may do as much good as thoſe that are more excellent; nay more, convert more, awaken more, ſettle more: for it is not they that work, but God by them who is not tied unto Organs, unity is not hindered by diſparity. Paul calls Epaphroditus who was much inferior to him, his brother, and companion in labour, and fellow ſouldier, Phil. 2. 25. Though Clement were a Miniſter much meaner then he, yet he calls him his fellow-labourer, Phil 4. 3. Though Tychicus came never ſo much ſhort of him, yet he terms him his fellow ſervant, Col 4. 3. 7. So that there may be unity for all this, and a gratious ſympathy and agreement betweene Miniſters, though of never ſo different parts, ſo they be ſincere and cordially minded to do good.

You will ſay then, What is that unity that muſt be among Miniſters?

1. I anſwer 1. They muſt be all competently endued with ability for the work of the Miniſtery, all muſt agree in this, that they be able men in ſome meaſure. Hee hath made us able Miniſters of the new teſtament; 2 Cor. 3. 6. able to preach to the conſcience, able to do it with power and might, able to divide the word aright, able to give every one his portion in due ſeaſon. They are none of Gods Miniſters that are not able men, that are not able to teach and apply, to be the mouth of God unto the people, and the mouth of the people unto God that are not able to ſeek that which was loſt, to bring again that which is driven away, to bind that which is broken, to ſtrengthen that which is ſick. Thoſe that are not able to do this, they are blind guides, Idol-ſhepheards, and no miniſters. Paul ſayes, that a miniſter muſt be able by ſound doctrine both to exhort and to convince the gainſayers, Tit. 1 9 Faithfull men, able to teach others, 2 Tim. 2. 2. This was one of the ends that Chriſt aſcended up on high, that he might give gifts unto men for the miniſtery, as one Apoſtle ſpeaks, Eph. 4. 8. and ſo as it followes, He gave ſome Apoſtles, and ſome Prophets, and ſome Evangeliſts, and ſome Paſtors and Teachers. All Miniſters ſhould agree in this, that they be able.

Secondly, they muſt be all ſent of God, though a man be never ſo able, yet if he be not ſent of God, he is not a Miniſter. Private Chriſtians many of them have excellent abilities, as the text ſayes, I am perſwaded of you, my brethren that ye are all full of goodneſſe, filled with all knowledge, able to admoniſh one another, Rom. 15 14. he ſpeaks of private Chriſtians: I ſay, they are able many of them, and there is very great uſe of their abilities too, for the good of their families, for the good of Chriſtian Communion, and the like; yea, it is a ſhame that private Chriſtians living under good means of grace, do not grow able to teach. When for time yee ought to be teachers, yee have need that one teach you again which be the firſt principles of the oracles of God, Heb. 5. 12. Mark, he ſhames private Chriſtians that do not grow able to teach But yet this is not enough to make miniſters; true miniſters agree all in this, that they are ſent of God. How ſhall they preach except they be ſent? Rom. 10. 15. I have not thruſt in my ſelfe for a Paſtor, ſayes Jeremy. They are intruders and not miniſters that cannot prove their commiſſion from God, as the authour to the Hebrews ſayes, No man takes this honour to himſelfe, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron, Heb. 5. 4. Chriſt himſelfe alledged this to beare out his Miniſtery, He hath ſent me to preach deliverance to Captives. Woe be to thoſe of whom the Lord ſhall ſay, I have not ſent theſe Prophets and yet they run It will be ſaid to them one day, as to the man without a wedding garment, Friend, how cameſt thou in hither? The want of this is the reaſon that ſo many Miniſters make no more conſcience of their duty; they make no conſcience of taking pains, of ſtrict preaching, of preſſing the word upon peoples hearts, of uſing all manner of means to root out ſinne in their Pariſh, becauſe they have no diſpenſation from God committed unto them: if their conſciences were charged with this, it would make them do otherwiſe then they do. The want of this is the cauſe that the miniſtery of many is impotent, they may preach all the dayes of their lives, and not one ſoule turned unto God, but themſelves and their works periſh together; whereas Miniſters that are ſent, make the Devils roare, and fleſh and bloud chafe, their Sermons are linkes of Iron to bind Nobles, and Princes, and ſtubborn hearts. The want of this is the reaſon why ſo many Miniſters are ſo vile in the peoples eyes, people care not a whit for them, dare drink and be drunk in their company, dare talk of their roguery before them; as Amnon before Jonadab, Jonadab ask't him what he ailed he was ſo ſad? O, ſayes he, I would fain lie with my ſiſter Tamar, 2 Sam. 13. 4. He knew before whom he was; if Jonadab had been a godly man, he durſt as well have eaten his owne tongue, as have told him his baſe luſt A godly man the very preſence of him would have made him aſhamed, and to have have bitten in his lips. When a Miniſter is unſent of God, no body does reſpect him out of conſcience, they care not for his words: whereas when a Miniſter is ſent, this makes him as an Angel of God, when others call him all to naught, the conſcience of many will plead for him, as we ſee there of Jeremy, O this man is not worthy to dye, for he hath ſpoken unto us in the Name of the Lord, Jer. 26. 16. There's never a ſent Miniſter, but if he come in trouble, except peoples conſciences be ſeared with a hot Iron, they will ſpeak for him in their boſomes: Alas! why is he put downe: Why is he impriſoned? Why is he oppoſed? He hath ſpoken to us in the Name of the Lord. So that this is the ſecond wherein all miniſters ſhould agree, they ſhould be all ſent of God, not contenting themſelves with the calling of man, without being alſo called of God.

Thirdly, they muſt all agree in the matter that they preach; the ſame word is delivered unto all Miniſters to preach. Preach the word, 2 Tim. 4. The ſame Goſpell, the ſame Truths, the ſame Duties, the ſame Commandments, the ſame Promiſes, the ſame threatnings: Ye know there is one God, and one Faith, and one Baptiſme, one Lord Jeſus Chriſt; there is but one way of life, one gate to heaven, one ſalvation, one Bible: Now every Miniſter muſt agree in this: You know all men are by Nature the children of wrath, in a damned eſtate; now all Pulpits ſhould agree in this, every Miniſter labouring to bring their people to a ſight of their miſery by ſinne; every Miniſter ſhould ſhew his people what curſed creatures they are, untill they be converted and renewed; every Miniſter ſhould preſſe the evili of ſinne, and open the wiles of Satan, the guilt of the conſcience, the ſpiritualneſſe of the Law, the neceſſity of humiliation, and repentance, and amendment of life, that there is no mercy but in Chriſt, no ſalvation but by Chriſt, except people take him to live in their hearts by faith. All Miniſters ſhould let their people know the terror of the Lord, the ſtrictneſſe of Gods judgements, the inſeparable connexion of mercy and a godly life, that no prophane perſon can enter into Gods Kingdome; no hypocrite, no meer civill man; that a forme of godlineſſe will not ſerve turne, that none but Saints ſhall ſtand at Chriſts right hand at the laſt day. All Miniſters ſhould preach what a narrow path there is to Paradiſe, and how few there be that find it, that ſaving grace cannot ſtand with the reigne of the leaſt luſt, that people muſt be pure and holy, what ever the world think of pureneſſe, and preciſeneſſe, and ſtrictneſſe, yet without this no fleſh ſhall be ſaved. If all Pulpits founded with theſe truths, and all Miniſters cried theſe aloud, and would lift up their voices like a trumpet, and not ſpare, what a land ſhould we have? The want of unity in this matter, is the cauſe that wickedneſſe does ſo much abound: a drunkard, a whoremaſter, a muckworme may come to a Sermon, and go away with hope that he ſhall have peace. When Miniſters make the Pulpit a ſcaffold, in which like maſters of Defence they play their prizes, blazon their owne wits, deſcant upon their Text, as though the Scripture were a rattle for children and fooles to ſport with, toſſing it to and fro, hither and thither, as boyes at a Tennis: when they go about to amaze their hearers, to mount aloft, to be in their high phraſes, and coyned words, more like Mimicks and Comedians then Miniſters; when they ſearch into moth-eaten Friers, affect Allegories, would faine be thought Linguiſts, and interlace a many of allegations of Latine and Greeke ſentences, which a Schoolboy might do with a Polyanthea: or if they ſpeak plain, they skim the truth of the Scriptures, and never dive deep to the edifying of the ſoule. May be they will preach good morall matter. But a man may go to hell, though he do as they teach; people may heare them a thouſand times, and no man made to cry out, What have I done? They preach of repentance, but then they open it ſo ſlightly, that a man may repent as they ſay, and be damned: they preach of faith in Christ, but they make it so broad, that thousands have it and sinke into the bottomlesse pit with it: they preach that sinne must be forsaken, and a good life must be led, but they handle it in that wise, that their hearers may doe as they say, and yet have no more grace then a reprobate, nor so much neither. Now beloved, the unity among brethren should be this, to agree in the right matter of preaching, that the Word may be carved to all, as their need is, that they may see their own cases, that they may understand the wiles of the Devill, the fallacies of their own evill hearts, the counterfeits of faith and repentance, and new obedience, and that they may not be cousened with them. This is the third thing.

4. Fourthly, they should all agree in the true manner of preaching. That which our Saviour sayes of hearing, Take heed how ye heare, Luk. 8. 18. he meanes of preaching too, let your Ministers take heed how they preach. Beloved, we that are the Ministers of God, we are to labour to turne Lions into Lambs, and to transforme the heart of man to bread, new creatures unto God: and therefore it is not every kinde of preaching will serve the turne.

1. 1. Then Ministers should agree in preaching with the demonstration of the Spirit and of power, as Paul sayes, not with the wisdome of words, lest the crosse of Christ be made of none effect, 1 Cor. 17. q. d. If we should preach wit, and learning, and eloquence, then the death of Christ would be of no effect, that is, no man would be converted, Christ would be offered to none; therefore we must preach nakedly, to flash the naked word into mens consciences, that they may see, Thus saith the Lord against their sinfull courses, thus saith the Lord of their estates, this reproof is from the Lord, this threat is from the Lord, thus saith the Lord, you are a wretch, this is thy sinne, and this is thy cursed condition, and it is the Lord and not I that does affirme it. It is said of Christ, that he preacht with authority, and not as the Scribes, Matthew 7. 29 What is to come with authority? When a man speaks from God to the consciences of men; as when a Constable comes in the name of a King, I charge you in the Kings name; this is to come with authority. Therefore we should not come with the affection of wit, or of reading, of fine and filed speaking. You will say, What, would you have us be fooliſh in our preaching? I answer, Never object so, for it is the foolishnesse of preaching, that saves them which beleeve, 1 Cor. 1. 21. as one sayes, we must preach Christ crucified in a crucified phrase. The world would have gewgaws, and garish garnishings: and why so? because the naked Word is contrary to flesh and blood; like to some eyes, they must have their silks and their cypresses to look upon the Sun by, forsooth the Sun beams are too glorious and shining otherwise. Pedestris oratio, as Ierome speakes, a Minister must have a foot-speech, and not speak a horseback, with trappings, and tassels, and deckings. Though this be fooliſhnesse to some, yet it is wisdome to them that are of God. We speak wisdome to them that are perfect, 1 Cor 2 6 Mark, they that are perfect will accept it to be wisdome, it is fooliſhnesse onely to children and sots, and such as are not able to discerne. God will have his mercies hidden under homely out sides, that men that will stumble at them, may; as men hide treasure under straw; as the woman of Bahurim, hid the two Worthies of Israel in a well, under a course sack. Can gallant preaching make people pluck out their right eyes, and deny their owne selves and wayes? No, no, when the heart sees it hath to doe with God, nothing but this will pull it downe: away then with our own affections, let us labour to come with God into our pulpits, that people may see God dealing with them.

2. 2. Ministers should agree to preach differencingly, to distinguish between the precious and the vile, the clean and the uncleane; as we must not bruise the broken Reed, but deale gently with it, so we must not give Childrens bread bread unto dogs, Mat 15.29. we muſt not caſt our ſeed into fallow ground: but we muſt let the fallow ground feele our ploughes tearing: we muſt not fling pearls before ſwine, nor bitter arrows againſt Chriſt his Lambs. This were as if we ſhould call for ſnow in Summer, and raine in Harveſt. No, no, a whip for the Horſe, and a bridle for the Aſſe, and a rod for the fools back, Prov. 26 3. If people be like Mules that will not underſtand, we muſt put in a Bitt into their mouthes: If people will have their owne wayes, our word muſt be fires, and hammers, and axes, and cheſils, and ſwords, and ſpears, that their bellies may tremble, and rottenneſſe may enter into their bones.

You will ſay, Why then belike we muſt have nothing in our mouthes but hell and damnation.

I anſwer, No, nothing but hell and damnation for the naught.

You will ſay, That will drive them to deſpaire.

Why then let it: it were well if we had our people there, they muſt deſpair before they come to mercy, as Hezekiah ſayes, O Lord, I am oppreſſed doe thou comfort me, or undertake for me, Iſai. 38 14. People muſt be oppreſſed with our Sermons, we muſt lay load and burdens on their conſciences, or they will never be fitted for comforts and Chriſts undertakings. True, the ſervants of the Lord muſt be gentle unto all men, 2 Tim. 2. 24. and ſuffer the wickedneſſe of all very patiently, praying if at any time the Lord will give them repentance, that the Devill may let them goe. Nothing but hell and damnation is not good; we muſt not be like James and John, that would needs be calling for fire to come down from Heaven to conſume the Samaritans: no, we muſt be long-ſuffering, but yet we muſt not let a wicked man live, but we muſt give him his deaths wound by the ſtab of the Word, leſt his blood be required at our hands.

3. Miniſters ſhould agree in preaching with all their ſtrength conſtantly, and duly, not quadrageſimall Sermons onely, or the like: but the Apoſtle commands Miniſters to preach in ſeaſon and out of ſeaſon, 2 *Tim.*4.2 It is a wicked cavill of ſome, and it is the Devill that doth ſuggeſt it, It is not good to cloy the people, is it not faire to preach once a Sabbath? muſt we have two, and a week day, too? This is over-much, this is unſeaſonable, that people ſhould trudge and trot to Sermons when they ſhould be at their Callings. Well, be it ſo, that it is out of ſeaſon, we muſt preach out of ſeaſon too, all will be little enough. I am ſure the Prophet Haggai the Word of the Lord came to him twice in one day, Hag 2. 10, 20. Auſtin uſed conſtantly to preach twice a day, as appeares in his ſecond Sermon upon the 88. Pſalme: nay in one place he ſayes he preached thrice. Doe not wonder my deare Brethren, ſi hodie ter Sermonem, that I have preached three times this one day. And he addes this beſides, that it was not without cauſe, in his 33. Sermon to his brethren in the Wilderneſſe. Nay, the ancient Fathers preached every day in the yeare, as it is well known to them that are uſed to read them. Chryſoſtome in his Homilies upon Geneſis, ſhewes this almoſt in the beginning of every Homily. And one time perceiving his hearers ſomewhat few; O (ſayes he) every houre in the day is ſeaſonable for you to heare, nay the night is not unſeaſonable. Paul prolonged himſelfe unto midnight, ſayes he, Act. 20. I pray did the time hinder him? No, though he were for a journey the next day, yet he would not think much to break his nights reſt. Another time preaching by candle light, O, ſayes he, doe you ſee this ſame Lamp? take away the oyle, you put out the light; even ſo it is with the gifts of the Spirit, the dulneſſe of our hearing, the littleneſſe of our profiting at once, our readineſſe to decline except we be pricked forward, our aptneſſe to forget God, the commandment of having the word to dwell richly in us, the duty of meditating in it day and night doe plainly enforce this preaching. 3

You will say, If Preachers should preach often, it would be but prating we cannot preach often and soundly.

I answer, it is false: for all that I see, the ablest Divines have preached the most often, as Calvin, and Luther, and Wickliff and others, and Mr. Greenham; nay, Austin, preached ex tempore that Sermon of his upon the 97. Psalme; it seemes that he expected his brother Severus to come and preach for him: but his friend failing to come, he preached himselfe, as Dr. Dee relates the story: So Basil also preaching two Sermons upon the works of God that he made in the six dayes, Gen. 1. confesses he had no more premeditation then that very morning when he began to preach them. Thus many holy men by setting themselves to be instant in Gods harvest time, have had such a doore of utterance opened unto them to speake the mystery of Christ, that like wise Scribes, they could, as occasion was offered, bring forth out of their Treasuries, new and old. They that cry downe often preaching, what ever colour they would seem to have, be such as would cover their owne shame by backbiting the diligence of any of their brethren. Like the Fox in the Fable, that because he wanted a taile himselfe to hide his owne filthinesse, perswaded the other beasts to cut off theirs too, pleading forsooth, O it is cumbersome, and weighty, and ye were better be without: but the truth was, it was only to hide his owne deformity, which were it once in fashion to be without tailes, should never be espyed. A worthy Divine cites an excellent admonition of Hierom to Calphurnius, upon the like occasion to this, That if he wanted teeth himselfe, he should not be envious against them which were able to eat. Beloved, I do not urge an equality of labour upon all; but this is most certaine, that we are bound every one of us, to honour the Lord with all our strength, and to study the edification and salvation of our peoples soules with all our might. It is a shame that ever our people should meet together at Church, and we not take compassion upon them, to quicken them with some word of exhortation or other. The Evangelists note of our Saviour, that when he saw a company about him, he had compassion on them and taught them, Mar. 6. 34. Whereupon was his Sermon in the mount, but because he saw a company about him? Whereupon was that Sermon of our Saviour, Mat. 13? It was because there was a company of people afore him. Certainly, if we had compassion on our people, we would do so too: If we were not too worldly and dead hearted our selves, as we are, we would never plead against it. Many talke much of the Fathers, O the Fathers, the Fathers, and they do not love these upstart Divines, but it were well they would learn of the Fathers. Tertullian sayes, there was never any publick meeting in his dayes, but before the Congregation was dissolved, they were fed with a Sermon. Nay, Babington, a reverend Bishop among us, That a Minister can no more enter into the Congregation without a Sermon, and not to be guilty, then Aaron could enter into the Congregation at any time without death, in case he sounded not his Bells when he entred.

4. Fourthly, they should agree in seeking of the Lord for a blessing on their labours, they should be earnest with God in the behalfe of the people. Alas! how else do they expect to convert any men unto God? For when we preach, what do we do? We do but as Gehezi, who brought Elisha's staffe to raise the dead child. Poore man! he could not raise it: for though he had Elisha's staffe, he had not Elisha's spirit: So, my brethren, we do but bring our Masters staffe, and therefore we should intreat him to send downe his Spirit; otherwise the dead cannot stand up. We trim up a Sermon, and put case we trim it well, nevertheless what is this? but as the rigging of the ship, and what will that do except the wind blow? So we should pray that the winde should blow upon our sails, and then the ship shall go indeed, as our Saviour Christ

Chriſt ſayes, *The wind bloweth where it liſteth, Joh.*3. 8. The wind is free. When we have preached all that ever we can, yet the wind is free, whether it will blow or no. The Spirit of God, is not tied to blow upon our endeavours, that they may have good ſucceſſe. What are Organs without breath? What is Pauls planting or Apollos watering, without Gods giving of the increaſe? The Apoſtle tels us it is juſt nothing, 1 Cor 3.7. As a Divine makes the ſimiſitude; when one heard what admirable victories Scanderbegs ſword had wrought, he would needs ſee it; and when he ſaw it, ſayes he, This is but an ordinary ſword, alas, what can this do? Scanderbeg did him word, I have ſent thee my ſword, but I have the Arme that did all by it: So, beloved we have Chriſts ſword, but we have not Chriſts Arme, and therefore let us pray him, that he would together with our preaching, reach forth his arme, and that will do our people good; without this, poore Preachers are we all, we may cut at mens ſins, but they will never off without him; we may ſhew people the great things of the Goſpel, we may invite people to come in, to lay hold on eternall life, but O for Chriſts Arme! and therefore we ſhould ſtudy as much how to pray, as to preach. The want of this is that which marres all. May be we preach well, but we are not earneſt with God to give a bleſſing, we do not bewaile the ſins of our people, we do not lay to heart the things that provoke Almighty God, we do not get into the caſe, wherein God may prove all our pains.

Fifthly, Miniſters ſhould all agree in the watching over the ſouls of men. Preaching to and praying for our people, is not the whole of a Miniſters duty; but we ſhou'd obſerve our people, and watch over them, as the Apoſtle ſayes; Obey them that have the rule over you, and ſubmit your ſelves, for they watch for your ſoules, Heb 12. 17. And indeed how can we preach to the purpoſe, except we watch them that are committed to our charge? as Solomon ſayes, *Be thou diligent to know the eſtate of thy flocks, and looke well to thy Herds, Prov.*27.23. This was Pauls courſe to enquire into the eſtate of the people, how it fared with them. This was the newes that he asked after, his deſire was to know how grace went forward in the Epheſians hearts. I heare of your faith, ſayes he, Eph 1. 15. it ſeemes he had been asking of it. Thus Epaphras told him of the Coloſſians eſtate. Thus he learned by ſome of the houſe of Chloe, the ſtate of the Corinthians. Nay, all men will enquire and hearken after the health of their friends; parents, if their children be at the Univerſity, they will liſten after them how they go on in learning: So ſhould the Angels of every Church, they ſhould liſten what courſes are in their Towne, what ſinnes break out, what corruptions appeare, what proficiency the good ones make, who grow, who decline, who ſtand at a ſtay, who go aſide, and wixe worſe and worſe, that they may ſhape their preaching accordingly, that their words be fitted in their mouth, that they may apt their rebukes, their exhortations, their uſes anſwerably. For then will their Sermons be like Apples of Gold in pictures of Silver. It is no curioſity in Miniſters to be inquiſitive into their peoples courſes. It is the Objection of ill-minded ones, ſay they, What need Miniſters buſie themſelves? they muſt have their tell-tales, we can do nothing but they muſt heare of it. O beloved, we can never preach fruitfully if we ſtop our eares with wax, and will not liſten what our hearers do.

it is but a folly elſe to be a Miniſter, we do but make repentance dearer, and at a higher price. *A Biſhop muſt be blameleſſe, as the Steward of God, not ſelf-willed, not ſoon angry, not given to wine, nor to filthy lucre, Tit.*1. 7. It is a double wickedneſſe for a Miniſter to be wicked, to be a company keeper, to be a pot-companion, as God ſaid to Aaron, Whoſoever he be of thy ſeed in their generation, that hath any blemiſh, let him not approach to offer the bread of his

*God, Levit.*21.17. We cannot never do good, if we blemish our selves with vice. True it is, the efficacy of the Word and Sacraments do not depend upon the quality of the Minister: the seed sowne in good ground may grow, though the sower had a dirty hand; Gold is gold, though it be in the hand of a thiefe; yet such is our weakneſſe, that they are weake to us. People are apt to respect the Word and Sacraments the lesse, when they see the Minister is not holy, as we see in Elias wicked soones; for men abhord the offerings of the Lord, 1 Sam.2.17. Their eyes must be taught as well as their eares. Those things, sayes Paul, which ye have heard and seen in me, do, Phil. 4.9. Except with Thomas in another case, they see, they will not believe. Let a Minister be never so godly, he shall do good little enough The Prophet Esay, though a holy man, yet he complaines he laboured in vaine. Now if a godly man can do but little good upon the most, much lesse can a wicked Minister. A true Minister must be able to say as Gideon, Look on me, and do likewise, as I do, so shall ye do, Iudg 7 17. Ministers must be examples unto the flock, 1 Pet 5.3. First cast the beam out of thine own eye, and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the moat out of thy brothers eye As it is said of Ezra, Ezra had prepared his owne heart to seeke the law of the Lord, and to do it, and to teach in Israel, Ezra 7. 10. Our Saviour Christ did and taught, as Luke speakes. This is the course of a Minister indeed, to do his owne Sermons. When a Minister does not do what he teaches, this makes him a vile person; nay, this makes him ridiculous, like Lucians Apothecary, who had medicines in his shop to cure the cough, and told others that he had them, and yet was troubled with it himselfe. With what a forehead canst thou stand in a Pulpit, and publish the lawes of God, and to undertake the charge of soules? that when thine owne nakednesse appeares, when thy tongue is of a larger size then thy hands, thy Ministery is divided against it selfe, thy courses give thy doctrine the lie; thou sayest that men must be holy, and thy deeds do declare thy mouths hypocrisie, thou doest more mischiefe then an hundred others; as Peter sayes of wicked Ministers, Many will follow their pernicious wayes, 2 Pet. 2. 2. one Minister shall have many followers. A good Minister shall hardly get two or three to follow him. But when a Minister is wicked, he shall have many that will follow him. From the Prophets of Jerusalem, prophanenesse is gone forth into all the Land, Ierem. 23. 15. If the springs be tainted, that taint runnes forth into all the streames. People thinke themselves safe on an Alebench, when they have gotten the Parson with them; this hardens their hearts a thousand times more. But a true Minister is a godly man. Now when Ministers agree in godlinesse, this is another branch of this unity.

7. Seventhly and lastly, Ministers should agree in concord and in amity, even as all deare fellow servants, as Paul sayes of Epaphras, the Minister of the Colossians, As ye also learned of Epaphras our deare fellow servant, who is for you a faithfull Minister of Christ, Collos. 1. 7. Being to write to the Colossians, ye see what a tender care he hath of Epaphras, hee labours to commend him to his people, that they may regard him the more. It is an horrible sin when one Minister will gird at another that is faithfull, and that in the presence of some of his people. This helpeth the Devill to harden peoples hearts against him, that he cannot do the good that otherwise he might do; when other Ministers will revile him, and traduce him, and speak filthy words, such as their malice doth prompt them with, Paul did not thus. When he knew Timothy was to go to Philippi, he does most dearly commend him unto them O sayes he, I have no man like minded, Who will naturally care for your estate, Philip. 2. 20. So our Saviour Christ, how much did he countenance and backe Iohn the Baptists Ministery, to the encouraging of all that heard him? *Among them that are borne of women, there hath not risen a greater then Iohn Baptist, Mat.*11. 11. Oh it is an excellent thing when Ministers do not envie one another, when they love one another, and will live together in bleſſed Harmony: Thus you ſee what this unity ſhould be.

The Reaſons of this point, why Miniſters ſhould all agree thus, and be all as one, are, Firſt, becauſe this makes Miniſters amiable in their peoples eyes, it commendeth their Miniſteries unto the conſciences of their hearers, as the Prophet Iſaiah ſayes, How beautifull upon the mountaines are the feet of him that bringeth glad tidings, the publiſhers of peace, &c. Iſa. 52. 7. You will ſay, How is that? How comes his feet to be beautifull? It follows in the 8. ver Thy watchmen ſhall lift up their voice, with a voice together ſhall they ſing Marke, that was it that made his feet beautifull; becauſe all the watchmen were of one note, they ſung with one voice together: look as one preach'd, ſo preach'd another, one did not pull downe what another built up, one did not preach more pleaſing doctrine to the fleſh then another; but they all ſung in one Tune, they all were of one heart.

Secondly, as it makes the Miniſtery more beautifull and comely, ſo it makes it the more powerfull, when the Miniſters are all of one mind in the Lord, when they all draw one way, all walke by the ſame rule, all ſet themſelves to doe good, and to promote one anothers good. I ſay, this makes the Miniſtery more powerfull and profitable. The Apoſtle ſpeaking of an ignorant man coming into the Church to heare the Miniſter preach, he ſhewes how powerfull the word may be unto him, 1 Cor. 14. 25. O ſayes he, the ſecrets of his heart are made manifeſt, and ſo falling downe on his face, he worſhips God; that is, the Sermon is made effectuall unto him, and turnes his wretched heart. But obſerve now, how this comes to paſſe, the Text ſhewes in the foure and twentieth verſe, it is by reaſon of the unity of the Miniſters, He is convinced of all, he is judged of all; that is, all the Miniſters were of one note, they all were in one conſent, one did not preach looſer doctrine then another, one told him he was a very wretch, and another told him he was a very wretch, and a third convinced him he was a very wretch; all had a blow at him: O thought he, I, I, I am a very wretch indeed; this burſt his heart. If he could have heard any one of them preach eaſier doctrine, may be that would have given his conſcience ſome fooliſh eaſe, and ſo the man had gone away never the better, but when he was convinced of all, and judged of all, this ſtrikes him dumb. So, beloved, when a man can go into no Church, but every where he is met with, all the Miniſters condemn him all their lives condemn him, and all their Sermons condemn him to the pit of hell, and he can ſcramble comfort no where; if the man belong to God, this is the readieſt way to beat him downe, and ſubdue his heart. On the contrary ſide, when a man is wounded at one Miniſters Sermon, by and by he drops into another, and there he catches hold of ſome eaſe: this makes him go on in his ſins, and to blind his eyes againſt the truth. It is a great ſtumbling block unto the people this very thing.

Thirdly, as it makes the Miniſtery more powerfull, ſo it brings more glory unto God. As it is ſaid of John the Baptiſt, that when our Saviour did commend him, and made the people ſee, that he was of Johns mind, and that he held the ſame Tenets, and that he would not ſpeak againſt a tittle that John had delivered, but teſtified his unity with him, and made it appeare what a reverend eſteem he had of him; ſaith he, He is a Prophet, and more than a Prophet: Ye ſhall ſee how this brought glory to God. The Text ſaith, When the people heard this, and the Publicans, they juſtified God, being baptized with the Baptiſme of John Luk. 7.29.

The uſe of this is, firſt, to condemn ſuch as envy their fellow-Miniſters, and will not be in the unity of minde and heart, and life with them. In the moſt, the Proverb is too true, Figulus figulo invidet, One Potter hates another, ther, one Tradesman envies anothers custome, so, one Minister, another: If there be a Minister that desires to powre out his soule in the doing of good, in the taking of paines, in the discharging of his Conscience, there are some that will envy such a one, their hearts rise up against him; nay, not only so, but the worst enemy that Jeremy had, was Pashur, one of his owne Coat, Jer. 20. 2. The sorest adversary that Amos had, was Amaziah, a Priest of Bethel, who would never leave heaving at him untill he had gotten him away, Amos, 7. 12. and why so? becaus he would not preach such pleasing Doctrine as he. Forsooth, the Land was not able to beare Amos his words, he preaches as if he would scare people out of their wits. He preaches Schismatically, and as if he loved to be singular. The chiefe Priests were furious against our Saviour Christ, becaus his Ministery was more blest then theirs was, nay, they hated him more then Pilate, Pilate a very Pagan, his Conscience told him he found no fault in him, Why, what evill hath he done? Their envy against Christ was palpable, that he did discover it. He knew that for envy they had delivered him unto him. So when all the Countrey know in their Consciences that such and such teach the wayes of God sincerely, set themselves to roote out sin, and to save soules, nay, the very drunkards you shall hear them say, I, I, he is a good man, Gods blessing on his heart, he tells us our faults, we may do what we list for all such and such, but he tells us of our faults, and God helpe us to amend them, and when they are sicke, they would rather have such a Ministers prayers, then twenty of other Ministers, that will soothe them up, and be haile-fellow with them: Whereas there be many of our owne Coat, that are implacable against a Minister, that labours to be faithfull. How contrary is this unto the Rule? The Ministers of God should be all one, and if one be godly, all should be, if one painefull, all should be so, if one preach home to the Conscience, all should do so, they should all live as brethren. What sayes our Saviour Christ? Ye are the Salt of the Earth, but if the Salt hath lost its savour, wherewith shall it be salted? it is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out, and to be troden under foot of men, Matt. 5. 13. That is, Salt may season others, but if it have lost its savour, nothing can salt it.

A Minister is of an excellent calling, appointed to season mens hearts, but if he have lost his savour, he can never truly be seasoned again, nothing can doe him good. An evill Minister is a more desperate forlorn man than any else.

Use 2. Secondly, Another use is, that all that are the Ministers of God would be hence stirred up to be all of one mind, all drawing one way, all bending our forces to one and the same end, the glory of God, and the salvation of our people. Its a fine comely thing to see any Brethren in unity. Behold how good and how pleasant it is for Brethren to dwell together in unity! It is like the precious ointment upon the head that ran down upon the beard, even Aarons beard, that went down to the skirts of his garment: as the dew of Hermon, and as the dew that descended upon the mountaines of Zion, for there the Lord commanded his blessing, even life for evermore, Psal. 133: 1,2,3. I say, this is a very comely thing, to see any brethren to dwell together in unity, it is like the perfume of Aaron, that made all his garments fragrant sweet, it is like the dews of Hermon and Zion, that made all the ground fruitfull, this is that which hath the Lords blessing annexed to it, it is an excellent meanes unto eternall life. As the Apostle saith, If there be any consolation in Christ, if any comfort of love, if any fellow-ship of the Spirit, if any bowells and mercies; Fulfill ye my joy, that ye be like-minded, having the same love, being of one accord, of one mind, Philip. 2,1,2. If it be so necessary for Brethren to be united, how much more for Brethren in the Ministery? of all men, Ministers have most reason to be of one minde, becaus we are to teach union unto others.

Besides,

Beſides, if we deſire to do what we are commanded to do, we ſhall have enemies enough in the world Our Tribe is a hated Tribe. Of all offices, the office of a reproover is the moſt unwelcome. Paul was counted an enemy, becauſe he told the Galatians the truth. Micaiah was hated becauſe he dealt truly with Ahab. People love their luſts, as their monies, yea, as themſelves : Ergo of all men we are moſt hated. Every man is believed in his owne profeſſion but we; People do not hate Taylors that make them a good garment, nor a Shoo-maker that makes them a good Shooe, nor a Cook that makes them a good Feaſt, nor a Phyſitian that makes them a good potion, nor a good Lawyer that makes them a good ſute, though theſe doe but provide for the body, and yet we that provide for peoples ſoules if we make them a good Sermon that would ſave their ſoules for ever, ſo they would obey it, we are hated for our labour. Ergo, when Moſes came to ſpeak of Levi, that were the Miniſters of Iſrael, he prayes God, that God would deliver them out of the hand of their enemies, Lord ſmite through the loines of them that hate him, Deut. 33.11. I ſay we have many enemies in the world, and therefore we had need hang together, who ever be at oddes, we ſhould ſtick cloſe together. Our meſſage is hardly believed, and therefore we had need to be all of one minde. The word which we preach is averſe to fleſh and bloud, and therefore we had need all joyntly to obey it, otherwiſe how do we thinke that we ſhall perſwade any others?

Force, the more united the more ſtrong. O if we would all joyne forces in one, we might make all our Pariſhes quake! all the wicked round about, their very hearts would be ready to faile them, if every pulpit did rowze them. If they could come in no Church, but they were made to ſit upon thornes, I verily believe, few would have any heart to go on in their evill doings.

Thirdly, another Uſe is, how we ſee it is a very uſefull and profitable thing, that one good Miniſter ſhould now and then come and help another, and preach for another, that our people may ſee our conſent, that we all preach the ſame thing, and that is not our private preaching, but all the Miniſters that are of God, are juſt of the ſame mind: This made the Apoſtle, whenſoever he was to write to a people, that he knew would be ſomewhat backward to believe him, he would joyne other Miniſters with him, as conſenting together with him Indeed when he wrote unto Timothy, he would not do it, for he knew that he did not need, he knew the faithfulneſſe of his heart. But when he writ to the Corinthians, where falſe Apoſtles had been, and had made many of them to doubt, he joyned Soſthenes with him, as it were confirming the ſame thing, 1 Cor. 1. 1. when he wrote to the Galatians, he told them he had Peter on his ſide, and Barnabas, and Titus, and James and John, and how the Apoſtles gave unto him the right hand of fellowſhip, Gal. 2.1,9. He writing to the Philippians, joynes Timothy with him, Phil. 1.1. And ſo writing to Philemon, about a thing, that though he hoped Philemon would do, yet becauſe he knew he might have many carnall reaſons againſt it, he joyns another with him, Philem 1. This is of very good uſe, when one good Miniſter comes and backs anothers Miniſtry. For as it is with men-pleaſing Miniſters, that make as if the way to heaven were eaſier than it is, people hope that other Miniſters will come, and confirming it, make it good, Ezek 3 6 O they love ſuch a Doctrine alife, and they hope there will be more of that minde: So when they hear a ſtrict Miniſter, that delivers the Word to them as it is, and as they ſhall find it at laſt day, tuſh, this is ſo uncooth, that they hope that it is but the opinion of their preciſe Miniſter, and that no body elſe is of his mind Now when God ſhall bring a cloud of witneſſes, it is, I ſay of very good uſe. I confeſs that when a Miniſter ſpeaketh the truth, though no body elſe come to ſet it on beſides him, he ſhall be a witneſs againſt all the people that will not believe, and vext at the voice of his preaching Noah condemned all the world, albeit there were none but he: But yet ſymphony and agreement, and the conſent of the

Miniſters of God, is an Ordinance of God when it may conveniently be had.

Thus I have ſpoken of this ſecond point of Doctrine, of the unity of Miniſters, To the Angel of the Church in Sardis. I acknowledge this point is not ſo much for the generall profit of you all, but you muſt bear with me, for handling of it. We ſhall come now to you ere long. For I am ſure, if any portion of Scripture may do us good, in theſe dead times, the treating of this Epiſtle may. And yet it is not loſt time to ſpeake unto the Miniſters, if by any meanes I may provoke my ſelfe, and my Brethren to the abounding in the unity of the Spirit, and of Faith, and heart and mind, for the further ſpreading and enforcing of good.

REVEL. 3. 1.

And unto the Angel of the Church in Sardis, write, Theſe things ſaith he that hath the ſeven Spirits of God, and the ſeven Starres; I know thy works, that thou haſt a name, that thou liveſt, and art dead.

And unto the Angel of the Church in Sardis, write.

YEE have had two Doctrines from hence, concerning Gods Miniſters: I told you there is one more, and then I have done, and ſo will proceed: The Doctrine is this:

That a Miniſter may be in fault that the people are dead, that they have no more heart to good things, that they are ſo ignorant, ſo cold, ſo ungodly, ſo worldly, ſo vaine as they are.

I ſay the Miniſter may be in the fault; The point is very clear from this place. The Lord being to reprove the people here of Sardis, for their deadneſſe in Religion, he directs his reproofe to their Miniſter. To the Angel of the Church in Sardis, write: I know thy works, that thou haſt a name, that thou liveſt and art dead.

He accuſes the Miniſter for the deadneſſe of the Church that was committed to his charge; he meanes the Church, but he ſpeakes to the Miniſter. You will ſay, How do yee prove that he meanes the Church? I anſwer, there be three places that do manifeſt the ſame. The one is, Revel 1. 4. There John tells us, that he indeed writes to the Churches, for all that in the inſcription of every Epiſtle, the Miniſter only be named. John to the ſeven Churches in Aſia. So that this letter is ſent to the Church in Sardis. John meaneth it to the Church, and not only to the Miniſter. A ſecond place is, Revel. 1. 11. what thou ſeeſt write to the ſeven Churches in Aſia, to Epheſus, to myrna, to Pergamus, to Thyatira, to Sardis, to Philadelphia, and Laodicea. The third is, the concluſion of every Epiſtle, Where it is ſaid thus: He that hath an eare, let him heare what the Spirit ſaith unto the Churches, Revel. 3. 6. and ſo it is at the cloſure of every Letter, to all the reſt of the Churches, and therefore the Holy Ghoſt there accuſes the Church of Sardis of deadneſſe. I know thy works that thou art dead, and yet he directs it to the Miniſter of the Church, as a thing that concerns him, and that may be laid to his charge, and that he is faulty in. To the Angel of the Church in Sardis write. I know thy works that thou haſt a name, that thou liveſt and art dead. That is, thou haſt a dead-hearted people, and thou art the cauſe of it: Thou doſt not do thy duty, thou doſt not do what lies in thee for to quicken them; But thou art too remiſſe in thy Miniſtery, and therefore their deadneſſe may be imputed unto thee. Thus you ſee the Doctrine is very plaine from the words. The good or bad eſtate of a people dependeth much upon the Miniſter. Commonly we ſee it fall out, as the Prophet Hoſea ſaid ſaid, like people, like Prieſt, Hoſ. 4 9 Like ſhepherd, like ſheep. Such as the builder is, ſuch is the building, as is the Husbandman, ſo is the husbandry. This we may finde throughout all theſe Epiſtles, where the Miniſter is commended, the people are commended, where the Miniſter is taxed, the people are taxed. And therefore they ſtand and fall together, they ſwim and ſink together, a wicked Miniſter, a wicked people, an ignorant Miniſter, an ignorant people; and ſo a good Miniſter, the people either are a good people, or elſe they are Monſters; Nay, if the Miniſter be good, though the world in his Pariſh be never ſo wretched, yet he hath a good people, the Church of God in his Pariſh, is very good, commonly.

Well then, we have gotten our point out. The Miniſter may be in fault that the people are dead; I do not ſay, it is alwayes thus. For firſt, the Miniſter may be lively and yet the people dead. The Lord tells us that Ezechiel had a ſtiffe hearted people, Ezek. 2. 4. and yet he was not to be blamed, themſelves were in all the fault. So Iſaiah had a dull hearted people: All the day long have I ſtretch'd out my hands to a diſobedient and gain-ſaying people, Rom. 10 21. and therefore I do not ſay it was alwayes thus.

Nay, Secondly, ſometimes the people are the cauſe of the Miniſters deadneſſe. The Jewes hardneſſe of heart under the Miniſtery of Jonas, was the cauſe why Jonas had no heart to go unto Niniveh. O thought he, if Iſrael will not heare me, much leſſe will Niniveh heare me. Thus the people deaded Jeremiah at one time, that he had little or no heart to preach for a fit. Then Iſaiah, I will not make mention of him, nor ſpeake any more in his name, Jer 20. 9. Thus Ezekiel was deaded a while, by his people too; I came to them of the Captivity at Telabid, and I ſate where they ſate, and remained there aſtoniſht among them ſeven dayes, Ezek. 3. 15 The Lord was fain to rowze his heart up, and to tell him he would require their bloud of him, before he could pluck up a good heart to preach livelily among them; the people deaded him Nay more;

Thirdly, ſometimes the Lord locks up his good Miniſters, and ſuffers the to be ſtraitned in their utterance, and other gifts. May be the people are ready to lay all the blame upon their Miniſters. Oh how tongue-tied are they! and it is their negligence, and torpor: Whereas it is for the peoples ſinnes, Thus the Lord lockt up Ezekiel, for the peoples ſins. I will make thy tongue cleave to the roofe of thy mouth, and thou ſhalt be dumb and ſhalt not be to them a reprover, for they are a rebellious houſe, Ezek 3. 26. Nay, Fourthly, Sometimes peoples ſinnes are the cauſe why their Miniſters are quite dead, and have no life at all in them, the Lord ſends fooliſh Miniſters among them, meerly becauſe of their ſinnes. So it was in Hoſea's time The Prophet is a foole, the ſpirituall man is mad, for the multitudes of thy iniquity, Hoſ. 6 7. Marke, they had fooles for their Miniſters; fooles, beſotted Miniſters, giddy Miniſters, Miniſters that were wilde, and like mad men; you will ſay, theſe were the cauſes of much ſin to the people: No, ſaith the Text, the peoples ſinnes were the cauſe of ſuch Miniſters The Prophet is a fool, the ſpirituall man mad, for the multitude of thine iniquity. Theſe foure exceptions then there be of the point. Otherwiſe the point is too true, that the Miniſter may be in fault that the people are dead.

You ſee here the Church of Sardis was grown dead, and the Lord faults the Angel of the Church for it. I know thy works, that thou art dead. The like is ſaid of Laodicea. Laodicea was grown horrible lukewarme, no zeale of God, they were neither hot nor cold, and the Lord imputes it to the Angel of Laodicea: I know thy workes, that thou art neither hot nor cold, and therefore I will ſpue thee out of my mouth, Revel. 3.14 15.16. The ſame is ſaid of the Church of Epheſus, that they had left their firſt love, and yet the Lord hit the Angel in the teeth with it, I have ſomewhat againſt thee, becauſe thou haſt left Miniſters of God, is an Ordinance of God when it may conveniently be had.

Thus I have ſpoken of this ſecond point of Doctrine, of the unity of Miniſters, To the Angel of the Church in Sardis. I acknowledge this point is not ſo much for the generall profit of you all, but you muſt bear with me, for handling of it. We ſhall come now to you ere long. For I am ſure, if any portion of Scripture may do us good, in theſe dead times, the treating of this Epiſtle may. And yet it is not loſt time to ſpeake unto the Miniſters, if by any meanes I may provoke my ſelfe, and my Brethren to the abounding in the unity of the Spirit, and of Faith, and heart and mind, for the further ſpreading and enforcing of good.

REVEL. 3. 1.

And unto the Angel of the Church in Sardis, write, Theſe things ſaith he that hath the ſeven Spirits of God, and the ſeven Starres; I know thy works, that thou haſt a name, that thou liveſt, and art dead.

And unto the Angel of the Church in Sardis, write.

YE E have had two Doctrines from hence, concerning Gods Miniſters: I told you there is one more, and then I have done, and ſo will proceed: The Doctrine is this:

That a Miniſter may be in fault that the people are dead, that they have no more heart to good things, that they are ſo ignorant, ſo cold, ſo ungodly, ſo worldly, ſo vaine as they are.

I ſay the Miniſter may be in the fault; The point is very clear from this place. The Lord being to reprove the people here of Sardis, for their deadneſſe in Religion, he directs his reproofe to their Miniſter. To the Angel of the Church in Sardis, write: I know thy works, that thou haſt a name, that thou liveſt and art dead.

He accuſes the Miniſter for the deadneſſe of the Church that was committed to his charge; he meanes the Church, but he ſpeakes to the Miniſter. You will ſay, How do yee prove that he meanes the Church? I anſwer, there be three places that do manifeſt the ſame. The one is, Revel 1. 4. There John tells us, that he indeed writes to the Churches, for all that in the inſcription of every Epiſtle, the Miniſter only be named. John to the ſeven Churches in Aſia. So that this letter is ſent to the Church in Sardis. John meaneth it to the Church, and not only to the Miniſter. A ſecond place is, Revel. 1.11. what thou ſeeſt write to the ſeven Churches in Aſia, to Epheſus, to myrna, to Pergamus, to Thyatira, to Sardis, to Philadelphia, and Laodicea. The third is, the concluſion of every Epiſtle, Where it is ſaid thus: He that hath an eare, let him heare what the Spirit ſaith unto the Churches, Revel. 3.6. and ſo it is at the cloſure of every Letter, to all the reſt of the Churches, and therefore the Holy Ghoſt there accuſes the Church of Sardis of deadneſſe. I know thy works that thou art dead, and yet he directs it to the Miniſter of the Church, as a thing that concerns him, and that may be laid to his charge, and that he is faulty in. To the Angel of the Church in Sardis write. I know thy works that thou haſt a name, that thou liveſt and art dead. That is, thou haſt a dead-hearted people, and thou art the cauſe of it: Thou doſt not do thy duty, thou doſt not do what lies in thee for to quicken them; But thou art too remiſſe in thy Miniſtery, and therefore their deadneſſe may be imputed unto thee. Thus you ſee the Doctrine is very plaine from the words. The good or bad eſtate of a people dependeth much upon the Miniſter. Commonly we ſee it fall out, as the Prophet Hoſea ſaid ſaid, like people, like Prieſt, Hoſ. 4 9 Like ſhepherd, like ſheep. Such as the builder is, ſuch is the building, as is the Husbandman, ſo is the husbandry. This we may finde throughout all theſe Epiſtles, where the Miniſter is commended, the people are commended, where the Miniſter is taxed, the people are taxed. And therefore they ſtand and fall together, they ſwim and ſink together, a wicked Miniſter, a wicked people, an ignorant Miniſter, an ignorant people; and ſo a good Miniſter, the people either are a good people, or elſe they are Monſters; Nay, if the Miniſter be good, though the world in his Pariſh be never ſo wretched, yet he hath a good people, the Church of God in his Pariſh, is very good, commonly.

Well then, we have gotten our point out. The Miniſter may be in fault that the people are dead; I do not ſay, it is alwayes thus. For firſt, the Miniſter may be lively and yet the people dead. The Lord tells us that Ezechiel had a ſtiffe hearted people, Ezek. 2. 4. and yet he was not to be blam'd, themſelves were in all the fault. So Iſaiah had a dull hearted people: All the day long have I ſtretch'd out my hands to a diſobedient and gain-ſaying people, Rom. 10. 21. and therefore I do not ſay it was alwayes thus.

Nay, Secondly, ſometimes the people are the cauſe of the Miniſters deadneſſe. The Jewes hardneſſe of heart under the Miniſtery of Jonas, was the cauſe why Jonas had no heart to go unto Niniveh. O thought he, if Iſrael will not heare me, much leſſe will Niniveh heare me. Thus the people deaded Jeremiah at one time, that he had little or no heart to preach for a fit Then I ſaid, I will not make mention of him, nor ſpeake any more in his name, Jer 20. 9. Thus Ezekiel was deaded a while, by his people too; I came to them of the Captivity at Telabid, and I ſate where they ſate, and remained there aſtoniſht among them ſeven dayes, Ezek. 3. 15 The Lord was fain to rowze his heart up, and to tell him he would require their bloud of him, before he could pluck up a good heart to preach livelily among them; the people deaded him Nay more;

Thirdly, ſometimes the Lord locks up his good Miniſters, and ſuffers the to be ſtraitned in their utterance, and other gifts. May be the people are ready to lay all the blame upon their Miniſters. Oh how tongue-tied are they! and it is their negligence, and torpor: Whereas it is for the peoples ſinnes, Thus the Lord lockt up Ezekiel, for the peoples ſins. I will make thy tongue cleave to the roofe of thy mouth, and thou ſhalt be dumb and ſhalt not be to them a reprover, for they are a rebellious houſe, Ezek 3. 26. Nay, Fourthly, Sometimes peoples ſinnes are the cauſe why their Miniſters are quite dead, and have no life at all in them, the Lord ſends fooliſh Miniſters among them, meerly becauſe of their ſinnes. So it was in Hoſea's time. The Prophet is a foole, the ſpirituall man is mad, for the multitudes of thy iniquity, Hoſ. 6. 7. Marke, they had fooles for their Miniſters; fooles, beſotted Miniſters, giddy Miniſters, Miniſters that were wilde, and like mad men; you will ſay, theſe were the cauſes of much ſin to the people: No, ſaith the Text, the peoples ſinnes were the cauſe of ſuch Miniſters The Prophet is a fool, the ſpirituall man mad, for the multitude of thine iniquity. Theſe foure exceptions then there be of the point. Otherwiſe the point is too true, that the Miniſter may be in fault that the people are dead.

You ſee here the Church of Sardis was grown dead, and the Lord faults the Angel of the Church for it. I know thy works, that thou art dead. The like is ſaid of Laodicea. Laodicea was grown horrible lukewarme, no zeale of God, they were neither hot nor cold, and the Lord imputes it to the Angel of Laodicea: I know thy workes, that thou art neither hot nor cold, and therefore I will ſpue thee out of my mouth, Revel. 3. 14 15. 16. The ſame is ſaid of the Church of Epheſus, that they had left their firſt love, and yet the Lord hit the Angel in the teeth with it, I have ſomewhat againſt thee, becauſe thou haſt left thy first love, Revel. 2.4. Beloved, the last day I spake of the Ministers concord and unity, to the Angel of the Church, all the Ministers should be as one man, as if they made up one and the same Angel. And therefore our Saviour Christ made choice of Brethren, and Kinsfolks, Simon and Andrew his Brother, Iames and Iohn his Brother. St. Peters Bark is a fisher-boat, not a man of War, it is not furnisht with mortall Engines, but onely with nets to catch fish If Peter were reproved for drawing upon Malchus, what reproofe had he bin worthy of, if he had drawn up any of his fellowes? this was the Theme that we spake of the last day. Now then let us speake of the influence that a Minister hath in his people, he may be the cause of his peoples deadnesse, if he do not take heed. And this he may be three wayes; first, by his not preaching; secondly, by his dead manner of preaching; thirdly, by his dead manner of Life and Conversation.

First, I say, by his not preaching; ye know the Word of God is the word of life, Phil 2.16. The word is that which quickneth the heart, as David saith, Thy word hath quickned me, Psal. 119.50. Now when Ministers do not preach it, this deads peoples hearts; We see this in those places where the due preaching of the Word is wanting, people are dead to all goodnesse; nay, they that had some quicknesse in them before, do lose them more and more: As Solomon saith, Where there is no vision the people perish, Prov. 29.18. that is, where preaching is defective, the people die, they are spritually dead in trespasses, and in sins. Can a man live without bread, or without food? no more can people live without constant preaching. The word is the bread of life, now when this is not broken unto people, they must needs die. Mark how Zachary describes them that are without preaching, They are such as sit in darknesse, and in the shadow of death, Luk 1 79 that is, they are blind, and ignorant, and liveleſse, dead while they live, they are wicked and abominable, in the power of Satan, under the wrath of God, strangers from the life of God; such Ministers as do not preach constantly, they are soule-murtherers, they are guilty of their peoples blood, they do not give them that which should quicken them up unto eternall life; they should quicken them up unto newnesse of life, but they do not; they should powre in the words of eternall life into their hearts, but they do not; people are naturally dead to prayer, and dead to communion with God. and dead to all holinesse, they have no heart to pureneſse and righteousnesse of walking, and such Ministers do not study to revive them.

Secondly, as a Minister may be the cause of his peoples deadnesse by his not preaching, so he may be the cause of their deadnesse by his preaching, when the manner of it is dead. Preaching may be dead in the manner of it, seven wayes.

First, When it is too generall, when they preach only in generall. That which we say is very good, for the generall, but we do no apply our selves to every particular mans Conscience, this deads peoples hearts. Beloved, it is particular Preaching that does people good; When Nathan told David, thou art the man, 2 Sam 12.7. This stirred Davids heart When Peter had said to his hearers, Ye have crucified Christ, Acts 2.36. This prickt them to the heart. Generall preaching cannot quicken. First, because generalls cannot act. Actio est singularium, as we say. It's onely a particular, works. Let a man preach home and in particular, and this wil work on the hearers. This made Michah a powerfull Preacher, when he preached particularly to his peoples Conscience. Truly, I am full of power by the Spirit of the Lord, and of judgement, and of might, to declare unto Jacob his transgression, and to Israel his sin, Mic. 3.8 this made him a powerfull Prophet to quicken up his people, because he told every man his sin, and smote every mans conscience for his transgression. No man is stirred till he feeles his case laid open, till he sees the Miniſter beates upon him, and hit him; till the Miniſter treads hard upon his toes, he will never cry out.

Secondly, Generall preach ng leaves the Sermon to the people to apply it; now the people will never apply it while the world ſtands Nay, David himſelfe would not apply, as long as Nathan dealt with him in generall, as long as Nathan was ſpeaking of a man in the clouds, a rich man that had wronged a poor man, Davids heart was as whole as a fiſh, till he came to Thou art him. Now he cryes out, I have ſinned. Nathan was fain to make application: For David would never have done it elſe. Will a truantly Boy ever whip himſelfe? the Maſter may lay the rod before him, but except the Maſter lay it on, he will goe ſcot-free if he can. The words of the wiſe are as goad and as nailes faſtened by the Maſters of Aſſemblies, Eccleſ. 12.11. Mark, the Maſters of Aſſemblies muſt faſten them into the poſt, lay the nailes by, the poſt it ſelf will never knock them in; So, though the Sermon be never ſo good a naile; yet he muſt knock it in, the people will never doe it. The Prophet Jehu muſt come and ſay to Jehoſaphat, Shouldſt thou help the ungodly? Wrath is upon thee from the Lord, 2 Chr 19 2 He faſtened in the naile; though Jehoſaphat were a good man, yet the Prophet knew he would not doe it. Nay, people are ſo farre from applying the word unto themſelves, that they will apply it to any body el e rather than to themſelves, the Miniſter met with ſuch a one to day, there was a leſſon for him: But none will ſay, this was for me, and I am a vile wretch, and vengeance hangs over me, unleſſe I doe amend, and therefore certainly generall preaching is a dead manner of preaching Third'y, Generall Preaching is confuſed, when Miniſters tell people they muſt repent, and believe, and ſerve God, and be godly, and carry themſelves well, in all their places and callings. When they doe thus in generall, this is like, as if the trump ſhould give an uncertaine ſound, like the noiſe in a battle, a confuſed noiſe, as the Prophet ſpeakes, Eſa. 9.5. Like the confuſion in Epheſus, Great is Diana of the Epheſians, they kept a great ſtir, Act 19 32. the Text ſaith, The Aſſembly was confuſed, and the more part knew not wherefore they were come together, ſo while we preach onely in the generall, Great is the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and we are great ſinners, and great is the need of repentance, but we neither tell the people how, nor when, nor who, nor what: may be our Sermons may keep ſome pudder in mens Conſciences, but people have no diſtinct edification, they goe away and ſay, O it was a very godly Sermon, I pray God give us grace to follow it! But no man is the better. They hear admirable things about repentance, but they are not taught how to goe about it, there they are at a loſſe. They remember gracious things about the ſerving of God, and about a good Conſcience, and the like. But they know not how in the earth to ſet about theſe things to a y purpoſe: if ever we would quicken our peoples hearts, we muſt let them ſee diſtinctly, the will of God concerning them, the particular meanes, and helps, and ſigns of it, the particular motives, and arguments to it, the particular circun ſtances of it, the particular hinderances, lets, and impediments of doing of it, and you can never doe the will of God, as long as ye doe thus and thus, and this courſe will break your neck, this practiſe of yours will be your utter undoing: when people hear diſtinct preaching, this doth them good, if any thing will. Generall Preaching is like the ſetting of good Phyſick before the patient, without giving him directions for the taking of it.

Fourthly, Generall Preaching is deceitfull, Eſt dolus in generalibus, as we ſay, there is deceit in the generalls, we Preach that people muſt love God, and fear him, and thank him, and they muſt be new men, and they muſt leave their ſinnes, and they muſt pray, and heare the Word, and they muſt doe every thing to Gods glo:y. Now mark what deceit there is in ſuch preaching as this, this is in the generall: People goe away and deceive themselves in the particular. They think they serve God, and they love God, or else they were not worthy to live; they think they say their prayers every day, and that they are thankfull unto him, they never eate their meat, but they say grace, they never recover out of sickneſſe, but they bleſſe God; whereas if we ſhould deale with theſe men in particular, it would appeare, they are haters of God, they are graceleſſe and unthankfull wretches; they never prayed true prayer to God in all their lives; hence it is that people generally like a generall Miniſter, Why? they can goe along with ſuch a man and be heart-whole. But now if a particular Miniſter ſhould come and tell them they are worldly, and mockers of God and all goodneſſe, as they are in very good deed; they cannot abide him, they would ſay, Wherein? Such were the Jews under the overly Miniſtery of the Prieſts. When Malachy dealt particularly with them, ſaith he, Ye have deſpiſed the name of the Lord: Wherein ſay they? Mal 1.6 Ye have wearied the Lord with your words: Wherein, ſay they, have we wearied him? Mal. 2.17. Ye have robbed God: Wherein have we robbed him, ſay they? Mal. 3 8 Your words have been ſtout againſt the Lord, yet their anſwer was, Wherein have we ſpoken ſo much againſt the Lord? Mal. 3 13. Alas alas! their Prieſts had taught them only in generall, and therefore when the Prophet was to deale particularly with them, and told them what vile courſes they took, they cryed, Wherein? and whereof? And why doe you ſay ſo of us? He was forced to come to particulars Otherwiſe they would have gone away and bleſſed themſelves.

Fiftly, Generall Preaching lets peop'e ſee their ſinnes if they will. But beloved this will doe no good, if we let you ſee your ſinnes, if you will; we muſt make you ſee your ſinnes. Son of man, cauſe Jeruſalem to know her abominations, Ezek. 16.2 We muſt not only let you underſtand, if ye will, it is ſaid of the good Prieſts, that they cauſed the people to underſtand, Neh. 8.8 Naturally people love their owne ſelves and their luſts, and they will not ſee them till they needs muſt, they doe not love to be preciſe, they will not willingly yeild that they muſt be ſo ſtrict, and ſo mortified, as the Lord Jeſus will have them, if they mean to be ſaved, and therefore if they can put it off, they will; ſhew them there is a difference between people and people, ſome are the people of God, and ſome are the children of the devill, ſome are the redeemed of Chriſt, and ſome have nothing to doe with Chriſt, ſome are clean, and ſome are unclean; though we ſhew them the diffe ence between theſe two, they will ſhut their eyes if they can. Generall preaching does no more, it ſhewes them theſe things. But may be neither the Miniſter nor they will ſee for all that, now we muſt cauſe them to diſcern whether they will or no, if we can. They ſhall teach my people the difference between the holy and profane, and cauſe them to diſcern between the unclean, and the clean, Ezek. 44. 23. that is, tell them this is unclean, and this is clean, ſuch and ſuch perſons are prophane, and ſuch are holy: Hold it before their eyes, cauſe them to diſcern, this is the way to quicken mens hearts. Now Generall preaching does not doe thus. It onely puts the truth before men, that they may ſee if they will, but if they will not, it does not urge them, this deads our people, and does them no good, for people will not be awakened, as long as they can ſhift it.

Sixtly, Generall preaching is a-loft and a-looſe off, particular preaching is the moſt cloſe, and the moſt plain, and the moſt ſenſible preaching of all, if any preaching will ſink into peoples heads, this will: it makes the truth even ſenſible after a ſort, as King James ſaid of a Reverend Biſhop of this Land, that is now dead and gone: This man, ſaith he, Preaches as if death were at my back. So a preſſe Preacher preaches, as if death were at a mans back, as if judgement and hell were at a mans back, he brings the point home to the

ſouls door, καλεπὸταλα γνωείζειν τὰ μάλιϛα καθόλα. Generalls are not plaine. Ignorant people are moſt led by ſenſe. People may live ſeven yeares under a generall Teacher, and be never the nearer, ſuch a Miniſtery breeds only ſwimming knowledge, it does not lay the Truth at every mans door; may be they get knowledge, but their knowledge does them little good: It is ſaid of the good Levites, that they taught the people the good knowledge of the Lord. 2 Chron. 30.22. That is, ſuch a knowledge of the Lord, as made the people good, they laid the truth at every mans door, they preacht to the people as if death were at their backs. They did livelily teach them, and ſenſibly informe them, this did them good. Generall preaching is like an Arrow ſhot at rovers, that does not hit the mark, as if the Miniſter would lay his Sermon on his Cuſhion, and never dart it into his peoples boſomes. Alas, Brethren! If people doe not feele our points at their backs, and like ſpeares in their ſides, and ſwords in their bellies, they will feele nothing, it is naked preaching; when we make mens eſtates even viſible before their eyes, when we preach ſo of Gods wrath, as if they ſaw it, when we ſo ſet out Chriſt, as if he were palpable, to mens ſenſes, this quickens and no other, as Paul ſaith, O fooliſh Galatians, Who hath bewitched you, that ye ſhould not obey the truth, before whoſe eyes Jeſus Chriſt hath been evidently ſet forth, and crucified among you? Gal. 3.1. Mark, how ſenſibly he had preached Chriſt to them, even as if he had held him before their eyes, and therefore he ſaith, they were even bewitcht that they could not ſee them; q. d. How is it poſſible that ye ſhould not ſee him, that ye ſhould not obey the truth, where it hath been ſo ſenſibly preached unto you, and painted to the life, even before your very eyes? If any Preaching will quicken, this will, and therefore Generall Preaching, that that will not doe the deed. Ariſt. Met. Lib. 1.

Seventhly, Generall Preaching is againſt the nature of Preaching, for wherefore is preaching, but to take the Word of God, and apply it unto people in particular? it is called the dividing of the word of truth aright, 2 Tim. 2.15. When the Miniſter is a good carver, to divide to every man his portion: Conviction to the ignorant; reproof to the offender; terror to the obſtinate; comfort to the broken heart; judgement to the wicked; mercy to the Saints, and true penitent ſoules; then the Miniſter applyes it unto every man. Preachers are Gods Harveſt-men, as our Saviour Chriſt ſaith: Pray ye the Lord of the Harveſt, that he would ſend forth labourers into his Harveſt, Matth. 9.38. Now Harveſt-men, what doe they? Doe they only bring a Sithe or a Sickle into the field, and give a ſlaſh, a generall ſlaſh, at one Corn of the field, as though that would fetch down all the Corn? No, they apply it to the Corn, to reap it down. The preaching of a generall Sermon is but a Sickle; now except it be applyed to all the people, it is not the way to reap in Gods harveſt. Preachers are called Chriſts ſeeds-men: The ſower went out to ſow his ſeed, Luke 8.5. Now what does the ſeeds-man? Does he onely bring in a ſack of ſeed, and poure it all on a heap in the field? Does he think that every ſpot of ground will draw it unto it ſelf? No, he ſprinkles it, and diſperſes it abroad, that every Lea may have its part. Whence comes that fooliſh conceit, that reading is preaching, a tenet which many hold? The truth is, it comes from hence, becauſe Generall preaching is made by moſt Miniſters to ſerve the turn; now, if this were preaching, reading were preaching indeed: But this is no preaching, preaching is the opening of the Word of God, and the applying of it, according as every man hath need. The not doing of this leaves poor people in their hardneſſe and deadneſſe of heart. This is the firſt. Generall preaching is ſuch a manner of preaching, as leaves the heart dead.

Secondly, Morall Preaching is a dead manner of preaching. When Miniſters preach honeſt matter, but doe not goe to the quick, they ſtrike at the boughes boughes: They preach againſt drunkenneſſe, and intemperance, and malice, and hatred, and tale-bearing, and lying, and covetouſneſſe, and making of ſhewes, it is very good to preach againſt theſe things, and we muſt too, and let them know they are far from the Kingdome of God that live in theſe or any other ſuch luſts. But alas! this is only to ſtrike at the boughes. If we would awake the conſcience indeed, we muſt preach deeper than ſo. The axe is laid at the root of the tree, Mat. 3. 10. John the Baptiſt was a lively Preacher; now the Text ſhewes he did not only ſtrike at the boughes, but he laid his axe at the root of the tree. When Miniſters preach only good Morall matter, this kind of preaching does not quicken.

Firſt, becauſe Morall preaching does not hit all, many are very Morall people, that have not one whit of grace in their hearts. True, this may hit ſome. Paul told Felix of his intemperance, and how that there was a day of judgement to judge all ſuch perſons, this made him tremble. Felix trembled, ſaith the Text, Acts 24 25. I ſay, Morall preaching may ſtartle ſome, but it does not ſtartle all Many Heathens have been ſober and temperate, and true in their ſpeeches; and juſt in their dealings; and loving in their carriages; and painfull in their calling; as Paul ſaith, they have done by Nature, the things contained in the Law. Now ye know the Heathens are without grace, and are not acquainted with God, neither have they any communion with God, Powre out thy wrath upon the Heathen, that know thee not, Jer. 10. 25. Mark, they have no communion with God, they do not know Jeſus Chriſt, nor the myſteries of ſaving grace. So that a man may be very finely morall, and yet be without grace. Now then, if a Miniſter ſhould content himſelfe with good Morall teaching, many would go away, and conclude well of their own eſtates, though they have no grace.

Secondly, Morall preaching, thoſe that it does hit, it does them indeed ſome good, but it does them not the good, it never quickens them up unto eternall life; it ſeemeth to civilize their lives, and to reform them a little, but it never reneweth them, neither does it put them into Jeſus Chriſt: Let a Drunkard hear he is a damned wretch, if he do not give over his drunkenneſſe, if this Sermon hit him, what does he ſay? Why then I will be ſober, and I will never be a Drunkard more. And I can tell you this is very rare too. But ſuppoſe it be, he may go to hell for all this. Suppoſe we do make all our people morall, which were a fine thing if we could, but grant we could, this does not quicken them together with Chriſt; No, no, a man muſt ſee his vile nature, and loath himſelfe, and be made to deny himſelfe, to mortifie his carnall reaſon, to put off his corrupt will, to feele his curſed condition in himſelf to be emptied of himſelf, that Chriſt may be all in all to him, that he may be led by the Spirit of Chriſt, and guided by the word of Chriſt, that he may hang onely upon the promiſes of God in Chriſt, that his mind may be taken up with Chriſt, and his thoughts and affections daily be laboured to be fixed upon the things above, none are alive unto God but ſuch. Now Morall preaching will never do this.

God forbid I ſhould ſpeake againſt Morall preaching abſolutely, or againſt Morality it ſelfe, it is a very good thing; Who will not commend Abimilech for the integrity of his heart, that he pleaded before God? Gen. 20. 5. Ye know how the Lord himſelfe liked of it; who will not ſay but that the young man in the Goſpel was a very commendable man, that had obſerved all theſe from his youth: Nay, the Text ſaith, That Chriſt, in ſome ſence, did love him, Mark 10. 21. Daniel told Nebuchadnezzar what an excellent thing Morality was. O! ſaith he, If thou wilt break off thy ſins and be righteous, he meanes Morall righteouſneſſe towards man; if thou wilt ſhew mercy to the poore, it may be God will lengthen thy tranquillity, Dan. 4. 27. The Prophet Eſay tels the Moabites, what a deale of good they might do to themſelves, ſelves, if they would but be morally honeſt: ſaith he, Take Counſell, execute Judgement, hide the out-caſts, let mine out-caſts be with thee, Eſay. 16 3. 4. If thou wilt be kind and loving to my people, thou ſhalt fare the better. When the King of Babylon puniſhed the wickedneſſe of Tyre, the Lord rewarded them very richly for it. I have given him the land of Egypt for his labour, ſaith God, becauſe he wrought for me, Ezek. 29 20. Morall goodneſſe is commended of God, as well as ſpirituall goodneſſe in Jeſus Chriſt; Nay, it is needfull that Miniſters ſhould inſiſt very much in preſſing of Morall duties, and the Godly are to be willing to hear ſuch Sermons, to look to juſt dealing, to Civill honeſty, to Juſtice between man and man; how aboundant is the Scripture in urging this Theame! It is thought by ſome, there is no Divinity in this, and ſuch a Miniſter is not deep enough, and why does he ſtand ſo much upon ſuch things as theſe, which the light of nature calls for? But theſe doe greatly erre, the Holy Ghoſt is careſull to urge ſuch duties as theſe, to be honeſt. Walke honeſtly towards them that are without, ſaith the Apoſtle, 1 Theſ. 4 12. Let us walke honeſtly as in the day, ſaith he, Rom. 13.13. Provide things honeſt in the ſight of all men, Rom. 12.17. Nay, honeſty, civill honeſty between man and man is a ſweet thing, the Apoſtle himſelfe brings it, among other things, as a teſtimony of his ſincerity: We truſt we have a good conſcience in all things willing to live honeſtly, Heb. 13.18. O it is an excellent beauty to a ſervant of Jeſus Chriſt, when his Moralls are ſound, and exemplary, and there cannot be any thing that will make the profeſſion of Religion odious in the eyes of the world, then want of Morality, when Chriſtians faile palpably in their Moralls. May be ſuch a one thou wilt think, comes farre ſhort of thee in grace, in the knowledge of good, in the beliefe of the Truth, in a ſpirituall in-ſight into the Myſtery of Chriſt; O then count it a ſhame that he ſhould goe before thee in the keeping of his Word. There cannot be a greater diſhonour unto God, then when a naturall man ſhall be able to accuſe thee of any diſhoneſty in any kind. The Spirit of God ſets it downe as a great ſhame upon Sarah, that Abimelech, a Heathen man ſhould be able to reprove her; Thus was ſhe reproved, ſaith the Text, Gen. 20.16. When Jacob perceived that his Sons had ſinned againſt morall honeſty, there in the matter of Shechem: O, ſaith he, ye have made me to ſtink among the Inhabitants of the land, Gen. 34 30. Ye have troubled me, ſaith he, it was a great grief of heart to the good man, he knew this would be a great diſhonour to God, as well as a ſhame unto himſelfe; & therefore God forbid I ſhould ſpeak againſt a Miniſters ſpeaking for morality.

Yet, Beloved this know, that this is not enough, a man may profeſs the name of Chriſt, & think verily that he believes in Jeſus Chriſt, & be a very admirable Morall man, & yet never quickned up to the grace of life. St. Paul ſhewes this plainly in himſelfe. I might have confidence in the fleſh, if any other man might truſt to that, I might, being circumciſed the eighth day, of the ſtock of Iſrael, of the Tribe of Benjamin, an Hebrew of the Hebrews, as touching the Law a Phariſe: Phil. 3.4.5.6.9. if any fine-carriaged man under heaven could hope he is right, I could before my converſion. I was admitted into the Congregation of Chriſt by the Sacrament of circumciſion: I was born in the true Church of God, I had godly Parents, I was of the Common-wealth of Iſarel, Nay, I was a Phariſee, which was ſo admirable a ſtrict order, that after his converſion, he was not aſhamed to be ſtill called a Phariſee. I am a Phariſe, and the ſon of a Phariſe, ſayes he, Act. 23.6. He cals himſelf a Phariſee ſtill: Nay he was zealous, & concerning the righteouſneſs of the Law, he was a very blameleſs man, ſo that if any fair carriaged man under Heaven were right, he was right. But the truth is, S Paul confeſſes that when God came to open his eyes, he findes that he was a dead man, a vile wretch: he ſhews he had gone ſhere to hel for all this, if God had not converted him: So that morality is a poor thing. And yet people make it their Idoll & truſt to it, & think certainly they are the children of God, certainly they ſhall have mercy, certainly they ſhall to heaven. And how many Miniſters make this to be true Religion and preach nothing but this? This then is another way, whereby Miniſters do leave a dead Congregation by moral preaching.

Thirdly, a flat preaching, is, when there is no keenneſſe in our Sermons, when we do not ſtrive to ſtagger mens conſciences that are to be ſtaggered. When a man goes in a track, preaches true doctrine, though it were to be wiſhed that more Miniſters would do thus: This does not hunt the heart out of its owne ſtarting holes: this Miniſtery leaves people dead. It is ſaid of our Saviour Chriſt, that the people were aſtoniſht at his Doctrine, Mat 7.28. he ſtun'd their conſciences, he ſet them at a ſtand: ſo if a Miniſter would quicken, he ſhould labour to ſet the wicked at a ſtun. Ye know, every wicked one gets ſomewhat or other to hang on, to hope they ſhall not be damned for all they are no better. Now when a Miniſter ſets himſelfe to put his hearers to a ſtun, ſtill to ſtartle conſcience in an aſtoniſhing manner, to flaſh the bare truth into the ſoule, and to make men ſee their bad eſtates, this is quickning preaching. But when a mans Miniſtery is co'd, there is nothing to ſtun the heart, their heart may have its ſtarting holes for all it, his Miniſtery does not labour to meet with them, this leaves people dead; a Miniſter that ſtill goes on in a track, can never looke to quicken.

Firſt, becauſe a good Miniſter muſt make Conſcience to bring out new things, as our Saviour Chriſt ſpeaks: The Kingdome of Heaven is like unto an Houſholder, that bringeth out of his treaſure things new and old, Mat. 13.52. that is, though he bring none but the old things that were b ought before; yet ſtill he brings them forth as new: He labours to keep the Word ſtill new unto the heart, the reaſon is this, when people have once been convinced of the truth, preſently it growes ſtale to them, & ſo they are ſubject not to be quickned by it at all. O this we knew before, & ſo the heart makes little or nothing of it. I knew this before. Now when the Miniſtery of the Word darts it in a-new, and makes it look ſtill with a freſh look upon the conſcience; this is a quickning Miniſtery. Like a man that keeps his Barrell ſtill freſh, when a man gives the drinker ſtill freſh from the Barrell: ſo when a Miniſter preaches ſtill freſh from the Word. But when a Miniſter doth not do thus, he is like a man that gives one liquor that hath ſtood a great while in the Cup, it growes dead.

Secondly, Becauſe a good Miniſter muſt go further and further, or elſe he cannot quicken. My meaning is this, the more people are convinced by the Word, the more ſubtilties ſtill the heart doth devi'e; the more word is in the Conſcience, the more wiles the heart mints, the Devill alſo prompting thereunto: ſo that if a Miniſter do not follow mens hearts ſtill further and further, this will leave the people dead. The reaſon is this, Becauſe when the heart hath once invented a wile to maintaine its own hopes for all the ſame truth, we may preach the truth all the dayes of our life, it will never quicken that mans heart: becauſe ſtill when he heares that truth, he hath a wile lying by him that ſtill defends himſelfe from it: ſo that there is neceſſity for a Miniſter to go further and further. The word of God is a deep mine, there is no bottome, a man may ſtill dig deeper and deeper, Thy judgments are a great deep, Pſal. 36.6. When the Miniſter beſieges the heart, he is to dig round about it, and dig deeper and deeper. Still as the heart bears it ſelfe, he is to come with more and more ſupplyes out of the Word againſt it. It is a ſtrange thing to ſee how deep Miniſters have gone, and yet people arme themſelves againſt the Word of God and are not converted by it. Tell them they muſt be new creatures, they confeſſe it, & though they be none, yet they have many faire colours to hope they are: Tell them of Communion with God, and fellowiſhp with his Son Jeſus Chriſt, and heavenly-mindedneſſe, and hatred of all ſin, love to univerſall obedience, plucking out their right eyes, looking at the Glory of God, not to truſt in their performances: to goe out of themſelves; People make a ſhift to have ſomething to anſwer all; All theſe things they hope they have done, in ſome meaſure. Now when Miniſters go on and on, and do not go further and further, this leaves ſuch people dead. It is ſaid of a Preacher that is wiſe, that he ſtill teaches the people knowledge. Becauſe the Preacher was wiſe, he ſtill taught the people knowledge. Eccleſ. 12. 9. That is, people could never come to him, but ſtill he made them know more and more. You will ſay, how can a Preacher doe thus?

I anſwer, if a Preacher be well ſtudied in his owne heart, and in the Book of God, this will help him to do it. For ſtill as he ſees further into his owne heart, ſtill he will ſee further into the Word of God, and let out more and more light. It is ſaid of Chriſts Miniſtery, That in it the light did ſpring up, Mat. 4.16. So, this is a true Miniſtery indeed, when the light ſprings up in it. Yee know in a Spring, the water ſpringeth up more and more; now when a Miniſter goes on in a track, and does not do thus, this is a deading Miniſtery. This is the third thing, Flat Preaching leaves people dead.

Fourthly, Cold preaching too; when a Miniſter preaches coldly, when the Word floweth coldly from his mouth, when a man hides the affectionateneſſe of the Word from the people, by the coldneſſe of his uttering of it. Beloved, the Word is full of affections: what a deale of affection is there in all the Truths of the Goſpel! they are all ſteept in the warm bloud of the Son of God, there is affection in the promiſes, they proceed from the tender bowels of God: Affection in the threatnings, they all iſſue from the infinite wrath of God againſt ſin; The Word of God is as fire, Jer. 23. 29 Now when a Miniſter ſhall preach the Word coldly, he preaches the Word otherwiſe than it is: He does as much as in him lies, to hide the affectionateneſſe of the Word from the peoples hearts. Suppoſe the Town were all on fire, would ye not count the man a ridiculous man, that ſhould come to us, and tell us a cold ſtory? Sirs, let me tell you a thing, there is a great fire in the Town, and I verily thinke it may burn all the Town, and you ſhould do well to go and quench it: This man tels us ſo indeed, but would you not count him a foole, for telling us ſuch a thing, in a cold careleſſe manner, as if it were a ſmall matter? Nature teacheth us another courſe in ſuch a caſe, Fire, fire, help, O help, for the Lords ſake, water, water, in all haſte, Alas, alas! we are undone, quickly, run for ladders, run for buckets, run for wet cloathes; ah, you lazie villaine, run apace for Iron hooks, and the like: Thus Nature teaches to deliver ſuch a truth that does ſo nearly concern us, affectionately: So it is here, Brethren; what weighty things does the Word containe? Truths that our very bowels ſhould yerne, and we ſhould powre out our affections in the Pulpit, that we may ſhew by our delivery, what they are. Now, when this is not done, this deads peoples hearts. They ſit as quiet at a Sermon, though they heare of matters of life and death, eternall life, ſalvation and damnation: Yet they ſit like blocks in their ſeats, as though it were no great matter. Why? they heare one ſtanding in the Pulpit, as though he were ſaying his leſſon; wicked people will not believe they are going to hell, though we tell them they will not believe the wayes of Jeſus Chriſt are ſo good as they are, though we tell them. It is a pretty ſtory of Demoſthenes, when one told him that he was beaten and miſ-uſed by ſuch a man; it ſeems he told it very dreamingly, and coldly, ſhewing no affection at all; Why, ſaith Demoſthenes, hath he beaten thee? I do not believe it, No? ſaith the man: and ſo the man was as it were in a great paſſion: I am ſure thus and thus he did to me, and do not you call this beating? Nay, ſaith Demoſthenes, now I believe he hath beaten thee indeed. Now you ſpeak as ye had been beaten, as ye ſay. So when a Miniſter preaches unto people in a dreaming manner, though the things be never ſo weighty, yet they will not believe them. He ſaith in a cold manner, that Drunkards are in a bad caſe, and ſuch and ſuch perſons are in a ſad condition, and ſaith, yee muſt repent, or you will all periſh; but people heare him ſpeake ſo frigidly of theſe things, that they will not enter into their hearts. If theſe things were preached as they ſhould be, it would make people quake. It is ſaid of our Saviour, That when he was teaching, the Diſciples hearts burned within them, Luk.24.32. Did not our hearts burn within us, when, &c. Keckerman makes that to be the meaning of St. Matthew, where he ſaith that our Saviour taught with Authority, and not as the Scribes; that is, ſaith he, he did not preach coldly, but with life and zeale, and this went with Authority.

Now the manner of preaching is cold two wayes, and ſo dead.

Firſt, when it flowes not from the heart, for then it is unlikely that ever it will goe unto the heart, Pectus facit eſſe diſertos. The heart is the beſt Oratory, as Paul ſaith, What doe you weeping and breaking my heart? Acts 21. 13. they ſpake ſo heartily, and affectionately, and meltingly to him, this burſt his very heart. In the 17 of Acts the 16 verſe, it it ſaid, Pauls ſpirit was ſtirred in him, to ſee all Athens given to Idolatry: He was inwardly moved in his own heart in his preaching unto them. Now if you look into the 34 ver. of that Chapter, how this quickned ſome there; Dionyſius, and Damaris, and ſome others cleaved unto him: that is, he preached ſo movingly, that he made their very ſoules cleave unto him, Why? he ſpake from his heart. There be many clamorous Preachers, ſaith Calvin, who declame againſt the ſinnes of the people, and thunder againſt them, nay as though they had a great deale of zeale, and yet never move a jot, becauſe themſelves have a dead heart, and a ſecure heart, the people ſee through their actings, that they are not moved themſelves, and therefore this does not move them neither: when people can ſee through a Miniſter, that he doth not preach once of his own heart, this deadeth their hearts; God bad Ezekiel eate the Book, &c.

Secondly, The manner of preaching is cold, when the Sermon is not delivered in a lively manner, when he preaches dully and bluntly. The Apoſtle ſhewes in the firſt of the Coloſſians, that Epaphras did a great deale of good in his Miniſtery at Coloſſe. Now in the 4 of the Coloſſians and the 13 verſe, the Apoſtle ſaith, he was a zealous Preacher; I beare him record, ſaith he, that he hath a great zeale for you. But when a Miniſter hath a cold delivery, this is a great hinderance to the Word.

You will ſay, how can this be? Is it not the ſame word whether preached coldly, or with heat? Yes it is: But the Word hath two things in it: firſt, the bare naked truth: ſecondly, the fatherly affectionateneſſe of God in the ſame. Now a zealous Miniſter, lets the people, in ſome meaſure, ſee both; but a dull Miniſtery holds out the one, and hideth the other. Againe, though the Word only convert, it is not the Miniſter that workes, but the Word; yet the Miniſter is appointed of God to be a meanes to draw peoples attentions to the Word. Now when he does it in a cold manner, the people are the more apt to let fall their intentions, and not mark it. Thus you ſee how a Miniſter may be guilty of the deadneſſe of his people two wayes, firſt, by his not preaching at all, Secondly, by his dead manner of preaching.

There is one more yet remaines, and that is, Thirdly, by his dead life and converſation; an evill life in the Miniſter, makes preaching ſeem vile, when he makes it appeare by his courſe, that he makes no conſcience of framing his life according to his own teaching: Is ſtrict in the Pulpit, and diſſolute in the ſtreet: I confeſſe many are ready to quarrell with the lives of their Teachers without cauſe, as the falſe Apoſtles with Paul, as though he were carnall, 2 Cor. 10.2. But when a man will be a Miniſter, and yet walk like men hating to be reformed, and running into the ſame exceſſe of riot with others; how doth this harden peoples hearts, and deadeth the Doctrine it ſelfe? It makes preaching ſeeme but a toy. When a man will ſeeme to perſwade to that which he neglects himſelf, and to cry out againſt that, of which himſelfe doth make a common practiſe. Let no man deſpiſe thee, ſayes Paul unto Timothy. You will ſay, how ſhall that be? Be you an example unto them that believe. 1 Tim 4.12. But I am prevented of time. There is nothing that more deads a mans Miniſtery than this, when the people know in their Conſciences, that the Miniſter is as vile as one of them. Let him preach never ſo excellent things, they will ſay, alas, alas! We know he loves his penny, he loves the pot, he is not right, no more than one of us. But I am forced to give over.

The Uſe of this is, Firſt, Is it ſo, that a Miniſter may be the cauſe why the people are dead? Then here we ſee the reaſon why the Devill is ſo buſie to poyſon Miniſters. He knowes, if he can poyſon them, he can quickly poyſon all the Pariſh well-near. Simon, Simon, Satan hath deſired to ſift thee, Luke 22.3. When Joſhua was exerciſing the office of the High-Preeſt, Satan ſtood at his right hand, Zech 3.1. The devill is like the Syians. O ſayes he, fight neither againſt ſmall nor great, ſave only againſt the King of Iſrael: If they could ſlay him, they knew they ſhould quickly take his Army; ſo if the devill can take the Miniſter, he cares not If he can make him a Worldling, or a Drunkard, or a Drone, or a Pluraliſt, that is it he deſires. The deading of one Miniſter, deads an hundred others, if he can be a lying ſpirit in a Miniſters mouth, he is able to deceive two hundred at once. Uſe 1.

Secondly, Here we ſee that Miniſters, of all men, ſhould have a care to be quickned. For if we be not quickned, Brethren, our guiltineſſe is very great, we ſhall involve many others in our ſinne: It will goe hard with every private perſon that is dead to all goodneſſe: He cannot be ſaved, he cannot eſcape the ſecond death. How then can a dead Miniſter eſcape, that hath not onely his owne deadneſſe to anſwer for, but alſo the deadneſſe of all his people? What ſayes the Lord to the Miniſters of the dead Churches of Sardis, Repent, repent, ſayes he, leſt I come againſt thee, as a thief, in an houre before thou art aware. Rev 3.3. And therefore let us be awakened, that we may be quickned. Beloved, the times now are very dead, and we that are the Miniſters of the Church have let this deadneſſe in, our not being watchfull, our not being lively and ſtirring in our places, our not being quickned O what wrath hangs upon us, if we doe not labour for life, that we may communicate it unto our people! The common deadneſſe up and down ſhould be an argument unto us to excite us. When Eliſha ſaw the badneſſe of the Church in his dayes, he was very earneſt to have the ſpirit of Elias doubled upon him, 2 Kings 2.9. We have need of a double ſpirit of the good Miniſters of God that were before us, the dayes doe require it, never was there more deadneſſe than now is. There are not many that profeſſe holineſſe at all, but of them that doe: O how many are dead, and without life! Now who ſhould be a meanes to quicken people but we? Uſe 2.

Thirdly, This ſhould teach good people to pray for their Miniſters: the more quickned the Miniſters be, it is the better for them. But if they be dead, the infection will deſcend down into you. When Paul and Silas went out to preach, the Text ſayes, They were commended by the brethren to the grace of God, Acts. 15.40. Uſe 3.

Fourthly, This ſhould be an exhortation to us of the Miniſtery, that we would take heed unto our ſelves and to all the Church of God that is committed unto our charge: That we would rouze up our ſelves, and ſpecially now, when there was never more need. When the children of Iſrael were about to goe back againe into Egypt, the Text ſayes, how Moſes and Aaron fell on their faces before all the Congregation of Iſrael, to beſeech them to forbear, Num. 14.5. They were ſo mightily affected with the peoples ſinne, that they fell upon their faces before them. Q. d. For the Lords ſake, and for your own ſouls ſake, take heed of this ſinne. What! will you pull all Uſe 4.

heaven about your eares? Will you provoke the living God againſt you? O my Brethren, take heed what ye doe, ſo we ſhould doe, we ſhould labour to be affected with our own and our peoples deadneſſe. We ſhould call upon them to be quickned. O be quickned, the Lord will not endure a dead people, get life if ye be wiſe, it is but a folly to have a name to live, except ye be alive indeed.

Now the way for us to quicken our people, is, Firſt, if we be good our ſelves. When Jehoſaphat would encourage the Levites to quicken up the people; Sayes he, The Lord ſhall be with the good, 2 Chron. 19. 11. He will bleſſe your labours, he will ſtrengthen your Sermons to doe good, though not to all, for the greateſt part are not of God, yet unto his people; Nay, if we were good indeed, we might have hope to doe much good; as it is ſaid of Barnabas, He was a good man, and much people were added to the Lord, Acts 11.24.

Againe, Secondly, we ſhould be earneſt with God to quicken all our hearts, that ſo we may the better quicken our Brethren, as Chriſt ſayes to Peter, When thou art converted, ſtrengthen thy brethren, ſo we ſhould deſire God to quicken us, that we may quicken our brethren, that we may waſh our hands of our people. What an excellent comfort was that unto Paul, When he could take his people to record, that he was pure from the blood of all men, Acts 20 26.

Thirdly, We ſhould mark which of our people are dead, Ezek 8.9. And then think, what are not we guilty of his deadneſſe?

Fourthly, Let us lay about us ſoundly, that we may not be guilty of their ſinnes in any kind.

Uſe 5. Fifthly, Another Uſe is to let us ſee, what a great danger Miniſters are in, they may be guilty of all the evill in their Pariſh, if they doe not their duty, which is a great thing to doe, they have all the ſinnes of their Pariſh lying at their doore, this ſhould keep us from ſecurity and from pride; many grow proud that they are Miniſters, but alas! They know not what an Office they have that doe ſo. Our very calling ſhould make our hearts tremble and quake to think what a charge is impoſed upon us. This made Moſes and Aaron and many a good man more, ſo fearfull to enter upon this Function. No man takes this honour unto himſelfe, ſaith the Apoſtle (meaning no godly man, no man in his right wits, no man that is well-adviſed what he does) but he that is called, Heb 5.4. as our Saviour Chriſt ſaith, Pray ye the Lord of the harveſt that he would ſend forth labourers into his Harveſt, Matth. 9.38. ἐκβάλῃ, ſo it is in the Originall, that he would thruſt forth labourers into his Harveſt, q. d. God will have no good labourers, ſince thoſe that are good are not over-forward to enter into the Miniſtery; as a Father ſayes, it is a burden that the very Angels ſhoulders would tremble under, as the Apoſtle ſaid, Who is ſufficient for theſe things? If there were no other Argument but this in the Text, it might ſway all Miniſters hearts in the world, leaſt we be guilty of our own deadneſſe, and of others too.

Nota.

Another Uſe ſhould be to the people, that they would be forward, and willing to heare, and greedy to drink in the Word of life. The want of this, is the deading of many a Miniſters heart. I was in much bitterneſſe, ſaith Ezekiel, but the hand of the Lord was ſtrong upon me, Ezek. 3.14. that is, I had had no heart at all to preach, but that the hand of the Lord was exceedingly aſſiſtant unto me; whereas the forwardneſſe of people, is a great meanes to quicken up their Miniſters. When the whole City flocked in to heare Paul, though the wicked were mad at it; the Text ſaith, He grew bold, Acts 13.44.45. When the people crowded in upon our Saviour, that he had not ſo much as time to eate bread, Mark 3.20. the Text ſhewes that he ſo beſtirred himſelf there, that his own Kinſfolk thought he had been mad, verſe. 21.

Revel.

REVEL. 3. 1.

And unto the Angel of the Church in Sardis, write: Theſe things ſaith he that hath the ſeven Spirits of God, &c.

WE have done with the Inſcription, And unto the Angel of the Church in Sardis, write. We come now to the Subſcription, and that is in theſe words: Theſe things ſaith that he hath the ſeven ſpirits of God, & the ſeven Stars; Which words containe a deſcription of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, from whom this Epiſtle is ſent unto the Church, and he is deſcribed very gloriouſly, to the intent that what he ſayes, may be the more reverently and ſeriouſly regarded. The Deſcription ſets forth two admirable properties and royalties of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt; Firſt, That he hath the ſeven Spirits of God, that is, he hath the Holy Ghoſt, to give to whomſoever he pleaſe. Secondly, That he hath the ſeven Stars, that is the Paſtors and Miniſters of the Church. Chriſt hath them all in his hand, to ſend them, to gift them, to aſſiſt them, to preſerve them, to vouchſafe them to a people, or to take them away, as he liſts; and the Miniſters are called Stars, becauſe they are to ſhine in the firmament of the Church.

Firſt then, the firſt royalty of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, is, that he hath the ſeven Spirits of God: by the ſeven Spirits of God, he means the Holy Ghoſt; you will ſay the Holy Ghoſt is but one Spirit. By one Spirit we are all baptized into one body, 1 Cor. 12.13. There is one Body and one Spirit, Eph. 4.4. Through him, wee both have an acceſſe by one Spirit unto the Father, Epheſ. 2.18. The Spirit of God is but one. Ye know there is but one God, in three perſons: one Father, one Sonne, one Holy Spirit There be three that beare record in Heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghoſt, and theſe three are one, 1 Joh 5.7. there is but one Father, and one Son, whom the Apoſtle there calls the Word, for ſo he is often called in the Scripture The Word was made fleſh, that is, the Sonne of God was made fleſh: ſo there is, but one Holy Ghoſt, one holy Spirit. Why then does the Text here ſay of Chriſt, that he hath the ſeven Spirits of God?

I Anſwer, ye may know that the Revelation uſes peculiar phraſes, auguſt, and myſticall. Now the reaſon why John ſpeaks thus in the plurall number, is,

Firſt, becauſe he alludes to the manner of his Viſions; now in his Viſions, the holy Ghoſt was thus repreſented unto him, as ye may ſee, Rev. 4. 5. where he ſaw ſeven Lamps of fire burning before the Throne, which are the ſeven Spirits of God. So Again, Rev. 5 6. Where he ſaw a Lamb, as it had been ſlaine, having ſeven horns, and ſeven eyes, which are the ſeven Spirits of God, ſent forth into all the earth. So that this is one reaſon why he calls the Holy Ghoſt the ſeven Spirits of God, becauſe he ſpeaks after this manner, of the Viſion that he ſaw.

Secondly, another reaſon is, becauſe he was to write to the ſeven Churches of Aſia. Now he ſpeaks of the Holy Ghoſt in the ſame number, becauſe that one and the ſame Holy Ghoſt, is ſeverally and intirely powred upon them all. The Spirit of God was in Epheſus, and the Spirit of God was in Smyrna, and the Spirit of God was in Pergamos, and ſo in Thyatira, and ſo in Sardis and Philadelphia, and Laodicea: and therefore he calls him the ſeven Spirits of God, though he be but one and the ſame Spirit.

Thirdly, he calls him the ſeven Spirits of God, by a common Metonymie, of putting the effects for the cauſe, becauſe there be many and ſundry gifts and graces of the holy Spirit of God; the number ſeven being put to ſignifie the perfection of them, and the univerſallneſſe of them.

heaven about your eares? Will you provoke the living God against you? O my Brethren, take heed what ye doe, so we should doe, we should labour to be affected with our own and our peoples deadnesse. We should call upon them to be quickned. O be quickned, the Lord will not endure a dead people, get life if ye be wise, it is but a folly to have a name to live, except ye be alive indeed.

Now the way for us to quicken our people, is, First, if we be good our selves. When Jehosaphat would encourage the Levites to quicken up the people; Sayes he, The Lord shall be with the good, 2 Chron. 19. 11. He will blesse your labours, he will strengthen your Sermons to doe good, though not to all, for the greatest part are not of God, yet unto his people; Nay, if we were good indeed, we might have hope to doe much good; as it is said of Barnabas, He was a good man, and much people were added to the Lord, Acts 11.24.

Againe, Secondly, we should be earnest with God to quicken all our hearts, that so we may the better quicken our Brethren, as Christ sayes to Peter, When thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren, so we should desire God to quicken us, that we may quicken our brethren, that we may wash our hands of our people. What an excellent comfort was that unto Paul, When he could take his people to record, that he was pure from the blood of all men, Acts 20.26.

Thirdly, We should mark which of our people are dead, Ezek 8.9. And then think, what are not we guilty of his deadnesse?

Fourthly, Let us lay about us soundly, that we may not be guilty of their sinnes in any kind.

Use 5. Fifthly, Another Use is to let us see, what a great danger Ministers are in, they may be guilty of all the evill in their Parish, if they doe not their duty, which is a great thing to doe, they have all the sinnes of their Parish lying at their doore, this should keep us from security and from pride; many grow proud that they are Ministers, but alas! They know not what an Office they have that doe so. Our very calling should make our hearts tremble and quake to think what a charge is imposed upon us. This made Moses and Aaron and many a good man more, so fearfull to enter upon this Function. No man takes this honour unto himselfe, saith the Apostle (meaning no godly man, no man in his right wits, no man that is well-advised what he does) but he that is called, Heb 5.4. as our Saviour Christ saith, Pray ye the Lord of the harvest that he would send forth labourers into his Harvest, Matth. 9.38. ἐκβάλῃ, so it is in the Originall, that he would thrust forth labourers into his Harvest, q. d. God will have no good labourers, since those that are good are not over-forward to enter into the Ministery; as a Father sayes, it is a burden that the very Angels shoulders would tremble under, as the Apostle said, Who is sufficient for these things? If there were no other Argument but this in the Text, it might sway all Ministers hearts in the world, least we be guilty of our own deadnesse, and of others too.

Note.

Another Use should be to the people, that they would be forward, and willing to heare, and greedy to drink in the Word of life. The want of this, is the deading of many a Ministers heart. I was in much bitternesse, saith Ezekiel, but the hand of the Lord was strong upon me, Ezek. 3.14. that is, I had had no heart at all to preach, but that the hand of the Lord was exceedingly assistant unto me; whereas the forwardnesse of people, is a great meanes to quicken up their Ministers. When the whole City flocked in to heare Paul, though the wicked were mad at it; the Text saith, He grew bold, Acts 13.44.45. When the people crowded in upon our Saviour, that he had not so much as time to eate bread, Mark 3.20. the Text shewes that he so bestirred himself there, that his own Kinsfolk thought he had been mad, verse. 21.

Revel.

REVEL. 3. 1.

And unto the Angel of the Church in Sardis, write: Theſe things ſaith he that hath the ſeven Spirits of God, &c.

WE have done with the Inſcription, And unto the Angel of the Church in Sardis, write. We come now to the Subſcription, and that is in theſe words: Theſe things ſaith that he hath the ſeven Spirits of God, & the ſeven Stars; Which words containe a deſcription of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, from whom this Epiſtle is ſent unto the Church, and he is deſcribed very gloriouſly, to the intent that what he ſayes, may be the more reverently and ſeriouſly regarded. The Deſcription ſets forth two admirable properties and royalties of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt; Firſt, That he hath the ſeven Spirits of God, that is, he hath the Holy Ghoſt, to give to whomſoever he pleaſe. Secondly, That he hath the ſeven Stars, that is the Paſtors and Miniſters of the Church. Chriſt hath them all in his hand, to ſend them, to gift them, to aſſiſt them, to preſerve them, to vouchſafe them to a people, or to take them away, as he lifts; and the Miniſters are called Stars, becauſe they are to ſhine in the firmament of the Church.

Firſt then, the firſt royalty of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, is, that he hath the ſeven Spirits of God: by the ſeven Spirits of God, he means the Holy Ghoſt; you will ſay the Holy Ghoſt is but one Spirit. By one Spirit we are all baptized into one body, 1 Cor. 12. 13. There is one Body and one Spirit, Eph. 4. 4. Through him, wee both have an acceſſe by one Spirit unto the Father, Epheſ. 2. 18. The Spirit of God is but one. Ye know there is but one God, in three perſons: one Father, one Sonne, one Holy Spirit There be three that beare record in Heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghoſt, and theſe three are one, 1 Joh. 5. 7. there is but one Father, and one Son, whom the Apoſtle there calls the Word, for ſo he is often called in the Scripture The Word was made fleſh, that is, the Sonne of God was made fleſh: ſo there is, but one Holy Ghoſt, one holy Spirit. Why then does the Text here ſay of Chriſt, that he hath the ſeven Spirits of God?

I Anſwer, ye may know that the Revelation uſes peculiar phraſes, auguſt, and myſticall. Now the reaſon why John ſpeaks thus in the plurall number, is,

Firſt, becauſe he alludes to the manner of his Viſions; now in his Viſions, the holy Ghoſt was thus repreſented unto him, as ye may ſee, Rev. 4. 5. where he ſaw ſeven Lamps of fire burning before the Throne, which are the ſeven Spirits of God. So Again, Rev. 5 6. Where he ſaw a Lamb, as it had been ſlaine, having ſeven horns, and ſeven eyes, which are the ſeven Spirits of God, ſent forth into all the earth. So that this is one reaſon why he calls the Holy Ghoſt the ſeven Spirits of God, becauſe he ſpeaks after this manner, of the Viſion that he ſaw.

Secondly, another reaſon is, becauſe he was to write to the ſeven Churches of Aſia. Now he ſpeaks of the Holy Ghoſt in the ſame number, becauſe that one and the ſame Holy Ghoſt, is ſeverally and intirely powred upon them all. The Spirit of God was in Epheſus, and the Spirit of God was in Smyrna, and the Spirit of God was in Pergamos, and ſo in Thyatira, and ſo in Sardis and Philadelphia, and Laodicea: and therefore he calls him the ſeven Spirits of God, though he be but one and the ſame Spirit.

Thirdly, he calls him the ſeven Spirits of God, by a common Metonymie, of putting the effects for the cauſe, becauſe there be many and ſundry gifts and graces of the holy Spirit of God; the number ſeven being put to ſignifie the perfection of them, and the univerſallneſſe of them.

Now

Now that the seven Spirits of God, are nothing else, but that one and the same holy Spirit of God, is plaine, out of Rev. 1.4,5. John, to the seven Churches in Asia: Grace be unto you, and peace from him, which is, and which was, and which is to come, and from the seven Spirits which are before his Throne, and from Jesus Christ, which is the faithfull witnesse. Which words are St. John's saluting of the seven Churches in Asia, wherein he wishes them all grace from the blessed Trinity, Q.d. Grace be to you and peace from God the Father, & from the holy Spirit of God, and from the Lord Jesus Christ, the faithful & true witnes: Calling the Father, which was, and is, and is to come, and the Lord Jesus Christ, the faithful & true witnes, & the Holy Ghost, the seven Spirits of God. It is the very self-same salutation that Paul uses in all his Epistles, in effect; saving that, this is more full, and more lofty and august. Now then by the seven Spirits of God, he cannot mean any creature or creatures, as Angels, or so: but he must needs meane the holy Ghost, because he prayes for grace from the seven Spirits of God, which no creature is able to give. Yee know, God only can give grace, God only is the Author of all grace: He only can justifie, and sanctifie, and quicken, and give a man eternall life, as James, Every good and perfect gift commeth from above, James 1.17. It were Idolatry in John, to wish to the Churches grace from the seven Spirits of God, if he meant by them any Angels, or any other creatures. We might worship the Angels, if they were able to give us grace. we might pray to them, and serve them, and feare them, and adore them, if they could be the Authors of grace to us. Now this is Idolatry, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve, Matth.4.10. Of him, and through him, and to him are all things, to whom be glory for ever, Amen. Rom.11.36. Yee know it is the glory of God to be the Cause of all grace. Now what sayes God? I am the Lord, that is my Name, and my glory will I not give to another. Isa.42.8. Well then you see what is here meant by the seven Spirits of God, even the holy Ghost himselfe, that one and the same holy Spirit of God. These things saith he that hath the seven spirits of God, that is, these things saith Christ, that hath the holy Spirit of God, to give him to whomsoever he pleases.

Not as though that were all, that Christ hath the holy Spirit of God, for so Paul had the holy Spirit of God, I suppose also that I have the Spirit of God, 1 Cor. 7,40. So Peter and David, and all the Saints, all the people of God have the holy Spirit of God, nay, a man is dead in trespasses and sinnes, and is a meer carkasse, like a dead body without a soule, that hath not the holy Spirit of God, therefore that is not all the meaning of it, that Christ hath the holy Spirit of God, for so all the children of God have him, and are quickned by him up to all goodnesse: But Christ hath the holy Spirit of God, that is, he hath him to give to whomsoever he pleases.

But it may be objected, Is it not God the Father that gives the holy Spirit to all his poor children?

I Answer, Yes, it is very true, he hath him to give to whomsoever he is pleased to give him, for the Holy Ghost is his Spirit as well as Christs, he flowes from them both. And therefore saith our Saviour, How much more shall your Heavenly Father give the holy Spirit to them that aske him? Luke 11. 13. So that the Father gives the holy Spirit to whom he will, but it is in Christs name, Christ is the store-house of this gift. When the Father gives his holy Spirit unto any man, it is onely in Christs name, as himself speaks: The Comforter which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, He shall teach you all things, Joh. 14.26. Mark, it is onely in Christs name.

Doctrine. Well, now we see the point, That Christ onely hath the Holy Spirit of God to give to whom he pleases: If any poor creature would fain have the holy Spirit of God to be in him, he must come to Christ for him. Though the barrell be never so full of good Wine, yet when it is hoopt round about, if one would have any, he muſt draw it at the tap: ſo, Beloved, the Lord hath hoopt himſelfe up from men, he hath cloſed himſelf up from all men, by reaſon of mens ſins, he hath ſhut himſelf up, no man can have any of his holy Spirit, but he muſt come & draw it at the tap: he muſt come to Jeſus Chriſt, the Lord vents himſelf only in him, as Chriſt ſaith, he that believeth on me, as the Scripture hath ſaid, Out of his belly ſhall flow rivers of living water. What is that? this ſpake he of the Spirit, which they that believe on him ſhould receive, Joh. 7. 38. 39. Mark, Chriſt is the tap, ye muſt come to him by true believing, or ye cannot receive any of Gods holy Spirit. He only hath him to give to them that do embrace him From him proceed all the graces of the Spirit, that any men do enjoy. This is his Royalty, as being the only King and Head of the Church, and the opened fountain, that all that would be ſaved muſt repaire unto. He is the beginning of the Holy Ghoſt, the Holy Ghoſt proceedeth from him, as he is the Son of God, & as he is man, he is anointed with him. The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, ſaith he, Luk. 4. 18. Ho, every one that would have him, come unto me for him, Away with your ſins, & take me, abhor all your own wayes, ſee what damnable Creatures ye are in your ſelves, whither your luſts and corruptions carry you, what will become of you, if ye go on in your own paths? if ye would have grace, and mercy, and life, and ſalvation, come to me, The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, to poure him upon you, that ye may be ſaved. I ſay, Chriſt is anointed with him, the Lord hath given him his Spirit in abundance, he hath enough ſpirit to infuſe into all that lay hold upon him, as John ſaith, God hath not given the Spirit by meaſure unto him, Joh. 3. 34. No, he hath the holy Spirit without meaſure, he hath all ſtore of ſpirituall graces, to afford to them that lack; a treaſurie of all heavenly bleſſings, to inrich all his poor diſtreſſed Members.

The Reaſons of this Point, why Chriſt only hath the holy Spirit of God, to give where he will, are three;

Firſt, Becauſe there is none but he, that God is well pleaſed in. God is out with all the Sons of men, by reaſon of ſin and wickedneſſe, they are all hatefull unto him, they are odious in his ſight, & the whole world cannot make him and them friends again, that ever he ſhould give them grace and favour, much leſſe his holy Spirit. There is none in whom God is well pleaſed but in his Son; This is my well-beloved Son, in whom I am well pleaſed. Father, and Holy Ghoſt, both came and reſted upon him, ſaying, This is the only He, in whom I am well pleaſed, Mat. 3. 16. 17. q. d. If ye get him to be your Advocate, take him, and come unto me with him, then I will be friends with you, hee may helpe you with reconciliation with me, he may get me to give you my holy Spirit, I am well-pleaſed in him, and in none but him. This is one Reaſon, ſo that Chriſt only can put his holy Spirit into thy heart, and ſo ſend thee to his Father, As Paul put a loving mediating letter in Oneſimus his pocket, and ſo ſent him to his Maſter: then he will be well-pleaſed with thee, when thou haſt Chriſts Letter of commendation about thee, then thou maiſt go to God from day to day, and be accepted with him: None can do this for thee but only Chriſt, he onely can put a mediating Letter in thy hand, he only can give thee the interceſſions of his holy Spirit. Thouſands goe to God in mans duties from day to day, & becauſe they are without this, Chriſt hath not given his holy Spirit, therefore they are not accepted, God is not pleaſed with them, they pray without his Spirit, they cry God mercy without his Spirit, they ſeek to enter in without his Spirit, and ſo they are not admitted. Now when a ſoule comes to Chriſt, God is well-pleaſed with Chriſt, and therefore Chriſt can give him his love-token, Chriſt can give him the holy Spirit, and ſo he ſhall be admitted into favour with God. God is well-pleaſed in him. As Pharaoh was in Joſeph, and therefore Joſeph could preſent his Brethren unto Pharaoh, Gen. 47. 2. If any body elſe had preſented them, they ſhould never have found favour, but Joſeph could put acceptance upon them. Pharaoh Reaſ. 1.

was well pleased in him : So God is well pleased in his Sonne, and therefore he can do it, and none but He.

Reas. 2. Secondly, Another Reason is, Because the Holy Spirit of God will never enter into man more, except Gods Justice be satisfied God is resolved he will not put up those indignities that men offer unto him, except they bring with them one in whom his wrath is appeased As Saint John sayes, The Lamb slaine hath seven eyes, which are the seven Spirits of God, Rev. 5. 6. That is, he hath satisfied Gods Justice, and therefore he hath the holy Spirit of God so given, the holy Spirit of God will go to those men that he hath satisfied Gods Justice for, I say the holy Spirit of God will not go to any man, without satisfaction ; if any one will shew him satisfaction, then the Spirit of God will say, I will go where you will have me, onely let me have satisfaction. Now Beloved Christ onely can say to the holy Spirit, come along with me to this man, here's a satisfaction unto Justice, therefore he onely hath the Spirit at his dispencing: And therefore if any man would have Gods holy Spirit, he must bring the Lambe slaine with him to God. Lord here I have a Lambe slaine, and now let me see thy face, now let me have thy Spirit, as David said to Abner, bring me Michol, or never thinke to see my face, 2 Sam 3.13. q.d. never come to mee, except thou bring me my Michol with thee. The bringing of Michol with him, this might help him to see the Kings face. So, beloved, when a man getteth the Lord Jesus Christ, and brings him with him to God, this may help him to Gods holy Spirit. Bring him along with thee, and thou shalt see my face, thou shalt have my holy Spirit Neither will God send thee his holy Spirit, neither will the holy Spirit come to thee otherwise. Christ only hath him to give. Have Christ and have him.

Reas. 3. Thirdly, another Reason is, why Christ hath the holy Spirit to give, because he is flesh of our flesh, and bone of our bone, and we may go to him: he is the fittest to have him to give, because he being man aswell as we, we may make bold to go to him : My Brethren, we are not able to go to God for any thing, much lesse for his Spirit, we are not able to look upon him immediately, as a man is not able to look upon the Sun-beames in their strength, specially if he have sore eyes : But let him get a Scarfe, or a Cypresse, and now he may. Now the the Sun-beames will shine upon him through the Cypresse, and not hurt him. The Scarfe is able to convey unto him the Sunne-beames, without dazling of him. So, beloved, Christ is able to convey the holy Spirit of God into any man, our sore Consciences may look up to God thorough him, he moderates Gods looke, he can make us looke God in the face, in a comfortable manner. Now we may ask any thing of him, even his holy Spirit, and he will give him, as the Apostle sayes, By him we have boldnesse, Eph. 3.1.2. O, beloved, they are great things that we need. We have need of such great matters, that when the Conscience is awakened, it can have no hope to obtaine, that God should pardon such vile wretches as we that he should accept of such poore services as ours, that he should love such filthy ones as we are, that he should give us a Kingdome, and his own holy Spirit to enliven us, to establish our hearts, to be an earnest of Heaven to us : how can we hope he will give us such infinite mercies? Now the Lord hath put all these blessings into the hands of his Son Jesus Christ, that is flesh of our flesh, and bone of our bones. Now we may boldly go to him for them. As Moses when his face shone, Aaron was afraid to come neare him, Exod. 34. 30. Therefore he put a vaile over his face : Now Aaron and others were able to come nigh him ; so before, none were able to come to God for any thing, but now the Lord hath put a vaile of flesh upon himselfe by incarnating his owne Son, now we may make bold.

Use 1. The Use of this, is, First ; Is it so that Christ hath the seven Spirits of God? Then, what hath he not? He is an all-sufficient Saviour. He is Gods steward,

God

God hath put all his goods into his hands No man can be aſſured of any thing that is good, but by coming unto him, All things are delivered to me of my Father, Mat. 11.27. That is, I have all my Fathers goods in my hand: Favour, Pardon, Mercy, Grace, Comfort, Heaven it ſelf, yea and his holy Spirit and all, I have the diſtributing of them all He is the ſtore-houſe whither all needy ſoules are to go. He is full of all manner of good things, as John ſayes, Of his fulneſſe have we all received, Joh. 1.16. Look what grace any of the Saints have, they have it all of him, he is Gods Conduit-pipe, the Lord opens himſelfe only in him; he is the tap, he lets out Gods Bleſſing, and Graces, and Spirit, like a ſluce. He is the Lord-treaſurer of Heaven and Earth: As Joſeph in Egypt, if any one would have Corn, they muſt goe to Joſeph for it; if they came to Pharaoh but for a peck, or a gallon, preſently he ſent them to Joſeph; ſo the Lord ſends all that will have any drop of mercy, to his Sonne; If ye will not go to my Sonne, ye ſhall not have one drop, ye ſhall dye in your ſinnes. This is my well-beloved Son, ſayes he, looke ye heare him; hearken to him; obey him; be ruled by him; bow down unto him; doe as he bids you: if yee anger him, and will not ſtoop unto him; if your hearts will not burſt; if your mindes will not off from the world, and other things, and be wholly intent unto him; if ye ſlight him, and ſuffer vain thoughts to draw away your affections and thoughts and meditations from him, there is no redemption for you. No ſalvation but only by believing in his Name, he hath all the ſeven Spirits of God, no ſpirit of grace at all can be had but only of him; he was the Rock, that Moſes muſt ſtand on, that the glory of Gods goodneſſe might paſſe before him.

Secondly, Another Uſe is, hath Chriſt the ſeven Spirits of God? then we are without excuſe: if we be without the holy Spirit of God, Chriſt hath him to give: and yet how few will ſeek him of Jeſus Chriſt! As Chriſt ſayes, Ye will not come unto me, that ye might have life, Joh. 5.40. That is, if ye would come unto me, I would make your dead hearts to live, I would quicken you to all goodneſſe, I would poure my holy Spirit upon you. But you will not come unto me for it. This makes us without excuſe, that Chriſt hath the Spirit in him, for all that have a minde to him, and we have no minde. How few among you to this very day have gotten yet Gods holy Spirit? Yee pray, but yee have not the Spirit of ſupplication to pray by, to lift up your hearts, to enliven your deſires, to be able to wreſtle with God to any purpoſe, no ſpirit of grace ſtirring in you. When ye come to the houſe of God, ye heare Sermons; but the holy Ghoſt does not fall upon you to make them effectuall & mighty in operation, to convert you to God, to knock off your baſe luſts: ye are dead in all holy duties, voyd of all heavenly graces, dull to every good thing, even as the body without the ſpirit is dead Nay the ſpirit of the World dwelleth in moſt men, tying and gluing them to the things here below, and will not let them ſavour and reliſh the things of heaven; whereby they cannot ceaſe from ſin, nor work the works of God. Rare is that man, now adayes, that hath the holy Spirit of God remaining in him in any meaſure: nay, if people were asked, whether they have the Spirit of God, yea or no, their own conſcience could anſwer, No, they have not: they never felt any ſuch Divine gueſt; their earthlineſſe and lumpiſhneſſe of heart in all the Ordinances of God, their unacquaintedneſſe with God, their unſetledneſſe, and nakedneſſe, and blindneſſe in all the wayes of peace, plainly does declare it; and yet they will not come unto Chriſt that they might have life: he hath the ſeven Spirits of God, and yet they cannot finde in their hearts to be inſtant and earneſt with him: when Pharaoh appointed Joſeph to diſtribute Corn to all coummers; go to Joſeph, ſayes he, Gen. 41.55. the Text ſayes, All Countreys came to Joſeph for Corn, becauſe the famine was ſore in all lands. But God hath appointed his own Son to be a diſpencer of the Spirit, and there is a ſore want of the Spirit every where, in all Towns and Pariſhes, and yet hardly any will come in. Certainly, this is the condemnation, that men intend their pleaſure, and their profits, and every outward thing, and never ſeek to Jeſus, to have the holy Spirit of God.

For firſt, many of us have hard hearts that cannot melt at our own ſinnes, nor the publick provocations whereby God is provoked, nor the generall calamities of the Church: our hearts are like a ſtone, and we are not affected, nor can be affected, no relenting at the Word, no bleeding in any other good duty, nothing moves us: the ſpirit could ſoften, yea, and take the ſtone away, and Chriſt ſayes he would give him unto us, if we did deſire him; I will put a new ſpirit within you, and take the ſtony heart out of the fleſh. Ezek. 11. 19. He hath ſpirit enough in him to do it, and yet we will not ſue to him but in a feigned manner, and ſo a hard heart poſſeſſeth us ſtill, which mars all our family duties, and all that we do in the publick aſſemblies: nothing comes of all that we do. If our fooliſh hearts would come downe to be fervent after Chriſt, this might be remedied. He hath the ſeven Spirits of God for the nonce. But a ſpirit of ſlumber bewitches us, and nothing can awaken us to this very day. Never was there a more hard-hearted time, never more hard-hearted Chriſtians, nummed, and paſt feeeling, wiſhing indeed the things mought be mended, but never putting forth our hand to have them mended.

Secondly, ſcarce any of us can pray, but in a blunt-hearted-wiſe: our prayers never ſtirre Heauen, never give ſo much as a lift to any of our Luſts, neither are they any whit anſwerable to the miſeries that are on us, whether Perſonall or Nationall; the ſpirit could help us, and enlarge us, as Paul ſayes of the good Romans, Ye have received the Spirit of Adoption, whereby ye cry, Abba Father, Rom. 8. 15. And Chriſt hath this Spirit in his hand, to give. But we would rather ſit woulding and yawning than be down on our knees before God. Every one almoſt hath heavy things that he is conſcious of: terrible guiltines, horrible miſgivings, ſelfe-condemnings, uncertainties about his latter end, doubtfulneſs whether any thing be ſound, yea or no; and yet no heart of prayer, no ſtrainings after Chriſt to have the holy Spirit of him. Nay, tittle tatle is preferred before comming about Chriſt: and every idle buſineſſe more takes up our thoughts, then how we may enjoy Jeſus Chriſt.

Thirdly, where is the man well-neer, that is holy? ſome indeed are civill, and not very many, no, not of them that would be held for profeſſors. For what Civill Honeſty is there, when people are palpably proud, and palpably coveteous, and palpably malicious, and ſpightfull, and envious? but put caſe many be civill, yet holineſſe is hardly any where to be ſeen. Where are any that are mortified unto ſin? Crucified to the world? Pilgrims on earth, heavenly minded? taken up with God? The Spirit indeed is a Spirit of holineſſe, Rom. 1. 4. And Chriſt hath him to give, but he cannot have our cuſtome: We are not thirſty after ſuch matters.

Fourthly, Where is the Communion of Saints? a Theme I ſpake of the laſt Sabbath day. We are all like unto Ephraim, Ephraim hath mixed himſelfe among the people, Hoſ. 7. 8. that is, they had no Communion of Saints there among them. They were a miſh-maſh people; there was a Chaos and a confuſion and a medly among them. If there be any that beare the name of Saints: They are like Lambes feeding all alone in a large place. Like Iſrael when they are ſcattered, Hoſ. 4. 16. Lambs without flocks: Birds without mates: as if they were all frighted aſunder: No Communion of Saints, no Communion of graces, nor duties, nor hearts, nor affections. I confeſſe if we had the holy Spirit of God, it would make a Communion among us: As Paul ſayes, The grace of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and the love of God, and the Communion of the holy Ghoſt be with you all, Amen, 2 Cor. 13. 14. He would make a Communion among us, and Chriſt hath him too, and there we might have him, but we care not for him; which is a moſt fearfull thing; a ſigne of horrible deadneſſe and liveleſneſſe in good: as it is with the boughes of a tree, when they are dead they fall off, but they hang together as long as they are alive. Though communion of Saints, be an Article of our faith, yet we let it die. we ſee in nature, if we fling any meat to a Hen, preſently ſhe clucks for all her Chickens to have part: So, look what graces we get, we ſhould impart what we can: the Lord hath appointed mutuall-giving good example unto one another, edifying one another, exhorting one another, admoniſhing one another, comforting one another, conferring one with another, ſupplicating one with and for another. As it is ſaid, Luke 5.10. That Simon, and James, and John were partners in their fiſhing, looke what fiſhes they caught, they divided among one another; ſo Chriſtians ſhould be partners. What they get at a Sermon, they are to impart; what they get in Prayer, or at Sacraments, or in afflictions; there be others that ſhould be partners with them: As the Apoſtle ſayes Looke not every man on his owne things, but every man alſo on the things of others, Phil. 2.4. O ſayes he, if there be any fellowſhip of the Spirit, thus it muſt be, that is, the Spirit would breed this fellowſhip and communion among you. Now, beloved, where is this holy Spirit to be had but in Chriſt? I ſay, we are without excuſe, if we doe not get the holy Spirit of God, becauſe Chriſt hath him for us, if we would reſort to him, and therefore we can have no plea.

Firſt, We cannot plead, we have no need of the holy Spirit of God: what need we have him, as long as we believe there is ſuch a one? Is it needfull we ſhould have him? I, that it is; why elſe did God make his Sonne to be the diſpenſer, and the diſtributer, and communicater of him? O, beloved, the Lord hath done this becauſe we cannot be ſaved without the holy Spirit of God: would we be regenerated and born again? we cannot without the Spirit: That which is born of the Spirit, is Spirit, Joh. 3.6. We can never be ſpirituall without the Spirit of God: none but ſpirituall men and women ſhall enter into the Kingdome of God. Drunkards. and Adulterers, and Lyers, and Muck-worms, and better men then they, are carnall men. Now to be carnally minded is death, but to be ſpiritually minded, this onely is life and peace: So that we cannot plead that.

Again, We cannot be juſtified without the Spirit of God. Ye may ſay, O, we hope to be juſtified only by Faith in Chriſt; true, but if ye have not the Spirit of God, ye have no faith; none have true faith in Chriſt, till firſt they have the holy Spirit of God, and therefore it is called the ſpirit of Faith, that is, a ſpirit inclining a man unto Chriſt; bowing of the minde, and heart, and ſoule, to all heavenly things in Chriſt; no man can be juſtified without this, as Paul tells the Corinthians, But ye are ſanctified, ye are juſtified in the Name of the Lord Jeſus, and by the Spirit of God, 1 Cor. 6.11.

Againe. Ye cannot have free-will to doe the will of God without the holy Spirit of God. I confeſſe, by nature no man hath free-will: I, but if ye be not more than nature, ye cannot be ſaved. Ye muſt have free-will to all the wayes of God, or ye cannot be ſaved. Now ye never can have this without the Spirit of God. Can ye mortifie every wicked luſt? Can ye reſiſt the Devill every day? Can ye keep out the world, and ward off the temptations of the fleſh? Ye can never doe it while the world ſtands, in a holy courſe, without the holy Spirit of God. Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty, 2 Cor. 3.17. Mark, there is free-will to all theſe things: That man hath liberty to doe ſupernaturall things, that hath the Spirit of the Lord, and no man elſe.

Againe, Ye are none of Chriſts, if ye have not the holy Spirit of Chriſt; that is the Mark he brands all his ſheep with, as a man ſayes, when he heares tidings of any of his ſheep; ſaith he, If they be mine, they have ſuch a mark: they have an A. and a B. on the left ſide, or ſo: So ſayes Chriſt, If they be mine, they have my Spirit, if any man have not the Spirit of Chriſt, he is none of his, Rom 8 9. Hereby we know that he abideth in us, ſaith John, by his Spirit which he hath given us, 1 Joh. 3.24. ſo that we have need of the Spirit, and therefore this cannot be our plea, that we have no need: We have ſuch need of Gods holy Spirit, that we cannot be ſaved without the having of him.

Secondly, We cannot plead, we know not where to have him. For Chriſt ſaith, he hath him to give to all that will receive him. The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, ſaith he, Eſa. 61.1. That is, he is poured upon me, that he may run down upon all them that come to be my members. If Chriſt indeed had not come, if God had not made him Vehiculum Spiritus, if God had not put his Spirit upon Chriſt, like water in a Fountaine, to run out upon all that will ho'd their hearts under him, then we might have ſome excuſe: Lord! we know not where to have the Spirit. But the Lord hath told us where we may have him. We may have him in his Son Jeſus Chriſt.

Thirdly, We cannot plead, we cannot tell how to have him: For as ye know where to have him, ſo ye may know how to have him too: And ye all doe know, if we had a heart we may have him four wayes;

Firſt, By the hearing of the Word: You will ſay, ye have heard the Word many times; yet ye never received the holy Spirit yet. I anſwer, that is certaine, but it is becauſe ye doe not come to it with a greedy yerning heart, with an open eare, and a willing mind to be guided by it. For if ye came thus, with this mind, ye would quickly have the Spirit. Lord tell me any thing, I doe unfeignedly deſire for to doe it; reprove any thing in me, I doe ſincerely deſire to leave it. Come thus to the Word, I dare ſay, thou ſhalt not be one quarter of an hour without the Spirit; as Chriſt ſaith, Turne ye at my reproof; behold, I will poure out my Spirit unto you, Prov. 1.23. You will ſay, this is ſtrange, and have I heard ſo many Sermons, and never got the Spirit yet? I, you never heard Sermons with an honeſt heart: You ſhall ſee, Cornelius and his company got the Spirit at the firſt Sermon that they heard, when Peter preached, the holy Ghoſt fell on all thoſe that heard the Word, Acts 10.44. How ſo? Ye may read there in the Context, O, ſayes Cornelius, We are all here preſent before God, to heare all things that are commanded thee of God, ver. 33. Now, if we have the Word daily preached, and we get not the holy Spirit of God, we are without excuſe.

Secondly, By Prayer; if we did pray faithfully unto God, we ſhould have the holy Spirit, as Chriſt ſayes; If ye that are evill can give good gifts unto your children, how much more ſhall your heavenly Father give the holy Spirit to them that aske him? Luke 11.13. You will ſay, ye have prayed many a time and often, and yet ye finde no ſuch thing; and no marvaile, when a mans heart prayes only by the by: But if ye made it your buſineſſe, from day to day, if ye would ſeek for him as for life, and look upon it as more neceſſary than life it ſelf, then ye ſhould quickly ſpeed: But when ye will give God the blind, and the lame, and your hearts run a whoring after other things, Heaven is not the maine of all your care, and ſtudy: the Lord knowes a hollow heart, and can tell how to deny it: None ſhall have his Spirit, that doe not deſire him above all things, and labour after him above all things, and uſe all manner of meanes for him. The Spirit of God is a great gift, and we muſt know, its an infinite mercy to obtaine him, and therefore we muſt ſeek him accordingly. They that get him doe not goe dreamingly to work.

Thirdly, By repentance; this is another meanes to obtain the holy Ghoſt, as the Lord ſaith, Rent your hearts and not your garments, and turne to the Lord your God, &c. Joel 2. 13. What followes? And after that I will poure my Spirit upon you, ſaith he, verſe 28. Never think to have Gods holy Spirit, and live after the fleſh, or goe on in a forme, or a careleſſe way: not onely drunkenneſſe and whoredome, and capitall ſinnes, keep him out, but any other luſts and corruptions, that the heart clings unto. Rent your hearts then, let your drowſie doings paine you at the heart, let all your ſecurity, and unbeliefe, and luke warmneſſe, whereby ye part ſtakes with God, let all theſe be a burden unto you, and you heavy laden with them: This is the way-making for the Spirit of Gods comming in.

Spirit

Fourthly, Take no denyall, let not ill ſucceſſe beat you off; this is that which thruſteth back thouſands: They find little ſucceſſe at the firſt, and ſo they give over. But, Beloved, this is it, howſoever we find cold ſucceſſe in our holy labours at the firſt, yet we muſt goe on, though we doe not find our luſts die, though we doe not find that ſpeeding in Prayer that we could wiſh, that prevailing in our endeavours that we doe deſire, yet ſtill we are to goe on, and ſtill waite upon God, in abounding in our care, untill the Lord grant us better ſucceſſe. The hard ſucceſſe that we have, muſt not hinder us, as the Apoſtle ſaith, Let us not be weary in well doing, for in due time we ſhall reap, if we faint not, Gal. 6.9. That is, let us not be diſcouraged with hard ſucceſſes, or any other ſuch like thing: certainly, if we goe on, we ſhall ſpeed. When the wiſe-men came ſeeking for Chriſt at Jeruſalem, they had no good ſucceſſe there, they did not find him there, yet they would not return back without him. But they went down to Bethlehem, and ſought for him there. When the Church had ſought Chriſt in her bed, ſhe had no ſucceſſe for that time. I ſought him, ſayes ſhe, but I found him not, Cant. 3.1. What, would ſhe give over becauſe of her bad ſucceſſe at the firſt? No, ſhe trudged out into the lanes and ſtreets, ſhe enquired of the watch-men and ſtill ſhe had little or no ſucceſſe. But the Text ſaith, ſhe would never give over, till ſhe lit upon him. Beloved, we muſt take heed of this. It is the impatience of mens hearts, if they cannot find a bleſſing at firſt daſh, they will ſeek no further, then they ſtrive into a former, or a worſe condition. In the firſt of Haggai, ye may read, that when the Jewes had been hindered by Cambyſes, from building of the Temple, for a fit, they gave over: Becauſe they had no ſucceſſe, they would build no more, but fell a building their own houſes, ver. 4. Ye know it was their ſinne, and the Lord plagued them for it. Therefore, Brethren, it muſt be our care, although we doe not ſpeed at the firſt, not to ſlacken, or give out: As Iſaac would ſtill be digging Wells, he digged one, and that had no ſucceſſe, ſo he digged another, and that had as bad; ſtill there fell out ſtrife, what then? Did he give over ſo? No, he never would have done, till the Lord gave him a Rehoboth, a Well that there was no ſtriving about, Gen. 26.22. So, we ſhould never be quiet untill the Lord give us his holy Spirit; though we doe not feele his workings in us at the firſt, no bad ſucceſſes, though never ſo many, ſhould make us weary: But ſtill we ſhould goe on, a ſeeking of the holy Spirit of God. Thus, as we know where to have the Spirit of God, namely in Chriſt, ſo we know how too, and therefore we are without excuſe, if we ſuffer our ſelves to be void of Gods holy and bleſſed Spirit; this is the ſecond uſe.

Thirdly, Another Uſe, is, to you that doe indeed complaine of great want of the Spirit: Here you ſee where ye may have ſupplies, even from our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, he hath the ſeven Spirits of God. Then labour to know Chriſt more and more: This is the way to have more and more of the Spirit, as the Apoſtle ſaith: That the God of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, the Father of glory, may give unto you the Spirit of wiſdome, and Revelation in the knowledge of him, Epheſ. 1.17. Get the knowledge of Chriſt more and more, and thus the Spirit ſhall come to thee more and more. It is ſaid of the Indian Gymnoſophiſts, that they would lye all the day long, looking upon the Sun in the Firmament, Firmament, ſo ſhould Chriſtians doe, they ſhould lye looking upon Chriſt, the more Spirit ſtill they ſhall have, if they doe ſo.

Firſt, May be ye want Spirit to make you know the Lords will, you find your ſelves backward from day to day: little or no heart to Gods Commandements; look up to Chriſt, and ſay, Lord there is enough Spirit in Chriſt, and he hath it for all them that doe want, and would have the ſame; O give me ſome together with him, as he ſayes, I will put my Spirit into you, and cauſe you to walke in my Statutes, Ezekiel 36.27. Q. d. look up to me, I will doe this for you.

Secondly, May be, ye want ſtrength, ye have many temptations, and ye have no ſtrength to reſiſt them, they come in upon you like the breaking in of waters; may be, yee are tempted to deny all, and to ſay yee have nothing in you; ſometimes ye are tempted to give over all, ſaying, It is but a folly, I ſhall one day be damned, and I were as good give over now, as to do it afterwards, when it will be worſe, and ye have no ſtrength to hold out; ſometimes ye cannot meditate, ye cannot pray, ye are faine to break off in the midſt, with baſe feares, with ſecurity, and vain hopes, you are tempted to doe as the world does, and ye have no ſtrength to oppoſe them: Look up to Chriſt, ye know the Spirit of Chriſt is a Spirit of power, and ſtrength, 2 Tim. 1.7. and he hath him for you: Look up to him then, and cry for his ſtrong Spirit. Who knows? may be, you may be able to ſay in the end, as Paul does, I can do all things through Chriſt that ſtrengthens me.

Thirdly, May be, ye want boldneſſe to call God your Father; ye are in a quandary, whether ye ſhould call him ſo or no; ye are afraid he is none of your Father, and that ye are none of his adopted ones; ye ſhall but blaſpheme him to call him your Father, or to expect of him a childs portion: Look up to Chriſt, he hath ſuch a Spirit in him, whereby ye may cry, Abba Father, Gal. 4.6.

Fourthly, May be, ye want life and quickning, you find your ſelves very dead, even as the Church of Sardis in this place; I know thy works, that thou art dead. Look up to Chriſt as here he bids thee, he hath the ſeven Spirits of God, and hath that which will quicken thee. Chriſt himſelf; when he was naturally dead, he was quickned by his own Spirit, 1 Pet 3.18. That very Spirit can quicken thy ſpirituall deadneſſe, to every good word and work. His Spirit is life, and that will make thee lively; though thy heart be little better than a Timber-logge in duties, yet if that Spirit get within thee, it will make thee agile, and active in every good thing. It is a horrible thing to ſee how little Chriſtians know of Jeſus Chriſt, though they have been thought to know Jeſus Chriſt ſo long a time, yet they do not know him. Chriſt takes this very ill, as he told Philip, Have I been ſo long time with you, and haſt thou not known me, Philip? Joh. 14.9. Chriſt could be even angry with him, for learning him no better: what little ſpirit is there in Chriſtians now adays! a ſigne, though they have been a long time a learning Chriſt, yet they hardly know him: For if we knew him, Brethren, we could not be at enmity with the holy Spirit. We do not look up to Chriſt.

You will ſay, What is it to look up to Chriſt in all your wayes?

I Anſwer, It is to follow Chriſt, as where John ſaid, Behold the Lamb of God that takes away the ſinnes of the world; The Text ſayes, That two of his Diſciples went away and followed after Jeſus; Joh. 1.36,37. O thought they, is he the Lamb of God, does he take away the ſinnes of the world? we will follow him then. Iohn bade them look at him, and they followed after him, that is, they lookt at him indeed, as a man looks at one whom he followes: when a man ſo looks up to Chriſt, that he followes him; when a man ſees him his onely meanes to be happy, and godly, and in the favour of God, the only meanes to doe well, and to be well, and deſires indeed to follow after him, this is to look up to Chriſt, when a man labours ſincerely to follow the counſell and direction of Chriſt, in all his wayes; He bids him to deny himſelf, and that is the thing that he labours for; He bids him to repent of all his ſinnes, and to ply himſelfe to all Gods holy paths, and to rely upon him for ſtrength and acceptance, and mercy and pardon, and every bleſſing. What-ever thing he looks for at the hands of God, he ſets himſelfe to follow Chriſts counſell, & to expect it in him. If he ſees his ſins, he looks up to Chriſt, and there he ſees his death to defray them; when he ſees what power they have over him, he looks up to Chriſt for his Spirit to ſubdue them, in the uſe of all thoſe means that he hath appointed: Prayer, Meditation, Watchfulneſs, Striving, Purpoſing, Endeavouring, and Fighting againſt all the luſts of his fleſh. And wherein ſoever he failes, he labours to be humbled, and yet to look ſtill up to Chriſt, for forgiveneſſe, and more help againſt another time: This is to ſee the Son of God. Every one that ſees the Son hath everlaſting life, Joh. 6. 40. This is to look up to Chriſt, to beleeve in Chriſt, to have Chriſt, to be in Chriſt, to dwell in Chriſt, and Chriſt in him.

But you will ſay, I am afraid I never lookt up to Chriſt then, I never yet had him, for I have not his holy Spirit; how ſhall I know whether I have the holy Spirit? I anſwer, firſt, I will tell thee, what be not ſignes; and then ſecondly, what be ſignes.

Firſt, What be not ſignes, there are foure ſignes that people take to be ſignes, & are not: Firſt, a civill life, when a man is a merciſull man, kinde to the poor, quiet & peaceable among his neighbours, gentle, affable, courteous, well-conditioned: Theſe are no ſignes of having Gods holy Spirit; True, they are very commendable, and they that have the Spirit of God, muſt have them, and better than them. But a man may be without the holy Spirit of God, and yet have all theſe; Paul ſhewes that the very Barbarians ſhewed him no little kindneſſe, they kindled him a fire, though they were meer naturall men, Acts 28. 2. Our Saviour Chriſt ſhewes that ſome are chaſte by nature, that are born ſo; ſo, many are temperate by nature, and loving by nature, and meek by nature, patient by nature; therefore theſe are no ſupernaturall graces, theſe are no ſignes of the holy Spirit.

Secondly, the profeſſion of Religion: This is no ſigne of the holy Spirit neither; for many profeſſe they know God, and yet are Reprobate to every good work, Tit. 1. 16. That is, many profeſſe Religion, they will heare the Word, they will have prayers in their families, they will be of the better ſide in their Pariſh where they are, if there be any godly ones, they will be of their company, if they can, and ſeeme to do as they do, and yet they have a carnall heart, they do very good works every day, but they have a Reprobate and unapproved heart in them. They do not do them right.

Thirdly, Every kinde of repentance is not a ſigne neither, we read that Pharaoh confeſſed his ſin, and deſired the prayers of Gods people, Exod. 9. 27. Saul wept for his ſins, 1 Sam. 24. 16. Judas made reſtitution: Eſau ſought repentance with teares. The world thinke certainly theſe were ſignes of Gods Spirit; no, no: They were onely common effects of the Spirit. The wicked may in a ſort repent of their ſinnes, and beat them downe too, but the truth is, they do not mortifie them. Like as if a man ſhould come into a garden, and ſee how a mole hath caſt up the earth, and made a foule ſtirre in the Alleyes, and in the Garden knots, if he tread it only downe with his foot, and do not kill the Mole, anon after it will be as bad as before: ſo, many wicked men may do, they may beat downe their ſinnes every day, but they riſe up ſtill as bad as before; now they beat them downe, and then their luſts like the Mole, caſt up again: Thus the Mole is not killed. This is no ſigne of the Spirit. But a godly heart, he kils the Mole, he mortifies his ſin, indeed new Moles may breed, and caſt up again; but he rids his ſoul more and more.

Fourthly. Every kinde of faith neither, is not a ſigne of Gods holy Spirit, ye know the ſtony ground believed, Luke 8.13.

Secondly, Now, for thoſe ſignes that be. Firſt, when a man is ſoundly convinced of his ſins; This is an act of Gods holy Spirit, Joh. 16.8. When a man hath the unction from the Holy one, The Text ſayes, that abides for ever where it is, The anointing which yee have received of him abideth in you, 1 John 2.27.

Secondly, When a man hath had a ſound prick for his ſins, this lets in the Holy Ghoſt, as Peter told his hearers, That were prickt in their hearts, Act 2. 37. he told them they ſhould receive the Holy Ghoſt.

Thirdly, When a man hath had an unſatisfiable deſire of reconciliation with God, as it is ſaid of Paul, that when he was rightly toucht by the Spirit indeed, he could neither eat nor drinke, Acts 9. 9. he could not be quiet till Ananias came and told him he was reconciled with God.

Fourthly, When a man is another, and a new creature; Whoſoever is in Chriſt is a new Creature, 2 Cor. 5.17. the Spirit of God, where ere He is, He is a new ſpirit, and He carries with him a new heart, Ezek. 36. 26. He works a thorow change, and he renews minde, will, and affections, inclinations, memory, appetite, members and all: He does not only new-plaſter them over, but he pulls a man quite down, and builds him up a new habitation of God, as Chriſt told the Centurion. If I come, I will heale thy ſervant, ſo, if Chriſt do once come with his Spirit into any mans heart, he heales it, he works a mighty mutation in that man into another man, as Paul tels the Corinthians, Ye were drunkards, but now ye are waſhed, ye were railers, ye were adulterers, ye were covetous, ye were unrighteous, But now ye are waſhed, 1 Cor. 6 9. 10 11. As Paul ſayes, I was a blaſphemer, and I was a perſecutor, but bleſſed be God, now I have obtained mercy. Now I am not the man that I was; I was a lyar, but now, bleſſed be God, I have the lip of truth; I hated them that were godly, but bleſſed be God, now they are the deareſt people to me in the world.

Fifthly, when a man does ſupernaturall good things; naturall good things, a naturall man may do, without the holy Spirit of grace: when you ſee a man lift up a hundred, or two hundred pound weight, you will ſay, I, this he may do by nature; But if you ſhould ſee a man lift up five thouſand pound weight, you will ſay, there is more than nature in him: ſo, beloved, when you ſee a man loves ſin and comes to be vaine, and cannot abide to be ſtrict; if he be ſtrict a little, he is ſoone weary of it, and layes it aſide; you may know this man hath not the Spirit of God in him: but if ye love holineſſe, and hate every evill thing, that nothing humbles you ſo much as ſin, nothing takes you up ſo much as how to pleaſe God; now ye may know the Spirit of God is in you, Why? This is above Nature. This is another Uſe.

Laſtly, Hath Chriſt the ſeven Spirits of God, to give them to all that will come to him? then what may Chriſt ſay to them that are contented without him, that have no care at all to come at him, that like not his government, that will not draw water at his Well? He hath taken pains to procure a ſtock of grace for them, to provide Merits enough for them, a ſalve broad enough for all their ſores, Spirit enough to poure into all their hearts; and when he hath done all this, they regard other things more than him. Truely, he may ſay as David did, when he was told of Nabals churliſh anſwer, Surely, in vaine have I kept all that this fellow hath in the Wilderneſſe, 1 Sam. 25. 21. Even ſo may Chriſt ſay: Surely, in vaine have I ſuffered for theſe men; in vaine have I come out of my Fathers boſome for them; in vaine did I dye upon the croſſe: They will have none of my ware, they reſpect not my graces, they will not come at me for my holy Spirit.

Revel.

REVEL. 3. 1.

And unto the Angel of the Church in Sardis, write: Theſe things ſaith he that hath the ſeven Spirits of God, and the ſeven ſtarres; I know thy works, that thou haſt a name, that thou liveſt, and art dead.

Theſe things, ſaith he, that hath the ſeven Spirits of God, and the ſeven Stars.

THeſe words containe the Deſcription of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, from whom this Epiſtle is ſent unto the Church in Sardis, and in particular to the Miniſter there, who is here called the Angel of the Church in that place. And the deſcription does inſtance in two Royaltyes of our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt;

Firſt, That he hath the ſeven Spirits of God, that is, he hath the holy Ghoſt, and all his ſpirituall graces in his hands, to give to whomſoever he pleaſes, for the quickning of them, and the ſanctifying of them, that if any of his members want ſpirit, or any ſpirituall good, he hath it for them: Theſe things ſaith he that hath the ſeven Spirits of God: This we handled the laſt day.

Now we proceed to the ſecond Royalty of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, That he hath the ſeven Starres, he ſpeaks of the ſeven Churches of Aſia; Chriſt hath all their Miniſters in his hands, and he calls them Stars.

Firſt, Becauſe the ſtars do direct: Its a great help when Mariners can ſee a ſtarre in a dark night. When Paul and they that ſailed with him could ſee neither Sun nor Star, the company were without all hope of comming ſafe to Land. Acts 27.20 they knew not what to do, when there was not a ſtarre to be ſeen: The ſtars ſerve for direction in the night: So good Miniſters are for direction unto people, they ſerve to direct people to Chriſt. Like the ſtar in the Eaſt; When the wiſemen ſaw the ſtarre, they rejoyced with exceeding great joy, Matth. 2. 10. that ſtar directed them to Chriſt, it went before them all the way, and ſhewed them where to finde Chriſt: ſo a poore ſoule rejoyces to finde a godly Miniſter; O thinks he, he is a ſtarre to direct me to Chriſt.

Secondly, Becauſe the ſtars do ſhine; ſo good Miniſters do ſhine forth, and hold out a light, to give light to them that ſit in darkneſſe, and in the ſhadow of death. Ye are the light of the world, ſayes Chriſt, Matth. 5.14. When a man ſits in a darke houſe, he cannot ſe to do any thing, but if one come and open a window, or a caſement, and letteth in light, now he may ſee to go about his buſineſſe: ſo, Beloved, people that dwell in darke pariſhes, where no ſound Miniſtery of the Word is, they know not what to do to be ſaved: they erre, they wander, they grope, they ſtumble and fall, they ſee not how to be godly and happy for evermore. But when a faithfull Miniſter comes, now light is let in, and thoſe that have a minde to go to heaven, now they may ſee the way thither, ſo that in this ſenſe too, Miniſters are ſtarres.

Thirdly, Becauſe ſtarres have influence upon theſe inferiour bodies, as God ſayes of the Pleiades and Orion, which are a company of ſtarres in the heavenly Orbe. Canſt thou binde the ſweet influences of the Pleiades, or looſe the bands of Orion? Job 38.31. the ſtarres have influences into things here below. The Pleiades open the earth, they make herbs and flowers grow, the Spring is when they ariſe once, Trees begin to ſprout, and the plants do wax green; Orion, it produces cold, the Winter comes when that ſhewes it ſelfe; the ſtarres have a great influence into ſublunary bodies, ſo it is with Miniſters. Bad Miniſters are like the ſtarres of Orion, they ſerve to coole peoples hearts, and dead them to all goodneſſe. But good Miniſters are as the ſtarres of Pleiades, no ſoule can have any minde in him to that which is good, but they do exceedingly helpe and further, they quicken the heart, they warme and fructifie the soules of Gods Elect.

Again, the starres do hang high; so the Ministers of Christ are set high; they hang high, that all the people may have the nbeefit of their glistering. Zachary calls them the Prophets of the most High, And thou childe shalt be called the Prophet of the most High, Luke 1.76. But I have handled this point in effect, when I spake of Ministers being Angels, and therefore I will omit it now. Thus ye see the Ministers are starres. Now he calls them seven, because he speakes of seven Congregations, Ephesus, Smyrna, Pergamos, Thyatira, Sardis, Philadelphia, and Loadicea. Seven Churches, seven Congregations, and every one had their severall stars. Whence we see that every Parish should have a particular faithfull Minister. Paul appointed Titus, to ordaine Elders in every City, Tit.1.5. The Apostles ordained Pastors, and Elders in every Church, Acts 14.23. So it was in the time of the Law, as the Text sayes, Moses of old time hath in every City them that Preach, being read in the Synagogues every Sabbath day. Acts 15.21.

The Reason is, first, because those Townes that have not a faithfull Ministery in it, generally do all perish. I do not deny, but some soules in such blind places may come otherwise to be converted and saved, but generally they perish for ever, that live in such places: as the Evangelist sayes of Galile. True, they had sorry Priests, but they had not a faithfull Ministery. Sayes he, The people sate there in the region and shadow of death, Matth.4.16. that is, till they had a better Ministery, they were in a damnable estate. So that it is a pittifull thing, when any Towne or Parish are without a faithfull Ministery, no starre of Heaven shining among them.

Secondly, because when people have no faithfull Minister of their owne, generally they care not for removing of their dwelling, neither will they go a mile or two for the meanes, they content themselves with what fare they have at home, though it starve them to death: Like the people under the false Prophets, they liked them well enough. My people love to have it so, Jer. 5.31. Nay, they love such Prophets better than them that would deale plainly with them; Nay, there be many, that when they have a faithfull Minister at home, will be sneaking out to a drunken Minister abroad, they would rather live under such a one.

Thirdly, Another Reason why every Church should have its particular star, every Congregation had need of a faithfull Ministery of their own: Because if there be any godly soule, or any one that desires the salvation of his soule, and lives under a blinde guide, he cannot go out without giving very great offence, it will be thought a giddinesse, and a slighting of their owne Minister at home; now if every parish had a sound Ministry in it, this would not be: When people came out of every Parish round about unto John, they had no Pastor of their own, but they came flocking unto John, no question but this bred heart-burning against John: I, and ill-will against those people, that would not be satisfied with what teaching they had in their own Synagogues. Now, I say, if every Parish had its severall shining star, this would not be.

Fourthly, When some Parishes have their starres and many have not; this casts in a bone of discord between Ministers, for they that are idle, and vain, and scandalous, will envy them that spend themselves in giving light. Again, the people of such Parishes have many times occasion of conversing together, and falling into one anothers company. Now how will this harden one anothers hearts, when people shall say, Gods blessing on our Ministers heart, he does not meddle or make with us, we may doe what we will for all him! Who would dwell in such a Parish as yours is? We heare he keeps a horrible

ſtirre with you, he will not let you alone, you cannot be merry now and then, but you are ſure to hear of it: He is ſo ſtrict forſooth, and ſo preciſe, you muſt have preaching fore-noon and afternoon, and there is ſuch adoe to get preciſe Conſtables, that you cannot be quiet. What a woſull thing is this? How does this harden the Countryes hearts?

Uſe. 1. The Uſe of this is; firſt, This ſhewes what a miſerable thing it is, when a Land is darkened, that hath but a few ſtarres; may be here one and there one, but moſt places are in darkneſſe, and have none: Beloved, this is a ſigne of the wrath of God. God is wroth with ſuch a land, and poures his wrath upon ſuch a people, as the Prophet ſayes, Through the wrath of the Lord of Hoſts, is the land darkned, Eſa. 9.19.

Uſe 2. Again, Secondly, you that have your ſtars ſhining among you, how are you to bleſſe God, when there are ſo many places in the world that have none! Suppoſe the Harveſt ſhould be comming, and the earth hath great need of rain, to plump up the eares, the Corne is quite ſpoiled for want of rain: If it doe not rain, Alas! our Corn will be burnt up, and prove little worth. Now if God ſhould raine upon your fields, and not upon your neighbours; your Cloſes and Leizes have raine, but on the other ſide of the hedge there is none: What a ſpeciall mercy is this unto you? As God ſayes, I have cauſed it to raine upon one City, and cauſed it not to raine upon another, one piece was rained upon, and the piece whereupon it rained not, withered, Amos 4. 7. is not this a great mercy to the owner of that ground where the raine falls, and does not fall elſewhere? So, my Brethren, you that have the ſpirituall raine in your particular Pariſhes, what a mercy of God is it unto you? When ſo many Pariſhes have not one drop of it.

Uſe 3. Againe, Thirdly, let us take heed leſt thoſe few ſtarres that yet be, ſet upon us, and ſo we be all in darkneſſe, we have a little raine yet, here and there ſome. O let us repent and be more forward to bring forth more fruit, if we continue to provoke God with our unfruitfulneſſe, as we doe, that little ſhall be taken away from you. When Gods Vineyard in Judah became barren, and brought forth no grapes, but wild ones: What ſayes God? I will command the clouds, that they rain no rain upon it, Eſ. 5.6. q. d. I will take away all the rainy clouds: Ye ſhall have clouds ſtill, but they ſhall be clouds without raine, ſtarres without light and heat, Miniſters that ſhall doe you no good; this is a fearfull caſe, and yet God will bring it upon us, for a certain, if we doe not take heed.

There be ſix ſignes of all the ſtarres vaniſhing away, that God will take away thoſe few ſtarres, thoſe few godly Miniſters away that are left.

Firſt, When people will not walke in the light, while they have the light. As our Saviour Chriſt ſayes: Yet a little while is the light with you, walke while ye have the light, leſt darkneſſe come upon you, Joh. 12.35. q. d. Ye have the light, a little while the Lord lets you have it, he lets it ſtay with you a little while longer, but if ye will not walke in the light, the light ſhall be gone, and ye ſhall be in darkneſſe, this is an evident ſigne that the light will ſurely away from us: What a deale of light is yet held before our faces, and ſcarce any have a heart to walke in it! When ſervants are idle, and will not mend their cloathes, in the day time at ſpare hours; why ſhould the Maſter allow them any candle? So, we have a day among us, and people will not beſtirre themſelves, they goe all rent and tattered in their garments, they care not for doing of their buſineſſe, therefore the Lord will allow them no candle, he will put out all the lights.

Secondly, When people grow deader and deader, when they forſake their firſt love, they were once more earneſt for heaven, more tender in conſcience, more eager for good things, more lively in Prayer, more zealous in holy duties, but now they abate and ſlacken, they are told of it, and yet they doe not amend, when it is once come to this paſſe, the Lord will remove the faithfull Miniſtery of his Word. To what end ſhould he let it ſtay any longer? as Chriſt ſayes to Epheſus, Remember from whence thou art faln, and repent, and doe the firſt works, or elſe I will come unto thee quickly, and will remove thy candleſtick out of its place, except thou repent, Re. 2.5. This is another ſigne of the Miniſteries departing away from us, candle and candle-ſtick will away, for we will not amend. We have been told of our formality, we have heard whole Sermons againſt our luke-warmneſſe, and againſt our declinings, and yet nothing will fetch us up again. We will not think ſoundly from whence we are faln, we will not be perſwaded to doe our firſt works, our hearts are grown ſenſeleſſe, and nothing can pluck them up, therefore how can we hope but our candle-ſtick will be removed, and quickly too?

Thirdly, When people wax wearie of Gods Ordinances, they are even cloyed with them, like the Iſraelites there in Amos, When will the new Moon be gone, that we may ſell corn? When will the Sabbath be over, that we may ſet forth wheat? Amos 8 5. q d. Here is ſuch adoe with Lectures, and Sermons, we can hardly have time for our Markets; ſuch adoe with the Sabbath, it is ſo tedious, ſo irkſome, we are not able to hold out; Prayers in the Family come ſo faſt about, and duties come ſo thick, we have hardly any ſpace for our other buſineſſes; Miniſters require ſo much of us, Sermons are ſo ſtrict, Sacrifices are ſo often, we can have no breathing: Thus people are cloyed, they are full fed, they care not much if they had leſſe, nay, ſome will not ſtick to ſay it, and others that in their hypocriſie will not ſay it, yet they have no ſtomack, no appetite, there is ſo much Word, that they are not able to digeſt it, neither have they any mind to concoct it; therefore mark there what followes: Behold! The dayes come, ſaith the Lord, that I will ſend a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirſt for water, but of hearing the words of the Lord, ver. 11. that is, you are more afraid of a famine of bread, ye would be more troubled if you had no bread to eate, nor liquor to drink, you care not ſo it be not that famine. But think what you will, I will ſend you a worſe famine than that, a famine of hearing of Gods Word. Ye ſhall have Preaching little enough. Little enough food for your ſoules; ſeeing ye will be filthy, ye ſhall be filthy; ſeeing ye will be heartleſſe towards heavenly things, ye ſhall be heartleſſe, ye ſhall be hardned, ye ſhall be let alone, and the blind ſhall lead the blind, and both ſhall fall into the ditch; the wicked ſhall lead the wicked, wicked Miniſters the wicked people, and both ſhall periſh together: And then though ye would never ſo faine have a Sermon that may come to the Conſcience, ye ſhall be long enough before ye ſhall heare it: Ye ſhall ſtarve for want of ſpirituall knowledge: Starved to death for want of life: Seared in your ſinnes; ye ſhall have no Sermons to diſpoſſeſſe you of Satan; no teaching to purge your hearts, to humble your ſoules before God, or to Miniſter the Spirit unto you; ye are weary of the ſound Miniſtery of the Word, therefore ye ſhall not be troubled with it. This then is another ſigne that God will take away thoſe few Stars that are yet remaining. And then, woe be to you.

Fourthly, When there are hardly any ſonnes of peace, that the Miniſters peace may light upon, then the Lord bids them pack away: Like the Market-folkes, when they ſee their Commodities lie upon their hands, they take up their Commodities, and goe home; O, ſay they, people will give nothing, they will not give our price, we and our children will have them for our own ſelves, rather than we will part with them for nothing; ſo they goe away: So, Gods Miniſters goe away, when the Market is dead, no cuſtomer will come to their ſtalls. So Paul and Barnabas went away from the Jewes, Ye put off the word from you, and therefore, lo, we turn unto the Gentiles, Acts 13. 46. q. d. Ye will have none of it, we have offered it to you, and we were bid to doe ſo, but ye put it off from you, therefore fare ye well: Dye in your ſinnes. So people now put off the Word of God, our Doctrine ſinks no where almoſt; one puts it off from him, another puts it off from him: Like as the Cities of the Philiſtims did with the Ark, The men of Ekron, they cryed out, and doe you bring it to us, And ſo the men of Aſhdod ſaid, and it ſhall not abide with us, 1 Sam. 5.7. Every one put it off, they would have none of it.

Fifthly, When people oppoſe; they are ſo farre from repenting at the preaching of the Word, that they fall to oppoſe, and to miſ-uſe the bringers of it, as the Jewes did Saint Paul. The Text ſayes, He ſhook his raiment at them, and told them, Your bloud be upon your own heads, and away he went, Acts 18.6. When people lay their heads together how they may have out the Miniſter, many times God gives them leave for to doe it, that they may bring evill on their own heads, the Lord lets them have their curſed wills, to their own utter deſtruction and condemnation.

Sixthly, When God hath ſent all his Miniſters that ever he means to ſend: He ſent one Miniſter, and they would not heare him, he ſent another after him, and they would not hearken to him neither, a man would wonder, ſurely God will ſend no more; well, may be God in his great goodneſſe ſends another good man, and he does what he can, but the people will doe wickedly ſtill. Yea, but when God hath ſent all that he meanes to ſend, now he will ſend no more; as God did with Judah; I have ſent unto you all my ſervants the Prophets, riſing up early and ſending them, ſaying, Turne from your evill wayes; but ye have not inclined your eare unto me, Jeremiah 35.15. When God had ſent all, then he would ſend no more.

You will ſay, How can this be a ſigne? When God hath ſent all that he meanes to ſend: who can tell that?

I Anſwer, Beloved, God may ſhew it plainly, that he hath ſent even all that he meanes to ſend; when he blocks up the way, that more cannot be ſuffered to come to us, than thoſe that are come, when ſuch courſes are laid, that ne're a faithfull one more is permitted to enter. When Gods faithfull ones are forbidden to preach, as Paul ſayes, They forbid us to preach. When people will have Paſhur's and not Jeremiah's. When there be Lawes made, Look ye ſpeake no more in his name. When they ſay to the Seers, ſee not, and to the Prophets propheſie not. When the good Levites are made to goe away, and to leave their owne places, as it was in Jereboams time, 2 Chron. 11.14. Again, When the ſhadowes wax long, it is a ſigne that the Sun is going down.

The Reaſon why God will take away all his Starres when matters are come to this paſſe, is, Firſt, becauſe it is but loſt labour, and Coſt caſt away, to adminiſter Phyſick to ſuch patients whoſe diſeaſes are deſperate. My Brethren, God is a wiſe Phyſician, and he knowes whom he hath to deale with: When he ſees men rend in pieces his Preſcripts, and pull off his plaſters, and vomit up his wholſome potions, that he gives them for their good; he gives them up for gone, he will be their Phyſician no longer. This was the reaſon why God did leave Judah, Thy diſeaſe is incurable, Jer. 30.12.

Secondly, becauſe it is not onely loſt labour, but it is worſe than loſt, to let ſuch people have the Miniſterie of the word: It makes them much worſe. Why ſhould ye be ſmitten any more? Ye will revolt more and more, Eſa. 1.5. why ſhould ye be preacht to any more? Ye will, &c.

Thirdly, becauſe if men will needs goe on in their ſins, God would rather they ſhould doe ſo without his Word, than with it: As a husbandman, if the ground be ſtarke barren, he would rather never plough it, and ſow it with ſeed, than to have it barren after the ſeed ſown; when people will needs be wicked, God would rather have them doe all their wickedneſſe out of his ſight, than in it, I will caſt you out of my ſight, Jer. 7.15. God cannot abide to look upon a people, that will have their owne wayes; they anger him more, when they commit all their wickedneſſe under his Word. God looks towards a people when he ſends them his holy Word, he looks upon them to doe them good, he looks towards them in pity, and calls them to repentance, that they may finde favour with him, and therefore, if they doe evill now, this provokes him more a thouſand times. A drunkard where the word is truly preached, an Adulterer there, a muck-worm there, a proud perſon there, a prophane wretch there; I ſay, this angers him more a thouſand thouſand times. The times of ignorance God winked at, Acts 17.30. If your ſinnes were committed in blind pariſhes, God would winke at you, in a manner, that is, your damnation ſhould be leſſe. God would excuſe you himſelfe in ſome meaſure. Alas! poore Creatures, they know not what they doe; let them have leſſe hell, they doe not deſerve ſo many plagues; he winks at the wicked that live without his Word: But you that live under the Word, he cannot winke at you. He will puniſh you to the full O. Beloved, above all things the Lord cannot abide that people ſhould be wretched and vaine under his Word: But I will paſſe over this point. Thus ye ſee they are ſeven Starres, every Congregation had its Starre, every Church had its Miniſter.

Doctr. Now in the next place, we ſee here that Chriſt hath theſe ſeven Starres. Theſe things ſaith he that hath the ſeven Spirits of God, and the ſeven Starres. Chriſt hath the ſeven Starres. Chriſt is ſaid to have the ſeven Starres, in five reſpects.

Firſt, in reſpect that they have their Miſſion from him, Secondly, in reſpect they have their Commiſſion from him, Thirdly, in reſpect they have their Abilities from him, Fourthly, in reſpect they have their Succeſſe from him, Fiftly, in reſpect they have their Protection from him; of theſe in their order.

Firſt, they have their Miſſion from him. It is Chriſt that ſends forth all true Miniſters: As my Father hath ſent me, ſo ſend I you, Joh. 20.21. It is Chriſt that ſends Miniſters to the Church, as he told Jeruſalem: Behold I ſend unto you Prophets, and Wiſemen, and Scribes, Mat. 23.34. He called the twelve, and began to ſend them forth by two and two, &c. Mar. 6.7. So he called the ſeventy and ſent them alſo, Luke 10.1. ſo it is Chriſt that ſends Miniſters to this day. True, the Church does ordaine them; I, but if they be not ſent by him too, they are intruders. Now when he ſends them, they are his Miniſters, though it be the Church that puts them into Orders. As it is with a true Conſtable, though the Pariſh chuſe him, yet he is the Kings Officer and does things in the Kings name; ſo it is with every true Miniſter, Chriſt hath the ſending of him, he is the Miniſter of Chriſt, as the Apoſtle ſayes; Let a man ſo account of us as the Miniſters of Chriſt, 1 Cor. 4.1. And therefore look what we doe in our Office, we doe it in his name. As he ſaid, In the name of Jeſus Chriſt, riſe up and walke: So we ſay unto Gods Elect; In the name of Jeſus Chriſt, riſe up and walke. In the name of Jeſus Chriſt, repent of all your wicked wayes, and Believe; and though the world will not ſtirre at our ſpeech, yet they that are elected of God doe ſtir: they are none but the Reprobate, that lye ſtill in their ſinnes; ſometime or other we get all the Elect for to hear us.

The Uſe of this is; firſt, for comfort to us that are true Miniſters; Chriſt hath the ſending of us, therefore certainly he will be with us in all his errands, the world may be againſt us, we may meet with many wolves: Behold! I ſend you as ſheep among wolves; people may threaten and ſpeak their words againſt us, a foot and a halfe long; what need we care for all thoſe great Speeches, as long as Chriſt ſends us? Chriſt will be with us for the good of his Elect, in all the courſe of our Miniſtery, be it ſhort or be it long: We ſhall be uſefull to them, what ever the world do: if there be any that belong to God, we ſhall finde them out, no matter for others. Chriſt will be with us in the Pulpit, in the priſon, in the dog-hole, if ye would put us into it, as Chriſt told his Miniſters, Goe and teach all Nations, Baptizing them in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the holy Ghoſt, and lo I am with you to the end of the world Matt. 28. 19, 20. This is our comfort that Chriſt will be with us, & this is the Elects comfort, they ſhall be ſure to finde him with us in our Miniſtery.

Secondly, If Chriſt hath the ſending of us, we muſt bee ſure we do his meſſage, that we perform the work he ſends us to do, every meſſenger ſhould doe thus, nay, Chriſt himſelf did thus, I ſeek not mine owne will, but the will of the Father which hath ſent me, Joh. 5. 30. If a Merchant ſhould ſend a ſervant beyond Sea, to be a Factor for him, if that ſervant ſhould go and trade for himſelf, to get monies for himſelf, and an eſtate for himſelf, and neglect his Maſters buſineſs, he may look for a cold welcome home: So when Chriſt ſends us to be Factors for him, to ſee what Soules we can gain unto him, if we ſhould now ſeek our ſelves, how to be rich, how to be ſome-body in the world, how to get preferment, & ſo leave his buſineſs undon; we may look for a cold welcome home, when we ſhall be brought before God. Certainly, if Chriſt ſends us, we ſhould minde his worke, glorifie Chriſt, labour to reveale Chriſt, to winne Soules to Chriſt, this is our buſineſſe to do. When David ſent Huſhai to Abſalom to be a Factor for him, we ſee how well he did the meſſage, he turned the counſell of Achitophel into fooliſhneſs, he marred that wicked wretches plots, he did all for David: So we ſhould do all for Chriſt, we ſhould labour to turne the devills p'ots into fooliſhneſs, to undermine Satan, and where God hath any to ſave, we ſhall prevaile. Uſe 2.

Thirdly, If Chriſt hath the ſending of us, we muſt give him account when we have done. When Chriſt had ſent his Diſciples to preach, they returned again, and gave him account of what they had done, Luk. 10. 17. Lord even the Devils are ſubject unto us. Lord I have done thus & thus, I have declared all thy whole counſell, I have kept nothing back, I have done thy meſſage, and ſuch and ſuch have heard me, but ſuch & ſuch will not heare me. A meſſenger is bound to give an account unto him that ſends him: nay the devill himſelf returned to give an account; when the Lord ſent him to tempt Iob, he came again, & told what he had done, Iob. 2. 1. when the children of Dan ſent ſpies to ſearch the land, they came and gave up their account. The very devill may teach us this leſſon, to go and give Chriſt account of what we have done. We ſee there how they that had received the Talents, how they came and gave in their account, Lord, thy pound hath gained ten pounds. Uſe 3.

Fourthly, Another Uſe is to you; what a great mercy is this, that Chriſt ſhould ſend unto ſuch as you be? If Chriſt had ſent unto you, when ye had ſought him and turned unto him, it had been very much: but that he ſhould diſpatch meſſengers to you, when ye had not a thought of him, nay, when ye ſinned againſt him, O what a great mercy is this! It was a great kindnes, that Ioſeph would ſend unto his Father, & his brethren, & bid them leave all, and come into the Land of Egypt, & willed them that they ſhould not care for their ſtuffe, for the beſt of the land of Egypt ſhall be yours; ye know, his Brethren were unkinde unto him. Beloved, Ioſeph was never ſo unkindly dealt with by his Brethren as Chriſt hath been by us, and yet that he ſhould ſend to ſuch wretches as we are: O leave all, and come unto me, regard not your ſtuffe, regard not your profits, never trouble your ſelves with this thing & that thing, for all the beſt of heaven ſhall be yours. O what an infinite kindneſs is this! when he will ſend ſuch treaſures of his to us, by his Miniſters. As Ioſeph filled his Brethrens ſacks with corne, which they carryed to their Fathers houſe, in Canaan, Uſe 4.

to preserve them alive till they came over to Egypt: So the Lord Jesus Christ hath put his spiritual treasures into a sack, and given them his Ministers to dispense them to their brethren, to nourish them; and preserve them, untill they come home to him: he fils his Ministers sacks every week for us, they come with sack-fuls of heavenly & divine truths every week to us, with sack-fuls of food to feed our soules unto eternall life, and when that is spent, he sends us every Sabbath more; and therefore how should we esteem a true Minister that comes to us from Jesus Christ! He is one of a thousand, as Elihu speakes, If there be a messenger with him, an interpreter, one of a thousand, to declare unto man his righteousnesse, then he is gracious unto him, Job. 33.23.24. that is, then is God gracious to us indeed; such a one is one of a thousand, such a one declares to us our righteousnesse, he brings to us the righteousnesse of Jesus. This the Lord Jesus Christ sends unto us, when he sends us a true Minister, he sends us an excellent Present, even his owne righteousnesse and merits, and the glad tidings of Peace, how we may live and be saved: So that we should be thankfull unto God, that Christ sends to us his Ministers, with such precious things. If the King should send to any one of us but five pound, O how would we wonder at it, who ever were the messenger, we would bid such a one welcome, & what! does the King take notice of me? such a poore man as I? who would have thought that ever he should send such a token to me? what a condescending is this! I tell thee, if the King should do thus for thee, thou wouldest make very much of it, I, and talke of it too, where ever thou commest; nay, it would make thee glad, & a very joyfull man, & it would make thee think thy selfe highly preferred, O Beloved, and what a horrible shame is this, that the King of Kings, and the Lord of Lords should send a messenger to us every day almost, not with five pounds apiece to every one of us, but withall the riches and treasures of heaven, to enrich us for ever, to make us happie for ever, blessed that ever we were born, & yet that we should not be affected hardly! My Brethren, we that are the Ministers of God, we come with heavenly & glorious things every day from our Lord Jesus Christ: though we have them but in earthen vessels, yet they are things that the whole world is but drosse and dung in comparison of, and therefore think how ye should come to Church; think how ye should come to hear Sermons: Now I come to hear a message from Christ, now shall I heare an Embassadour from heaven, that will break open Christs Letter to me, a reproofe from Jesus Christ, a Counsell from Christ, Directions from Christ concerning the framing of my life, Lessons from Christ, how I may come to glory. O sayes the Apostle, He hath given to us the Ministery of reconciliation with God: to wit, that God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himselfe, not imputing their trespasses unto them, and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation. Now then we are Embassadours for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us, we pray you in Christs stead, be reconciled unto God, 2 Cor. 6.18.19.20. q.d. Ah yee poore creatures, God & you are out, yee are enemies of God, by your evill works, the wrath of God hangeth over you, wrath for all your sins; wrath for your Drunkennesse; wrath for your Covetousnes; wrath for your carnall courses; ye lye under the wrath of God, wrath that will damne you, and undoe you for ever. Now the Lord of Heaven and Earth hath sent you Heralds of Peace: we come Embassadours from the Lord of all glory, we have the word of Reconciliation the word that we Preach, will make God and you friends, if ye will beleeve it. O, we pray you in Christ his stead consider of it, & be reconciled unto God, heare our message, imbrace our Embassage: O do not slight what we say to you, we speak to you from Christ, do not receive it as a word only from our mouthes, but as indeed it is, the Word of the great God. This is the only Word that can make God and you friends, O how highly does it concern you to submit hereunto!

How will you this judge the world, that the Ministery of the Word, is no more regard regarded or heeded! When God ſends his Miniſters unto people, and becauſe forſooth, their fleſh and bloud does not like it; they look little after it: Whereas this containes Eternall life, and if ye reject this, ye reject eternall life. I beſeech you judge what I ſay: Do you meet with a reproofe, that croſſes your corrupt luſts? I pray you reaſon the caſe thus with your own Souls, O let me not put off this reproofe, it reproves me of my drunken doings, it reproves me of my ſecurity, it reproves me of my ſins; If I put it off, I put off the word of reconciliation: This is one of thoſe truths, that comes to reconcile me to God: I ſtand out in rebellion, & defiance againſt God, if I do not take it home. So of any other paſſage of the Word. Still when the Prophets would ſpeak unto the people, this was their voyce, The Lord ſent me: ſo ſayes Iſaiah, the Lord ſent mee, and Jeremiah too, the Lord ſent me. When they refuſed to hear what he ſaid: O ſayes he! Surely the Lord ſent me to ſpeak thus unto you. One would think it were enough to ſtrike terrour into the hearts of men, to put off any Sermon, any rebuke, any exhortation of Chriſts Miniſters, when they know the Lord ſends them. May be, the Miniſter is as poore a creature as one of you; O but remember who ſends him, as Chriſt ſayes, He that heareth you, heareth me, and he that deſpiſeth you, deſpiſeth me, and he that refuſeth me, refuſeth him that ſent me, Luk. 10. 16.

Secondly, He hath them, that is, he hath the giving of them their Commiſſion, as they have their Miſſion from him, ſo they have their Commiſſion from him too. They are not onely meſſengers but Embaſſadors. This Commiſſion hath two things; firſt, the Heads of their Embaſſage, that Chriſt ſends them to treat of. 2ly, the Authority of thir Embaſſage, that Chriſt inveſts them with.

For the firſt, the Heads of their Commiſſion; Chriſt hath the appointing of them, what they ſhall treat of, and they are five; Firſt, they ſhall preach the Word, Goe and Preach the Goſpel to every Creature, Mar. 16. 15. Secondly, to remit the ſin of all them that do embrace the Goſpel, Joh. 20 23. that is, to pronounce all the Promiſes of the Covenant of Grace, and in particular, forgiveneſſe of ſins to all true penitent and beleeving Soules. Thirdly, to adminiſter the Sacraments of the New Teſtament, to all the ſaid perſons, to whom the promiſes of Eternall life do belong, for the aſſuring of their hearts, concerning all the things of the Kingdome of God to them in particular, Mat. 28. 19 Fourthly, to build up the Church of God, for the perfecting of the Saints, and the edifying of the body of Chriſt, until they all come, &c. Epheſ. 4. 12. Fifthly, to ſhut the Kingdome Heaven upon all that have an evill heart of unbeliefe, to go on in their ſinnes and not to ſtoop to the Scepter of JeſusChriſt, Mark. 16 16. & in divers other places. Theſe are the Heads of their commiſſion, that Chriſt will have them treat of in their Embaſſage unto men.

Secondly, now for the Authority that he inveſts them with, it is not any carnall or earthly authority, to jet, and to vaunt, or to domineere, as though they were Lords over Gods heritage, 1 Pet. 5. 3. no, ſayes Chriſt, It ſhall not be ſo with you; But he that is greateſt among you, he ſhall be as the leaſt, Luk. 22. 26. and therefore I do not here ſpeak of any earthly authority: No, the Authority that Chriſts Miniſters have, and they it from him, is a ſpirituall Authority: namely, not onely to preach, and to declare forgiveneſſe of ſin, and to adminiſter the ſeales of the covenant, and to build up the Saints, & to denounce wrath and damnation to all that continue in their unregenerate eſtate through impenitence and unbelief, but to do all theſe things with a heavenly Power and Authority, to have an Office under Chriſt for the doing of them, ſo as to be the very mouth of Chriſt, & that which they do according to their commiſſion from him, to ſtand firme & good, for ever & ever. I will give power to my two Witneſſes. Rev. 11. 3. The Lord hath given me power & authority, ſayes the Apoſtle, 2 Cor. 10 8. You will ſay, this is a great power indeed, all the Kings & Potentates of the earth have not ſo great power as this, this is a power of life & death, not naturall, nor temporary, but Spirituall and eternall; this is a power not over mens Bodies, but over their Soules, not in small matters, but either for salvation or damnation. This is a great Commission, how come they by such a great one as this is? O sayes Christ, I am able to invest them with as much as this comes to; For all power is given unto me in heaven and earth, Mat. 28. 18. q. d. I am able to furnish you with all authority and power, go you in my name, and preach you in my name, in my name bid people repent and beleeve, in my name open Heaven to all that doe obey, and shut it upon all that doe disobey, and I will make it good.

Use. 1. The use of this is, First, have the Ministers of Christ such a Commission from Christ? then they are the greatest Embassadours that ever were, or can be. Embassadors of earthly Kings have a great Commission, they represent the Kings person from whom they come. Alas, what are they to these? they come, about petty things, about civill peace, or war, and yet they are Lord Embassadors, they are Lords by their places, they are much respected among men. O then what great Embassadors are the Ministers of Jesus Christ, that represent the King of Kings person, that represent the person of the Lord of Lords, that come to Treat of peace between God and Man, or of open Hostility between the Creator and the Creature? as Paul sayes, Now then we are Embassadours for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us; we pray you in Christs stead, be reconciled unto God, that is, we have a very great commission, we represent the person of our Lord Jesus Christ, we come to treat with you about eternity, according as you heare us, or heare us not, so it will be with you unto all eternity; O consider what we have to do, you are enemies unto God from the womb, as long as your sins do remain, ye are enemies still, we come to set you at one again. Ye know the condition, ye know what the heads of our commission be, if you will not hearken unto them, and submit, ye are damned for ever; if ye doe, blessed and happy are ye for evermore; was there ever such a great Embassage as this? as the Apostle sayes, To make known the mystery of the Gospel, for which I am an Embassadour in bonds, Ephes 6. 19. 20. q. d. though the wicked and blind world, look upon me as a Schismatique, and a malefactor, and cast me into the prison, and here I am in bonds, they see no such thing in me, as an Embassadour of the great God, yet the truth is, though I be in bonds, they shall know it one day to their cost, who I was, and what a commission I had, and what it is to slight it, and put it off. I am an Embassadour of the mystery of the Gospel, though I be in bonds.

2 Cor. 5. 20.

Use 2. Secondly, Have some Ministers such a commission from Christ? then let them learn how to behave themselves in their function. My Brethren, Christ hath committed unto us the custody of his own power, and authority; and therefore we are to exercise it in his name, our commission is to charge the great men of the world, Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not high-minded, 1 Tim. 6. 17. True, we are your servants for Jesus his sake, and we are to be humble, and to wait upon men of loweſt degree, and to condescend unto men of meanest capacity, and there is a time when we should for loves-sake intreat, but the truth is too, we have power to charge and command, These things command and teach, 1 Tim. 4. 11. These things speak and exhort, and rebuke with all authority. Tit. 2. 15. We must not betray the power and majesticall simplicity of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. We have Christs own power and authority in our ministery, and therefore we are to command you in his stead: as ever you will answer Christ befor his Tribunall at last day, neglect not those things, which we preach to you from him. Now we command you, Brethren, in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye withdraw your selves from every brother that walks disorderly, and not after the Tradition which he received of us True, we are inferiors to Kings, and Princes, and Magistrates, and the Nobility and Gentry of the land: There be thousands & thousands that are our Betters in all civill respects, but our Embassage is above all.

2 Thes. 3. 6.

The

The Lords own Power and Authority goes through the miniſtery, as a Trunk. As, the King may ſend a Command to the greateſt Nobleman of the Kingdome by the hand of a mean man; and he is to hearken to it: though the meſſenger in himſelfe be his underling, yet his meſſage is above him, and he looſes his head if he deſpiſe it. So, Beloved, we are over you in the Lord, that is, in regard of our meſſage. Though we be your inferiours, and ſome of you be our betters, and we are to ſtand with Cap in hand to you; yet ye looſe your ſoules, if ye will not heare us, and obey our Embaſſage. We muſt not bow to your humours, nor make the Spirit of Chriſt in the Goſpell to bend and comply with humane luſts. If Princes and Potentates were by, we muſt not ſpare their ſinnes. Nathan deales roundly with King David; Thou art the man. Jehu, with King Jehoſaphat, Wrath is upon thee from the Lord, becauſe thou haſt helpt the ungodly, We muſt let all the world know that Chriſt whom we preach, is above them all, we muſt not proſtitute Chriſts Scepter, no, not at a Monarchs foot. If we be men-pleaſers, we are not the ſervants of Chriſt. We muſt not ſuffer Chriſts word to be bound, whoſoever is our hearer, whether high or low. We defie popiſh Divinity, that exalts their Antichriſtian Clergy above the civill Magiſtrate. Belarmines Martin is but a foyſted ſtory. But yet in this ſenſe we are above all the Kingdomes of men, as God ſayes, Behold I have put my words in thy mouth, and loe I have ſet thee this day over Nations and Kingdomes, to plant and to root up, to build and to throw downe. Jer. 1.9.10. Let no man think we are ſaucy though we reprove the greateſt of you all, as long as we doe it in Chriſt, and from Chriſt, we are the mouth of the Judge of quick and dead, and he will make our words good; The meaneſt Sergeant in the Kings name dares arreſt the greateſt Duke. So, my Brethren, we come in the Kings name, in Chriſt his name, and therefore we muſt not be afraid of your faces. As Paul told Philemon, I have great authority in Chriſt to command thee, that which is convenient. Philem. 8. We have great authority to command every one of you, to do your Duties towards God and man We have Chriſt for our Authour, and therefore he will be a wall of Braſſe to us. We are his Embaſſadours, and therefore our Meſſage is with great power.

Thirdly, Have we this Commiſſion from Jeſus Chriſt? Then this may ſerve to condemne all ſuch as doe not obey our Miniſtery. Though we have all this authority, the very power of Chriſt himſelfe in our mouthes, that equally binds King and Begger; Yet who obeys our commands? who ſtirres? who repents? who ſubmits himſelf unto our commiſſion? we have called for humiliation, but no man will humble himſelf: We have cryed for reformation, and amendment of life, but no man relents; we have read our commiſſion every week unto people, we ſhew them our Letters Patents from the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and they are counted as idle tales by the moſt. O what an indignity is this unto our Lord Jeſus Chriſt! we are his Embaſſadors, and your ſtanding out againſt us, is not againſt us, but againſt him, and he will repay it. O, ſayes the Apoſtle, If any man obey not our word, By this Epiſtle, note that man, 2 Theſſ. 3.14. q d. note him with a brand of infamy, note him as a Rebell againſt Jeſus Chriſt, look upon him as a wretched miſerable creature, take heed of him, avoid him, withdraw your ſelfe from him, point at him, yonder goes a wretch, that will not obey the voice of his Teacher, excommunicate him from your company, have as little to doe with him as you can. Be ye ſhie of ſuch a man, certainly there is great wrath hangeth over him. So, Beloved, if any obey not our Word, note ſuch perſons, note ſuch Pariſhes, note all ſuch families, the wrath of heaven hangeth over them, their ſtubbornneſſe, and hardneſſe of heart is not againſt us, but againſt the Lord. Theſe are notorious Townes, notorious people, that have Chriſts Embaſſadours among them, and yet will not be obedient, and yet how is our Embaſſage made nothing of? If Kings onely, and Princes, and Lords, and great men ſhould make nothing of it, we ſhould not ſo much wonder, becauſe they are greater men, then thoſe that God ſends his Embaſſage by, and yet if they were wiſe, and knew what they did, they durſt not doe as they doe; but every baſe fellow ſtops his eare, and hardens his heart, againſt the God of Heaven and earth, and will not obey our word: Nay, men can hear their ſinnes ripped up, and the Anathema's of Chriſt ſpread before their faces, and not bluſh. They can heare that thoſe very ſinnes they live in, doe ſeparate from God, doe adjudge them to hell, and ſhew them to be under the blackneſſe of darkneſſe, and the ſentence of damnation, they can ſee it ſhown them out of the word, which they cannot deny for their hearts; though they would never ſo faine, and yet they will not repent nor returne that they may have mercy. Not one drunkard will leave, nor one Mocker leave, nor one Covetous perſon, nor one graceleſſe wretch leave, they will have their own wayes, doe the Miniſters of God what they can. We can get none to be awakened, none quickened, none ſtirred, none ſtartled to any purpoſe. Setting aſide here one and there one that truly obeys the voice of Gods ſervants, the whole Countrey lying in ignorance of God, in the privation of his Spirit, unreconciledneſſe with heaven, voidneſſe of faith, emptineſſe of grace and life, the nakedneſſe of an outward profeſſion, having no true quickning within, nay, the moſt in groſſe wickedneſſe, drunkenneſſe, company-keeping, unruline ſſe, diſorder, uncleanneſſe, laſciviouſneſſe, covetouſneſſe, mocking at the pure in heart, malicious alienation of ſpirit againſt the holy wayes of God. Nay ſince we have ſpoken to them in the name of the Lord, yet none will hearken to any effect that their ſoules may live.

Uſe 4. Fourthly, Therefore, I pray you let me adde one uſe more; doe but conſider, how the Lord taketh this at our hands, that his Miniſters are thus vilipended. They are in more danger of their liberty for reproving, then the wicked for committing of their ſinnes. Are his Miniſters his Embaſſadours? then he will never endure that his Embaſſadours ſhall be abuſed. When the King of the Ammonites had abuſed Davids Embaſſadours, that he ſent him in love, 2 Sam. 10. Ye know what it coſt, it coſt about 40. thouſand mens lives. The Romans ſlew the Illyrians, and the Tarentines, for miſ-uſing of their Embaſſadours, and as Cicero ſayes, Our Anceſtors ſayes he, for this very thing deſtroyed all Corinth. For alas how could Princes deale with one another, if Embaſſadours ſhould not goe ſafe, and be hearkened unto? Therefore Embaſſadours muſt be regarded. When Scipio Africanus took a ſhip full of Carthaginians, though he meant to rifle all they had, yet when they ſaid they were Embaſſadours, he would not meddle with them. True, they were not, they did but counterfeit, that ſo they might eſcape. But yet you may ſee how inviolable Embaſſadours were, the leaſt indignity offered to them, was puniſht as if it had been offered to the perſon of that Prince, that they did ſuſtaine. Well then, how doe we think will the Lord take it at peoples hands, that his Embaſſadours are abuſed, and diſobeyed, that people will not diligently come to them, and acknowledge their errands, and yeild obedience to him? no Nation under heaven hath had more Embaſſadours from Heaven then we have had, and though ſome have hearkened to them, yet for the moſt part, they meet with Ammonitiſh dealings, they are disfigured, and mocked, and laded with indignities, denyed to deliver their meſſage, every paltry raſcals complaint admitted againſt them, none walke in ſo much danger as they, none more ſhot at, then they; ſcarce any will heare them and ſubmit to their Embaſſage, and thoſe few that doe, are counted the onely factious people, and peſtilent fellowes in the land. O what wrath is there againſt us for theſe things! For this very cauſe, the Lord plagued all Judah; even becauſe they would not liſten to Gods Embaſſadours that he to them early and late, as the Prophets ſpeakes. Jer. 29.17,18,19. Thus ſaith the Lord of Hoſts; Behold I will ſend upon them the ſword, the famine and the Peſtilence, and will make them like vile Figs, that cannot be eaten they are ſo evill, and I will perſecute them With the ſword, With the famine, and with the Peſtilence, and I will deliver them to be removed to all the Kingdomes of the earth, to be a curſe, and aſtoniſhment and an hiſſing and a reproach, among all Nations whither I have driven them. Mark now; What is the reaſon, why God would doe thus? Becauſe they have not hearkened to my Word, ſaith the Lord, which I ſent unto them by my ſervants the Prophets, riſing up early and ſending them. but ye would not heare, ſaith the Lord. This was the reaſon, why God would plague them ſo grievouſly, becauſe they would not liſten to his Embaſſadors, that he ſent them for their good. The like we read of the ten Tribes: the Lord powred his vengeance on them too, for this very reaſon, becauſe they would not heare his Embaſſadours, therefore the Lord caſt them out of his ſight. and flung them away from being his people, and he would never be their God more; the place is, 2 Kings 17.13,14,15. The Lord teſtified againſt Iſrael and Judah, by all the Prophets and Seers, ſaying, Turne ye from your evill wayes and keep my Commandments and my Statutes, according to all the Law which I commanded your fathers, notwithſtanding they would not heare but hardned their necks, like to the neck of their Fathers, and did not believe in the Lord their God, and they rejected his Statutes and his Covenant, that he made with their Fathers. Mark, this was the cauſe why the Lord was ſo angry with them, and removed them out of his ſight; becauſe they would not doe as his Embaſſadours did command them in his name. Now as God hath let out his fury upon them for not attending to his Embaſſadours, ſo he hath done, and daily doth and will yet more doe upon us. For though for temporall Judgements God be patient and forbearing, beyond all admiration, we feele yet no Sword, no Famine, no Peſtilence, we may be aſtoniſht to ſee how long-ſuffering he is. O if we had the grace to conſider of it; nevertheleſſe the Lord is effuſing out upon us the very dreggs of his Cup, he fats us up for his eternall ire, he hath done converting of our hearers, he hath done bleſſing of our Sermons, he hath made us Loammies, and Lorruhumahs, and turned us into a generation of his wrath You who's eyes God hath opened, whoſe hearts God hath inclined unto him, whoſe Conſciences God hath purged and Sanctified and made you Saints; Bleſſe him and praiſe his holy name, and make more of his infinite grace and goodneſſe. For it is to be feared God will now adde no more to your number, he delivers people now to a reprobate ſenſe, he reſolves to be revenged on our land in fire and brimſtone, for the contempt of his glorious Goſpell, that hath been preached ſo long a time. He lets men fill up the meaſure of their ſinnes, that thoſe that are filthy may be filthy ſtill, thoſe that are drunkards may be drunkards ſtill, thoſe that are led with their luſts, ſhall be ſo ſtill, to the intent that he may bring upon the world all the fierceneſſe of his ſpirituall and everlaſting wrath, and that he may revenge the quarrell of his Covenant, and the labours of ſo many Embaſſadours, whom he hath ſent unto you, and ye would not heare. O that this might move ſome of your ſoules, that ſo ye might prevent this dreadfull judgement, and be plucked out like Brands out of the Burning.

Fifthly, Another Uſe is, Are Gods Miniſters, his Embaſſadours? then they muſt Preach no mercy at all unto ſuch as wilfully ſtand out againſt Jeſus Chriſt. When Antony was a Rebell, O ſayes Tully, it is not fit to ſend him Embaſſadours of Peace, to treat with him of Peace; as Theſeus ſaid once; Go ſays he, &tell Creon, Theſeus offers the a gracious offer; yet I am pleaſed to be friends, if thou wilt ſubmit. This is my firſt meſſage: But if this offer prevaile not, look for me to be up in Armes. So, Beloved, Gods offers of peace have been made already, again, and again, and they have been rejected. Now his Embaſſadours muſt cry, Armes, Blood and fire, and pillars of ſmoak. At the firſt God dealt with us, as Tullus with his Enemies, Quæ verbis componere potuit, armis non decrevit: as long as he could reconcile them with his word, they ſhould not have his blowes: So the Lord hath dealt with us, at the firſt he perſwaded us with the promiſes of his Word, now ſeeing no more can be gotten in that way, he will have his Miniſter lay the axe at the roots, to hew down, and to deſtroy, and to ſlay people with the ſword of his lips. Doe not wonder, when we preach hell and damnation to all rebellious ſoules; You will ſay, here is nothing but judgement, Preachers ſend us all to the deuill, they preach as if they would drive us to deſpaire: they ſhould put in, Except we repent.

I Anſwer, It is enough now to underſtand it; when the Goſpell hath been a long time in a place, Gods Embaſſadours muſt hold out the black-flagge: when Tamberlane had hung out his White flagge, and that would not doe, and his Red flagge, and that would not doe neither; then he hung out his Black flagge; Now look for no mercy. So, Chriſts Embaſſadours ſhould doe. When Paul knew that the Goſpell was contemned in Corinth, the white and red flagge had ceaſed to doe good; You ſee how he hung out his black one. Know ye not that the unrighteous ſhall not inherit the Kingdome of God? Be not deceived, No Idolaters, nor adulterers, nor effeminate, nor railers, nor covetous, ſhall ever inherit the Kingdome of God, 1 Cor. 6.9,10. He does not put in now, Except ye repent no, no, now look for no mercy. So the Apoſtle John; The fearfull, and unbelievers, and whoremongers, and lyars ſhall be caſt into the lake that burnes with fire and brimſtone, Rev. 21.8. he does not put in, Except ye repent: If we ſhould be ever putting in, Except ye repent, and concluding with mercy upon condition of repentance, what would hard-hearted people ſay? O we had a terrible Sermon to day, but the Preacher gave us comfort in the cloſure, he had a ſweet bit at the laſt, and thus they heale all again. Nay, when people grow once to be ſtubborn, then Prophets have been ſo farre from putting in Except ye repent, or any other term of mercy, that they uſed to meet with the peoples preſumption of Repentance. So Jeremiah, and Ezekiel. and others, they threaten deſtruction to the wicked, and they adde this above all, Though they cry for mercy, nay, though they faſt, and could get Noah, and Samuel, and Job, and Daniel to pray for them, yet they ſhall have no mercy: q. d. Ye think to avoid theſe judgements, by repenting another day; no, no, when ye cry for mercy, ye ſhall not have it. When a Nation, or a Pariſh, or any people grow perverſe, and have rejected the ſweet tenders of mercy, Gods Embaſſadours are to look upon ſuch wretches as rebels; no indenting with them more, no termes of peace more, as the Law ſayes, With Pirates, and Traytors, and Rebels, the Law of Armes is not to be obſerved, as Baldus ſpeaks, they have broken the league, as Florus ſpeaks: when Spartacus the Rebell, deſired an Embaſſage of Peace, he would faine have Craſſus contract a league with him, Craſſus ſcorned the motion; when Talfarinas that egregious Robber and Traytor, ſent an Embaſſadour with treaty of Peace to Tiberius the Emperour, Tiberius took it with indignation, that he ſhould be ſo ſawcy with him. No Embaſſage of peace is to be made with rebellious wretches; we need not put in, Except ye repent, when we are to deale with ſuch; No, no, when ye grow once to deſpiſe reproof, ſee you to that. True, if ye doe repent, who knowes what God will doe? Though Craſſus would not parlee with Spartacus about peace, yet when he did repent indeed, he received him to mercy. So will God doe with you. But in the mean time, know that the God of Heaven is at defiance with you, all the curſes in his Book, are directed againſt the face of you. Ye have played the deaf Adder, againſt the gracious tenders of mercy from day to day, and therefore ſee your damned condition. The Embaſſadours of Chriſt have not one tittle of mercy for you; if we could ſee you melt, and cry out, and down on your knees, and your hearts turne, and your ſpirits ſink down before God, then we might ſay ſomething unto you; Therefore, Brethren, if the Miniſters of the Goſpel do daily Preach more and more judgment, do not think much, they ought ſo to do.

Sixtly, and laſtly, one Uſe to you that feare God, & beleeve his Embaſſadors and are be-ſought by them. Let me ſay to you, as the Prophet Iſaiah ſaid, Who is among you that feareth the Lord, that obeyeth the voyce of his ſervants, that walketh in darkneſſe, & no light, let him truſt in the name of the Lord, & ſtay upon his God, Iſa. 50. 10. that is, Be of good comfort, though all the world, and all the Devils in hell be againſt you, yet be of good cheare; what though ye meet with never ſo many temptations, and feares, ſuch a fogge of them, that ye can ſee no light? yet it ſhall aſſuredly go well with you. Though others have not come in at the preaching of the Word, ye have. Howbeit others will not reform, will not ſee the Lords hand lifted up, they will not acknowledge their ſins and ſinfull doings, and damned caſe, yet ye have. Ye have ſeen it, and felt it & runne to the throne of Grace, and have ſought the Lord, according as Gods Embaſſadors have directed you out of his Word, ye have feared God, & obeyed the voyce of his ſervants, though others make a mock of ſuch as will be ruled by Preachers; Tuſh, they ſhall not curbe me, ſayes one, and they ſhall not controll me, ſayes another. What, does he think to lead me in a ſtring? Yet ye do feare God, and ye dare not ſtand out againſt the Preaching of his ſervants, ye deſire that ye may ever practiſe their Word, and lead your lives according to it, what ever others do. Bee of good cheer, ſayes the Prophet, The Lord is your GOD, and do ye ſtay your ſelves on him. The Doctrine that God hath ſent unto you by the Miniſtery of his ſervants, is the only Doctrine of Salvation, and therein ye ſhall finde Eternall life.

Theſe things, ſaith hee, that hath the ſeven Spirits of God, and the ſeven Starres.

THeſe words are the Subſcription of the Letter unto the Ange lof Sardis, containing a deſcription of Chriſt, from whom the Letter is ſent. Now Chriſt is here deſcribed according to the matter in hand, from two royaltyes of his; firſt That he hath the ſeven Spirits of God, that is, he hath the giving of the Holy Ghoſt, and all his gifts and graces, to whomſoever he pleaſeth; Secondly, that He hath the ſeven Starres, that is, he hath the diſpoſing of the Miniſters of the Church. And this, I told you, is to be meant divers wayes. Chriſt is ſaid to have the Miniſters of the Church five wayes; Firſt, he hath the ſending of them, they have their Miſſion from him. Secondly, he hath the delegating of them, they have their Commiſſion from him. Thirdly, he hath the gifting of them, they have their Abilities from him. Fourthly, he hath the proſpering of them, they have the Succeſs of their labours from him. Fifthly, he hath the keeping of them, they are put into a place, continued, or removed, they have their liberty from him, and when they are put downe or ſilenced, it is he that does do it.

The two firſt I have handled already; firſt, that he hath the ſending of them; Secondly, that he hath the delegating of them. I come now to the third, He hath the gifting of them; Look what good gifts and abilities they have, they have them all from him. As Paul ſayes, He hath made us able Miniſters of the New Teſtament, not of the Letter, but of the Spirit, 2. Cor. 3. 6. and this was one of the ends of his Aſcenſion, as the Apoſtle ſayes, He aſcended up on high, and led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men, Epheſ. 4. 8. that is, this was one Doctr.

end of his ascending up to Heaven, that he might send down gifts unto his Church. Now what gifts does he meane? True, he sends gifts to all his true Members, but he meanes the gifting of his Ministers, as it followes: And he gave some Apostles, and some Prophets, and some Evangelists, and some Pastors, and Teachers, for the perfecting of the Saints, for the worke of the Ministery; and so forth verse. 11, 12.

And the truth is, it is not without cause; for of all men, we that are the Ministers of Jesus Christ, have need of singular and rare gifts and abilities.

First, to open the Scriptures: The Scriptures are a great deep, and they have under the Letter, much admirable spirituall matter encouched, and many things are hard in them as Peter sayes, and a Minister is to open them, and to give out the sense, as it is said of the Priests, They read the Law distinctly, and gave out the sense, and made the people to understand the Reading, Nehem. 8.8. Now if a Minister have not gifts from Jesus Christ, what madde work will he make? the Scripture will be a clasped Book unto him, and a Fountain sealed up. Like the Philistines, that in three dayes could not expound Sampsons Riddle. It is said of Christ, that he opened the Scriptures, Luke 24.32. The Scriptures are shut, and contain Mysteries folded and lapped up, now the Minister had need of abilities to open them.

Secondly, to Teach; as a Minister is to open the Scriptures, which requireth great gifts: so, he is to teach the people out of them, to draw Doctrines out of the same, & this requireth great gifts too, to informe the judgment, to let out the light of the Word, to scatter the beames of the Sun of righteousnesse abroad, to dispell the darknesse of mens minds, to shine round about them in spirituall knowledge. This is a work of much ability, as the Apostle speaks to Timothy, The things which thou hast heard of me, the same commit thou to faithfull men, who shall be able to teach others, 2 Tim. 2.2. & therefore it is called Prophecying; Despise not Prophecying, that is, despise not Teaching; a man had need of a speciall gift, to be able to Prophecy, so, if a man would be a Teacher; When Nicodemus would expresse what an able Teacher Christ was, sayes he Thou art a teacher come from God A man had need to be one that hath been with God, that would teach aright. There is a gift of fitnes & aptnes, without which a man cannot do it. The servant of the Lord must be apt to teach, 2. Tim. 2.24. The Apostle tells us, there be heapes of naughty Teachers in the world, a good teacher is a rare man, it cannot be without all wisdome, as he sayes, Teaching every man in all wisdom, Col. 1. 28. We are to teach people the learning of the holy, how to know God, how to feare him & love him. We are to teach people, how to pray, how to walk in all holines & righteousnes of living: the great things of Gods Law, the deep things of the Spirit, the mysteries of Eternall life, to open the wiles of Satan, the mistakes of the hearts of men, the many by-wayes of the soule; ye know sin is covered over with pleasures, & profits, & carnall reasons, and evasions, and we are to lay it out naked, as indeed it is. Gracious and godly courses seem grievous, & irksome, and uncouth, and vile, and needlesse, and we are to discover the inward pleasure, and commodity, and necessity and glory of them, and therefore we have need of abilities.

Thirdly, to Convince; ye know how the heart does use to put off the Word, and if it meet with a doctrine, or a reproof, or a precept, that it does not like, it will deny it, it will cavill and carp; O, it is false, as Johanan and others said to Jeremiah, It is false, you do not say true, we will never beleeve it. When we paint out a drunkards damned estate, he is ready to gainsay it, or an adulterers, he is ready to except, people contradict such passages of the Word, as are against their lusts, and they give us very little better then the lye, many times, therefore a Minister should be able to convince, that he may be able by sound doctrine, both to exhort, & to convince the gain-sayers, Tit. 1. 9. When people are subject to condemn us for harshnesse, and hard sayings, and that we do not preach placen ia enough, we muſt be able to uſe ſound ſpeech that cannot be condemned, Tit 2.8. When a Miniſter preaches weakly, Sermons are like wide nets, or rotten threads, that the Birds may get through or break, this is not able preaching, as Zwinglius ſaid of Caroloſtadius, when he heard him diſputing weakly againſt conſubſtantiation, O, ſayes he, I am ſorry that ſo good a cauſe ſhould have ſuch a weak defendant. It is ſaid of Appollos, that he mightily convinced the Jewes. Stephen, the Univerſity-men there that came huddling about him, they were not able to withſtand the Spirit, and the wiſdome by which he ſpake, Act 6.10. It is the promiſe of our Saviour, I will give you a mouth & wiſdome, which all your adverſaries ſhall not be able to gainſay, or reſiſt, Luk, 21.15.

Fourthly, to move the affections; Miniſters have need of abilities to move the affections of their hearers; not only to informe their judgments, but alſo to work upon their affections, not only to inlighten their underſtanding, but alſo to ſtirre up their hearts, as Peter ſayes, I think it meet as long as I am in this tabernacle, to ſtirre you up, 2 Pet. 1.13. A Miniſter is to ſtirre up his people, to ſtir their hearts & affections: he may preach a wholſome Sermon, & the hearers be like Mile-poſts, and not ſtirred a jot: Paul laboured to ſtirre affections too: Knowing therefore the terrour of the Lord, we perſwade men, 2 Cor. 5.11. that is, we labour to work upon your affections; and therefore Chriſt ſent a Seraphim with a live coale unto the Prophet Iſaiah, to touch his lips, Eſa. 6.6. he had need of live coales in his lips, to fire the affections of his auditory; So he ſent the Holy Ghoſt down upon his Apoſtles in fiery tongues, without this the information of the judgment is little worth. Religion conſiſts more in the will and the affections of men, than in any other faculty of the ſoule. I confeſſe the Miniſter muſt ſhine too; but he muſt heare to John the Baptiſt was a burning and a ſhining light.

Fifthly, To ſpeak Pro re natâ; a Miniſter hath neeed of extemporary abilities, ſometimes he ſhall be called before Councills, he preaches ſuch doctrine as angers the world, and therefore he is in danger to be had before Councills, and therefore he had need to have an extemporary faculty, that he may anſwer as he ſees cauſe, as Chriſt ſayes, When they deliver you up, take no thought, how or what ye ſhall ſpeak, for it ſhall be given you in that ſame houre, what ye ſhall ſpeak, Matth. 10. 19. Sometimes to preach upon ſhort warning, as Auguſtine did, when he relyed upon his Brother Severus, to Preach for him, he not comming, he was faine to go up extempore himſelf, and ſo he preacht upon 95 Pſalme; So, when there was a ſuddaine judgment of God that fell out there in Hippo, though Auguſtine had Preacht twice that very day before, yet he went up again, and Preached the third time: O, ſayes he, do not wonder, my deare Brethren, Si hodie ter Sermonem, &c. do not wonder that I preach thrice this ſame time, it is not without cauſe, &c. Again, a Miniſter may be put upon it as Philip was by the Eunuch, concerning the meaning of a place of Scripture to ſpeak of it at firſt ſight, & a Miniſter muſt not only have this knowledge in his note-book, but in his lips; that is, to be in a readineſſe upon very occaſion. His lips muſt preſerve knowledge, Mal, 2 7. Sometimes he may come among his people, he may light upon their company by chance, now if he have not good abilities, he cannot do the part of a Miniſter. As Paul ſayes, I long to ſee you, to impart unto you ſome ſpirituall gift, Rom. 1.11. A Miniſter when he ſees his people, he ſhould be a well-ſtored man, to impart ſome ſpirituall thing or other to them, a word of Inſtruction, a word of Exhortation, a word of Admonition, when he does but ſee them, he ſhould be able to drop ſomething among them.

Sixtly, To obſerve ſeaſons, to be able to make choyce of ſpeciall Texts for ſpeciall occaſions For howſoever all Scriptures are full of Divine & Heavenly truths, yet ſome Scriptures fit ſome perſons & ſome occaſions better than other ſome. Aarons bells muſt be wiſely rung, ſometimes in one tune, ſometimes in another, as occaſion ſerves. A Miniſter is to change his note, as the circuend of his ascending up to Heaven, that he might send down gifts unto his Church. Now what gifts does he meane? True, he sends gifts to all his true Members, but he meanes the gifting of his Ministers, as it followes: And he gave some Apostles, and some Prophets, and some Evangelists, and some Pastors, and Teachers, for the perfecting of the Saints, for the worke of the Ministery; and so forth verse. 11, 12.

And the truth is, it is not without cause; for of all men, we that are the Ministers of Jesus Christ, have need of singular and rare gifts and abilities.

First, to open the Scriptures: The Scriptures are a great deep, and they have under the Letter, much admirable spirituall matter encouched, and many things are hard in them as Peter sayes, and a Minister is to open them, and to give out the sense, as it is said of the Priests, They read the Law distinctly, and gave out the sense, and made the people to understand the Reading, Nehem. 8.8. Now if a Minister have not gifts from Jesus Christ, what madde work will he make? the Scripture will be a clasped Book unto him, and a Fountain sealed up. Like the Philistines, that in three dayes could not expound Sampsons Riddle. It is said of Christ, that he opened the Scriptures, Luke 24.32. The Scriptures are shut, and contain Mysteries folded and lapped up, now the Minister had need of abilities to open them.

Secondly, to Teach; as a Minister is to open the Scriptures, which requireth great gifts: so, he is to teach the people out of them, to draw Doctrines out of the same, & this requireth great gifts too, to informe the judgment, to let out the light of the Word, to scatter the beames of the Sun of righteousnesse abroad, to dispell the darknesse of mens minds, to shine round about them in spirituall knowledge. This is a work of much ability, as the Apostle speaks to Timothy, The things which thou hast heard of me, the same commit thou to faithfull men, who shall be able to teach others, 2 Tim. 2.2. & therefore it is called Prophecying; Despise not Prophecying, that is, despise not Teaching; a man had need of a speciall gift, to be able to Prophecy, so, if a man would be a Teacher; When Nicodemus would expresse what an able Teacher Christ was, sayes he Thou art a teacher come from God A man had need to be one that hath been with God, that would teach aright. There is a gift of fitnes & aptnes, without which a man cannot do it. The servant of the Lord must be apt to teach, 2. Tim. 2.24. The Apostle tells us, there be heapes of naughty Teachers in the world, a good teacher is a rare man, it cannot be without all wisdome, as he sayes, Teaching every man in all wisdom, Col. 1. 28. We are to teach people the learning of the holy, how to know God, how to feare him & love him. We are to teach people, how to pray, how to walk in all holines & righteousnes of living: the great things of Gods Law, the deep things of the Spirit, the mysteries of Eternall life, to open the wiles of Satan, the mistakes of the hearts of men, the many by-wayes of the soule; ye know sin is covered over with pleasures, & profits, & carnall reasons, and evasions, and we are to lay it out naked, as indeed it is. Gracious and godly courses seem grievous, & irksome, and uncouth, and vile, and needlesse, and we are to discover the inward pleasure, and commodity, and necessity and glory of them, and therefore we have need of abilities.

Thirdly, to Convince; ye know how the heart does use to put off the Word, and if it meet with a doctrine, or a reproof, or a precept, that it does not like, it will deny it, it will cavill and carp; O, it is false, as Johanan and others said to Jeremiah, It is false, you do not say true, we will never beleeve it. When we paint out a drunkards damned estate, he is ready to gainsay it, or an adulterers, he is ready to except, people contradict such passages of the Word, as are against their lusts, and they give us very little better then the lye, many times, therefore a Minister should be able to convince, that he may be able by sound doctrine, both to exhort, & to convince the gain-sayers, Tit. 1. 9. When people are subject to condemn us for harshnesse, and hard sayings, and that we do not preach placen ia enough, we muſt be able to uſe ſound ſpeech that cannot be condemned, Tit 2.8. When a Miniſter preaches weakly, Sermons are like wide nets, or rotten threads, that the Birds may get through or break, this is not able preaching, as Zwinglius ſaid of Caroloſtadius, when he heard him diſputing weakly againſt conſubſtantiation, O, ſayes he, I am ſorry that ſo good a cauſe ſhould have ſuch a weak defendant. It is ſaid of Appollos, that he mightily convinced the Jewes. Stephen, the Univerſity-men there that came huddling about him, they were not able to withſtand the Spirit, and the wiſdome by which he ſpake, Act 6.10. It is the promiſe of our Saviour, I will give you a mouth & wiſdome, which all your adverſaries ſhall not be able to gainſay, or reſiſt, Luk, 21.15.

Fourthly, to move the affections; Miniſters have need of abilities to move the affections of their hearers; not only to informe their judgments, but alſo to work upon their affections, not only to inlighten their underſtanding, but alſo to ſtirre up their hearts, as Peter ſayes, I think it meet as long as I am in this tabernacle, to ſtirre you up, 2 Pet. 1.13. A Miniſter is to ſtirre up his people, to ſtir their hearts & affections: he may preach a wholſome Sermon, & the hearers be like Mile-poſts, and not ſtirred a jot: Paul laboured to ſtirre affections too: Knowing therefore the terrour of the Lord, we perſwade men, 2 Cor. 5.11. that is, we labour to work upon your affections; and therefore Chriſt ſent a Seraphim with a live coale unto the Prophet Iſaiah, to touch his lips, Eſa. 6.6. he had need of live coales in his lips, to fire the affections of his auditory; So he ſent the Holy Ghoſt down upon his Apoſtles in fiery tongues, without this the information of the judgment is little worth. Religion conſiſts more in the will and the affections of men, than in any other faculty of the ſoule. I confeſſe the Miniſter muſt ſhine too; but he muſt heare to John the Baptiſt was a burning and a ſhining light.

Fifthly, To ſpeak Pro re natâ; a Miniſter hath neeed of extemporary abilities, ſometimes he ſhall be called before Councills, he preaches ſuch doctrine as angers the world, and therefore he is in danger to be had before Councills, and therefore he had need to have an extemporary faculty, that he may anſwer as he ſees cauſe, as Chriſt ſayes, When they deliver you up, take no thought, how or what ye ſhall ſpeak, for it ſhall be given you in that ſame houre, what ye ſhall ſpeak Matth. 10. 19. Sometimes to preach upon ſhort warning, as Auguſtine did, when he relyed upon his Brother Severus, to Preach for him, he not comming, he was faine to go up extempore himſelf, and ſo he preacht upon 95 Pſalme; So, when there was a ſuddaine judgment of God that fell out there in Hippo, though Auguſtine had Preacht twice that very day before, yet he went up again, and Preached the third time: O, ſayes he, do not wonder, my deare Brethren, Si hodie ter Sermonem, &c. do not wonder that I preach thrice this ſame time, it is not without cauſe, &c. Again, a Miniſter may be put upon it as Philip was by the Eunuch, concerning the meaning of a place of Scripture to ſpeak of it at firſt ſight, & a Miniſter muſt not only have this knowledge in his note-book, but in his lips; that is, to be in a readineſſe upon very occaſion. His lips muſt preſerve knowledge, Mal, 2 7. Sometimes he may come among his people, he may light upon their company by chance, now if he have not good abilities, he cannot do the part of a Miniſter. As Paul ſayes, I long to ſee you, to impart unto you ſome ſpirituall gift, Rom. 1.11. A Miniſter when he ſees his people, he ſhould be a well-ſtored man, to impart ſome ſpirituall thing or other to them, a word of Inſtruction, a word of Exhortation, a word of Admonition, when he does but ſee them, he ſhould be able to drop ſomething among them.

Sixtly, To obſerve ſeaſons, to be able to make choyce of ſpeciall Texts for ſpeciall occaſions For howſoever all Scriptures are full of Divine & Heavenly truths, yet ſome Scriptures fit ſome perſons & ſome occaſions better than other ſome. Aarons bells muſt be wiſely rung, ſometimes in one tune, ſometimes in another, as occaſion ſerves. A Miniſter is to change his note, as the circu-ſtances do require. A Steward in a family muſt have as well wiſedome to Miniſter every one his portion in due ſeaſon, as fidelity to diſpence his Maſters goods. A word fitly ſpoken in due time, is like Apples of Gold in pictures of Silver, Prov. 25.11. The very Heathen man commends much τὸ εὐκαίρως λέγειν, when a man ſpeakes in due ſeaſon. St. Paul had this gift, in all his Preaching, to ponder all circumſtances, who, and what, and where, and when, and how. I made my ſelf a ſervant unto all, ſayes he, that I might gain the more, To the Jewes I became a Jew that I might gain the Jewes: to them that are under the Law, as under the law, that I might gain them that are under the law, To the weake I became as weak, that I might gain the weake: I am made all things to all men, that I might by all meanes ſave ſome, 1 Cor. 9.22. So Beloved, we are the Miniſters of God, and we have need of abilities to fit our Doctrine to the preſent time, and occaſions, and perſons, that we may profite hearers. When the Apoſtle came to Athens, he tooke his Text according to the preſent hint. He found an Altar with this inſcription, To the unknown God, & ſo he ſpake of that. Act. 17. 23.24. He took occaſion from thence to ſpeak of the God of Heaven and Earth to them. When our Saviour Chriſt ſaw the woman of Samaria come to draw water, he took opportunitie to preach unto her of the living water. Joh. 4. 10. Miniſteriall gifts are for this very purpoſe, as the Prophet ſayes, The Lord hath given me the tongue of the learned, that I ſhould know how to ſpeake a word in ſeaſon. Iſa 50.4. It is noted of John Baptiſt, that when he ſaw the Scribes and Phariſees came in to heare him, he had a bout with them; O generation of Vipers, who hath forewarned you to flie from the wrath to come? q.d. What do you make here? ye are Hypocrites, ye are vile wretched perſons; repent or elſe you'l to hell. This was now in due ſeaſon. So when a Drunkard comes in, we ſhould let fly at him; Weepe and howl ye drunkards; See what God ſayes of you: to whom is wo but to you? See what the Scripture ſayes of your courſes, ye ſhall never inherit Gods Kingdome, none of you, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks. So when Whoremongers ſtep in, we ſhould give them their doome, O ye Whoremongers and Adulterers, God will judge you one day. This is like the former and the latter Raine. Then it comes, when the ground hath need of it. So when a Miniſter obſerves ſeaſons, then the word comes, when the ſoule hath need of it. It comes pat, as we ſay, Then people may ſee a ſpeciall providence in it. I ſee a ſpeciall providence of God that the Miniſter ſhould ſpeak of ſuch a Theme this day, that he ſhould hit ſo right upon my ſin; when a man hath been cozening, then to come to Church, and there heare of it again: When a man hath been ſwearing and lying, then to turne in to the Preacher, and heare of that very ſin, and the danger of it, and the damned eſtate of the committers of it: When a man hath been thinking to do evill, then to ſit in his ſeat and heare his evill ript up, and all his ſecrets, laid open, and wo to you wretch, that deviſe evill, the Lord knowes your deviliſh intentions, ye are thinking to be revenged, but God will be revenged on you, ye are minded to go by-and-by to ſuch a piece of villany, but the Lord will find you out. This is preaching in ſeaſon. So when a ſoule cannot be caſt down, but when he comes to Sermon, there he meets with his owne caſe, his temptations are treaten of, wine and oyle is powered into his wounds, this is to preach in due ſeaſon. O what gifts had a Miniſter need to have! He had need of daily influence from God: Daily inſtincts, that God ſhould guide his tongue and his heart. Now, Beloved it is Chriſt alone that gifts all his true Miniſters. I will be with thy mouth, ſayes he to Moſes.

Uſe 1. The uſe of this is. Firſt, here we ſee that a Miniſter had not need be a foole, no; no, he that winneth ſoules is wiſe, Prov. 11.30. He muſt be a wiſe man that would be a Miniſter, it requires more than humane wiſedome to catch ſoules, when the heart hath ſo many put-offs, ſo many deceits, ſo many ſtrong holds, ſo loth to obey the word, ſo ſubtill to invent excuſes, ſo crafty to thruſt away the truth; There is ſome wiſedome required to catch fiſhes, and birdes, and vermine; vermine; how much more, to catch men! Who is ſufficient for theſe things? The beſt of us all may bluſh to think how unfit we are to be Miniſters. O how ſhould we bleſſe God, if he fit any of us in any ſuitable meaſure! And when we have done our beſt, we had need to goe home, and down on our knees, and cry ſhame on our ſelves for not doing better.

Secondly, Then they are none of Chriſts Miniſters that are not gifted for this mighty work. Will he ſend a foole on ſuch a weighty Meſſage as this is? He that ſendeth a Meſſage by the hand of a foole, cutteth off the feet and drinketh dammage, Prov. 26.6. That is, if a man have a buſineſſe of any great importance, he had not need to imploy a foole in it, leſt he ſuffer great dammage. It is all one as if one ſhould chop off ones feet, and then bid him goe on our errand. O, Beloved, preaching of the Goſpell is a work of infinite importance, the humbling of mens hearts, the Convincing of Conſciences, the converting of mens Souls, theſe are great buſineſſes, doubtleſſe they are no Fools that Chriſt ſends of his errands. True, all Chriſts Miniſters are not alike gifted, ſome have meaner gifts then other ſome have, but he that hath leaſt, he is fitted in ſome meaſure to diſpenſe divine myſteries, to call home Gods elect, to build up the called, to judge all his hearers, to ſtop the mouthes of gainſayers, to hew down the obſtinate, to ſhew unto men the things belonging to their Peace, to give the Saints their due, and the wicked their due. That a good man cannot come, but he ſhall have heavenly meat to feed on; Nor a wretch neither, but his Miniſtery will ſingle him out and give him his bit to chew upon. He that cannot doe this in any meaſure, he is none of Chriſts Miniſters. Surely, he will not ſend ſuch a Meſſage by a fooles hand, but either he makes him a wiſe able man, or elſe he runs without his ſending. Uſe 2.

Thirdly, Then my Brethren, hence we learn whither to goe for gifts, if we would be enabled to our calling, let us goe to Jeſus Chriſt that hath the ſeven Starres in his hand, he can make our influences ſtrong, and our light and heat mighty, he can give us a gift of boldneſſe to feare no mens faces. He can unty our ſtammering tongues, that we ſhall have liberty in ſpeaking. He can make our tongues a ſharp ſword. He can make us ſonnes of conſolation unto ſome, and of thunder unto others. If we want knowledge in the myſtery of Chriſt, let us make our wants known unto him, and he will inſtill into us. If we want words he can make them flow in unto us. If we want affections he can purge away our iniquities and fire our hearts and lips. While the Apoſtles were together at Prayer, Acts 1.14. ſuddenly the Lord Jeſus ſent them the gift of the holy Ghoſt in fiery cloven tongues, Act. 16. While Paul and Silas were praying in the priſon, the Lord backt them from Heaven, and made them inſtruments of turning the heart of the Gaoler. Let us pray, then, not only in our Pulpits before our Sermons, but alſo in ſecret; God giveth the greateſt gifts in ſecret, and like man, revealeth himſelfe apart: as ſecret meales make a fat body, ſo does ſecret prayer, it makes a well-liking ſoule. Uſe 3.

Againe, that ſhould teach us to ſtirre up the gifts that he gives us: We ſhould labour to put them forth, a man may loſe the benefit of Chriſts gifts, for want of rouzing up himſelf, and putting of them forth, as Paul ſayes to Timothy, I put thee in remembrance that thou ſtirre up the gift of God, which is in thee, by the putting on of my hands, 2 Tim. 1. 6. We muſt ſtirre up the gift in us. When Father Iſaac would propheſie to his Sons, he ſtirred up his ſpirit with ſavoury meat. When Eliſha would propheſie before the three Kings, he called for a Minſtrell to ſtirre up the ſpirit of Propheſie in him. Deborah, cryes, Awake, awake, Deborah; Awake, O my ſoule, ſayes David. When Chriſt would pray to his Father, the Text ſhewes, how he ſtirred up himſelf, Theſe things ſpake Jeſus, and lift up his eyes to heaven, Joh. 17.1. He lift up his ſoule and his ſpirit, as Sampſon went and ſhook himſelf, if his ſpirit had been in him it had been well, but like a foole he had driven him away. But it Uſe. 4.

ſhould ſeeme, when he had the ſpirit in him, this was his wont, he ſhook himſelf as at other times, he uſed to ſtirre up the Spirit in him; ſo we ſhould ſtirre up the Spirit in us, we ſhould rouze up our gifts, like ſparkes out of the aſhes, and beſtirre our ſelves ſoundly; remiſſe uſing of them, lets them warpe and wane.

Uſe. 5. Again, We ſhould labour to relye more upon Chriſt, we truſt too much to our notes; but, O if we could truſt more to Chriſt, that's warmeſt matter that comes down from heaven in the ſpeaking, not that we ſhould leave all without ſtudy, till we come into our Pulpits: No, prepare as much as we can. But then, if we would truſt in Chriſt for his preſent aſſiſtance, and yearn up to him for prompting, it would make our Miniſtery more lively. When a Sermon is an effect of Faith, that's it that does moſt good: then Chriſts Spirit Preaches, and not we, as the Prophet David ſayes, The Spirit of the Lord ſpake by me, 2 Sam. 23.2.

Again, This ſhould teach the people of God, if they would have their Miniſters inabled indeed, to doe their ſoules good; that they ſhould pray for them, that Chriſt would more furniſh them. How often does the Apoſtle tell the people, that Miniſters might have greater gifts, if they had a heart! O ſayes he, Pray for me, that I may have utterance, and that I may ſpeak b ldly, to make known the myſtery of the Goſpell, Epheſ. 6.19. q. d. If ye have a heart to pray, I doe verily think that I ſhall be the more aſſiſted, a great deale. Our Chariot drives the more heavily, becauſe it wants the wheels of your Prayers, and the truth is, God uſes to puniſh people thus, that becauſe they are dead and dull, and have no heart, and are weary of the Word; therefore he withholds them from the Miniſter on purpoſe to plague them back again; as God told Ezekiel, Son of man, thou ſhalt be dumb, and when thou wouldſt reprove, thou ſhalt be tongue-tyed, thy tongue ſhall cleave to the roof of thy mouth: Now mark the reaſon, why? For they are a rebellious houſe, Ezek. 3.26. Mark, it was long of Judahs ſinnes that the Prophet Ezekiel was tongue-tyed and locked up: An excellent Miniſter, and yet ſtraitned for the peoples ſinnes.

O, Beloved, I will tell you what would enlarge our hearts and our gifts towards you: Firſt, if you would more flock to the Word, and attend. It is ſaid in Matth. 5.1,2. That Chriſt ſeeing the multitude, He opened his mouth, that is, he was the more inlarged to Preach, upon the ſight of ſuch a great auditory. Who would not caſt his net amidſt multitudes of fiſhes? The Text ſayes, When Chriſt ſaw the multitudes, he had compaſſion on them. So, if Miniſters could ſee all their Pariſh come in, all that might hear; the ſight of ſuch a multitude would ſtirre up pity. O would we think, O what a goodly company is here! O it is pity but they ſhould have ſomewhat, O if I could win ſome of you. There may be a luſt in this thing, and we muſt take heed of it too, leſt we be tickled with flockings, or diſcouraged with thin Pewes. This is pride, but yet there is a truth in this. What a ſhame is it, that there ſhould be fewer of our own Pariſh every Lecture day, than of ſtrangers? Is it not juſt with God to make the breſts dry, when the Children care not for ſucking?

Secondly, If God had more among you to be ſaved, as God ſaid to Paul, concerning Corinth, Be not afraid, ſpeak, hold not thy peace, I am with thee, and no man ſhall ſet on thee to hurt thee, I have much people in this City, Act. 18.10. This opened Pauls mouth, this made him finde abundance of aſſiſtance from Chriſt. becauſe God had much people there.

Thirdly, If you would hear with alacrity, & with a ready and a greedy minde When Cornelius and his company were all liſtening, and earneſt to hear, and to hearken, O ſay they; Speak Peter, we are all here before God, to hear every thing thou ſpeakeſt. Then Peter opened his mouth, Act. 10 33.34. But when people look dully, and blockiſhly, and ſit ſleepily and drowſily, as though they were weary of hearing, and cared not whether they heard or no; Nay, this is the reaſon why the Devils inſtruments are ſo bold to oppoſe the Miniſters of God, they ſee they are not much cared for, none but here one, and there on a ſort of preciſe fools :whereas, if people would be eager to hear over all the land, they durſt not meddle with them, as it is ſaid of our Saviour, The Chiefe Prieſts & the Scribes ſought to deſtroy him, but they could not finde what they might do; For all the people were very attentive to hear him, Luk. 19 48.

Fourthly, if ye would be fruitfull in obedience, and in learning; this would put life into our Prayers at home; this would quicken our labours and paines in the Pulpit; the very hope of having fruit, made Paul very eager to come to Rome, Rom. 1.13. The very thought that the people are gracious, and godly, and fruitfull, carries the Preacher beyond himſelf. Nay, its ſtrange to conſider, how, when the Miniſter knows he hath but one underſtanding judicious hearer, one gracious Soule in his Pariſh, it provokes him very much. it makes him look about him the more, a great deale: How much more, when there be many ſuch? But when a Pariſh is ſenſeleſſe, and heavy, and froward, it is unſpeakable to conſider how it ſtraitens a Miniſter. Let a man be to pray in a meeting, where they be graceleſſe, and dull, and hardly any almoſt, godly, he cannot tell what to ſay almoſt, he is not himſelf. Whereas, if he were to pray among them that he knows can favour gracious things, there he hath more liberty to let out himſelf.

Theſe things ſaith he, that hath the ſeven Spirits of God, and the ſeven Starres.

And the ſeven Starres.

THey have their gifts and abilities from him. Now I proceed on to the fourth; That he hath the proſpering of them: They have the Succeſs of their labours from Jeſus Chriſt. Chriſt bids us preach, Repent, repent, but it is he that muſt give Repentance; So, Paul preached to Lydia, and had good ſucceſſe, for the text ſhewes how ſhe was converted by his Miniſtery: But, it was God that opened her heart. As Rebeccah cookt the Veniſon, but Iſaac gave the bleſſing. So we may cook the Word for you, but the bleſſing is in Chriſts hands, as the Apoſtle ſayes, We are Miniſters by whom ye Beleeved, even as the Lord gave to every man, 1 Cor. 3.5. that is, when we preached among you, we had good ſucceſſe; you beleeved. What? as we would our ſelves? No, Alas we would faine have had you all to Beleeve: but, even as the Lord gave to every man, the ſucceſſe was as he would; ſo to ſome he gave only conviction by the word, to ſome onely knowledge, to ſome good reformations, to ſome a true faith. It was as he was pleaſed to give to every man. So when he preached unto other Gentiles he confeſſes, looke what good ſucceſſe he had, he had from Jeſus Chriſt. I will not dare to ſpeake of any of thoſe things which Chriſt hath not wrought by me, to make the Gentiles obedient by Word and deed, Rom. 15.18. That is, as who ſhould ſay, That the Gentiles did heare me, that they were brought to obedience in word and deed, that I had ſo good ſucceſſe in my labours; God forbid I ſhould ſay or thinke it was my doing; I dare not ſay ſo for a world. No, no, It was Chriſt, and he alone that did worke by me as his poore Inſtrument. I have all my good ſucceſſe from him. The ſucceſſe is meerly as he will. If he will be pleaſed to give ſo good ſucceſſe, Peter ſhall convert 3000 at one Sermon. But if he be pleaſed to deny a good ſucceſſe, the Prophet Eſay ſhall preach in the reigne of 4 Kings, about foureſcore yeares, and convert hardly one, as he ſayes to Iſrael, as the Apoſtle quotes him; All the day long I have Doctr.

Stretched forth my hands unto a diſobedient and a gain-ſaying people. Rom. 10. 21. All ſucceſſes are of God, and therefore much more, ſucceſſe here. Let it be in any calling. As for example, Fiſhing; that when a man goes a fiſhing, he finds good ſucceſſe, this is of God. Simon and his company toyled all night and took nothing. But when Chriſt came and gave them good ſucceſſe, then they incloſed a great multitude of fiſhes, two ſhipfull of fiſhes at one draught, Luke 5. 5. So when a man runs, who ſhall get the Goale; the man may run, but whether he ſhall get the Gaole, that he cannot tell. When a man fights, the man may fight, & be the better man of the two, but whether ſhall overcome, that is uncertain unto them; the ſucceſſe is of God, as Solomon ſayes, The race is not to the ſwift, nor the battaile to the ſtrong, nor riches to the wiſe, time and chance happens to them all, Eccleſ. 9. 11. That is, not as though the ſwift doe not ſometimes get the race, and the ſtrong the Victory, and wiſe men riches, yea they doe many times; namely, when God gives ſucceſſe, otherwiſe they doe not. How many times doe men goe about buſineſſes and in all likelihood, they might hit well, yet how often doe they not? The Lord will have us ſee, that ſucceſſe is from him.

Now if it be ſo in outward things, how much more here, in other things! the work is more in the mans hands, and the thing is traceable to him, but it is not ſo here: We may labour to convert Soules, but this work is not in our hands, the uſing of the meanes, the Lord Jeſus Chriſt puts that into our hands; but the doing of the deed, the ſucceſſe is only from him.

Reaſ. 1. Firſt, Becauſe we are nothing in this work. We may be ſomething at other works, we may ſtudy, and in an ordinary providence we may make a Sermon. But when we come to Preach, it is not an ordinary providence that will make us to convert ſoules; no, here we are nothing; Paul may plant, and Apollos may water: Now mark what followes, he does not only ſay, it is God that gives the increaſe, Paul may plant, and Apollos may water, but God gives the increaſe, 1. Cor. 3. 6 That is, all their ſucceſſe and all the fruit of their labour is from God: That is not all he ſayes; but in the 7. verſe, ſayes he, Neither is he that planteth any thing, nor he that watereth any thing, but God that giveth the increaſe. As if he ſhould ſay, as excellent gifts as theſe men had, they did nothing in this work, the whole ſucceſſe is of God. Beloved, we can but ſet before you, Life and Death, we can but tell you, thus ye will be damned, and thus and thus ye may be ſaved; but it is God that muſt bleſſe this unto you; otherwiſe we can doe nothing. We may Preach our hearts out; and yet you'l to hell, doe we what we can, except the Lord break your careere. Eliſha's man could lay his Maſters ſtaffe upon the child, but the child ſtirred not, till Eliſha came himſelf, and then the child was raiſed. So we can but lay our Maſters ſtaffe upon your dead ſoules, But except our Maſter come himſelf, ne're a dead ſoule will ſtand up: what is all our Preaching, and dreſſing up of our Sermons, like the rigging of the ſayles, that's nothing except the wind blow. The Spirit of Chriſt is the wind, except he blow upon you, we are nothing: the tampering on the Organs is nothing, but when the breath comes, then there is muſique: So, we may keep adoe to turne your hearts, but till God breath into you, there is nothing done. True, the preaching of the Goſpell is a very powerfull thing; I, when Chriſts arme goes along with it, it is the ſword of the Spirit, but if the Spirits arme be not with it, we may brandiſh it here every week, and doe little: as Scanderbagge ſaid: One hearing what mighty feats Scanderbagges ſword had done, ſent for it, and when he ſaw it, he made nothing of it: Is this the Sword that hath done ſuch great exploits? What's this Sword more than other ſwords? O, ſayes Scanderbagge, I ſent thee my ſword, but not my arme, that did handle it. So, my Brethren, the word which we preah, is but Chriſts ſword; God ſends you his ſword many times, when he keeps his arme to himſelf, and ſo nothing is done. So then, we are nothing, and therefore all ſucceſs is of Chriſt. Firſt, our wills are nothing to do it, we may will to do you good, but Converts cannot be made by our wils, as the Evangeliſt ſayes, Joh. 1.13. Secondly our paines & labours are nothing; we may labour and take paines, but look Eſa 49.4. Thirdly, our gifts are nothing; who had better gifts than Chriſt had, as he was man? & yet that would not do it, Joh. 12.38. Fourthly, our Prayers are nothing, they may do ſomething, ſometimes, but except God be pleaſed to give ſucceſs, they are nothing. Ieremiah prayed, Ier. 14.7,8,9. yet the Lord told him, that ſhould not do it, ver. 11.

Secondly, the Converſion of Soules, is a ſupernaturall work; we that are Miniſters, preach to make men new creatures, to turn Leopards into Kids, as if we ſhould preach to make Blackamores white, the dead alive, which is a work for God alone to do, and therefore the ſucceſſe muſt needs be from him Alas, what are we able to do? as the Apoſtle ſayes, You are Gods Warmanſhip in Chriſt Ieſus, created to good works, Epheſ 2. 10. We are his inſtruments, that's true indeed, but ye are his workmanſhip, you are the Epiſtle of Chriſt, adminiſtred by us, written not with Inke, but with the Spirit of the living God, 2 Cor. 3. 3. The Epiſtle of Chriſt, but miniſtred indeed by Chriſt, his is the hand, we are but the pen; when we bid you repent, and beleeve, and be holy, and godly, and heavenly-minded men, deny your ſelves, be dead to the world, & a ive to God, come out of Satans power, come into Chriſts Kingdom: It is like Ezekiels bidding of the dead bones to gather fleſh, and ſtand up living men. All the ſucceſſe muſt needs be of God. Reaſ. 2.

And therefore what does this teach us? The Uſe of it is: Firſt, That we that are the Miniſters of God, can but make tryall whether we can convert our people, or no, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, proving, if at any time, God will give them repentance, 2 Tim. 2.25. ſo it is in ſome of your Bibles, ſo, we muſt make proof: we muſt try; come into the Pulpit every week, and try, ſharpen our nailes as ſharp as we can, and ſtrike them as farre in as we can, and ſo try, often try, as the wiſeman ſpeaks in another caſe, In the morning ſow thy ſeed, and in the evening let not thy hand reſt, for thou knoweſt not whether ſhall proſper, this, or that, or both, Eccle. 11 6. So Ieremiah did, he would try: firſt, he went to the poorer ſort, to ſee whether they would hearken unto him; when he had no ſucceſſe there, then thought he, I will try the great men, I will get me to the great men, Jer. 5. 5 we ſhould make aſſays, we do not know, may be God will give us good ſucceſſe, we muſt make aſſays, as it is ſaid of Paul and Silas, That they aſſayed to go into Bithynia, but the Spirit ſuffered them not, Act. 16.7. O thought they, here be a great many ſoules in this Countrey, we will try, whether there be any for Chriſt, yea, or no. Indeed, they found that they had no ſucceſſe in their attempt. But they made an aſſay though. Uſe 1.

Secondly, This teacheth us to wait, though we have not ſucceſs preſently, yet we ſhould wait, all ſucceſs is from Chriſt, and therefore it is fit we ſhould wait for it; & therefore a Miniſter is commanded to be patient, The ſervant of the Lord muſt be gentle to all men, apt to teach, patient, 2 Tim. 2.24. q.d. He hath not the ſucceſs in his own hands, to have it when he will; no, though he do no good yet, nor yet, he muſt be patient, He is not apt to teach poor people elſe, except he be patient, as he is not fit to teach a dull Schollar, that is over-haſty. And therefore, my Brethren, though we have loſt all our labour hitherto on the moſt of you, yet now again we ſpeak to you, come, will ye yet go to heaven? Come are ye yet in the mind to hearken & obey? We come to you once more, will ye yet, &c as Ieremiah ſayes, Wo unto thee O Ieruſalem, wilt thou not be made clean? When ſhall it once be? Jer. 13.27. Beloved, we are dull Schollars in Religion, and people are hard to take their learning in this kind, and therefore if we would be apt to teach, we muſt be patient, what though we ſee no good? yet, this muſt not make us out of heart, or to grudge our paines, we muſt be patient ſtill, we are to think, may be the next time I preach, God will give Uſe 2.

me good succeſſe; Iſaiah and Paul gave not over, though they had cauſe to complain.

Uſe 3. Thirdly, This may ſerve to condemn all the world, whither the Goſpel comes, and ſpecially us hereabouts, that do not let Miniſters have any good ſucceſſe; I will ſay, How do I make this uſe of it? If all the Miniſters ſucceſſe be from Chriſt, then one would thinke, this were an excuſe unto people:

I anſwer; no, the meaning of the Doctrine is this, that the people are ſo contrary to the Word, ſuch enemies to the waves of Jeſus Chriſt, that a Miniſter can look for no ſucceſs, except the Lord turn their hearts: This is the meaning of the point. Does this excuſe any? what, does your enmity againſt light & all goodneſſe afford you any excuſe? nay, this aggravates your ſin. Now this is the meaning of it. As Saint Paul, when he ſpake, how little ſucceſſe he and all the reſt of his fellow-Apoſtles had, he layes the blames upon the people; All the day long I have ſtretched out my hands againſt a diſobedient and a gainſaying people, Rom. 10. 21. So the Prophet Iſaiah, from whom theſe words are taken, complaines of the unfruitfulneſs of his Miniſtery, as being the peoples fault, & therefore he complaines of them unto God; Lord who hath beleeved our report? Eſay. 53. 1. The conſcience of man knows this to be true, for he knows he ſins willingly, & he knows he would not do otherwiſe, he daily feeleth Gods Spirit haling him to good, and telling him he ought to live thus and thus, and yet he is loath and will not, he inclines the other way, and rather would do as he does, then as he knows God would have him. What is this but contempt? and indeed this is the great ſin of this land, the contempt of the Goſpel, people count it not a precious, but a tedious thing. Never merry world (ſay ſome) ſince we had ſo much Preaching: as if the Sun ſhone too bright; like the Iſraelites who ſtumbled at the plenty of Manna: Nay, they are a-kin to the Devils, who asked Chriſt if he were come to torment them; they account the Goſpel a torment, becauſe it croſſeth their luſts, and lets in ſo much light. Theſe can ſpend dayes and nights in vanity, but an houre at a Sermon is tedious: if they had any delight in the Word, they would not care though their Miniſter ſtood ſomewhat long. Though Zachary ſtayed long in the Temple, yet the people waited for him till he came out, Luk. 1. 21. they marvelled indeed he ſtayed ſo long; yet the Spirit of God notes, that they waited for him. But our people ſit upon thornes at a Sermon, though they can lye ſoaking at an ale-bench as though they ſate upon ſoft cuſhions. The Onions of Egypt have a better taſte with them, than the Quails of the Wilderneſs. They had rather live at the Hogs-trough, than in their Fathers houſe. With the Gadarens they preſer their Pigges before our Saviour Chriſt. O ſay they, we cannot live by Sermons; Sermons are too holy and ſtrait for them. Bid them take up Chriſts yoake, they care not for it, except it were wider. The Miniſtery hath no ſucceſſe at all with them unto any purpoſe. What a thing is this, Brethren! Whence is it that we regard the Goſpell no more? The truth is, people know not their damned eſtate, neither wil they believe it, though we tel them nay, they care not whether they hear it or no. But if they knew the goodneſs of it, they would run from Eaſt to Weſt for it: if drunkards, & worldings, & ſuch rabble, knew their fearful eſtate, the Miniſter ſhould be as welcome to them, as bread to the hungry, or a pardon to a Theife. So that ye ſee this condemneth them deep'y, that the Word hath no ſucceſs with. Thus ye ſee, the Miniſters of Chriſt have all ſucceſs from Chriſt, if any one ſoule come in at their teaching, it is an evident ſigne, it is of Jeſus Chriſt; for otherwiſe people hold off, ſome hold off altogether, others yeeld a little way, but will not yeeld full out; if a man yeeld to us indeed, it is meerly by Jeſus Chriſt.

Doct. Now I will ſhew you, that as a Miniſter hath all his good ſucceſſe of his labours from Jeſus Chriſt: So if he be a true Miniſter of Chriſt, Chriſt uſes to give him good ſucceſſe. When Chriſt put Peter into the Miniſtery, He told him,

From

From henceforth thou ſhalt catch men. Luk. 5. 10. That is, as I have made thee a Miniſter, ſo thou ſhalt have good ſucceſſe. They ſhall have ſome good ſucceſſe, as we ſee in the parable, though three parts fell into hard ground, yet ſome fell into good ground, Mark 4. 8. Nay, though Chriſts Miniſters come into the moſt deſperate places that can be, as we read in the Acts of the Apoſtles, notwithſtanding the places they went to were deeply rooted in Idolatry & full of perſecuting Jewes, & they were ready to be ſtoned to death, the people were ſo mad againſt their Doctrine; yet they never Preached any where, but they had good ſucceſs with ſome. When Paul came to Theſſalonica, the text notes, ſome of them beleeved, & joyned in Company with him. Act 17. 4. When he came to Athens, though ſome mocked, & ſome hung in ſuſpenſe, like Neuters, that were neither fiſh, nor fleſh howbeit certain men clave unto Paul & beleeved, Act. 17. 34 So when he came to Rome, Though ſome ſtood out, yet ſome were perſwaded, Act. 28. 24. Yea when Philip came to Samaria, though it was a Towne, that was bewitcht, full of ſorcery & witchcraft, & they had even given their ſoules to the Devill (A Miniſter could hardly come into a worſe Town,) yet the people gave heed to thoſe things that he ſpake, Act. 8. 5. Nay, the context ſhewes he had marvellous good ſucceſs; the Lord maketh that precious account of the Miniſtery of the Goſpell, that he never beſtowes it upon any place, where he hath not ſome Elect; other bleſſings God beſtowes more promiſcuouſly, Reprobates have as great plenty as others; All things come alike to all: But this bleſſing he gives to no place, where he hath not ſome to ſave. Either ſome in the Towne, or ſome there abouts.

The Uſe of this is, firſt, Here we are to enquire then what may be the reaſon that Chriſts Miniſters have ſo little ſucceſs now adayes. First, ſome Miniſters have the leſſe ſucceſſe by raiſing up of others that have greater. As Calvin after Luther. Luther had admirable ſucceſs for a time, and then when Calvin came, he did increaſe, and Luther did decreaſe. So John obſerved of himſelf, he had admirable ſucceſs for a time, but when Chriſt came, John had the leſs; He muſt increaſe, but I muſt decreaſe. Joh. 3. 30 Again it may be peoples unthankfulneſs, for the Miniſtery of the Word. When people have had the Word a long time, and yet they will not obey it, may be, God ſayes to them as he did to the Fig-tree, Never fruit grow on thee more, while the world ſtandeth. Then God ſends Eſay, to make the heart of the people fat Then Jeremiahs errand is moſt an end to pluck up and to pull downe. Then John is to ſay, He that is filthy, let him be filthy ſtill. Then Hoſea cryes, Ephraim is joyned unto Idols; let him alone. Uſe 1.

Thirdly, Some Miniſters may be, have the leſſe ſucceſs, for their owne fault in not ſpreading of the net, when their preaching is little better then reading. True, it may be, a man may be converted by reading, as Luther ſayes he was, And John Huſſe by reading Wiclifes bookes. Auſtin ſayes he was converted by reading the 13. of the Romans & the 14. verſ. There is a bleſſing that may be looked for by reading: Bleſſed is he that readeth, Rev 1. 3. But this is very rare. There may a fiſh or two hang on the net, being let downe on a heape, but that is a chance. No, no, it is not the net lapped up together that bringeth in the draught, but hayled out at length & ſpread all abroad, this cloſeth in the fiſh. So, it is the ſpreading of the Word, the ſtretching of it out upon every ſoule preſent; this is the way to catch ſome, when a Miniſter labours to hit all.

Fourthly, Some Miniſters may be unſucceſſefull for not preaching roughly enough. Beloved, our times are knotty times. Rough hewing is needfull. Now people had need heare of hell and damnation, and wrath, and vengeance, againſt their ſinns, Some ſave with feare, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, plucking them out of the fire, Jud. 23.

Fifthly, Again, May be, a Miniſters ſucceſſe is not ſeen, may be, he is ſucceſſeceſſefull, though he ſhall not live to ſee it, as Chriſt ſayes, One ſowes, and another reaps, Joh.4.37. as the Prophets ſowed, and the Apoſtles reapt: So, Beloved, we may ſow now, and thoſe that come after us, may be, they ſhall be the reapers. The preſent age, now may ſow ſeed for the ſucceeding. Arborem ſerit, quæ alteri proſunt ſæculo. As they of Chinah make their diſhes; the Fathers lay them into the earth, and the third generation after takes them out. Though we do not ſee our ſeeds to come up; may be, we meet with no harveſt, this may be our comfort, if we can but ſow for others afterwards to reap. Let us have a care of ſowing, many a man that now hears the word, and now is brought up under a good teaching Miniſtery, though yet he do not obey it, who knowes what God will do? may be, God may caſt him into ſome horrible affliction yet before he dyes, and fling terrour into his Soule, and then what we have delivered may do him good: And therefore we ſhould never ceaſe ſowing, though we never ſee the Harveſt: this ſhould be our comfort, that the ground hath the ſeed. Let us ſtill powre in good precepts and examples into our people; Parents into their children, Maſters into their ſervants, Miniſters into their hearers, let God alone with it, when, and what, and where the Harveſt ſhall be.

Laſtly, Some Miniſters are not godly, and then how can they looke for good ſucceſſe? as God ſayes, If they had ſtood in my Counſell, and cauſed my people to heare my Words, then they ſhould have turned them from their evill way Jer.23. 22. I dare not ſay abſolutely, that a carnall Miniſter ſhall never have good ſucceſſe in his Miniſtery. As if a Miniſter ſhould conclude he were a good man, becauſe God hath bleſſed his labours; No, that is not a good argument for, Firſt, It is the Word that converts, and not the perſon of the ſpeaker: I dare not tye God to the goodneſſe of any mans perſon. God, as he is a Creator, he is a wiſe God, and can write well with a bad pen, and cut well with a blunt naughty knife.

Secondly, Such may be ſent of God, and gifted for the Miniſtery, and therefore for all that I know, they may be an Organ of converſion ſometimes.

Thirdly, Paul rejoyced that Chriſt was preached by the falſe Apoſtles, though it were but of envy, Phil.1 15,16,17,18. you will ſay, how could he rejoyce in that? that was a wicked manner of Preaching. Why ſurely he could not rejoyce in it, but that he did think that it might doe ſome good.

Fourthly, This muſt be thus, or elſe no man can be aſſured of his ſalvation: For, if a carnall Miniſter cannot be the meanes of converſion, then no man converted by him can be aſſured &c.

Fifthly, They may ſay at laſt day, Lord, Lord we have Prophecyed in thy name, and in thy name have we caſt out Devils, and yet Chriſt will ſay unto them, I know you not, &c.

Sixthly, Why elſe does our Saviour Chriſt bid people heare the Scribes and Phariſees, but that he implies, they may be a meanes of good to them

Seventhly, Judas was ſent out to Preach, Matth. 10 4. Chriſt ſaid to him as well as to the reſt, When ye go, Preach, ſaying, The Kingdome of Heaven is at hand, ver.7.

Eightly, Experience hath found this to be true, ſome godly ſoules have confeſſed this very thing, that ſuch as now they ſee to be palpably carnall, have been the means of their converſion, &c. Many helpt Noah to build the Arke, that periſhed in the waters. God may make the crowing of a Cock to be a meanes of awakening Peters Conſcience. The temptations of the Devil, to be the meanes of Luthers quickning: and therefore, I do not ſimply affirm that carnall Miniſters cannot convert. But this I ſay, It is a very rare thing as Chriſt ſayes, If the blind lead the blind, both ſhall fall into the ditch, Matth 15. 44. So if a Hypocrite lead a hypocrite, the Drunkard lead the drunkard, &c. It is a woe to a Pariſh, when their Miniſters are not godly: Woe to the City

ſayes GOD, Zeph 3.1. Why ſo? Her Prophets are light perſons, ver. 4. Woe to ſuch Townes whoſe Miniſters will go to the Alehouſe, whoſe Miniſters will keepe company, and be haile-fellow with every vain fellow, whoſe Miniſters will embrace this preſent world, whoſe Miniſters are proud, and envious, and malicious, that give a bad example to the people, that depend upon their charge. Woe to them, ſayes God. The curſe of God is upon ſuch Parithes. God hath hardly any intention to ſave ſuch peoples ſoules. Or, if he have any of his Elect there, God will ſave them ſome other way; as God told the naughty Shepherds, I, even I will ſearch out my ſheep and ſeek them out, Ezek 34.11. that is, I will ſearch them out ſome other way, I will not do it by you; and therefore when he hath a mind to ſave a poore people, he ſends good Miniſters among them, or them to good ones, Turne O back-ſliding children ſayes God, and I will take you, one of a City, and two of a family, and I will give you Paſtors according to my heart. Jer. 3.14 &c. God would have none but wiſe-hearted men to worke in his manuell Tabernacle, Exod 35.10. how then do we think he will let fooles, as all carnall Miniſters are? &c. Saint Paul ſaid, it was a part of the hope that he had in the preſence of Chriſt, at his comming, that God had made him the inſtrument of gaining ſoules to his Kingdome. For what is our hope, or joy, or crown of rejoycing? are not even you in the preſence of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, at his comming? 1 Theſſ 2.19. and hath made a promiſe to ſuch as convert ſoules; ſo runs the Promiſe, They that turne others to righteouſneſſe, ſhall ſhine as the ſtars, Dan. 12.3. Indeed this is but a ſecondary evidence of Salvation, &c O, Beloved, if we could convert any of your Soules, what a comfort would it be? whereas, if a man be a wicked man, what hope can he have that God will bleſſe his labours? nay, he hath ſaid expreſſely that if a man will not obey the voyce of the Lord, Curſed ſhall he be in the field, and in the houſe, and ſo in the Pulpit, in his ſtudies, he cannot look for Gods aſſiſtance, as God told the wicked Prieſts: I will curſe all your bleſſings, if you will not lay it to heart, Mal. 2.2.

Secondly, another Uſe is, Does Chriſt uſe to bleſſe and proſper his true Miniſters? Then let us labour to get this bleſſing of him, Let us ſeek to him to give us good ſucceſſe; O how eager is Paul every where in prayer to God for good ſucceſſe? Uſe 1.

Thirdly, Another Uſe is, If we have not the ſucceſſe that we could wiſh, let us not be diſcouraged; as the Prophet Iſaiah ſayes, My labour is with the Lord: though Iſrael be not gathered, yet ſhall I be glorious, Eſa. 49.4,5. The Husbandman loſeth by an ill crop; I, but if we be faithfull, we ſhall not loſe, though our crop be never ſo ill, if we have plowed well, and ſowne well, no matter what the crop be, we ſhall have our pay. If I preach and you repent not, it ſhall never repent me of my paines, I will preach ſtill. For though my preaching be not a ſweet ſavour to thee, yet it ſhall be to God, even in thee, and thou ſhalt ſmart for it; and therefore let us not ceaſe working, many a draught the poore fiſher-man makes and takes nothing, yet he leaves not off, many a time is the net of Preaching ſhot forth, and yet none converted thereby. So it pleaſed God to exerciſe the patience of his ſervants. Yet ſtill the work muſt be followed, and the Lords leiſure muſt be waited for. Oftentimes the net taketh fiſh, and they ſlip out againe; So, there be many that ſeem to be pulled in by the Goſpell, nevertheleſſe they ſlide away again. Againe, there is oftentimes brought into the net that, which is yet good for nothing when it is got, there comes in froggs, and weeds, and a great deale of traſh, which in the end are caſt away, and yet for love of the Fiſh, the fiſherman is content to hale all in that he can; So, Beloved, we draw in many hypocrites, many that prove naught, and yet for hope of good fiſh, we muſt ſtill be a labouring, and may be, we may have a good Harveſt yet, though yet we ſee little likelihood. Be not weary of well doing, Uſe 2.

ſayes the Apoſtle, for we ſhall reape, if we faint not, Galat. 6. 9.

Uſe 4. Fourthly, Another Uſe is to you, that you doe not wilfully ſtand out, to deprive us of good ſucceſſe. The ſhrewdeſt turne you can doe your poore Miniſters, is to deprive them of the joy of their labours; the way to rejoyce them, is to imbrace the Goſpell they preach, it will be heavie for you when we ſhall groane to God, that we could not perſwade any of you. If thou wilt not now hear that which may profit thee, thou ſhalt hear one day that which ſhall make thy heart ake; Goe ye curſed into everlaſting fire. O remember Sodome, and doe not ſtand out againſt the Miniſters that come from Jeſus Chriſt to you.

Now remaines the fift and the laſt; He hath the diſpoſing of them, the placing of them in a Towne, the continuing of them, or removing of them, the holding of them up, or the pulling of them downe, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, He hath the key of David, he openeth and no man ſhutteth, and he ſhutteth and no man openeth, Rev. 3.7. That is, he hath all power in the Church, to place it or diſplace it, to ſettle it or to tranſplant it, to preſcribe or not preſcribe, to abſolve or to condemne, to ſave or to deſtroy, to give Miniſters liberty or to take it away. As Chriſt tells the Miniſter of Philadelphia, I have ſet before thee an open doore, and no man can ſhut it, Rev. 3.8. Good Miniſters ſhall have Liberty to preach in their ſtations, as long as he pleaſes, and they never can be hindred, till he is pleaſed ſo to permit it, or appoint it. So when Paul was at Epheſus, though he had never ſo many adverſaries there, that would faine hinder him if they could, Yet as long as Chriſt gave him an open doore, to preach and to doe good, none of them all could withſtand him; A great doore and effectuall is opened unto me, and there are many adverſaries, 1 Cor. 16. 9.

Firſt, Chriſt hath the placing of his Miniſters. As he ſaith to Jeremiah, I have ſet thee. So Chriſt ſayes to all his true Miniſters, I have ſet you. God hath ſet to all men the bounds of their habitations, Act. 17.26. that one man ſhall dwell here, another there; one in this Pariſh, another in that Pariſh How much more does he appoint unto his Miniſters their habitations, that John the Baptiſt ſhall be in the Wilderneſſe of Judea, Titus ſhall be in Crete, Epaphras ſhall be at Coloſſe, Epaphroditus at Philippi, Timothy at Epheſus, and the like? Nay, he is no Miniſter of Chriſt that is not of Chriſts placing. As the Apoſtle ſpeakes, Take heed unto your ſelves and to all the flock, over which the Holy Ghoſt hath made you overſeers, Act. 20.28. Over which the Holy Ghoſt hath made you overſeers; He is a true Mniſter to this or that Congregation, that can ſay that the Holy Ghoſt hath made me an overſeer to them.

Reaſ. 1. The Reaſon is, firſt, Becauſe no man is a Paſtor or a Shepheard to any ſheep, that did not enter in by the doore into thoſe ſheep. He that entreth in by the doore, is the ſhepheard of the ſheep. Joh. 10.2. Now who is this doore but Jeſus Chriſt? I am the doore ſaith he, By me if any man enter in, he ſhall be ſaved, As it followes there in the ninth verſe. As he is the doore, no man can enter into the Miniſtery rightly but by him. He muſt have his Letters of Orders from him, So he is the doore into any flock, and if a man have not inſtitution and induction from him, he is no Shepheard of the flock. Nay, Chriſt tells him flatly, he is a thief and robber, and a hireling. When the Danites askt the Levite in Mount Ephraim, Who brought thee hither? What makeſt thou in this place? Judg. 18.3. ye know he put himſelf there, he ſought for the place himſelf, and it was maintenance that brought him thither. His own conſcience told him he was a Hireling. He could not ſay, The Lord brought me hither. He came not in by the doore; Now every true Miniſter comes in by the doore into a Pariſh, and therefore he comes in by Jeſus Chriſt.

Reaſ. 2. Secondly, No Miniſter can be placed in any Pariſh, but by the Biſhop of the Dioceſſe. Now Beloved, who ever be Chriſts ſubſtitute, Chriſt is the maine Biſhop of every Dioceſſe, Chriſt is the Shepheard and Biſhop of our ſoules, 1 Pet.

1 Pet. 2.25. Indeed there be other Biſhops under him, other Shepheards under him, I, but he is the great Shepheard of the ſheep, Heb. 13.20. the Arch Shepheard. Ἀρχοποίμην, 1 Pet. 5.4. The chief Shepheard, When the chief Shepheard ſhall appeare. Well if he be the chief Shepheard, it is fit that he ſhould inſtitute and induct into Paſtorall charges. Its fit that his word ſhould be followed, in every ones comming into a Living, to goe no where, but where his word doth allow. To take no cure of Soules, but of ſuch as he commits to our cuſtody. All true Miniſters are his Curats, and therefore if they be not of his placing, they came not in right.

Thirdly, If it be he that muſt pay them their wages, then reaſon good, that he ſhould ſet them on work. If a man thruſt himſelf into a Pariſh, it was not Chriſt that moved him to come there, but forſooth he wanted a Living, he would faine have maintenance, there is ſo much Per annum, this was his motive, Chriſt never moved him, this man can look for no wages from Jeſus Chriſt. When he hath gathered in his Tithes or his quarteridge, Chriſt will tell him as he told the fooliſh Phariſees, Ye have your reward. He that ſet you on work, he will pay your wages. I never ſet you on work, and therefore ye can look for nothing at my hands. Certainly if Chriſt muſt pay a man his wages, good Reaſon that he ſhould have the putting of a man into this or that Vineyard. He called in the Labourers and payd them their wages, that gave them their taske. Matth. 20.8. Reaſ. 3.

Fourthly, How can they look for his aſſiſtance and Bleſſing, if they be not placed by him? when the Lord had placed Jeremiah a Prophet in Judah, the Lord undertook to aſſiſt him, I have made thee this day a defenced City, and an iron Pillar, and Brazen walls, I will be with thee, Jerem. 1.18, 19. A Miniſter hath need of Chriſts aſſiſtance, where e're he is, his Preaching elſe will doe little good, his Sermons will be of no effect, Chriſts aſſiſtance and Bleſſing is all in all. Moſes prayes for Levi, Bleſſe, Lord, his ſubſtance, and accept the work of his hands, Deut. 33.11. No man hath more need of Chriſts bleſſing to goe along with him, then a Miniſter. Now when a Miniſter is not there where Chriſt would have him to be, How can he expect that Chriſts bleſſing ſhould be with him? If he can ſay, Chriſt would have me here, Chriſt hath placed me here, then he may look for Chriſts being with him. Reaſ. 4.

Fifthly, What peace of Conſcience can they have, when they lye on their death-beds, except they can comfortably ſay, Lord thou didſt place me in this Pariſh, Lord I came in by the doore, and by no other way. It was not by-ends, nor filthy lucre, nor gaine, as Jeremiah ſayes, I did not thruſt in my ſelfe to be a Paſtor, Lord thou madeſt me a Miniſter to this Congregation, I have faithfully tended thoſe Soules, that thou gaveſt me to feed, this is a ſweet thing Ye know people are apt to ſay, who ſent for you, who made you our Miniſter? we will not acknowledge you to be our Miniſter. As Shemaiah ſaid of good Jeremiah, Thou haſt made thy ſelf a Prophet to this people, Jer. 29.27. Now if Jeremiah had not his own Conſcience to prove his Inſtitution from God, what a taking had he been in. Reaſ. 5.

Sixthly, And laſtly, what comfort elſe can the people of God have to live under ſuch a mans Miniſtery, unleſſe they can ſay, This is my Miniſter, ſet over me in the Lord! This is ſo needfull, that without it, he were as good have no Miniſter at all. As the Apoſtle tells the good people of Coloſſe, Epaphras is for you a faithfull Miniſter of Chriſt, Col. 1.7. This is their comfort indeed, when they can truly affirme that this man is for us a faithfull Miniſter of Chriſt. This Miniſter is our Miniſter in Chriſt. This is the ground of their Conſciences ſubmitting to his Miniſtery, and of their receiving of him, as an Embaſſadour from Chriſt unto them. Now when a man is not placed by Chriſt in a Pariſh as their Miniſter, what joy can they have to heare him? What hope that God will ſanctifie his labours among them? Reaſ. 6.

The

The Uſe of this is, firſt; For us that are Miniſters, that we look we be of Chriſts placing, that we may be able to conclude to our people as Paul to the Corinths, Though I be not an Apoſtle unto others, yet doubtleſſe, I am an Apoſtle unto you. So that we may be able to conclude to our people, doubtleſſe I am Chriſts Miniſter unto you. As our Saviour Chriſt ſayes, Who is the faithfull wiſe Shepheard, whom his Lord ſhall make Ruler over his houſhold? Luke 12.42. Hath the Lord made us Rulers over his houſhold? We are all ſhepheards in ſuch and ſuch Pariſhes. But did the Lord put us there? We are Spirituall Rulers over ſuch and ſuch houſholds of God; but did the Lord make us Rulers over them? Otherwiſe we are not Starres in his hands; No, We are blazing Comets out of his Orb: If we be Starres in his hands, we can prove our placing from him.

Uſe 2. Secondly, This ſerves to condemne them that are theeves and intruders into Gods Heritage, that never came in by the doore, but by ſome other way, that are hirelings and will leave the ſheep, for their own advantage; Gain makes them take Livings, gain makes them chop and change, that never went to Chriſt for his approbation; It is ſaid of the Apoſtles, that the Rulers and Elders perceived that they had been with Jeſus, Acts 4.13. Thoſe are Miniſters of Pariſhes indeed, that have been with Jeſus, But theſe men, no man can perceive that ever they have been with Jeſus Chriſt, that ever they had any allowance from him, and yet they will be crowding in into Livings. But I let this paſſe.

Uſe 3. Thirdly, Hath Chriſt the placing of Miniſters? Then this is of uſe unto you, that have Miniſters of Chriſts placing among you. Take heed how ye carry your ſelves under your Miniſtery. If you doe not obey their Doctrine, you ſinne againſt Chriſt, O reject not their reproofs, put not off the Word of God in their mouthes, if ye doe, ye doe not put off men, but God. It was an excellent exhortation of that godly King, Jehoſaphat: Heare me, O ye inhabitants of Iudah and Ieruſalem, believe the Lords Prophets, and ye ſhall proſper, 2 Chron. 20 20. O, if Kings and Princes would doe ſo now, call upon people up and down, O Sirs, believe the Lords Prophets and ye ſhall proſper: Ye that have Gods Miniſters among you, believe them, may be when they argue againſt all your ſinfull courſes, they tell you of hell, and damnation, and heaven, and ſalvation, ye hardly believe any ſuch thing: O believe them, that it may goe well with you. Remember they be of Chriſts placing among you; He put them into your Pulpits, he gives them the Themes that they preach to you from day to day. Believe them.

Uſe 4. Fourthly, Hath Chriſt the placing of Miniſters? Then never complain of graceleſſe Miniſters. O, ye have graceleſſe Miniſters, and our Miniſter is not as he ſhould be, he is not a good liver, he does not preach to the Conſcience. People are apt to complaine of Patrons, and ſuch and ſuch cauſes, but let me tell you, you murmure againſt Jeſus Chriſt, every Pariſh in England might have a good and a godly Miniſter, a Miniſter after Gods own heart, for all that I know, if they would goe to Jeſus Chriſt; he hath the placing of Miniſters.

Now what is the reaſon that there are no more able worthy Miniſters every where?

I Anſwer, Surely, if Chriſt were ſought to, this would quickly be holpen; when Judah had no Miniſters in the Captivity, their ſoules ſtarved for want of good feeding, thouſands periſht, and their ſoules were quite loſt for lack of Viſion. What ſayes Chriſt to them, Turne ye back-ſliding children, ſaith the Lord, for I am married unto you, and I will take you, one of a City, and two of a Family, and I will bring you to Zion. And I will give you Paſtours according to my heart, which ſhall feed you with knowledge and underſtanding, Jer. 3.14, 15. People are ſubject to murmure, and this is long of ſuch and ſuch, that we have have no better Miniſters; whereas the truth is, it is long of our ſelves; Iniquity abounds every where, the love of many waxes cold, people grow weary of wholſome Doctrine, they have itching eares; they are all full fed, any Miniſtery is good enough for them, If a man Propheſie of Wine and ſtrong drink, he ſhall even be the Prophet of this people, Mich. 2.11. That is, any Prophet is good enough for them, fitter then a better. One that would ſhew people how to get Bread and Drinke, and Wine, and profits, and pleaſures; People would rather hear ſuch a one preach, than to hear of Repentance and Mortification, and Faith, and Holineſſe, and the wayes of God, they eare not for theſe things. The true preaching of the Word, is as contrary to the diſpoſition of men as can be. Nothing is more irkſom unto them than the Word rightly taught. It goes againſt their luſts, it croſſes their wicked wills. They are weary of it, they ſay unto God, Depart from us, they will not let Chriſt reign in their hearts, therefore we may rather wonder that there is any good Miniſter in the Kingdome any where; we are to bleſs God, and pray for our Governours, that we have any good Miniſters at all, the truth is, we deſerve not any There is ſo little Religion every where, ſo much Hypocriſie, ſo much Profeſſion without any power of Godlineſſe, ſuch a deal of vanity and unſoundneſs, and hollow-heartedneſs, nay, among ſuch as have gone for good Chriſtians, ſo much falſhood and rottenneſs, & Apſtacy, to what end ſhould Chriſt let us have any more preaching? We give the world occaſion to think, that Preaching is the cauſe of all this wretchedneſs. What a diſhonour is this to Jeſus Chriſt? And therefore no mervail we have no more, we may admire the patience of God that we have any.

Fifthly, Hath Chriſt the placing of Miniſters? Then ſee whither to goe for good Miniſters. Chriſt is the general Patron of all Livings; He can preſent whom he will to a Pariſh, and therefore we ſhould pray unto him. When our Saviour Chriſt preached here and there, and ſaw how the people came out of all Pariſhes to him, it ſeems, though they had Levites in their own Synagogues, yet they did not know how to feed their flocks; they were as ſheep for all them without a Sheepherd, there was hardly ere a good Miniſter among them all. Mark what the Text ſayes, Jeſus had compaſſion on them, becauſe they were ſcattered abroad as ſheep having no Sheepherd: O, ſayes he, Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harveſt that he would ſend forth labourers into this harveſt, Mat. 9.38. So much for the firſt. Uſe 5.

Secondly, Now as Chriſt hath the placing of Miniſters, ſo hee the continuing of them, as long as he pleaſes. He continued the Prophet Iſaiah in his Miniſtry, during the reign of four Kings. He kept the Prophet Hoſea in his function, during the reign of five Kings, though the times were very bad. When it was told Chriſt that Herod ſought his life, that he would not onely put him beſides his Miniſtery, but alſo his very life; ſayes he, Goe tell that Fox, Behold I caſt out Devils, and I doe cures to day and to morrow, and the third day I ſhall be perfected, Luke 13.32. Chriſt had his time appointed him by his Father himſelf, and he would preach all that time out, and all the Devils in hell, and all his Enemies on earth ſhould not hinder him. So, Beloved, it is with all his Miniſters, he hath ſet them a time, and he hath power to continue them all that time. I ſhall preach to day, and to morrow, and ſuch a day, do the world what they can, they cannot hinder his Miniſters from preaching, till Chriſt pleaſe, as he told his people: Though the Lord give you the bread of adverſity, and the water of affliction, yet ſhall not thy Teachers be removed into a corner any more: But thine eyes ſhall ſee thy Teachers, Eſay 30.20. q.d. though thy Miniſters have been put by, yet I will reſtore them againe, and they ſhall not be put by any more. I have power to continue them as long as I will; when he called Noah to preach to the old world, he appointed him 120. years, and he continued him all that while, whether the wicked world would or no.

Reas. 1. And the Reason is, first, Becauſe Miniſters are his Embaſſadours. Now a King, it is in his choyce, how long his Embaſſadors ſhall lye Leiger in a forrain Countrey, he hath ſo many buſineſſes for them to do, and ſo long they ſhall continue there. So, true Miniſters are the Embaſſadors of Chriſt, as the Apoſtle Paul ſpeaks, Now then we are Embaſſadors for Chriſt, as though God did beſeech you by us, we pray you in Chriſts ſtead, be reconciled unto God, 2 Cor. 5. 20. We are Chriſt's Ambaſſadors, and therefore he will continue us as long as he liſt; as long as he hath any buſineſs to do, as long as he hath any ſoules to ſave, any men or women to reconcile to his Father, or to build up, ſo long he will continue us. It is a doleſull ſigne when Chriſt takes away his Miniſters from a place, it is a ſign he hath no more ſoules to ſave; if he had, he would let his Embaſſadors lye beſeeching ſtill: So that this is one great reaſon, becauſe Miniſters are Embaſſadors.

Reaſ. 2. Secondly, Becauſe Chriſt hath all power in Heaven and in Earth, as he told his Apoſtles, when he ſent them out to preach, All power is given to me in heaven and in earth, Matthew 28. 18. q. d. I have power to ſend you, and I have power to continue your Miniſtery as long as I think fitting, and I have power to take you away, I have power to ordaine you either for Salvation or the Damnation of men. Whom I will, I can convert by your Sermons, and whom I will, I can deliver up to the counſell of their owne hearts, that they ſhall not be converted by you. Now, if Chriſt hath all power in Heaven and in Earth, then he hath power to continue his Miniſters as long as his will is. I need not ſtand to prove this, it is too evident: He hath power to lengthen his Miniſters lives, to prolong their liberties, when he takes away one, hee hath power to put in another as good: When he meant to take away Elias, he anoynted Eliſha in his roome. If their enemies be never ſo many, he can tye up their hands; He delivered Paul from the mouth of the Lyon: though forty men had vowed to take him away by death, he diverted their plot, and continued him ſtill: Nay, when he was in bonds, yet he was able to get him liberty to go abroad with his Keeper, and to preach the Kingdome of GOD to as many as came. Suppoſe the world be never ſo mad againſt Chriſts Miniſters, yet as long as he hath any more work for them to do, he can hold off their fingers from medling with them, till they have finiſhed the Task that he hath given them to do.

Uſe 1. The uſe of this is, firſt, That Miniſters ſhould not fear to be deprived of their Liberty, ſo long as they do well; indeed if they do ill, if they be wicked or idle, or unworthy, ſuch Miniſters ſhould feare they doe deſerve to be put down. But if we be godly Miniſters, it is our baſeneſs to fear any ſuch thing, Chriſt hath the continuing of us, our times are not in mens hands, but in his. What a horrible thing is it, that we ſhould goe againſt our Conſcience in any thing, or be afraid to ſpeak what God bids us, to be meal-mouth'd, to be diſcouraged with rumours, or dangers, we ſhould keep nothing back of the whole counſel of God; we are Stars in his hands, and he hath the continuing of us; though men fight againſt us, they cannot prevaile againſt us, till our buſineſſe is all done. As the Lord told the Prophet Jeremiah, They ſhall fight againſt thee, but they ſhall not prevaile againſt thee, for I am with thee, Jeremiah 1. 19. Let us then be afraid of nothing but ſinne. Let us be afraid to doe any evil, either towards God or towards man; let us be harmleſſe in the midſt of a crooked and a perverſe generation. Let us deale faithfully with our people, let us undauntedly Preach, Rebuke, Exhort, with all long ſuffering and Doctrine, make our faces hard againſt the wickeds faces; no matter for their railings, their threatning ſpeeches, their malicious accuſations, and not feare, the Lord Jeſus hath the continuing of us.

Uſe 2. Secondly, Here we may ſee the reaſon why the Goſpel continues in any place; a man would wonder it ſhould continue any where, becauſe the world cannot abide it. Which of the Prophets have not your Fathers perſecuted? ſayes Stephen. Act. 7 52. They that doe evill, hate the light, it cuts them to the heart; Every ones hates me, ſayes the Prophet, he was reproached for the Words ſake. Report, ſay they, and we will report it. One time they put him into a dungeon; Another time they would have killed him. Shemaiah writ Letters to the high Prieſt againſt him, Jer. 29.25. And yet he continued his Miniſtery, untill the day of the Captivity. Nay, he had liberty, when others had their liberty taken away. Ye know Chriſt himſelf Preached dayly in the Temple, and they took him not, though they gnaſht their teeth at his Doctrine, and ſometimes were in the mind to throw him down headlong and break his neck, ſometimes to ſtone him; yet till his houre was come, he had his liberty.

And the truth is, a man would wonder how any of Gods Miniſters have their Liberties continued; when there be ſo many Drunkards, ſo many Enemies of all goodneſſe, ſo many that follow their own ungodly luſts, and the Goſpel is an eye-ſore unto them, and yet in many places it ſtands ſtill. This is Gods doing. You ſee here Chriſt hath the continuing of his Miniſters; they ſhall have their liberty, as long as God hath any uſe for them.

Thirdly, Is it ſo, that Chriſt hath the continuing of his Miniſters? then this is of uſe alſo unto you; Now you heare whence to have your good Miniſters continued, even by ſeeking to Jeſus Chriſt, he can lay a charge upon all the world where they are, to let them alone. He can ſay, Doe my Prophets no harme, Pſal. 105.15 You will ſay, why? what ſhall we doe? Uſe 3.

I Anſwer; firſt, Let us repent of our ſinnes, it is our ſinnes that remove the Miniſters of God, if we would repent us of our ſinnes, and turn from our wicked wayes, and let the Word work upon our hearts, this would continue the Miniſtery of the Word; as God told Judah, when they ſhould repent of their ſinnes, O ſayes he, I will be your GOD and you ſhall be my people, and my Sanctuary ſhall be among you for evermore, Ezek. 37.27.28. That is, by Sanctuary he meanes his publique Worſhip, the preaching of his Word, and other of the meanes of grace, when they repented of their ſinnes, then theſe ſhould be continued: So, Beloved, if ye would repent of your ſinnes, I doe not mean one or two, or a few, or ſo; But if there might be a generall Reformation among us. this would faſten the Word among us, as in a ſure place.

Secondly, Let us prize the Goſpel, the Goſpel loves to ſtay there where it is welcome: It will never goe away, if it might have good entertainment. If wee would honour it, and glorifie it, and pluck up our affections in the deareſt manner to it, this would preſerve it among us for ever. The Church of Philadelphia, that uſed the Word beſt, had it longeſt, &c. Rev. 3.10. Our Saviour Chriſt hath a ſaying, Into whatſoever Towne or City ye enter, enquire who is worthy, there abide, Matth 10.11. And as he ſayes, Luk. 10.7. Goe not from houſe to houſe. The Goſpel does not love to change houſes till it be urged; ſo it does not love to change Towns, if it may have good uſage; So, Beloved, if we would give the Goſpel good uſage, the Lord would continue it; like a Gueſt that is the willinger to ſtay, when he ſees he is among Friends.

Thirdly, Let us bring forth the fruits of it. The Husband-man will ever continue ploughing of his ground, as long as he ſees it will give him a good crop. But when he perceives it will not quit charges, then he layes it Fallow. So Chriſt would have ſtayed his Word ſtill in Judah and Jeruſalem, if they would have brought forth competent fruit. But when once they grew barren, he ſaid he would take his Kingdome away. The Kingdome of GOD ſhall be taken away from you, and given to a Nation that will bring forth the fruits thereof, *Mat.*21.43.

Fourthly, Let us be earneſt with God to have his Goſpel continue. Im-portunity may doe much: Importunity held Christ a while longer with the Disciples, Luk. 24.29. Importunity held the Levite three or foure dayes longer than otherwise he would, Judg. 19.4,5,6,7. O, if we would be importunate with Christ to stay his Gospell still; as Jacob did the Angell, Thou shalt not goe, till thou blesse me, Lord thy Gospell shall not goe till it convert me, and it shall not go from me willingly, till it convert me first; If every one would hang upon Christ, to stay his Gospell still, and, Thou shalt not let it goe till it hath done my soule good, till it hath inlightned mine eyes, and quickned my heart, this would obtaine much; may be, some does doe thus: as Jeremiah did: O thou hope of Israel, Why shouldest thou be as a stranger in the Land, and as a way-faring man, that turneth aside to stay for a night? Ierem. 14.8. Alas! that would not doe, if there had been many Jeremiah's to doe thus, then they might have gotten him to stay longer. So, may be, some doe cry importunately thus, O thou hope of Jerusalem, &c. And so I fall upon the third thing: Ye have heard; First, how Christ hath the placing of his Ministers; Secondly, he hath the continuing of them.

Doct. Thirdly, Now it followes, He hath the removing of them too. People are prone to look upon second causes, but Christ is the supreame, he is the principall cause of this judgement upon men, to take away his Ministers, as the Prophet Isaiah speakes, The Lord of Hosts doth take away from Jerusalem and from Judah, the mighty man, and the Judge, and the Prophet, Esay 3.1,2. Whether it be by death, or removall, or imprisonment, or suspending, or any other way: It is he that deprives a people of his faithfull Ministers, whosoever be the instrument.

First, He can take them away by Death out of the world; Thus the Lord took away the Prophet Enoch. Gen. 5.24.

Secondly, He can take them away by removall; Thus he took away Jonas from Israel, and sent him to Niniveh, Jon. 3.1. Ye know he was a Prophet in Israel, and the Lord removed him thence to the Land of Assyria.

Thirdly, He can take them away by letting them be imprisoned; Thus he took away John the Baptist, by letting Herod put him into Prison, for telling him of his sinnes, Mark 6.17. So, Ahab imprisoned Michaiah for telling him the truth.

Fourthly, He can take them away by letting them be suspended, and inhibited from preaching, by letting wicked men have their wills That say to the Seers, See not; and to the Prophets, Prophesie not; Speak to us smooth things, prophesie deceits, Esay 30.10. Thus King Amasiah silenced the Prophet that reproved him, 2 Chron. 25.16.

Fifthly, He can take them away by silencing them himself: this is as bad as taking them away for the time; thus himself stopt Ezekiels mouth, and made him dumb.

Reas. 1. Now the reason why Christ does do thus, is, First, because of the wicked, they will not receive their Doctrine. Thus the Lord Jesus took away Paul out of Jerusalem, Make haste, get thee quickly out of Jerusalem, for they will not receive thy testimony concerning me, Acts 22.18.

Reas. 2. Secondly, The Lord does it in regard of his own people, because they begin to forsake their first love. This was the reason why the Lord threatned to take away the Ministery of the Word out of Ephesus, I will remove thy Candlestick out of its place, except thou repent, Rev. 2.5.

Thirdly, The Lord does this sometimes in regard of the Ministery it selfe, that it may be more precious afterwards, as it is said there in Samuel, when the Lord had deprived Israel of his Prophets, for a matter of foure score years together, O sayes the Text, The Word of the Lord was pretious in those dayes, because there was no Vision, 1 Sam. 3.1.

Use 1. The Use of this is; first, Is it so, that it is Christ that removes Ministers? Then

Then this ſhould teach us to mourne before him, if ever any of our Miniſters be taken away by any meanes, we ſhould ſee whoſe hand is upon us, the hand of the Lord is gone out againſt us, it is he that inflicteth this judgement; and therefore we ſhould mourn unto him, as the Church did. When all their Prophets were gone, and all Religion went to wrack, and the enemies had burnt up their Synagogues, and broken up all their godly Aſſemblies: O how they mourned unto God for it! O God, why haſt thou caſt us off? Why does thine anger ſmoake againſt the ſheep of thy paſture? Remember thy Congregation, which thou haſt purchaſed of old. Remember mount Zion wherein thou haſt dwelt, Pſal. 74.1,2. This was a heavy judgement indeed, they felt the Lords anger ſmoak againſt them then. Why? What was the matter? We ſee not our ſignes, there is no more any Prophet, verſe 9.

Secondly, another Uſe is, Let us look into the meritorious cauſe, which is nothing but our ſinnes. If Gods Miniſters be put downe at any time, it is our ſinnes that put them downe. For if Chriſt be the inflicting cauſe, certainly our ſinnes are the deſerving cauſe; we can blame none but our own ſinnes, if any thing ſtop any good Miniſters mouth, it is they, it is peoples Drunkenneſſe, and diſorder, you are the cauſe, your unfruitfulneſſe, and ſecurity, and hypocriſie, and formality; you doe not learne goodneſſe and godlineſſe under the Word, ye remaine vaine and blind, and hardned in your hearts under the ſame. What Pariſhes more diſorderly, than thoſe where moſt Preaching is? where is more hatred of word, and vertue, and piety than there? where is more railing at a good life, and holy walking, and ſuch as deſire to doe well? The more Preaching people heare, for the moſt part, the worſe they grow. People come to Church it may be, but they make it a cloake for their villanies, they will give us the hearing, but no obedience, no practiſe, no Reformation, no ſigne of amendment, no love, no truth, no faithfulneſſe, no communion at all, wel-a-neare, where moſt Preaching is! If any thing ſtop our mouthes, this will doe it And indeed what may men think of us, but that we are a company of hypocrites, and teachers of vanities? what are theſe Preachers? we ſee little good they doe, what becomes of all their Preaching? Factions and odde opinions in our Towne, and diſſoluteneſſe, and all manner of licentiouſneſſe in another. If the whole world ſhould let us alone, I verily feare God himſelf would put us down immediately, in the end. So many ſcandals, ſo many thouſand offences are given every day, that its a wonder we ſtand as we doe. That the Lord of heaven lets any Miniſter in England, come into a Pulpit more; nothing but pride, and ſelf-conceits, and ſelf-truſtings, and ſeared Conſciences, dead hearts, and profaneneſſe; unleſſe it be a very little handfull; O Beloved, if where preaching is, it were honoured as it ought to be, and obeyed as it ſhould, if people would do as we teach, I dare be bold to affirm we might Preach long enough. If our Townes would ſweetly reforme, ſet up good Government, root out all diſorders and curſed abuſes, live like Chriſtians indeed, be humble, and ſober, and loving, and dutifull to GOD and Man; giving to Cæſar the things that are Cæſars, and to God the things that are Gods. If we would feare God, and honour the King: Reverence Gods Courts, obey the voyce of his ſervants, love CHRIST and his Word, above our appointed food, this would lengthen the Miniſtery of the Land; this would be a meanes for the eſtabliſhing of Gods Kingdome among us; Chriſt would never repent that ever he ſent his Goſpell unto us, where we have ſome, we ſhould have more, where we have more, we ſhould have a hundred times more, as the Apoſtle Peter ſayes, Who is he that will harme you, if ye be followers of that which is good? 1 Pet. 3.13. Uſe 2

Thirdly, another Uſe is; Is it Chriſt that takes away Miniſters, either by death, or reſtraining, or by any other way? Then let this be a meanes to exhort us to repent of our ſinnes, that Chriſt may ſtill give a doore of utterance to Uſe 3 his Ministers, that they may still speak in his name. This should move us to seek God. When Peter was cast into prison, O what fasting, and crying, and praying was there to God for him, till he was restored againe! Act. 12,5. they did not goe to Herod to restore him; No, they knew Christ was he that took him from the Church, whoever were the instrument; therefore they sought to Heaven for him again; If any peoples Ministery be gone, this is the best way to fetch them again. Paul knew this to be true, and therefore when he was in prison at Rome, he writes to Philemon thus, I trust that through your prayers, I shall be given unto you; Philemon, ver. 22. Nay, he is so confident that if people would but cry hard for him to God, that he should quickly be enlarged, Nay, sayes he, prepare me a lodging, for I trust that through your prayers I shall be given unto you. q d. I make no question, but I shall out of prison, if you will but be earnest with God. So also, it seemes the Authour to the Hebrewes, was restrained from Preaching; Now mark what an exhortation he uses, Pray for us, sayes he, and I beseech you the rather to doe this, that I may be restored unto you the sooner, Heb. 13.18,19.

Thus I have finished this part of the Description of Jesus Christ, that hath the seven Stars in his hand, and the whole Subscription too: These things, saith he, that hath the seven Spirits of God, and the seven Stars. I come now to the Epistle it selfe. I know thy works, that thou hast a name, that thou livest and art dead: But of this more, &c.

Revel. 3. 1.

And unto the Angel of the Church in* Sardis, *write, These things, saith hee, that hath the seven Spirits of God, and the seven Stars, I know thy works, that thou hast a name that thou livest, and art dead.

I know thy Works, &c.

1. YE have have heard two things concerning this Epistle; First, the Inscription, that declareth the Person to whom it was sent, To the Angel of the Church in Sardis, write. That is, it was sent principally to the Ministers of the Church in the Towne of Sardis, and also to the Christians that were in that Church.

2. Secondly, The Subscription that declareth from whom it was sent, These things, saith he, that hath the seven Spirits of GOD, and the seven Stars: That is, it was sent fron JESUS CHRIST.

Now we come to the third thing, and that is the subject matter of this Epistle, which consists of three things;

1. First, A Reprehension of the sins of the Minister, and the body of his Congregation.

2. Secondly, A Direction, or the shewing of the remedy for the curing of their sinnes.

3. Thirdly, A Commendation of some particular persons in that Congregation, that were not carryed away with the sins of the times.

The Reprehension is either in generall, I know thy works, that is, I know them all, and I know them to be stark naught for the most part, whatever they seem: they may seem to be very good, but I tell you plainly, I know them all what they be, q. d. Generally they are stark naught.

And then in particular he instances in two, First, the sin of hypocrisie, or seeming to be good, Thou hast a name that thou livest. Secondly, the

ſin of deadneſſe of heart; But thou art dead. This is the reprehenſion, or the reproof.

Then followes the Direction, or the ſhewing of the Remedy; for he does not reprove them out of any ill will, but for their good. And therefore he preſcribes them a Remedy, and the Remedy is two-fold: The firſt is, To ſtrengthen things that remaine, that are ready to dye, verſe 2. q.d. As many of you as are not quite and clean dead, ſtir up your ſelves, quicken up your hearts; and this is, firſt, illuſtrated by ſhewing how they ſhould doe thus; Be watchfull, ſayes he, q.d. that is the reaſon why ye languiſh on this faſhion, and ye will languiſh more and more, becauſe ye are not watchful, therefore be watchfull: and then it is urged by rendring a motive to uſe this Remedy: For I have not found thy works perfect before God, that is, thou art hardly ſincere a jot, thou art full of hypocriſie and formality, and thou wilt loſe all thy labour, if thou doeſt not look well about thee; therefore ſhake up thy ſelf, and ſtrengthen the things, &c. This is the firſt remedy.

The ſecond remedy is to repent, verſe 3. and this is amplified by ſhewing how, and that is two wayes, firſt, Remember how, &c. i.e. Conſider how thou haſt been taught, and bewaile thy declinings, for thou art horribly departed from what thou haſt heard out of the Word. Secondly, Hold faſt, i.e. ſo bewaile thy warpings and degeneratings, that thou maiſt get up again, and hold thee faſt there, when thou art up.

Now, leſt they ſhould neglect the uſing of this Remedy, the Lord Jeſus ſharpens his ſpeech with a threatning, telling them the danger, if they will not be awakened, If therefore thou ſhalt not watch, I will come on thee as a thief, and thou ſhalt not know, &c. Thus you ſee the Remedy.

Then the next thing is the Commendation of ſome ſlaine perſons, aw Birds, that were not carried away with the ſins of the Times, and in the common deadneſs of the Congregation, where they lived; and theſe he does commend very much.

And then an encouragement to give them an excellent promiſe.

The Commendation in theſe words, Thou haſt a few names even in Sardis, which have not defiled their garments, verſe 4. That is, there be ſome among you, though they be but a few; and he commends them for two things:

1. Firſt, from the Place, that they could be in Sardis, and yet keep their quickning; Thou haſt a few names even in Sardis, even in Sardis, q.d. in dead Sardis, even there be ſome lively Chriſtians, that are not dead.

2. Secondly, from the quality of their Care, expreſſed by a Metaphor of keeping their Garments clean, which have not defiled their garments; that is, they have been very careſull indeed, that they are not ſooted and ſoyled with ſo many ill examples; though others be dead, yet they will not be dead too for company.

And then their Promiſe followes for their encouragement in theſe words, They ſhall walk after me in white, in the ſame verſe, that is, I will give them the grace of Perſeverance, and will keep them unſpotted unto my heavenly Kingdome and Glory; And he addes a reaſon why he makes them ſuch a Promiſe, in theſe words, For they are worthy; not as though they did merit Perſeverance and Glory; no, but they are worthy in Chriſt, and Chriſt hath made them meet to be partakers of this mercy. Thus you ſee the matter of the Example.

Well, now to come to the Reproof, and firſt in generall, I know thy works, that is, I know them all, and I know them to be ſtark naught for the moſt part, whatever they ſeem; they may ſeem to be very good and godly; but be it known unto you, I know them all, what they be, q.d. generally they are ſtark naught.

Doctr. The first point we hence gather, is, that the Lord knowes every mans ill courses; he is privy to every mans sins; though men carry them never so cleverly and closely, yet he knowes them.

1. First, he sees mens sinfull works; they can do nothing but he sees it, as Elihu speaks, His eyes are upon the wayes of men, and he seeth all their goings. There is no darknesse nor shadow of death, where the workers of iniquity may hide themselves, Job 34.21,22. What ever evil men doe, they cannot hide it from him; they may goe into a house, and think to shut out all men from seeing of them, but they cannot shut him out; they cannot get out of his sight be they never so private, and whoever sees them not, yet the Lord sees them.

2. Secondly, he knowes every syllable that men speak at any time, as David sayes, There is not a word in my tongue, but lo, O Lord, thou knowest it altogether, Psal.130 3. The Prophet Elisha could tell what the King of Aram spake in his privy chamber, 2 Kings 6.12. The Lord can tell what words people speak under the Rose, what they say in their beds, what they whisper in their close meetings, what they belch out on their Ale-benches. Enoch sayes, he will have them all up at the day of judgement, nay if a word be but at the Tongues end, he heares it.

3. Thirdly, he knowes every thought in mens hearts, as Moses sayes, And God saw that the wickednesse of man was great upon the earth, and the very imagination of the thoughts of his heart was onely evil continually, Gen.6.5. Though mens thoughts be slye things, and are out of mens eyes, and of Devills eyes, and Angels eyes, yet they are not out of his, he sees what men think.

4. Fourthly, he knowes all that ever a man hath done in times past, he revealed unto Moses what Adam did in the Garden, what Cain in the Field, what braggs Lamech used before his wives, what villany Lots Daughters did in the night-time, many hundred yeares after they were done. He knowes what was done yesterday and t'other day, and t'other day, seven hundred years agoe. He hath a Kalender of all the sins of men ever since the beginning of the World; what people did in their child-hood, what in their youth, what in their manhood, though they themselves have forgotten, yet he remembers: There is no time out of minde unto Him, as Solomon sayes, God requires that which is past, Eccl.3.15.

5. Fifthly, he knowes what sins men will commit hereafter; Christ told his Apostles before-hand, what wicked dealings they should meet with; the Lord told Moses what Pharaoh would do, before he went to him, I know he will not let you goe, Exod.3.19. So likewise when the children of Israel were in the Wildernesse, the Lord told them even then that he knew all the wickednesse that ever they would do when they came into Canaan, I know their imaginations even now, sayes he, before I have brought them into the land which I sware, Deut.31.21.

6. Sixthly, he knowes not onely what sins they have committed heretofore nor onely what they will commit hereafter, but also he knowes what they would commit, in such and such cases. He knew Abimelech would have taken Sarah, if he had not hindred him. He knew that the men of Keilah would betray David, if he should stay there, 1 *Sam.*23.12. He knowes what a rich man would do if he were poore, what a poore man would doe if he were rich. He knowes that such a one would play the Apostate, rather than lose all his living; he knowes that such a man would do mischief, if he had wherewithall; he sees what is in every mans heart, what lies particularly in every mans nature. It may be here's one that dies in his infancy, the Lord knowes what he would have done, if he had lived till he was a man; here's one that dies at forty, the Lord knowes what a wretch he would have been, if he had lived twenty twenty or thirty yeares longer; here's one that dwells now in a good family, it may be now he conformes to good duties, he does not fly out, but the Lord knowes how he would be a very rakeſhame, if he lived in another place.

Seventhly, the Lord knowes what men are, and what they have been, and what they will be, as he knowes all their thoughts, words and works. He knowes all their diſpoſitions, their perſons, their natures, their qualities, their affections, and ends and aymes and motives, and eſtates; he knowes how many are rotten though they profeſſe never ſo much, how many are unſound though they be never ſo well eſteemed in the Church; He knowes in what eſtate every man ſtands in. He knowes vaine men, he ſeeth wickedneſſe alſo, will not he then puniſh it? Job 11. 11. The reaſons of this point, that God knowes all mens ſins and ſinfull courſes, he knowes all that they ever have done, or do, or will do, or can do, or would do, are:

First, becauſe God is infinite in knowledge, as David ſayes, his underſtanding is infinite, Pſal. 147. 5. as the Prophet Eſay ſayes, there's no ſearching of his underſtanding, Iſa. 40. 28. Well, if he be infinite in Knowledge, what can a poore Creature keepe cloſe from him? who can hide his iniquities for him? who can ſet ſuch a colour upon his wicked deviſes, that he cannot diſcover them? let a man excuſe himſelf, may be his excuſes may paſſe currant among men, but God muſt needs know the falſeneſſe of his excuſes, and that they are but Fig-leaves: men may pretend what they will, and deny what they will with an impudent forehead, and ſet a good face upon what they will, and this may go unperceived among men; but Gods underſtanding is infinite, and therefore he knowes all that men do, he knowes how every man ſtands affected unto him, he knowes how people come to Church, and whether they meane to do what they have been taught, whether they meane to reforme what they have been reproved for; for, He is infinite in Knowledge, and therefore he is privy to all the ſins of men.

Secondly, as he is omniſcient, ſo he is omnipreſent; he is preſent every where; whither can any Creature goe from his preſence? if he go into Bed or Chamber, or Cloſet, or Street or high-way, or Alehouſe, or Drab houſe, home or abroad, he can go no where but where God is, and how can he do ought, but God muſt needs ſee him? God himſelfe argues on this manner, Can any hide himſelfe in ſecret places that I ſhould not ſee him? do not I fill Heaven and Earth? ſayth the Lord, Jer. 33. 24. q.d. If I be every where, I muſt needs be able to ſee every where.

Thirdly, the Lord is omniprovident, as I may ſo ſpeak, he hath a hand either in the making of all things, or at leaſt in the permitting and diſpoſing of all things. All that is good, he does it himſelfe, or elſe it cannot be done. All that is evill, he muſt permit it to be, or elſe it cannot be committed; nothing is done without his concurrence or ſufferance; therefore he muſt needs know all mens ſins, he knowes what he hath ſuffered to be, or does ſuffer, or will ſuffer; not ſo much as the ſins of men can fall out without him; as Peter ſpeaking of Judas his ſins and the Jewes, and Pilats and Herods, they did nothing but what he knew they would do; why they did nothing, but what his Hand and Counſell determined before to be done, Acts 4. 28. therefore he knew the Jewes would betray Chriſt; he could tell the Prophet Zachary diverſe hundred yeares before, that he would take 30 pieces of Silver to do it. He could tell the Prophet Eſay that they would ſmite him and buffet him, that they would reckon him among tranſgreſſors; he could tell the Prophet David that they ſhould pierce his hands and his Feet, and that they ſhould offer him Vineger to drinke; the Lord knew all theſe ſinnes of yours, why? becauſe he had decreed them. True, he did not decree that he would make them commit them, but he decreed that they themſelves ſhould be the agents of them; it ſhould be meerly their fault, their covetouſnes, their malice, their mer-pleasing, their wicked disposition; I, but he ordered these things, and therefore he must needs know them. The Drunkard could not hold up the cup to his mouth, if God had not intended to preserve his armes, and his mouth at that time; he could not go to the Tipling-house, but that God intended to continue him his feet, and his health; no man could think a wicked thought, nor speake a naughty word, but that God upholds his heart and his tongue in the interim; if God should forbeare his goodness to him, he would be speechlesse, and not able to thinke so much as any thought at all; and this aggravates mans sinnes, that he hath need of Gods goodnesse at the same time, and yet that he should sinne against his Maker.

4. Fourthly, the Lord knows every mans sinnes, because he hath a Candle in every mans bosome; he hath made mens hearts on that wise, that he hath a Candle in them all. Ye know there is a spirit in a man, that we call Conscience; that is Gods candle, as Solomon sayes, The spirit of man is the Candle of the Lord, searching all the inward parts of the belly, Prov. 20.27. Well if he have a Candle shining in every mans bosome, what can there be hidden in the dark? Nay, he knoweth mens hearts and wayes better then they know themselves, as the Physitian can better judge of his Patients body than himselfe. Christ knew Peters unbeleeving heart, when he knew it not himselfe, though all men be offended in thee, yet will not I; Christ knew he would be offended in him that very night; So he knew Hazaels wicked life when the man that owned it, would not beleeve it; Is thy servant a Dog, sayes he, that I should be so wicked? Yet he knew he would be so wicked and cruell; and therefore God can bring to a mans mind a thousand things that he never dream'd of before; many a man deceives himself all his life-time: but when he comes to sicken and die, then God shewes him what he is, and what he hath done, and now he sees he is a damned wretch, and yet before, though all the Ministers in England had told him so much, he would not have beleived it.

5. Fifthly, He must needs know every mans sinnes, because he is the Judge of all the World, and he is to judge every sinner according to his deeds; Now if he should not know all his sinnes, he could not judge righteous judgment. The Judge must know all secrets, otherwise he cannot well judge.

Now beloved, God is a righteous Judge, and therefore no sinne can scape him; God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good or whether it be evill, Eccles. 12.14. True it is, he shall not want witnesses in that day, for Conscience shall be a thousand witnesses; yet it is needfull that himselfe should have perfect knowledge of all the actions of men. For why is Conscience so ready to accuse a man, when it is awakened? It is onely because it is conscious that God knoweth all its doings; now if God had not perfect knowledge himself, conscience would not witnes all then, neither could it make a sinner confes all. But God knowing all, this is it that will make conscience to speak truth. The Psalmist being to dispute against a company of Atheisticall people that said, Tush God shall not see, Psal. 94.7. marke how he reasons against them, He brings an argument from Gods judging of men, to prove that God must needs see; O sayes he, It is he that chastiseth the heathen, shall not he correct? he that teacheth man knowledge, shall not he know? vers. 10. q.d. ye deny God to be judge, if ye say he does not know, how can he correct them? will he judge men for that he knowes not what? no, if he be the Judge of the whole World, he must needs know all that men do.

Jeremy hath a very excellent saying, Jer. 11.20.

Use 1. The Use of this is, First, is it so that God knows all mens sinful courses? if men be dead hearted, he knows it; if they be heartlesse in good duties, he knows it; though they would be loth that men should know what they are, & do keep it from them, yet they cannot dawb it before God; he knows it; then this may serve to confute them that say, God does not know sin. This was Averroes his opinion, who sayes God does not know sin; God knows all that ever he knows by know-knowing of himſelf,& how can he know ſin,becauſe he can ſee no ſuch thing in himſelfe? I anſwer, This is to derogate from the knowledge of God, & to deny the perfection of it. True, ſin is an evill, yea the greateſt evill of all evills; yet the knowledge of it is good: nay, it were ſtrange to ſay that God does not know who ſin againſt him; that were a pity; if men be abuſed, we ſay it were pity but that they ſhould know of it; and if we do love them, we tell them who they be that abuſe them, and what the abuſes are. Certainly, God knowes who do abuſe him, and how people carry themſelves towards all his Commandements and worſhip; it is a part of his perfection to know it. Againe, we our ſelves may know ſin,and may know ſin by the contrary, as we know what darkneſſe is by the contrary, which is light; and ſhall we ſay that God does not know it? God damnes all the wicked, one after another for it, and therefoe he does know it; nay we ſee that God brings ſecret things to light here in this World, when people had thought that no body ſhould ever come to know it, yet he does often bring ſecret ſinnes to light here in this World; how much more at the laſt day? And though God knowes all that ever he knowes by looking upon himſelfe, and ſin be not there, but nothing but good and goodneſſe it ſelfe,yet he can know it as a Medium to bring good out of it; And ſo it is good as he wills it, and therefore he decrees it, and therefore he muſt needs know it and know it in himſelfe. For the permiſſion onely of it is in himſelfe, and the acting which is evill is out of himſelfe; neither does it follow that Gods underſtanding ſhould become vile by knowing ſo many vile things, as Vorſtius and others do blaſphemouſly affirme, and thence they would conclude their curſed Atheiſticall axiomes; we indeed may make our ſelves vile by looking upon vile and baſe things, becauſe we cannot keepe our hearts from ſavouring them; Whoſe end is damnation, &c. who mind earthly things, Phil.3.19. That is, their minde becomes vile by ſo doing. Hereby people come to be unacquainted with God, and with Heavenly things. They know how to buy and ſell, how to earne and get gaine, how to plough and ſow and ſuch earthly things, and they do ſo ſavour their minds, that they make their mindes baſe with them, and therefore we are commanded to ennoble our minds and underſtandings, for theſe things make them vile,and therefore we ſhould think of them no oftner then needs muſt,for our minds are debaſed by baſe objects; this is to be meant in regard of us, not as though any thing that God hath made were vile, but our corruption makes us vile;when we look upon vile things we are apt to run a whoring after them, and our affections to be hampered by them; but God can daily and every houre ſee and look what vile things men do; for he keepes a continuall and an uninterrupted hatred of them, as the Pſalmiſt ſayes, He is angry with the wicked every day, ſo he hates their courſes every day.

Againe,does God know all mens ſins? then this confutes the Anomiſts, that ſayGod cannot ſee the ſins of his people,God ſees no ſin in hispeople ſay they; abuſing that place there of Balaam,He hath not beheld iniquity in Jacob,neither hath he ſeen tranſgreſſion in Iſrael. Numb.23.21. What's this but to pervert Scripture?he ſpeaks there of the eye of his Juſtice,He does ſpeak not of the eye of hisKnowledge;He ſpeaks of ſuch things as is in the wicked: That indeed God does not ſee in his people,for it is not there to be ſeen; otherwiſe,if Gods people ſin God makes them know & confeſs that he ſees it; as David ſayes, O God thou knoweſt my fooliſhneſſe, and my ſinnes are not hid from thee, Pſal.60 9. The garments of ſalvation that God puts upon his people, are not to hood-winke Gods All-ſeeing Knowledge, but to keep off the deſtroying Angell.

Secondly,another Uſe is to condemne the moſt ſorts of men,that do not conſider of this truth; they little thinke that God ſees all their doings. I feare there is hardly any among us, that will ſeem to deny but that God can ſee all his wayes; and yet wee ſee it is too apparent by mens lives, that Uſe 2.

few men do believe this indeed. There is this vile Atheisme sculking in all our hearts naturally (otherwise we durst not do as we do) that either God is such a God as the Epicures made him, that sits in Heaven and regards not what men do here below, or at least we do not charge this truth on our hearts, that God sees us; this is the cause of all the sinnes that are among us; That there is so much lukewarmenesse in the better sort, so much heartlesnesse in holy performance before God, so much wickednesse among others; For why? if men did seriously consider that God sees all and markes all, nay he markes all that men do, so curiously, that he can set in order before them, all that ever they have done, Psal. 50.21. in the same order that they committed them: mark he can set before us in order all that ever we do from day to day; this sin then, and that sin then; such a sin we did at such a time, such a sin in the morning, such at noone, such the last night, such lusts were in our hearts in such a place, and such in such a place; he can set them in order before us, he knowes them so well, and will too, before he hath done; I say if we did charge this upon our soules, we could not live so loosely as we do.

You will say, yea, But we are Christians, why do you tell us such a known truth? what needs so many arguments to prove that God knowes all our sins? we know that already, and no body will deny it, we are Christians. I answer; this is the hypocrisy of all mens hearts; their hearts will confess it to be a truth, but in their works they doe deny it. The Prophet David speaks of men that were in the visible Church of God aswell as we, and that would confesse this truth as well as we, and yet he sayes of many an one of them; He hath said in his heart, God hath forgotten, he hath hid his face, he will never see it, Psal. 10. 11. And the truth is, this is the cause of all the boldnesse of people to go on in their sins, or to yeeld to sinne at any time; they put this out of their bosomes that God sees them; As Ezekiel speakes, The land is full of bloud, the City is full of perversnesse, for they say, The Lord hath forsaken the Earth, and the Lord seeth not, Ezek. 9. they say so in effect; they put God afarre of, and do not consider that he sees them. Beloved, there's none of us all but hath need that truth should be urged upon us, that God beholds all iniquity and evill; we can never do amisse, but he takes notice of it.

Use 3. Thirdly, another use is; Is it so that God sees all mens sins? Then this is a terror to all that go on with a selfe-condemning heart. O consider what the Apostle sayes, If our heart condemne us, God is greater, and he knowes all things, 1 Joh. 3.20. q. d. If we have a selfe condemning heart, how much more shall we finde a condemning God? If our own heart can finde us out, if that can find out our worldlinesse, or our irreverence, or our carelesnesse of God, how much more will God find us out? He knowes all our sins better then we our selves? And therefore, O let us quake all of us to go on with a selfe-condemning heart; it is a bad badge, it is a prodigious token of the fearefull judgment of God; if we do not get our sins done away, by the blood of Jesus Christ, and by his sanctifying Spirit, God will finde us out; for he knowes what we are, and what we do daily, and how we live every day and houre. Againe, this is a terror to them that are Hypocrites; If God could not see a rotten heart, he should speed as well as the best. O but sayes God, I the Lord search the heart, I try the reynes, even to give every man according to his wayes and according to the fruit of his doings, Jer. 17. 10. and therefore wo be to such as are otherwise within then they seem to be without, they are painted sepulchers, but within they are full of rottennesse, they professe godlinesse, but they suffer within a Worldly Spirit, a guilty Conscience, a vaine minde, an unbelieving heart, no love of God, no zeale to his glory, no feeling of the Churches misery, no compassion with the Saints, no delight in them that feare God indeed; and yet they will go for Christians forsooth. God sees all their workes, and will unmask them in his due time, either in this world world, or in the world to come, and will poure everlaſting contempt on them. Vſe 4.

Fourthly, This is comfort to good people; for if God ſee all mens ſins, then he ſees all mens goodneſſe much rather what a comfort is this in Prayer to conſider, That he that ſearcheth the heart, knowes what is the minde of the Spirit, Rom. 8 27. He knowes all thy groans, he knowes all thy deſires; What a comfort is this when ever an honeſt ſoule is put to it ſoundly in tempration, when the ſoule is accuſed by Satan, hardly thought on by men, and God lets bitter temptations to come on? I ſay, what a comfort is this, that God knowes all the good things that are in man? All ones affections, all ones endeavours, all ones combats againſt ſinne, all ones griefes for corruption, as Peter ſaid, Lord thou knoweſt all things, thou knoweſt that I love thee, Joh. 21. 17 Peter was put to it roundly at that time; But yet this was his comfort, that God did know all things. He had many tokens of Gods gracious goodneſſe about him, he had love to Jeſus Chriſt, he had deep deſires to do all that he bad him. O ſayes he, and thou knoweſt it. Againe, this is an excellent comfort in time of affliction When Job was in affliction, and his friends ſcorned him, then did he go and poure out his Teares unto God, and this was his comfort, Behold, my witneſſe is in Heaven, and my record is on high, Job, 16.19, 20 Againe, this is an excellent encouragement to ſerve God in theſe bad and ſinfull times; people generally never looke after God, nor holineſſe; the World lookes after their pleaſures and their profits and preferments and friends, and the like; but Religion and devoutneſſe, and godlineſſe of living, few people looke after that, as though God did not regard what people doe. Now beloved, when we heare that God ſees all that men do, and markes it, and will call all men to accompt, what an encouragement is this to ſerve God, as David ſaid to Solomon, Know thou the GOD of thy Fathers and ſerve him with a perfect heart; for the Lord ſearcheth all hearts, and underſtandeth all the imaginations of the thoughts 1 Chron. 28 9. Againe, what a comfort is this againſt falſe accuſations? He knowes all our Innocency, when our neighbours ſay all manner of evill of us. He knowes we do that in ſimplicity, which others thinke we doe out of a ſiniſter reſpect, or out of pride, or popularity, or for applauſe. What a comfort is this, when we can appeale to God, as Paul ſayes; The Lord knowes that I lye not? as David ſayes, I have not refrained my lips from Preaching thy Righteouſneſſe O Lord, thou knoweſt, Pſal 40 9. He knowes the uttermoſt endeavour and deſire of our hearts is to be as good as we ſeeme, though the world take us for hypocrites. He knowes we be true men, that reverence every powerthat is of God, though the World eſteeme us factious and humorous. Little does the world thinke what the Saints do every day, what wraſtlings with God, what conflicts in their minds they endure; this is ſufficient, the Lord knowes.

Againe, what a comfort is this? if we deſire to know our ſinnes, God is able to ſhew them unto us. He can open our eyes to behold them for our humiliation, that we may ſay with the Prophet, I know mine owne iniquities, and my ſinne is ever before me; If we want a right ſight of our ſins at any time, it is but going to God, He knows them all, he can help us to ſee them aright.

Fifthly, Does God know all mens ſinnes? Then this ſhould make us afraid to do evill at any time, or in any place, yea in the ſecreteſt. we can never do any evill, but God will ſpy us out; we cannot have a thought in our heart, but he does diſcerne it; nor omit any duty, but he does perceive it; nor ſlubber over any good duty, but he ſtands by and looks on; may be, when ye are among your ſelves, ye can ſhoot out your Arrowes, even bitter and malicous words, may be no body can tell what ye ſaid, tuſh it ſhall never come to ſuch a ones Eare; Who can tell that you did ſay ſo? Who? why God can, Thus ye ſaid and thus ye ſaid, ſayes the Lord; Thus have you ſaid, O houſe of Iſrael for I know the things that came into your mind every one of them, Ezek. 11 5 H Vſe 5.

knowes thy Adultery, and with whom, and in what bed; neither Curtaines, nor doores, nor Lock and key can hide from him. He knowes thy heart hath risen up against the Word. He knowes how many times thou hast smothered thine owne conscience, and gone against it, and ouerwrestled it; He knowes how thou letteſt thy minde rove in Prayer, how many times thou hast come to the Lords Table unworthily, omitted Family-duties, or hudled them over without due regard; He knowes what tricks thou hast to put off conviction, what a baſe eſteeme thou haſt of the ſtrictneſſe that God word doth require, when thou heareſt it layd open. O I ſay, this ſhould make thee to feare God, this ſhould make thee to feare every where, as the Pſalmiſt ſayes, Thou compaſſeſt my paths and my lying downe, and art acquainted with all my wayes, Pſal. 139.3. Thou haſt beſet me behind and before, within and without; thou poſſeſſ it all my reines. O what an awe ſhould this breed in us! But I let this Uſe paſſe. This Uſe will better come in the next Doctrine.

Doctr. 2 Well then, the next Doctrine is this. The knowing that God knowes all our workes, is the powerfull meanes to all Gods elect, to do them good, and to quicken them and to make them take heed of all manner of ſinne; when the Lord would quicken his people here in Sardis, he uſes this as his firſt meanes to do it by, I know thy works; we may ſee this in David, I have kept thy precepts and thy Teſtimonies, for all my wayes are before thee, Pſa 119.168 When Solomon would conſtute a whoriſh heart, he uſes this for his argument. Why wilt thou, my Son, be raviſht with a ſtrange Woman, and embrace the boſome of a ſtranger? for the wayes of man are before the eyes of the Lord and he ponders all his goings, Prov. 5 20 21 Why wilt thou do thus? ſad thou art madde, thou art deſperate, if this argument will not prevaile with thee.

Reaſ. 1. The reaſons of this point are, Firſt, becauſe the Lords knowing of our workes is not onely a meere knowing of them, but alſo a marking and a pondering them too; He diligently obſerves what we do, he ponders and conſiders whence it proceeds, and whither it tends: as the Prophet ſayes, The Lords Throne is in Heaven, his Eyes well conſider, his Eye-lides try the Children of men, Pſal. 11.4. And therefore when the Scripture would tell us that God knowes mens hearts, it ſometimes expreſſes it thus, The Lord pondereth mens hearts, Prov. 24. 12. If God did onely ſee what we do, it were another matter, but when the ſoule ſhall heare that he markes, and that he ponders, and conſiders mens ſinnes, and weighes them how haynous they are, what puniſhment they deſerve, and how horrible it is that they do, how much it is againſt his glory; its a ſigne of a deſperate heart, when this will not work.

Reaſ. 2. Secondly, becauſe when God ſees all our ſinnes, it is with a moſt holy and pure Eye, and ſuch an Eye as cannot abide ſuch an object before him, as the Prophet Habakkuk ſpeakes, Thou art of purer Eyes then to behold evill, thou canſt not looke on iniquity Hab 1 13 If God ſaw our ſinnes with ſuch an Eye as men ſee them now and then, it were no ſuch great thing for we know that moſt men can endure to ſee our ſinnes well enough, and like us little the worſe; but they are infinitely offenſive unto God, he ſees them with ſuch an eye, that if ever the Conſcience be a wake but to perceive how he lookes, it will burſt the very heart of a man.

Reaſ. 3. Thirdly, becauſe when God ſees our ſinnes, he records them, he notes them in a booke, that he he may never forget them; as he told the people of the Jewes, Behold it is written before me, I will recompenſe and render it into your boſome, Iſay. 65.6. If God did ſee our ſinnes, and there's an end, then indeed this doctrine of Gods eeing would do little; may be, God would forget them againe; yea, but when he ſees, he regiſters too, nay he layes it up in record to be in ſtore by him againſt another day; nay, he ſeales them up in his treaſure; Is not this laid up in ſtore by me, and ſealed among my treaſures? Deut.

32.34. Now when the Soule ſhall come to mark this, this will wound it to the quick; this muſt needs doe a man good, and ſtrike an awe into him of God.

Reaſ. 3. Fourthly, becauſe when Gods ſees our ſinnes, it is even all one as if all the world ſhould ſee them too; as Origen notes: For let our ſinnes be never ſo ſecret, our inward unſoundneſſe never ſo unknown, yet if God know it, it is as bad and worſe than if all the world knew it; for all the world ſhall know it one day, God will lighten all things that are hid in darkneſſe, and will make manifeſt the ſecret counſailes of mens hearts; then ſhall every man have praiſe of God, 1 Cor. 4.5. that is, whoſoever have been Godly, God will bring all their godlineſſe forth, and every one of them ſhall have praiſe of God; this ſhall be an honour to them before all the world: So if a man have been evill, then God will produce all his naughty courſes forth, then ſhall he have ſhame from God, God will ſhame him before all the World. There is nothing now covered that ſhall not then be revealed, nothing hid that ſhall not then be laid open; what a ſhame then will this be for thee, that thou which haſt gone ſo many yeares for an honeſt man, and may be, haſt been ſome body here in this world, when all the Saints ſhall ſee thee ſtanding as a wretch, as a hell-hound, as a limb of the Devill, on Chriſts left hand? What a ſhame will it be, if we that are now earneſt Preachers, if any of us ſhall then be found among the goats? What a ſhame to any of you, that would count it a ſore diſgrace to be called a wicked man, to be led forth with evill doers, and ſholed among the damned? Well then, if Gods ſeeing of mens ſinnes be ſuch a kinde of ſeeing as this is, no marvell if it work ſo effectually on them that are of God.

Reaſ. 5. Fifthly, another argument may be taken from our diſpoſition; our diſpoſition is ſuch, that we cannot abide that our wickedneſſes ſhould be ſeen of any body that we know cannot abide them; Which among us, when we pray and have baſe roving thoughts, would not we be aſhamed that a man ſhould ſee our thoughts rove? which of us, that are unſetled and dead-hearted, would not bluſh that men had a caſement to ſee how dead he ſits at a Sermon, and how dead at a Sacrament, how dead in other of Gods Ordinances; what baſe and impure thoughts ſometime doe ariſe in his mind. If he did think that any man ſhould ſee them, he would hardly be able to ſhew his face among them. Let but an Adulterer that is naught with a Whore, have but a few men, or but one man come and take him in the act, O how it will gall him and vex him to be ſeen! as Iob ſpeakes, If one know them, they are in the terror of the ſhadow of death, Job 24. 17. they abhorre the light, they cannot abide to be brought out to be known. Now beloved if this be our diſpoſition by nature, that we cannot abide that ſo much as a man ſhould know us; nay, not a child of ſix or ſeven yeares of age, then O what a terror is it that the God of Heaven and Earth ſhould know us, that he ſhould ſee all our luſts, all our ſinfull and vile thoughts, all our uncleane and noyſome affections, all our by-ends and careleſneſſe of God! O what a powerfull thing is this to work upon the heart, except it be delivered up to a reprobate ſenſe, to ſleight God, and care leſſe for him then for a little Boy, or a mortall man! So then ye ſee, this is a powerfull meanes to work upon a ſoule, to know that God knowes all his works. Though the Woman of Samaria ſtood jeſting, and playing, and conteſting with our Saviour a good while: yet when ſhe perceived that he knew all her villany, this burſt her heart; O ſayes ſhe, this is no other then Chriſt, he hath told me all that ever I did. Joh. 4.29.

Uſe 1. The Uſe of this is, Firſt, here we ſee, they are deſperate that this point cannot work on; it's certain they are graceleſſe that can heare that God ſees all their works, and yet it does not purge them from day to day; its an evident argument that a man contemnes God, and makes nothing of him. When David had ſhewed that the wicked care not for Gods eye, they make a matter of nothing of it; tush God does not see, say they, Psalm. 10.11. that is, they knew he saw indeed, but they made nothing of it; as long as men did not see them, they counted Gods seeing as nothing; now mark what followes, wherefore doe the wicked contemne God? verse 13.

Use 2. Secondly, Is it so, that this is such a powerfull meanes to work upon our hearts? Then let us not harden our hearts, but let us consider of it, that it may cut between the bone and the marrow, and divide between the soule and the spirit; God sees all our works. This point should fall upon our hearts, like the almighty hand of God, as it did upon Job, I know thou canst doe every thing, and that no thought can be hid from thee, Job 42. 2.

Now we come to the particulars, And the first is in these words, Thou hast a Name that thou livest, and the other is, and art dead.

That thou hast a name that thou livest; This is the first particular, whereby the Lord Jesus proves that which he had implyed before, viz. that the works of Sardis were all starke naught, because they had onely a name to live, they rested in a meere outward name to be Religious and good Christians, and people of God, and believers, and a Church of Jesus Christ; they had the name, and that was all; they had a name to live; well, sayes he, for this very thing, I know all thy Works, (i.) I know them to be all starke naught. Some think this is an allusion to the Minister of Sardis his name, who (they say) was called Zosing, that is, Living. Thou hast a name that thou livest, but the truth is, thou art dead; whether that be so, or no, I know not; but this is the meaning of the words, that both the Minister and the Church seemed to be alive towards God; he to be a very good and godly Minister, and they very good and godly hearers, they were all professors, they were all very devout and forward in all their duties of Religion to see to; Thou hast a name that thou livest.

By name is meant a meere Name, as we see by the clause following, and art dead; for when a man is dead, the name to live must needs be a meere Name.

1. First, a name in regard of themselves, they took themselves to be alive; as Paul had a name to live before his conversion, while yet he was a Pharisee, he had then a name to live, I was alive without the Law once, Rom. 7.9. That is, I had a name to live then, I taking my selfe to be alive: I thought verily in those dayes that I had true Grace, and true faith, true Hope, and true Love, and the true feare of God before my eyes. So this Church had a name to live, they thought themselves to be alive.

2. Secondly, a Name in regard of other Godly Churches; others in the judgment of Charity conceived they were alive; as the Scribes, and the Pharisees, our Saviour Christ told them, they had a name to live, Woe unto you Scribes and Pharisees, Hypocrites; for we are like unto whited Sepulchers, which indeed appeare beautifull outward, but are within full of dead mens bones, Matthew 23.27, that is, ye seeme to be alive, ye have a name to live, but indeed ye are dead; They had such a great name to live that our Saviour Christ had much ado to keepe his owne Disciples from over-weening of them; beware of them, sayes he, q. d. whatever ye may thinke, they have a meere Name to live.

3. Thirdly, a Name among poore ignorant and simple people; ye know there be abundance of poore simple people, that are led away with shewes, that know not what true Religion is, nay may be hate it, but yet they are led away with the shew of it; now they seeme to be religious, they are the only Men and Women with such; they are held for the only good people in a Countrey, they are admired, poore silly people take them for their Ghostly Fathers, if they can have but their Prayers, they think their Prayers can doe much; when they are sick, they love alife to have such by their bed-sides, they give them a great deale of comfort, like Abſalon that comforted the people that came to him, O your matters are good; ſo the Apoſtle ſhewes that they that had a forme of godlineſſe, had a name to live, among a company of poore ſilly people, 2 *Tim.*3.5.6.

Fourthly, a name among the perſecutors of Religion, and ſo they are perſecuted too among them that live indeed; for mockers take them to be of the ſame number. So Alexander the Copper-ſmith, had a name a great while, and the enemies of goodneſſe perſecuted him even as Paul, ſo Demas for a time had a name, and was perſecuted aſwell as the Apoſtle, till afterwards he was weary and forſooke him. This is one of your Preciſians, this is one of your purer people, this is one of them that call themſelves the people of God, Theſe are the people of the Lord, Ezek.36.20. As a Bat hath a name to be a Mouſe, and ſo the Birds perſecute it, and cannot abide it. 4.

Now the point of Doctrine is this, That it is a horrible thing to reſt in a meere name of being Religious; it is the argument that Chriſt uſes, to prove that Sardis workes were all ſtarke naught, becauſe they had a meere Name to live; ſo when the Lord would declare how the Jewes were grown to be ſtarke naught, he layes this to their charge, that they had onely a Name to be his people; They call themſelves of the holy City, and ſtay themſelves upon the GOD of Iſrael, the Lord of Hoſts is his Name, Iſa.48.2. That is, they got themſelves a Name to be his people, and there was all; they had not the thing it ſelfe, but they tooke the name; Thus he proved them to be ſtarke naught. *Doct.*1.

The Reaſons are, Firſt, this is to be fartheſt off from Religion; becauſe himſelfe will not, and others can not ſo effectually apply to him the meanes of recovery, he being in his owne and others judgement a true Convert. As a ſicke man who thinkes himſelfe well, is of all others fartheſt from cure. Religion is a reall thing, and therefore he that reſts in having the Name of it, is fartheſt off from it; as Chriſt ſayes of Nathaniel, Behold an Iſraelite indeed, in whom is no guile, Joh.1.47. So when a man is religious indeed, humble indeed, feares God indeed, this is Religion; when a man is freed indeed from his ſinnes, and from the power of them, this is Religion: If the Sonne ſhall make you free, ye ſhall be free indeed. Joh.8.36 Now when a man hath onely the Name, he is fartheſt off from this; Religion is a reall, ſolid and a ſubſtantiall thing; as John ſayes, My little children, let us not love in word, neither in tongue, but in deed and in truth, 1 Joh.3.18. What though a man have the name to love God and goodneſſe? How farre is this off from doing of it indeed? A man may goe for one that is converted; but he is converted that is converted indeed; ſo he is godly that is godly indeed; the name is nothing where the things is wanting; all Religion is in deed, to believe indeed, to deny a mans ſelfe every day indeed, to be ſenſible of God indeed in all ones way; not to ſay ones Prayers, but to pray indeed; to give God thankes indeed; to worſhip him indeed; as Paul ſayes, When a man can ſay, God is in us indeed, 1 Cor.14.25. When a man hath onely the name, this is a meere fancy and conceit. *Reaſ.*1.

Secondly, It is a very Blaſphemy to get the name for good people, when we are not good people indeed: The reaſon is this, Religion hath an inward dependance upon God, it unites a man to God, it hath an internall relation unto God, it puts a man into a propriety with God that God is his God, that he is borne of God, it puts the very Name of God upon a man; Now if a man take the name without the thing, it muſt needs be a very Blaſphemy, as he ſayes; I know the blaſphemy of them that ſay they are Jewes, and are not, but are the Synagogue of Satan, Rev.2.9. As if a man ſhould ſay he were of the blood Royall, ye know the blood royall hath ſuch a dependance on the Crowne, that that man that ſhould ſay he were of the blood royall, and is not, he muſt needs blaſpheme the King. So beloved, Religion hath a neere dependance on God, therefore he is a blaſphemer of God, that gets the name of it, and lets the thing alone; *Reaſ.*2.

Thou ſhalt not take the Name of the Lord thy God in vaine.

alone; and therefore how ſhould we take heed, how we have the name for Religious people except we be Religious indeed, and holy indeed, and heavenly indeed, as Ambroſe ſayes; Nam ſit nomen inane, & crimen immane, a bare name is a horible blame unto any man, whoſoever he be.

Reaſ. 3. Thirdly, It is a flat lie, when a man hath the name for a good Chriſtian, and hath not the thing ſignified by the name, this is a flat lye; as God ſayes, Note it in a booke that it may be for time to come, that this is a rebellious people, lying children, children that will not heare the Law of the Lord, Iſa. 30. 8, 9. That is, they had the name of his Children, but they had not the thing ſignified by that name; they would not doe as Children ſhould doe, they would not be ruled by their Fathers Lawes, therefore they are lying children, they lye in bearing ſuch a name; the Lord notes it in a Book, that it might ſtand for ever and ever againſt them at the day of Judgement; this was nothing elſe but to lye before God; you goe for my Children; what? and will not doe as I bid you? You lye in having the name of my Children; when a man ſhall have the name of a child of God, or the name of a Miniſter of the Lord Jeſus, or the name of a Chriſtian baptized into Chriſt, he had need to take heed what he does; for if he doe not anſwer this name, he does but play the Ananias, to lye to the Holy Ghoſt. Look into thy generall calling; look into thy particular; look into thy carriage; look into thy manner of good duties; whether thou doe behave thy ſelfe anſwerably to this holy Name whereby thou art called, knowing thou doeſt but lye to God, if thou doeſt not.

Reaſ. 4. Fourthly, It is an unreaſonable thing; when a man hath not the thing, there is no reaſon that he ſhould have the Name; when God gave Abram the name of Abraham, he told him there was a reaſon why he ſhould be called by that Name; Thy name ſhall be called Abraham, for a Father of many Nations have I made thee, Gen. 17 5. So, it is an unreaſonable thing why we ſhould have the name of Gods ſervants or Chriſtians, unleſſe there be ſome reaſon why we ſhould have the impoſition of this name; now when we make it a bare title; and doe not obey CHRIST, nor make Conſcience of all his holy wayes, this is very unreaſonable; as Abigail reaſoned about her Husbands name; As his name is, ſo is he, Nabal is his name, and folly is with him, 1 Sam. 25. 25. So my Brethren, as our name is, ſo ſhould we be; if Chriſtian be our name, true Chriſtianity ſhould be with us; Humility, love, meekneſſe, patience, faith, holineſſe, and all other parts of Chriſtianity ſhould be with us; now if we have the Name without theſe things intimated by the name, this is a very unreaſonable thing; nay, it is not onely unreaſonable, but alſo ridiculous; who will not count the names that the Papiſts give to their blockiſh Friers ridiculous; Subtiliſſimus Doctor, Doctor Angelicus, Seraphicus, theſe are ridiculous, as a Drunkard a Chriſtian, a whoremonger a Chriſtian, a worldling a Chriſtian, a vaine man a Chriſtian. What a ridiculous thing it is to call ſuch the Saints of God? Strangers here on earth, ſuch as have their converſation in Heaven, ſuch as are buried together with Chriſt in his death; ſuch as are men of another World; Mortified, juſtified, ſanctified, crucified to themſelves, loving the things above, and not the things that are here beneath; If theſe things do not agree with us, what a ridiculous thing is it, that we ſhould be termed good Chriſtians? here be Chriſtians indeed; this is a meere mockery.

Reaſ. 5. 5. It is an impudent thing; when we have a name to live and to be wrought upon by the word, what an impudent thing is it, if we doe not look to it, that we be ſo indeed; one would think we ſhould bluſh to think what a name we have, and how little we make good our name, between God and our owne ſoules. When the men of Bethlehem ſaid, Is not this Naomi? O how ſhe was aſhamed of her ſelfe! Call me not Naomi, call me Marah; for the Almighty hath dealt very bitterly with me, Ruth 1. 20 So when we are named Chriſtians, we ſhould even bluſh, Call me not a Chriſtian, call me Wretch, call me vile creature, a hell-hound, a limme of the Devill, a curſed ſinner; for the Almighty never yet turned my heart, he never yet purified my Soule and life, I never yet have reſembled Chriſt to this very day; I ſay, the moſt of us ſhould even be confounded to think what Name we have. I a Chriſtian, and do no more good, and live no better life? I a Chriſtian, and not humbled, not abaſed yet before God, ſo dull to all goodneſſe, ſo carnall, ſo dead to all Gods Ordinances, ſo voyd of all grace, ſo ſenſeleſſe of my ſins? How can this be? We are impudent, if we have our name for nought, our Name may upbraid us; the good opinions that others have of us, may fill our faces with ſhame, to think how ſhort we come of it.

Sixthly, It is an inexcuſable thing, If we have a name to be alive, we are without excuſe if we be not. Rom.

Firſt becauſe out of our owne mouthes God will judge us; we ſaid we were his People, we tooke the name of his ſervants; why then he will ſay, Why had I not your ſervice? Why would you do on more for me? Why were you Covetous, why were you Proud, why were you heard-harted, why were you ſo careleſſe of me? You wore my livery, you ſhrowed your ſelves under my name So the Lord did with the Jewes that had the name of his Children and ſervants; ſee how he judges them out of their owne mouth; A Sonne honours his Father, and a Servant his Maſter; If then I be a Father, where is my honour? And if I be a Maſter, where is my feare? Malac. 1. 6. q. d. You ſay I am your Father, and I am your Maſter, and I am your God; well, out of your owne mouthes I will judge you, why then did you honour me no more? Why did ye regard me no more? Ye cared not for me ye did not look after me, you had little or no heart after me; your owne mouthes have caſt you.

Secondly, ye can have no other excuſe; Can you ſay you could not believe in my Name? Ye could not forgoe ſuch and ſuch Luſts at my command; Why then would you go for my Servants? You ſhould have ſaid ſo plainly, and not daily have come into my Courts, as if you would obey me; nor taken up the profeſſion of my Worſhip, as if you would goe through-ſtitch with it; why would you come to my Table, as though my Promiſes belonged unto you? If ye could not do as I bad you, you ſhould not have borne me in hand as though you would; now ye have play'd the Hypocrites, and drawne neare to me with your lips, and taken my Name into your mouthes, whereas ye would not be reformed by me; What had you to do with my Covenant, that you muſt needs be medling with it? Pſal. 50. 16. If ye would not obey it, ye ſhould have let it alone, ſo that ye ſee, that to have a naked Name to live, is an inexcuſable thing.

Seventhly, It is an unprofitable thing: A naked Name will do us no good; when the Jewes truſted in the Name that they had, O they were the children of Abraham, they were Gods onely people, they had his Covenant, and his Oracles, and his Temple; O the Temple of the Lord, the Temple of the Lord; they hoped well, having thus much to ſay for themſelves; but mark what God tells them, Behold you truſt in lying words, that cannot profit, Jerem. 7 8. This would not profit them one jot, becauſe they did not verifie the Name they had. So the Galatians they preſumed mightily on this, that they were Chriſtians; as for making good this holy Name, that they gave no heed to at all; they would have the Ceremonies; when Paul told them of their faults, they would not liſten unto him, nay they counted him their Enemy; they would have the Ceremonies of the Law; well the Apoſtle told them plainly, that if they would not be ruled, their Name would do them no good; Behold I Paul ſay unto you, that if ye be Circumciſed, Chriſt ſhall profit you nothing, Gal. 5. 2. q. d. You beare your ſelves upon Chriſt, and yet will not do as he would have you do, ye will do what ye liſt; but let me tell you, if ye will not reforme, Jeſus Chriſt ſhall profit you onthing; you ſay you believe in Jeſus Chriſt, I but it ſhall profit you Rom.

nothing: So when the People there in Isaiah rested in this, They came to Gods house, they gave him Sacrifice every morning and evening, they did thus and thus, and so they had a Name for his peculiar people; the Prophet assures them, this should not profit them one whit. I will declare thy righteousnesse and thy works, for they shall not profit thee, Isa. 57.12. Thou prayest and doest many good duties, and so thou getteſt thy self a name; yea, but if thou doest not soundly and throughly answer that name, God will declare all thy Righteousnesse, and all thy profession, and all thy good duties, and none of them all shall profit thee; In that day he shall declare what rotten things they have been, how heartlesse, how liveleſs, how dead-hearted all thy duties have been, and they shall do thee no good; and indeed what good can a Name doe a man? True faith alone does justifie, not the name of it; true peace of Conscience does comfort, not the name of it; true intereſt in God gives a man a chearfull accesse to God, not the name of it.

Reas. 3. Eightly, It is not only unprofitable, but also it is hurtfull. It is hurtfull unto others; a bare Name I say without substance and truth is hurtfull unto others. It is hurtfull unto them that are without; for when they see how lazy such as go for Professours, be, how they have little else in them but talking and professing, and prating and hearing; otherwise they are as vaine, and as covetous, and as having as other men, no strictnesse, no pureneſſe, no holineſſe, no humbleneſſe of mind, no love, no forgiving one another, no forbearing one another, no brotherly kindneſſe, no Union nor Communion, no power in their Prayers, no gravity nor authority in their speeches, no heavenlineſſe in their Converſation, no brokenneſſe of heart, this hardens the heart of them that are without, and makes them all think that Religion is a matter of nothing, thus they do a great deale of hurt unto others; the professing Wife to the prophane Husband, the professing Servant to his prophane Master, the professing Neighbour to his prophane neighbour; whereas if they were Godly indeed, and humble indeed, and as their Name does import indeed, they would do a great deale of good, but now they do a great deale of hurt.

2. Againe, they do a great deale of hurt unto commers on; many a man that is smitten at the Word, that begins reformation and amendment, and gives good hopes that he wil come to something in the end; when he lights upon such Sardian Saints, that are so in name, but there is no life at all in them, these put him back againe, and make him set up his staffe before he sees halfe way; like the dead body of Amasa, that made the people stand still.

3. Again, they do a great deale of hurt unto the Saints of God, sometimes by deceiving of their hearts and cooling of their zeale and fervour, or if they cannot do that, then they hate them, and prove very shye of them, and gird them behind their backes, & do them much mischiefe, as Paul complaines, He was in perils among false Brethren, 2Cor. 11.26. That is, those that had a name to be Brethren in Christ, but were not so indeed, he was in perils many time, and often by them; Againe, they increase the disgraces and sufferings of Gods true Saints and Children; for while they seeme to be Saints good enough themselves, the other that are Saints indeed, are rejected of all, and thought to be besides their wits.

4. Againe, they do a great deale of hurt to themselves, for it had been better for them they had never had a Name, then having a name not to be as the name does require.

To make way for application. Let me tell what use ye must not make of this Doctrine; make not use hereof to beat downe the having of a Name, for all the Lords people should be carefull of having a name; I will give them a name of Sonnes and Daughters, nay a better name then so, Isa. 56. 5. Yea and the people of God should make conscience of a Name before men; A good name is better then precious Oyntment, Eccl. 7.1. And the servants of God have had a name.

Deuteronomy

Demetrius had a good report of all men, yea of the truth it ſelfe too; and therefore they are black mouths of Hell that object againſt good people, that they are Hypocrites, they doe thus and thus to have a name. This is no newes, for the World hath a'wayes dealt thus with the Saints in all Ages. Paul was counted the great Impoſtor of the world. O ſayes he, we are deceivers; and yet true, 2 Corinthians 6.8. That is, the World gives us a name for deceivers, and yet we are true. Yee know what was ſaid of Chriſt Jeſus himſelf, ſome ſaid of him, he was a good man, others ſaid nay, He was a deceiver of the people; It was ſaid of David, that he was a ſubtle man, a crafty Fox, and that he was a meere Politician, it was Sauls judgement of him. Thus the Saints have a nick-name put on them; the World thinks they are Hypocrites, and that they have ſiniſter ends in what they doe, and whereas they make ſuch a ſhew, it is but in Hypocriſie, that they may deceive, and that they may have a name for Religious people; ſo that the World would faine put down the having of a Name. But that is a Devilliſh uſe; we muſt not make ſuch a uſe of this point. No; the Lord does not find fault with Sardis for having of a Name that they lived, but that they had this Name when as they were dead; if they had been alive, the Name to be alive had been well; then what uſe muſt we make of this point?

The firſt Uſe then is this, to ſhew the miſery of the Church of Rome, which hath a Name to live, and in their own judgement and a great part of Chriſtendome, is the onely true Church, but in the judgement of God it is dead, and therefore ſtarke naught; ſome ſay its a body full of diſeaſes, and whoſe throat is cut, but yet the heart pants, and life is therein; But the truth is, its ſtarke dead, and hath no manner of ſpirituall life. What though they have the Sacrament of Baptiſme? So had Edom circumciſion, and yet they were never counted a Church of God; and what's a Seale to a blank? What though they have the Scriptures among them and the Articles of our Creed? That does not make a Church; for Ptolomy and all Egypt had the Bible, and yet that did not make them a Church; if the Scriptures might have their own ſenſe, it were another matter; but they overturne it with their expoſition, and make it in their ſenſe, to be a fardell of Doctrine of Devils, and what though Antichriſt be ſaid to ſit in the Temple of God? yet his Body is a Synagogue of Satan. There is no life in that Church. But to come neerer to our ſelves. Uſe 1.

This may be ſaid of them, of our Churches too, and of our Congregations; they have only a Name to live, though we might live well enough; for we have the Doctrine of Life, in many places, yet in regard of our converſations for the moſt part, we may ſay, it is but onely a Name. For how does ſinne reigne among us every where? Covetouſneſſe, Profaneneſſe, Fulneſſe of Bread, Luſt, Security, as it were in Noahs time, Deadneſſe of heart, Formality, now where ſuch ſinnes doe abound, there the power of godlineſſe muſt needs be away; generally our Aſſemblies content themſelves with an outward profeſſion, if they goe ſo farre, they have but a Name to live. True, we are a Church, ſo was Sardis though ſhe had hardly any thing but a Name, yet ſhe was a Church, as Saint John ſhewes, waſhed in the Bloud of Jeſus Chriſt, Revelations, 1.4,5. for they had a few Names that were ſo, but the body had onely a bare name; ſo it is with us, we are not nullified from being a Church, for God hath his choſen among us, though they be very few, here one and there one that live indeed and in truth; yet the Bodies and Bulkes of our Congregations, have onely a name, if that; no Diſcipline, no good Order, no through Reformation; nay, Cages of unclean Birds; nay ſuch as profeſſe better then the multitude, little better then titular and morall Chriſtians.

Nay, are not all things almoſt grown to be a ſole Name? What is Preaching almoſt but the bare Name of Preaching? For converſion of Souls, where is it? the pulling people out of the Kingdome of Satan, where is it? a thousand Sermons may be, and hardly one wrought upon; we may be said to be Fishermen; but it is turned only into a name, for when do we catch any?

So, for hearing of the Word. True, it is very common, and yet not so common as it ought to be, for many care little whether they heare or no. But that is, there's hardly ought left but the Name; for who heares with trembling, who mingles his hearing with faith, who drinkes the Word, as the Earth doth the Raine? who does what he heares, without which all hearing is no better then an empty Name?

So, for comming to the Sacrament, is not that made a Name too? Setting aside the Name of a Sacrament now and then, what have we else? who feeds upon Jesus Christ? who comes to the increasing of his Faith? who hath faith at all, that it may be increased? who comes to it with preparednesse? who sits at the Lords Table with a Wedding Garment? who goes away nourished up any more unto eternall life? without the which, all our Sacraments are but naturall things.

So for holy Conference, unlesse it be the Name of it, what is there of the thing it selfe left? May be a few cursory words of goodnesse, before we part, but no quickning of one another up, no exhorting of one another, no comforting of one another, or admonishing one another; nay, we are grown to be ashamed of these duties; and for Prayer, but that we take Cushions and fall down on our knees, and say a company of Confessions, and Petitions, there is little else done.

Come we to the Graces of Gods holy Spirit, without the which a man is dead in trespasses and sins, &c. as Faith, Repentance, peace of Conscience, and Love &c. where are any of these to be found?

Use 2. Secondly, another Use is of terrour against us; Doe we think that the Lord will endure this at our hands? He hath endured it too too long, but He will not suffer it alwayes. He hath a Spirituall thunder-clap, that He lets fly against this sin. The vile person shall be no more called liberall, nor the Churle be said to be bountifull, Isa 32.5. That is, the Lord will unmask all such persons, He will pluck off all their Names, and they shall have a name fit for their natures, and He will doe this.

1 First, in their owne Consciences; If we will not be awakened to be as we have a Name to be, the Lord will make our owne Consciences to call us Reprobates as we are, and then what will our Name doe us good, when our own Consciences shall tell us we are naught, and condemne us in our bosome? What shall we be the better for our neighbours judging well of us? Our Neighbours may be thinke we pray well; what a poore thing is this, when Conscience shall say no? Our neighbours may hope we stand upon good ground, when Conscience shall say no: Men call us godly, and Conscience shall say, nay but ye are not. What a shame was it to the Jewes, when they were convicted by their owne Consciences? Joh. 8.9. It is not the Name of joy and holinesse, that will give their Consciences true peace; no, no, Conscience knowes, another name is fit for us, Unbeliefe, and ungodlinesse, and Hardnesse of heart.

2. Secondly, againe, He will do it in the judgement of others; if we rest in a Name, the Lord will detect us at last before others; and then what a shame will this be? As David said of Doeg, the Lord would discover him; he would make all the people round about say of him, Loe this is the man that took not God for his strength, Psal. 52.7. So he will doe with us, Loe this is the man that had such a name to live. Lo, this is the man; Now we see here's a wretch, now we see how he deceived his owne soule; he never truly sought God in all his life, he was not the man that we took him for; he built upon the Sand, he did not lay a good foundation, and therefore now he is tumbled down, and what is become of his Name? Now he ſhews himſelfe in his colours, now we ſee he is an Enemy of GOD, he can ſide with the Times, he can embrace this preſent world, he hath no Eternall life abiding in him.

Nay, the Lord will not onely doe thus with us, if we reſt in a Name, but alſo he will powre out his Wrath upon us otherwiſe too; ye may read how that this was the reaſon why the Lord drowned all the old World; not onely the wickedneſſe of them that were without; for if they that profeſſed Religion, had been ſound, they might have prevented the Deluge, and prayed it away.

But they that profeſſed Religion, had onely a Name. The ſons of God ſaw the daughters of men that they were faire, Gen 6 2. That is, the Sons of God, they were onely ſo in Name, their works plainly ſhewed that they were onely ſo in name, therefore the Lord ſwept them all away: So the Lord will powre bitter things on us, if we be Chriſtians onely in Name, if we be not ſo indeed; nay, this is not all, but we ſhall have a deeper portion in Hell too than Pagans or Papiſts, or any in our owne Land; the more we have borne of his Name, the ſurer and ſorer ſhall our damnation be, if we do not really anſwer the holy name wherewith we are called. We may ſee this in the man in the Goſpell; Friend, how cameſt thou in hither? Bind him hand and foot, caſt him into utter darkneſſe, where is weeping &c. Matth. 22. 12. 13. Come friend, how came you in hither? Marke, he had the Name of a friend of JESUS CHRIST; therefore the Text ſayes, he was ſpeechleſſe, he had nothing to ſay for himſelfe, his damnation had nothing to leſſen it; other people ſhould have ſomething to ſay for themſelves to leſſen their damnation; but thoſe that have a Name to live ſhall not have the leaſt ſyllable.

Thirdly, then let another Uſe be to humble our hearts, let us go to GOD in humiliation of heart, as the poore prodigall Sonne did, and downe on the knees of our ſoules and bodies, and ſay, Lord, I have ſinned againſt Heaven, and before thee, and am no more worthy to be called thy Sonne, Luke 15. 21. So, as many of us as are guilty of this ſinne, (as who almoſt is not, and that in a horrible manner?) let us ſay, Lord I have been called a Chriſtian, I have been called a Child of thine, I have had the name a good while; but O what a Wretch have I been! I am not worthy of this Name, I have ſinned againſt heaven and in thy ſight, I have not anſwered the Name I have had, and therefore it were juſt with thee to cut me aſunder with Hypocrites, and ſo fling me downe to Hell. Uſe 3.

And art Dead.

THeſe words are a part of the Epiſtle that Chriſt ſent to the Miniſters and Church of Sardis. Ye have heard the Inſcription, To the Angel of the Church in Sardis write. Ye have heard too of the Subſcription, Theſe things ſaith he, that hath the ſeven Spirits of God, and the ſeven Starres. We are come to the Subject matter, and therein firſt to the reproofe in generall, I know thy works: and ſecondly, to the particulars of the reproofe. The firſt particular was this, Thou haſt a name that thou liveſt: all theſe have been delivered already, now followes the ſecond particular reproofe, And art dead. Here the queſtion is, what Chriſt meanes by Dead. By dead, he does not meane dead in Errors and Hereſies, though theſe be called deadly Poyſons, and may make a Church dead. For the truth is called the word of Life, Phil. 2. 16. and wholſome Doctrine, as the Apoſtle calls it; and therefore Errors and Hereſies, theſe poyſon and dead any people that drinke them in. But this cannot be the meaning

here, for we see no such thing here laid to their charge, it should seeme this Church was an orthodox Church; neither by Dead, does he meane prophane wicked manners, though they make a people dead too, as we see the prodigall Sonne that had been given to prophane and dissolute courses, his Father sayes, He was dead in those dayes, Luke 15.24. Yet this cannot be the meaning neither; for this Church had a Name to live, and it had this name among the Churches of Jesus Christ, which had more wit, then to Judge them to be alive, if they had been so palpably wicked; no, it seemes they were an excellent Church to see to, a good Ministery to see to, but both dead; so then this is the meaning; For all their seeming to be alive, they were indeed dead; as the Apostle sayes of himself, before he was quickned by Christ Jesus, He was dead sin revived, and I dyed, Rom. 7.9. yet he was as jolly a good man as any other, and yet he confesses he was dead; so they were dead for the most part; and those that were not all-out dead, yet they were dead hearted, and without life in Gods wayes. For as it was with the Moraller Heathen, they did the things contained in the Law, yet they were dead; so a people may doe the things contained in the Gospell too, and yet be dead; people may believe; yet as James sayes, Their faith be dead faith, Jam. 2.26. namely when their faith is without works; so people may have godly works, for the morall part of them, and yet doe them with a dead heart; to be sober and temperate, and loving, and chaste, and civilly humble, and meek, and diligent in their calling, and known to frequent all the ordinances of God, in publick and in private, these are outwardly good works, and yet may be in the number of those works that the Apostle calls dead Works, Heb. 6.1. namely when there is no life of God in them. Thousands deceive themselves in this, when they have a kind of Faith, and a kind of particular faith, and such works as these flowing from their faith, they think this to be a lively faith; no, no, a man may be dead for all that. This truth will not sink into mens minds, fancies, fancies, say they, these are nothing but the whimsies of a company of giddy Braines; what would they have? If this be not true religion we wonder what is; thus they jeer these things, but beloved 'tis certain; for it is not enough to believe, except we do it with life, he that liveth, & believeth in me. Joh. 11.26. Faith without life is but equivocally termed Faith, so, it is not enough to hope in God, except we doe it with life; he hath begotten us againe to a lively hope, sayes Peter. So it is not enough to be a member in Gods Church, a Stone in Gods building, except we be lively Stones, Ye also as lively Stones, sayes he, 1 Pet. 2.5. The like I may say of all the duties of Religion, it is not enough to doe them, but we must doe them with life, as to Pray, to pray with a dead heart is nothing, no sayes David, Lord quicken us, and we will call upon thy name, Psal. 80.18. in a word, not to heape particulars; we cannot walk in any of Gods wayes aright as long as we walk in them with a dead heart, as the Psalmist sayes; Lord quicken thou me in thy way, Psal. 119.37. It is a poor thing to walk in Gods wayes onely for the matter of them; That indeed a dead heart may doe, there's no duty that God bids a man doe, unlesse it be them that consignifie life, but flesh and blood may doe it, for the matter of it, if there be matter and forme in it. True, some duties are simple that flesh and blood cannot doe, as to love God, to delight in God for ones Portion and Lot, and Inheritance, and to be all in all to him, these are simple acts, they are not compounded of matter and forme. But when a duty is compounded of matter and forme, flesh and blood may doe the matter of it whatsoevet it be; now then as the essentiall forme is the life of the matter, so the matter without it is a dead matter; and the doing of it dead.

Well then, now we see what is meant by dead; the next is, what is the meaning of Thou? Thou art dead, the word hath a double relation, the one to the Minister of the Church in Sardis; Thou art dead, thy Ministry is dead; the the other to the Church in Sardis it ſelfe; Thou art dead, thou art a dead people.

Firſt, it hath relation to the Miniſtry, thou art dead. thy Miniſtry is dead, there's no life in it at all. Hence the Doctrine is this, That a dead Miniſtry is as good as no Miniſtry at all, for this our Saviour meanes, in regard of the Angel of the Church in Sardis, q d thy Miniſtry is little better then no Miniſtry; it is ſtark dead well neere, it is not lively at all, there is little or no warmth to be had by it. Like the Miniſtry of the Scribes, that had no authority, no power at all in it, *Mat.*7.29. As Luther ſaid when he heard a cold Sermon, cold, cold, cold, ſayes he, this is cold Preaching, here is no heat at all to be gotten; as God ſayes of the Miniſtry of Laodicea, Thou art Luke-warm, *Rev.*3.16. That is, as there was no heat in his people, ſo there was no heat in his Miniſtry; this is little better then no Preaching at all, it is even as good as nothing. Doct.

Firſt, becauſe true Preaching is lively preaching when the Miniſter is a ſtirring Miniſter, as Peter ſpeaks, I think i meet to ſtir you up, 2 Pet 1.13. when the Miniſter is earneſt to ſave the peoples ſouls; as the Lord ſayes, I earneſtly proteſted to your Fathers, Ier. 11.7 He ſpeaks of the Miniſtry of Moſes and the Prophets down along untill the Prophet Ieremies time; they did not onely witneſſe the Word of God unto the people, but they did it in a lively and earneſt manner; as Paul did I have ſtriven to preach the Goſpel, *Rom.*15.20. Mark, he belaboured him in the Pulpit, he laid about him ſoundly, that his Miniſtry might have life in it. Saint Luke ſhews, that he had ſweaty Handkerchiefes, *Act.*19 12. ἱδρῶτα, as Hugo ſayes upon the place, it ſeems he ſweat much in Preaching: and ſo Chriſt compares Miniſters to Harveſt-men, that labour in Gods Harveſt. Ye know Harveſt men are hot at their work, ſo Miniſters ſhould be Harveſt-men, they ſhould be hot at their work. Thus ye ſee dry and dul Preaching is little better then no preaching at all, it is contrary to the manner of preaching, contrary to the practice of all true and right Preachers. Reaſ.

Secondly, a dead Miniſtry is called no Miniſtry; the Scripture calls it no Miniſtry in effect. The Scripture is the beſt Judge what is a true Miniſtry, and what is not. Now the Scripture makes a dead Miniſtry, and no Miniſtry all one: the Scribes and the Phariſees, ye know, were partly morall men moſt of them, as we may ſee by Pauls teſtimony of himſelf, and they were orthodox Miniſters, as our Saviour witneſſes of them in the main, for our Saviour bids people heare them, yet their Miniſtry was little better then no Miniſtry; as the Text ſhews, the people that ſate under their Miniſtry, are ſaid to be as ſheep having no ſheepherd, *Mat.*9.36. They preacht as if they did not preach; people might come to their Sermons and be nere a jot moved; nay ſuch as came with a deſire to be quickned, could get no quickning at all under them; Matthew ſayes they ſate under darkneſſe yet for all them. Theſe are Idoll Shepherds; Woe to the Idoll Shepherds, Zach 11.17. *Reaſ.*2.

Thirdly, a dead Miniſtry does do little or no good; though it be never ſo true, yet it is very unfruitful; it does not awaken any of the Auditory, it does not ſtartle any of the hearers, it does not rowze up mens hearts, it does not grapple with the obſtinate, it does not pull down the proud, neither is it fitted to work upon the conſcience; you may ſee an example of this in the Angel of the Church of Sardis, a dead Miniſter, a dead people, as he was dead himſelf, ſo his people were dead too; a lively Miniſtry does a great deale of good, It is the ſavour of life unto life unto thoſe that be of God, or elſe the ſavour of death unto death, unto thoſe that be not of God, 2 Cor. 2.16. It ever works one way, either it makes people rage, or it fats people up, or elſe it drives people home unto God; which way ſoever it works, it is a ſweet ſavour unto God, it glorifies God; but a dead Miniſtry does neither, it is a flat Weapon and cuts not, it is a blunt Sword and wounds not; may be it hath the true words of God, but they are not in a wiſe work-mans hands to make them as Goads *Reaſ.*3.

and ſharp Nayles; partly good points, but not pointed to prick any bodies heart; it is ſaid when Paul preacht, ſome went away converted, others went away blaſpheming, Act.13.45,48.

Reaſ.4. Fourthly, a dead Miniſtry, God ſeldome goes along with it; that's the life of a Miniſtry, when the Miniſter ſeeks God to goe along with him; now a dead Miniſtry God goes not along with it, a lively Miniſtry Chriſt goes along with it, So I am with you to the end of the world, Mat.28.20. If there be any of Chriſts ſheep in the pariſh, a lively Miniſtry does aſſuredly one time or other find them out; thoſe that are not Chriſts ſheep, a lively Miniſtry hewes them all downe, ſlayes all their Soules, ripens them apace for hell and for the pit. But a dead Miniſtry, the Lord does not goe along with that, the Lord does not crowne it.

Reaſ.5. Fifthly, a dead Miniſtry profanes thing worth; it does not hold forth keeps it from being ſeene, either that but hiding? for people will c in the generall, all their blindneſſe Fiſh out of a broad net, or elſe by no great matter. A lively Miniſtry Conſcience, it gives people to und it makes people looke about ther they have done, it flaſhes the Wo diſcover all their wayes; it gives one way or other; as it is ſaid of glorified by it, *Act.*13.48. But a d of it, it lets people ſit quiet under i fied Gods Word, it would either t

Uſe 1. The Uſe of this is; Firſt, here houted at, but applauded in the W all; it does not make the Devill whereas a lively Miniſter can hardl halfe a Martyr, Bryars and thornes niſters cannot give the world any g they played the wolves againſt the was counted too ſterne and auſtere man to be a true lively Preacher there's an utter Antipathy between the World and ſuch an one; the World and ſuch a Miniſter can no better agree together, than Light and Darkneſſe; ſuch a Miniſtry ſtands in the worlds light, it makes the world ſee their works are evill, it detects, it ſhames, it oppoſes their ſinnes, that the world tumbles in, as Chriſt ſayes, I have given them thy Word, and the world hates them, becauſe they are not of the world, Joh.17.14. And therefore there cannot be a lively Miniſtry any where, but the world hath a fling at it; but now let a man have a dead Miniſtry, that's let alone, that may ſtand long enough; that never comes home to men to ſhew them their ill eſtates; the Devils dawbers, the devills upholſters, that do not pluck mens pillowes away from under their arme-holes, that deale gently with men, and they may do what they liſt for all them, theſe are the worlds minions, and applauded at all hands; what a thing is this? whereas a dead Miniſtry is the undoing of mens ſoules; it lets men periſh, and never drawes them back.

Uſe 2. Secondly, this may ſerve to reprove us, that are Miniſters of Jeſus Chriſt, I deſire to ſpeak to my ſelf eſpecially, that we are no more lively in our Miniſtry; that our Miniſtry hath no more edge upon it to enter into this horny thick-skin age; we complaine of much deadneſſe now a-dayes; alack how if we be found guilty of it, that we Preach no more quickeningly! I confeſſe, bleſſed be God we have ſo much lively preaching left yet among us, that woe be to them that are dead and have no grace of life. But O that our Miniſtry had more lively-hood in it! that it were more exciting, and provoking. If the Apoſtles of Chriſt complained of dull hearers, Heb.5.11. How many dull hearers have we! why then ſhall we make our ſoules guilty of their dulneſſe? The deader people be, we had need to be the quicker in our Miniſtry, or elſe we cannot ſay, we are pure from their blood; don't we ſee how many people are very neere the Children of wrath? how they cannot be ſaved except they be juſtified and ſanctified in Jeſus Chriſt; how few are ſo? how hard a thing it is to awaken mens hearts? nay the world and the cares of this life, carry their

Mark 4.38. he was a ſleep, and they awakened him, Maſter careſt thou not that we periſh? more juſtly may our people ſay ſo to us; O ſirs, do not ye care that we periſh? they may even come and awaken us, Sirs, Care ye not that we periſh? Doe not you ſee how dead we are, how hardened, how ignorant of God, how empty of grace, how backward to that which is good; how prone to loſe our ſoules? and do not you care that we periſh? Why do not you labour more to quicken us, and move us, and to drive us out of our by-wayes, that we may come into the right way and live? When Archippus, was ſomewhat dead in his Miniſtry, St. Paul bids the people of Coloſſe to go and awaken him; Say to Archippus, Take heed to the Miniſtry which thou haſt received in the Lord, that thou fulfill it, Col..4.17. Well then,

Thirdly, another Uſe is an uſe of Exhortation, that we labour for a quickning Miniſtry, that our Miniſtry be a reviving ordinance of God; that we may, as Eſay ſaid, Though Iſrael be not gathered, yet ſhall I be glorious, Iſa.49.5. and ſharp Nayles; partly good points, but not pointed to prick any bodies heart; it is ſaid when Paul preacht, ſome went away converted, others went away blaſpheming, Act.13.45,48.

Reaſ.4. Fourthly, a dead Miniſtry, God ſeldome goes along with it; that's the life of a Miniſtry, when the Miniſter ſeeks God to goe along with him; now a dead Miniſtry God goes not along with it, a lively Miniſtry Chriſt goes along with it, So I am with you to the end of the world, Mat.28.20. If there be any of Chriſts ſheep in the pariſh, a lively Miniſtry does aſſuredly one time or other find them out; thoſe that are not Chriſts ſheep, a lively Miniſtry hewes them all downe, ſlayes all their Soules, ripens them apace for hell and for the pit. But a dead Miniſtry, the Lord does not goe along with that, the Lord does not crowne it.

Reaſ.5. Fifthly, a dead Miniſtry profanes the Word of God, it makes it ſeeme nothing worth; it does not hold forth the glory of the Lord, nay, it hides it, and keeps it from being ſeene, either by dwelling upon Generalls, and what's that but hiding? for people will confeſſe the Word in generall, they ſee it in the generall, all their blindneſſe is in particulars, there they ſlip away, like Fiſh out of a broad net, or elſe by delivering it ſo coldly, that people think it no great matter. A lively Miniſtry holds it forth, it lets out God into the Conſcience, it gives people to underſtand they come upon Life and Death, it makes people looke about them, it makes people conſider all that ever they have done, it flaſhes the Word of God into their hearts, as a light to diſcover all their wayes; it gives them a view of their Chriſtian eſtate, either one way or other; as it is ſaid of Pauls Miniſtry, The Word of the Lord was glorified by it, *Act.*13.48. But a dead Miniſtry profanes it, it vailes the glory of it, it lets people ſit quiet under it; it diſeaſes no ſinner, whereas if it glorified Gods Word, it would either trouble them, or turne them.

Uſe 1. The Uſe of this is; Firſt, here we ſee the reaſon why a dead Miniſtry is not houted at, but applauded in the World; why, it is as good as no Miniſtry at all; it does not make the Devill roare, it lets people ſleep in their ſinnes; whereas a lively Miniſter can hardly come into a Pulpit, but preſently he is halfe a Martyr, Bryars and thornes were with Ezekiel, *Ezek.*2.6. Lively Miniſters cannot give the world any good content; they fought againſt Jeremy, they played the wolves againſt the Apoſtles of JESUS. Iohn the Baptiſt was counted too ſterne and auſtere; and Luther ſayes, It is impoſſible for a man to be a true lively Preacher of Gods Word, and not be perſecuted; there's an utter Antipathy between the World and ſuch an one; the World and ſuch a Miniſter can no better agree together, than Light and Darkneſſe; ſuch a Miniſtry ſtands in the worlds light, it makes the world ſee their works are evill, it detects, it ſhames, it oppoſes their ſinnes, that the world tumbles in, as Chriſt ſayes, I have given them thy Word, and the world hates them, becauſe they are not of the world, Joh.17.14. And therefore there cannot be a lively Miniſtry any where, but the world hath a fling at it; but now let a man have a dead Miniſtry, that's let alone, that may ſtand long enough; that never comes home to men to ſhew them their ill eſtates; the Devils dawbers, the devills upholſters, that do not pluck mens pillowes away from under their arme-holes, that deale gently with men, and they may do what they liſt for all them, theſe are the worlds minions, and applauded at all hands; what a thing is this? whereas a dead Miniſtry is the undoing of mens ſoules; it lets men periſh, and never drawes them back.

Uſe 2. Secondly, this may ſerve to reprove us, that are Miniſters of Jeſus Chriſt, I deſire to ſpeak to my ſelf eſpecially, that we are no more lively in our Miniſtry; that our Miniſtry hath no more edge upon it to enter into this horny thick-skin age; we complaine of much deadneſſe now a-dayes; alack how if we be found guilty of it, that we Preach no more quickeningly! I confeſſe, bleſſed be God we have ſo much lively preaching left yet among us, that woe be to them that are dead and have no grace of life. But O that our Miniſtry had more lively-hood in it! that it were more exciting, and provoking. If the Apoſtles of Chriſt complained of dull hearers, Heb.5.11. How many dull hearers have we! why then ſhall we make our ſoules guilty of their dulneſſe? The deader people be, we had need to be the quicker in our Miniſtry, or elſe we cannot ſay, we are pure from their blood; don't we ſee how many people are very neere the Children of wrath? how they cannot be ſaved except they be juſtified and ſanctified in Jeſus Chriſt; how few are ſo? how hard a thing it is to awaken mens hearts? nay the world and the cares of this life, carry their minds quite and cleane away; how ſcarce any almoſt ſeriouſly conſider their latter end? don't we ſee how the Devill tempts, how the Fleſh and the World reigne in moſt, and how little Religion we have up and down? The Saints ſcarce, the wicked many; times very bad, the ſhortneſſe of life, the irrecoverable eſtate after death, the immortality of the ſoule, the paines of hell, and the joyes of heaven, and how that without holineſſe no man ſhall ſee God; how ſhould we beſtirre our ſelves to beat theſe truths into mens minds, that they may bethinke themſelves and flee from the wrath to come? The cold Preaching of ſuch weighty things cleane cozens the world, ſo that they hardly conceive any great matter in the buſineſſe; live and dye, and periſh for ever in their ſinnes, and we give them ſuch faint warnings, that no wonder ſo few do take any warning; we ſound the Trunpet too low, that ſcarce any almoſt prepare themſelves; we come into the Pulpit, but we do little or nothing there, may be we preach good Doctrine, but we do not preſſe it to the quick, that the Conſcience may feele; we do not bleed for our peoples ſecurity, and though they do not heare, how little does our ſoule weep in ſecret or melt in publick? Bucolcerus that admirable lively Preacher, was wont to ſay, That a Miniſter ſhould preach, flebiliter, obſecratorie, anxie, humiliter, ex pectore, cum gemitu; that is, a Miniſter ſhould preach mournfully over peoples ſoules, beſeechingly, anxiouſly, humbly, heartily, groningly; as it is ſaid of our Saviour Chriſt, he groned for the peoples unbeliefe; now when our Miniſtry is deadiſh, as though we cared not much whether people do our Doctrine or no, whether they be damned or no; this is a lamentable thing. The poore ſoules of our hearers may ſay to us, as the diſciples of Chriſt ſaid to Chriſt, and more juſtly, they ſaid it unjuſtly to him, Maſter careſt thou not that we periſh? Mark 4.38. he was a ſleep, and they awakened him, Maſter careſt thou not that we periſh? more juſtly may our people ſay ſo to us; O ſirs, do not ye care that we periſh? they may even come and awaken us, Sirs, Care ye not that we periſh? Doe not you ſee how dead we are, how hardened, how ignorant of God, how empty of grace, how backward to that which is good; how prone to loſe our ſoules? and do not you care that we periſh? Why do not you labour more to quicken us, and move us, and to drive us out of our by-wayes, that we may come into the right way and live? When Archippus, was ſomewhat dead in his Miniſtry, St. Paul bids the people of Coloſſe to go and awaken him; Say to Archippus, Take heed to the Miniſtry which thou haſt received in the Lord, that thou fulfill it, Col..4.17. Well then,

Thirdly, another Uſe is an uſe of Exhortation, that we labour for a quickning Miniſtry, that our Miniſtry be a reviving ordinance of God; that we may, as Eſay ſaid, Though Iſrael be not gathered, yet ſhall I be glorious, Iſa.49.5. So though our people be not quickn'd, yet ſhall we be glorious, we have done what in us lyes for to quicken them. Uſe 3.

Conſider firſt, This is the end of all true Miniſters preaching, that they may bring life into the hearers hearts; as the Prophet ſayes, Heare, and your ſoules ſhall live, Iſa.55.3. wherefore elſe do we Preach, but that the dead may heare the voyce of the Sonne of God and live? People are alive to that which they 1.

ſhould be dead unto, and they are dead to that which they ſhould be alive unto; they are alive to the world, and the things of the world, and dead to God and all goodneſſe, dead to the humbling of their ſoules, dead to the ſeeking of God, dead to Prayer, dead to the holy communion of the Saints, dead to holy comfort and meditation, and what ever elſe may do their ſoules good. Now wherefore do we Preach, if not to quicken up your hearts, that your ſoules may live for ever? they have knowledge already, more knowledge then they are quickened up to; our maine intention then ſhould be to quicken them up to do what they know; Are we not ſowers of ſeed? why then, we ſhould moſt labour ſo to plow and harrow and till the ground, that our ſeed may quicken; this is the very end of Preaching, that our hearers may heare and live.

2. Secondly, as it is the end of all true Miniſters preaching, ſo it is the nature of all true and right Preaching; either to quicken, or to be a fitted inſtrument of quickening; when David heard the word, it quickened his heart, thy word hath quickened me, Pſal. 119.50. And indeed it is never heard nor preacht aright, unleſſe it be in a quickning way; & therefore let us not thinke it is onely the taking of a Text, and the ſpeaking of good and wholſome truths, but let us ever remember what right Preaching is, that our Miniſtry be quickning, that God may affect our ſoules, and accompany our words, and teach us how to go beyond the policy of mens hearts, and direct us how to drive the truth home to the quick, to anſwer the evaſions of fleſh and blood, and ſo put his live
3. coale into our ſpeeches, that our Sermons may be warming.

Thirdly, Let us conſider, this is onely profitable Preaching; we may preach all the dayes of our life, and our people be ſtird no more then a mill-poſt, unleſſe our Miniſtry be quickening; they may heare what we ſay, but unleſſe we could quicken their hearts, they will forget all again; it may be, they may remember the Doctrine, but I mean they will forget to doe what they heare; it is the quickening that makes any remember to practiſe; as David ſayes, I will never forget thy precepts, for with them thou haſt quickened me, Pſal. 119. 93. We can never forget that friend, whom our hearts doe moſt dearly affect; ſo when our Miniſtry doth quicken and affect peoples hearts, they will never forget what they have heard; The quickening of the corne in the earth, makes it the faſter in the earth, it twiſts about the earth, it gets a rooting if it quicken; ſo it is with our Sermons, if they be quickening, they get about peoples ſoules, and will not out againe; otherwiſe they are never the nearer.

4. Fourthly, Let us conſider, this kind of Preaching onely will yeild us true comfort; when our Miniſtry is lively in our Pariſh, as Paul was at Epheſus; when we can ſay to our people, You hath God quickened by us, as he ſayes, you hath he quickened, who were dead, Epheſ. 2.1. I dare ſay it was a great comfort to his ſoule, to ſee that his Miniſtry was quickening; nay, if our Miniſtry be quickening, though none be quickened by it, but two or three, nay, though none at all, yet we ſhall have comfort; whereas when we have preacht a thouſand times in a dead-hearted manner, never labouring to creep into mens Conſciences, nor to be Miniſters of life, we ſhall have no comfort on our death-beds; nay our own hearts will tell us, we have preached often indeed, but we never preached Chriſt Jeſus, we never flung our hearts among our people, as one ſaid of the good Biſhop Felton, he flung his heart among his people. But when our conſciences can ſay, we are not hearty for God, we are not earneſt to ſave our peoples ſoules, we did not goe the way to doe them good; this will lye as lead upon our boſomes when we dye.

5. Fifthly, a dead Miniſtry, is but the bare name of a Miniſtry, it is little better then meer Voyce; as the Lacedemonian in Plutarch ſaid, when he heard how ſweetly the Nightingall ſang, O thought he, ſurely that Bird is good meat if I had it; and ſo when he took it, and ate it, and found but little meat in it, he ſaid, vox es & præterea nihil; now I ſee thou art meere voyce and nothing elſe; ſo a dead Miniſtry, it may have a great name of a good Miniſtry, and a man may deſire to live under it, O let me live under ſuch a Miniſtry, but when he comes to it, and thinks to receive much benefit by it, he finds it to be little better then a Name.

Sixthly, a dead Miniſtry is not a ſigne to our people; Miniſters ſhould be ſignes to our people; Thus Ezekiel is unto you a ſigne, according as he hath done, ſo ſhall ye doe. Ezek. 24.24. A voyce, true, John the Baptiſt was a voyce, Iſa. 40.3. but he was more then a voyce, he was a burning and a ſhining light; there was life and heat in his Miniſtry, he was not a meere voyce. But when ones Miniſtry is but a meere voyce, little good comes of ſuch a Miniſtry. 6.

Fourthly, another Uſe is for direction; to ſhew what a lively Miniſtry is, and how we may have a true lively Miniſtry, that is in one word, to preach with affection; as Quintilian ſayes of Eloquution, affections are the ſoule and life of Eloquution; ſo I may ſay of Preaching, affections are the life of Preaching; now by affections, I do not meane feigned and forced affections, they are no affections indeed, but when a man Preaches ſo for the matter and manner indeed, affectionate matter, and with a true affected heart, that he may move the hearts of men; as one ſayes, the World is now full of knowledge, as a Drunkard is full of wine, that his ſtomach is not able to digeſt; ſo I ſay, people have more knowledge, then they can well digeſt, the ſtomach wants heat to concoct it for their good; as Rodolphus Agricola ſpeakes, any man that hath Learning may teach; but to move the heart and affections, it requires more a great deale. This is lively Preaching, when a Miniſter ſets himſelfe to be in mens boſomes; what a lively Preacher was the Apoſtle Paul, you may ſee by his dealing with Agrippa, he made the Kings heart even yerne againe with his ſpeaking; the King confeſt how his ſpeaking worked within his boſome, Almoſt thou perſwadeſt me to be a Chriſtian, Act.26.28. So you may ſee by the Galatians, his Preaching did not onely convert many of them, but thoſe whom he did not convert, he did wonderfully worke upon their hearts, That they could have been contented to have plnckt out their Eyes, and have given them to him, Gal.4.15. Such a lively Preacher was he in the 2. of Judges, that when he Preach'd, he ſet all the people a melting, a weeping like little Children that had been beaten, Judg. 2.4. I grant it may be, the beſt and livelieſt Miniſters under heaven cannot do ſo now, peoples hearts are more hardned. But yet though we cannot undertake to move any one mans heart, that's the worke of God, yet our Miniſtry may be lively. Uſe 4.

Firſt, by labouring to make the things that we Preach as it were lively before peoples eyes; as the Apoſtle preached Chriſt Crucified, even as if he were Crucified before his peoples eyes, Gal.3.1. So Moſes had a very lively Miniſtry, the Text ſayes, he ſet before them life and death; he laboured to Preach with that evidence, as if he had ſet before their eyes life and death, heaven and hell, good and evill; when a Miniſter preaches in the evidence, and the demonſtration of the Spirit, 1 Cor.2.4. when he labours to bring the Goſpell plainly to mens hearts; a man may teach the Goſpel, but it is not Preaching, except he ſet it lively forth, and labour to make the people ſee it. This is the Truth, and this is your ſinne againſt that truth, this is the Doctrine, and thus you faile in the doctrine, this is the threatning of God, and thus you lye under the threatning; otherwiſe they heare a Sermon, as if it did not concerne them. 1.

Secondly, comming to particulars; generalls are but dead; we ſee they leave people dead, people have a hundred tricks to put them off: but when a Preacher comes to particulars, he either quickens or ſlayes, he convinces either to life or to death; when a Miniſter layes the truth at every mans doore, he preſſes it upon every mans heart, he meets with many a put-off, he makes every Conſcience ſay, I am the man, except they be aſleepe, or their 2.

minds are a wooll-gathering, he darts into his hearers faces, a view of their particular estates; he toucheth their copy-hold, he confutes their false pleas, and knocks off the fingers that would be applying of a Promise when it does not concerne them, and puts it only upon the Soule to whom it does belong. This is lively Preaching, that gives to every soule his due, terror to whom terror, comfort to whom comfort belongs; milke to the Babe, strong meat to the growne; oyle to the bruised, and a sword in the hard heart, a whip for the Horse, and a bridle for the Asse, and a rod for the Fooles back, Prov. 26. 3. Application is the life of Preaching; This serves to condemne such a one, this serves to confute such a one, when a Minister does as Paul sayes, divide the Word aright, 2 Tim. 2. 15.

3. Thirdly, by worrying of people out of their sinnes, when a Minister will not let people be quiet in any of their sinfull courses, when he labours daily to vex their guilty Consciences, and to turne them from day to day, as the two Witnesses did, Revel. 11. 10. that they may say, We cannot be quiet for this man, he makes me sit upon thornes; when a Minister labours to make Hell to have every vile wretch, and Heaven and the Promises to have every honest heart, &c.

4. Fourthly, by being pittious and affectionate towards the poore people, to let them see how we pitty their condition, as we should do what we can to make them feele their damned estate, as also with bowels and compassion, labour that they may see we do pitty them; and therefore Preaching sometimes is called Lamentation in Scripture, Ezek. 19. 1. It may be, people then may say, what a beast am I; how does our Minister pitty us! he mournes over us, and bewailes; what a wretch am I, that I do not bewayle mine owne case? O beloved, what a wofull thing is it, that any of us should perish, to be damned for ever in hell! To lye in eternall paines! What a pitty is this? Is it not much better ye should embrace the good word of God, and beleeve, and take Jesus Christ, and be willing to do any thing he would have you to doe, then to lye by it for ever in the paines of Hell, for the pleasures of sinne for a season? Alas it is for want of bowels, that we do no more good.

5. Fifthly, by being deeply affected with the word of God, laying nothing on peoples backs, but what we lift up upon our owne shoulders; speaking the truth from the bottome of our hearts, uttering the word of God with feeling and with a contrite spirit. O if we could drop our Sermons as dew down from Heaven on our people; this would be lively Preaching indeed, as the Prophet Ezekiel did, He dropt the word of God upon Jerusalem, Ezek. 21. 2. So if our Sermons did come dropping downe from us, as if they dropt downe from Heaven. O how coldly do our Sermons come from our mouthes! we do not Preach as if the Word came downe from heaven, but as if our hearts were no higher then our Pulpits.

Lastly, by getting the Lord to go along with our Ministry; for it is not our Preaching it selfe that hath any life; no, it is but a dead letter, as Micha sayes, I am full of power by the Spirit of the Lord, Mich. 3. 8

Now I come to the words, as they have relation to the Church it selfe. Thou art dead. Thou art a dead People; though thou hast a name to Live, yet, Thou art dead; that is, thou art outwardly reformed; thou hast goodly order'd Congregations, good, sober, civill and faire-carriaged people, all professing the true Religion, and frequenting the good Ordinances of God, yet, Thou art dead? that is, thou art even as good as nothing.

Doctr. The Doctrine hence is, A dead Christian is as, no Christian at all. Ye know we are all dead by nature, in trespasses and in sinnes; that is we are alive to the workes of the Flesh, and to the World, but dead towards God. And a true Christian is he that is made dead unto sinne and the world, but alive unto God; as the Apostle Paul sayes, Likewise reckon ye your selves to be dead unto sinne, but alive unto God through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, Rom.6. 11. This is a true Chriſtian, that ſo leaves his ſinnes, and ſo takes up the worſhip and ſervice of God, that he is Dead to his ſinnes, and alive towards God; now when a man it may be leaves his ſinnes after a manner, and takes up the profeſſion of Gods Service, and yet he is alive ſtill unto the fleſh, and dead towards God, this is juſt nothing

By Dead I meane five things; firſt, deadneſſe of guilt; when a man is guilty of any offence, that is death by the Law, he is ſaid to be a dead man; therefore every man hath ſinned againſt God, which is death by Gods Law, ſo that every man is dead by nature; when a man is pardoned of God, then he is alive againe; and therefore it is called Juſtification of life, Rom. 5. 18 Now when a man is not pardoned of God he is dead, though he have never ſo many hopes and conceits of forgiveneſſe, though he apprehend himſelfe to be pardoned, yet as long as God hath not pardoned him indeed, he is a dead man; 1.

Secondly, deadneſſe of Mind, when the mind is ignorant of God, in regard of ſaving knowledge, when a mans mind is without ſaving underſtanding, then his mind is ſaid to be dead; as David ſayes, Give me underſtanding and I ſha'l live, Pſal.119.144. Then my mind ſha l be alive ſayes he, then I ſhall know thee aright. Now let a man have never ſo much knowledge and learning, yet in divine things is otherwiſe, and have nothing, his mind is ſtill dead; he is as a dead man to all the things of God; he cannot ſee God in all his wayes no more then a dead man; he cannot mind God; he may mind earthly things, but he cannot mind God; nay, though he can mind Learning and Divinity, learning, and learning about God, yet he cannot mind God; his mind is dead to ſuch ſavoury knowledge; even as dead as a dead man; He knowes not how to pray to GOD, as a child to his Father; he knowes not how to do any duty, in a godly gracious manner; his mind is as dead to theſe things as a ſimple Country-man is to Latine, or Greeke, or Hebrew, 2.

Thirdly, deadneſſe of Heart, when the heart is not inclined towards God, then we ſay it is dead towards God and all goodneſſe; though he go to good duties every day, yet as long as the heart is not inclined to them, it goes about them in a dead manner; when a mans heart is once inclined towards God, now it begins to be alive towards him; as David ſayes, The heart ſhall be alive that ſeekes God, Pſal.69 32. That is, you whoſe hearts are inclined to ſerve God, your hearts are alive; Now when a man hath no Divine inclinations to all heavenly duties and courſes, though he do never ſo much profeſſe the following of them, he followes them with a dead Heart. 3.

Fourthly, deadneſſe of Conſcience, when the conſcience hath no force; it may be it finds fault with ſuch and ſuch wayes, but it hath no power over the man, to make him to leave them; perhaps it approves ſuch and ſuch holy performances, yea but it hath no power over him, to cauſe him to buckle to them; This is a dead Conſcience; it hath no life at all in it; when the Conſcience hath life in it once, then it hath power; it hath a mighty force over a man; as the Church, My ſoule made me like the Chariots of Aminadab, Cant 6.12. That is, my Conſcience was very forceable and powerfull in mee it made me not onely to go after God, but it carried me as it were in a Chariot very willingly. But when the Conſcience can whiſper onely and find fault, and hath no power at all with it to make one obey from day to day, this is a dead Conſcience. 4.

Fifthly, deadneſſe of Affection; when the affections are clumbzie, and will not ſtirre towards God, and all heavenly things; when a man is like a block in good duties, he hath no affections to them nor in them; when the affections are all alive to earthly things, when they are ſtill out of order; as the Apoſtle Paul ſayes, Mortifie your inordinate Affections, Col.3.5. That is, your Affections muſt not be out of order, if they be alive to other things, ye 5.

must kill them, that way, that they may be alive towards all the things that are above; now when the Affections will not move that way at all, then they are dead. But I will speake no more of this; well then, let us come to the Doctrine: A dead Christian is even as good as no Christian at all.

Goe through all Christianity, and we shall see this to be true in every passage; should a man have all Christianity in him, and yet be dead and dull and without life, it is even all one, as if he had just nothing.

1. First, for Conversion; should a man seeme to be converted. O what a changed man is this! he was a Drunkard, and now he is sober; he was a Whorer, and now he is is chast; he was a prophane beast, and now he is cleane another man; this is well: I, but if thou beest dead to the wayes of God; if thou beest not quickened up to them, this is magnum nihil, Conversion is a quickening; When we were dead in sinnes, he hath quickened us together with Christ, Ephes. 2.5. Conversion is not onely a turning of a man from wicked wayes to good, but to be quickned up in them; Conversion puts another life into a man; a man may be converted from prophaneness to civility, from not Praying constantly to praying constantly; from not Hearing to hearing; from not Preaching to preaching; from not Professing to professing. True this man shall have the lesse hell; yea, but this is nothing towards heaven; except a new life be put into this man, to be alive in all these good wayes; except he be quickened together with Christ.

2. Secondly, Faith; should a man leane himselfe upon God, and upon Christ, should a man apply all the Promises of the Gospell to his soule, and beleeve all that's contained in the covenant of Grace; alas what of all this? If this man be dead still, without such a Faith as produces life; it is little better then nothing; as Christ sayes, He that lives and beleeves in me, Joh. 11 26. True faith carries life with it, whersoever it is; and therefore if a mans faith be without life, it is but equivocall faith; faith it may well be, but true Faith it cannot be; for if thou wouldst be able to say thou beleevest in Jesus Christ, thou must be able to say, that thou livest too in him; it's impossible a man should rightly beleeve in Christ and be dead; no, he lives that beleeves in me, sayes Christ.

3. Thirdly, as ye heard heretofore, to be a member of the visible Church of GOD, to be a stone in Gods building; were a man the finest and most carved stone of all, put in by Baptisme, kept in by profession of the Christian faith; this is a poore thing, if this man now be not a lively stone, Ye also as lively stones, are built up a spirituall house an holy Priest-hood, &c. 1 Pet. 2.5. The right stones in Gods spirituall house are all lively stones; if thou beest but a logge heartlesse, dull, dead member, thou art none of Gods spirituall house, no part of his holy Priest-hood, thou art no more a Christian then a Dead man is a man. Thou art but a fil roome, thou hast nothing but a name of a true Christian; The body of Christ, is all full of life, derived from him the head; all the branches that are in him, have the life of the root in them; if thou beest but a dead branch, thou hast no communion with Christ at all, though thou beest in the body.

4. Fourthly, for Hope; it may be thou hast hope that thou art a good Christian, that thou hast a part in the redemption of the world by Jesus Christ; thou hast a hope of the heavenly inheritance, that thou shalt be saved in that day; now if thy hope be a dead hope, if it does not quicken thee up to trample on the world, to beat downe thy worldly lusts, to screw thee up to a gracious life more and more, to carry thee on through thick and thin, this is not a gracious hope; no, no; the grace of hope is a lively hope, as the Apostle speakes, Blessed be God, and father of our Lord Jesus Christ, Which according to his abundant mercy, hath begotten us againe, to a lively hope, 1 Pet. 1.3. This grace of hope it quickens up all them that have it, it is not a dead hope hope, that lyes ſluggiſhly and blockiſhly in the ſoule, and does not ſtirre it up every day; no, it revives him towards God, it makes him eager after the beſt things; if thy hope be a dead hope, that lyes like a carcaſe in thy heart, to little or no purpoſe, it is no good hope through grace, but a hope in a dreame.

Fifthly, for Repentance; what ever thou haſt to ſay for repentance, canſt thou plead a thouſand changes and reformations, yet if thou haſt not gotten out of a dead temper, thou art yet under an impenitent heart. That repentance that is the gate of heaven, the Evangeliſt cals it, Repentance unto life, Act. 11.18. True repentance it rends the heart, it ſhewes ſinne to be the greateſt evill, and it rowzes a man up daily to take heed of it it makes us ſee what a God we have diſhonoured: and therefore it awakens the ſoule to be earneſt to pleaſe him in all things for the time to come; the ſoule was dead, and careleſſe, and drowzie, and neglectfull of obedience, goodneſſe, holineſſe, humility, pureneſs, ſtrictneſs, preciſeneſſe of walking, it cared not for theſe things afore, but when true repentance comes in, it wheels about the life of the ſoule towards God; now the cares ſhall be to him, now the endeavours make after him; paines, labours, cautions, watchfulneſſe, conſiderativeneſſe, ſtudious ſtrivings, and all is active that way now; ſo that if a man be ſtill dead, his repentance is falſe.

Again, to go over all duties of Religion; they muſt be done with life; to do them with a dead heart, is as good as not to do them at all; First Prayer, ſuppoſe we pray at Church, and pray in our Families, and pray in our cloſets, is this all? To pray with a dead Heart, as if we cared not whether we ſped or no, no pullings of our heart downe before God; no wraſtlings with God for what we aſk, no liftings of our ſoules up, no faſtnings of our minds upon his Preſence, no cryes, no mournings, no importunity, but the heart as lumpiſh and unweildy as a Stone; is this Praying? No, ſayes David; Quicken us O Lord, that we may call upon thy name, Pſal. 80.18.

Secondly, for Hearing the word: It is not thy hearing of it ſo many times a weeke, though thou maiſt heare it as often as ever thou canſt, and thoſe that will not heare as frequently as they may, are high deſpiſers of God and his Ordinances; but yet if thou heareſt the word with a dead heart, thy hearing is made as no hearing; It is ſaid of thoſe primitive Converts, that they were pricked in their hearts as they were hearing, Act. 2 37. They only got good by their hearing, they heard the word with life; ſo it is ſaid of many of Chriſts hearers, they did, ἐπιπίπτειν, they layd upon him, they preaſed upon him, Luk. 5.1. In another place, it is ſaid, that they hung upon him, they were attentive and eager to him. Our Saviour Chriſt ſayes, it is a very great judgment to be dull of hearing, Mat. 13.15. When people ſit as if the word did not concerne them, when they heare without any motion or affection the word hardly joggeth their hearts, it hardly ſhaketh their Conſcience at all, the word does neither delight them, nor wound them, nor pierce them, it heals none of their ſins, it cannot get between them and their luſts; when they have heard a Sermon, they go away juſt as they came, they find nothing now to do, it does not dragge them one jot more out of the world, nor an inch neerer heaven; their carriage is much at one as it was; When they come home, it cannot be perceived that ever they were at the word; as earthly as ever; as carnall as ever; as backward to all goodneſs as ever; this is no Hearing at all.

Thirdly, for ſanctifying of the Lords day: It is ſaid of the Sabboth, that we ſhould call it our delight, Iſa. 58.13. That is, we ſhould keep it with life, it ſhould even quicken up our hearts to think it is comming, we ſhould be revived to conſider Gods goodneſs, that he would give us ſuch a Day, ſeeing we have ſo much need of it; when we have been ſix dayes about our own buſineſs in the world, that we ſhould have a Seventh given us of God, leſt we ſhould be over head and eares in the world to take off our hearts; now when this is no delight to us, our hearts are dead to it, we do not ſanctifie it indeed, but prophane it, as though it were not honourable and the day of the Lord.

4. Fourthly, for taking hold of an opportunity to do Good; this is a duty too to be done with all life; how glad ſhould we be if there be any opportunity for us to ſhew our love to God, or our hatred to ſinne! we ſhould be willing to ride, or go, or be at charges, nay we ſhould deny our ſelves, and lay downe our gains, and credits, and goods, and friends, and all that we have at Chriſt's Foot, and bleſſe God that gives us ſuch a price in our hands; but now we have a dead heart to this; what a horrible thing is this? Though we do take the opportunity, yet to go about it as though we were ſorry that God hath given it unto us; this is meer folly; as Solomon ſayes, Wherefore is there a price in the hand of a Foole to get Wiſdome, ſeeing he hath no heart to it? Proverbs 17.16.

5. Fifthly, In one word, for all the wayes of God, there's nere a one of them all that can be walkt in aright, without a live heart, as the Prophet ſayes, Lord turn away mine eyes from beholding vanity, & quicken me in thy way Pſ 119.37. Now when we go dreamingly on, as though we could not do withall, though the way be God's, yet our going in it is ſtark naught, and little better then not going in it at all; and therefore the Lord accepts not of it: When we humble our ſelves before God, to hang down our heads like a Bull-ruſh, it's naught, it's naught, the Lord cannot away with it; when we conferre about the Word, or any gracious and godly Theme, to ſpeake as if we had no ſavour of it, no pleaſure in it, when our hearts would rather be on another ſubject, and never lin till they have wound all good talke out; if we ſpeak one word to edification, there ſhall be twenty to that one, that ſhall ſerve to no other end, but to the hardning of one another; when Chriſt and the two diſciples were communing together, their hearts burned in them; did not our hearts burne within us while he talked with us by the way? Luke 24.32. That was talking with life But when our hearts are as cold as a flint, this we may call talking, but holy conference it cannot be termed.

Thus ye ſee, a dead Chriſtian, is as good as no Chriſtian at all, no grace is without life, no duty can be done without life; the reaſons of this are,

Reaſ. 1. Firſt, becauſe this is all one as to have no Grace at all; though a man be a member of the congregation of the Lord, though he have the ſeales of the Covenant, and profeſs the faith of Jeſus, and be as morall in his life as ever any of the heathen, and as full of good duties as ever any hypocrite was, and more too, yet if he have not life yet, he is but a tinkling cymball, he hath no grace at all. I meane no ſaving grace at all; ſaving grace the Apoſtle calls it, The grace of life, 1 Pet. 3.7. It is the grace of life, it breeds life in him that hath it, it makes him alive towards God, it lets out the life of his heart in every good word and worke; it makes him pray with life, heare with life, uſe the ordinances in publike and private with life; the naturall life that is in the ſoule it turnes it to God, it turnes the man about, as a ſhip is turned on the Sea; that ſayled before towards North, now it ſayles towards South. So when grace comes into the ſoule; ye know the man had life afore, but it ſayled towards the world, and the things of the world, but when grace does come in, it makes it row, and ſayle, and ſteere towards God: So that when a Chriſtian is dead, he is as no Chriſtian at all.

Reaſ. 2. Secondly, a dead Chriſtian hath not Chriſt dwelling in his heart by Faith; he is no Chriſtian indeed, that hath not Jeſus Chriſt dwelling in him by a true and lively faith. It is the in-dwelling of Chriſt that makes one a true Chriſtian; now when Chriſt does dwell in any man, Chriſt is a quickening ſpirit; as the Apoſtle ſpeakes, the ſecond Adam was made a quickening ſpirit, 1 Cor. 15.45. that is Chriſt; he is the ſecond Adam; he is a quickening ſpirit where ever he dwels; he quickens all the ſoul. He makes it dead to that which by nature it was alive to; and alive to that which by nature it was dead to; he inclines the the ſoule unto God, he infuſes a principle into it to ſhape with life towards God, he does more and more hale the ſtrength of the ſoul towards him though he doe not doe it all at once, yet he does it more and more. Now when a man is ſtill dead to God and all goodneſſe, he hath not Chriſt dwelling in him by a lively faith; for if he were in once, though the ſoul may complain ſtill of deadneſſe, as commonly thoſe that are alive complain moſt of deadneſſe, yet it hath a ſupernaturall quickning, and it ſhall have more and more.

Thirdly, a dead Chriſtian was never yet ſoundly wrought upon by the word. The word of Chriſt is a word of life, and it quickens where it does effectually work; and therefore though ſuch a one have heard a thouſand thouſand ſermons, he never fed upon them in all his life; as Chriſt ſayes, If any man eat of this bread, he ſhall live forever, Joh 6 51. it is better than ordinary bread, ordinary bread indeed, if a man have a naturall life, it will feed it and preſerve it; But if a man be dead, it will not revive him. But the word of God is ſuch a bread, that as it feeds a ſpirituall life in them that have it, ſo it is able through the eternall ſpirit, to quicken the dead; it is able through God, to put life into men, that never had any; and it does ſo to all that are of God, ſooner or later; now when a man is dead, it's a plaine ſigne that the word hath not yet wrought upon that man; it may be it hath ſhaken him many a time; yea but if he be yet dead, it never wrought upon him ſoundly; the oracles of God, are lively oracles, as Stephen calls them, Act. 7 38. they make their hearers lively that they come to worke ſoundly on; though they were never ſo dead to God and good things afore, yet now they wax lively, they make their hearts to receive a divine ſtrength, that now they wax able in ſome meaſure to live towards God, to hunger and thirſt after God, to delight in the ſeeking of him, be their luſts never ſo mighty, now they can compoſe themſelves to oppoſe them, and to ſwim againſt the ſtreame; now they can pray and they cannot abide to have blockiſh hearts in that, nor in any other duty; they have a life that reſiſts that ſame deadneſſe that dwelleth in them. So then this is another reaſon, that a dead Chriſtian is as good as no Chriſtian at all; the word hath never wrought ſoundly on that Man.

The uſe of this is firſt if the dead Chriſtians in Sardis be as good as nothing, what are the riff-raffe in the towne, that are not ſo much as Chriſtians in name? If a dead Chriſtian be rejected of God, what's a dead drunkard? a dead whore monger, a dead prophaneling? If one that walkes in good comſe be refuſed, becauſe he is dead in them, then what ſhall become of them that will not follow good courſes at all? If ſuch that are Saints to them, cannot be ſaved, where ſhall they appeare? It is ſaid that Chriſt loved the goodly fine-caraged young man, Mark. 10.17. Chriſt is never ſaid to love a drunkard; a prophane wretch; no, he regards one that carries himſelf in a faire civill honeſt way, more then all the world beſides, except onely his own children; and therefore if he counts meer civill men ſtark naught, how much more does he thee, that art a very beaſt compared with them? Thou art ſo vile, that we that are men do know thou art in a fearefull eſtate, nay, the Lord pronounces a woe upon them that do ſpeak well of thee, theſe ſins are to be puniſhed by the Judges; if thou hadſt lived in Iſrael, thou ſhouldſt have been put to death, a drunken Son ſhould have been ſtoned; an Adulterer, a Fornicator ſhould be burnt; a Blaſphemer ſhould be brained to death. Thy ſinnes are ſo palpable, that pillories, and ſtockes, and priſons, and gallowes, ſhould be thy fare, if thou wert well ſerved. Thou art not onely dead, for the manner of thy life, but for the matter too; not onely the Saints do abhor thee, but all that have any civility in them, doe loath thy filthy doings; and would not do as thou doeſt; no, not for a world; as Solomon ſayes ſuch as thou art, are not only dead but in the dwth of hell, Pro 9 18. There be many though they be not right, yet they are ſo much reformed, that the Saints of God cannot ſay, but that they may be good Chriſtians; But thou art so foule, that he that hath but one eye may see the Devill leads thee, there be some that a man may be to blame for judging them wicked, but he that judges thee otherwise, hates his own soule. Poore creature, does thy foolish heart promise thee hopes to find mercy? Alas the devill does but lead thee in a string, he knowes well enough, though he will not let thee see it, there is no mercy for them that go on still in their wickedness. Thou hast not so much as a name that thou livest, how dead then art thou? Thou art dead and rotten, and stinkest, not onely in the nostrils of God, but of all that have any common Grace in them. Others may be in a damned condition for all their profession, but to be sure thou art in a damned condition, there's nothing between thee and hell, but onely the poore thred of thy life. How canst thou keep out of hell, that canst hardly keepe out of the Ale-house? O heare this ye that have not so much as any face of Religion; See the word of the Lord, & think upon it for your good, if ye have any eare to hear before it be too late.

1. Consider first, thou art farre from the Kingdome of God; such as are sober and morall and frequenters of the ordinances of God, and professe godlines, though they be not alive, yet they are not farre from the Kingdome of God; as Christ said of the discreet Scribe, Mark. 12 34. But thou art a hundred degrees farther off; thou art so farre off, that thou hast need to hasten quickly, thou hast a thousand degrees of reformation to passe over, before thou canst get so neere as some of them that are short.

2. Secondly, Thou art altogether become unprofitable, as the Apostle speaks, Rom 3 12. Thou art good for nothing, but to do mischiefe in a Parish, to infect, to spoile youth, to trouble thy wife, and thy poore Children; to corrupt thy servants and thy neighbours, to spill the good creatures of God, to be a very slave to thy fleshly lusts; others that are well governed in their lives, though they be dead, yet they do a great deale of good, they helpe the Saints, they are I say gotten to stand for good order; but thou art a very burden to all well-disposed people, the very shame of the Towne, the disgrace of the family where thou art; what will people say, yonder's a Drunkard, yonder goes a Fornicator, a dissolute fellow, though he be a Gentleman, yet he is fit for none but rogues, and rascals, and tinkerly companions, a man that hath but a spark of honesty would be ashamed of him; A Christian? No, he is a very beast, he cannot govern himselfe. But what do I stand spending of time to speak against such wayes which the Apostle sayes should scarcely be named in Christians mouthes? The very heathens shall judge thee; the Lord open thine eyes, to see what a cursed creature thou art, that thou maist come out of the snare of the devill.

Use 2. This is for the reproof of the Deadnesse that is now among us; the Lord may say to us, as he did unto Sardis, I know thy works, thou hast a name that thou livest, and art dead; for notwithstanding the great meanes of life, that the Lord hath placed among us, O how does deadnesse of heart reigne! we are like them the Prophet speaks of, that drew nigh to God with their mouth, and honoured him with their lips, but their heart was far from him; Mat. 15 8. they had no heart to his holy worship. So it is with most of us; we draw nigh to God with our outward man, but our heart is far from him; no heart to Prayer, no heart to the word; we heare it peradventure, but no heart to it at all; how ordinarily do we come to Gods house, but heartlesnes hath dominion over the most of us: the Doctrine of the Gospell does not quicken up our hearts, we deale with it, as Phinehas his wife did with her Son, when the women about her told her she had a Sonne, the text sayes, she did not regard it: so what little regard have we of the Gospell of God! I stretched out my hands and no man would regard, Prov. 1. Tell us of our damned estate by nature, how cursed we are from the wombe, what infinite need we have to be sensible of it, we know it, but how dead is our knowledge of it? It does not ſtirre up our hearts to conſider of it; neither does it prick us ſo much as the pricking of a pin; Tell us of the Redemption of the world by Jeſus Chriſt, his precious Bloud, his Paſſion and Merits; whoſe heart is enlivened and quickened up by them? Nay, our ſoules are hardly moved at all at the hearing of them. Tell us of the Kingdome of Heaven, the marriage Supper of the Lamb, his Oxen, and his fatlings; O they are all ready, come Sirs, come to the marriage; we are even as they in the parable, They made light of it, Matth. 22.5. Theſe things are made as if they were of no moment, as if they were light matters, they finde poore entertainment at our hands; what little irkſomeneſſe do we feele in Sinne, what little dejectednesſe of heart, what little remorſe of Conſcience, nay, few know by experience, what Humiliation meanes; we can confeſſe in our prayers, how vile we are, and how unworthy and how wretched and ſinnefull; but as though theſe were words of courſe, our hearts are ſo dead, that there is little or no relenting at it; we can ſay we are undone if God do not heare us, our prayers are all nothing, except they be with faith and life; and yet who ſtrives to awaken and rowze up himſelfe? We can ſay, O how are we beholding to God, for life, for health, for his daily good providence, for his patience, his bounty? And we can ſay, it is not the bare naming of his bleſſings before him that is counted thankeſgiving, without being affected with his infinite goodneſſe; and yet who does unfeignedly labour to be affected with them from day to day? No body of us dares deny but that we ſhould ſet the Lord alwayes before us, that he may be at our right hand, and yet who hath the heart to provoke himſelfe hereunto? The Devill may be at their right hand and not God, for all the paines that they take to have him there. So that dead-heartednesſe is a common evill now a dayes as Chriſt ſayes of the laſt times; Becauſe iniquity ſhall abound, The love of many ſhall waxe cold, Matth.24.12. So it is now; becauſe Iniquity abounds, the moſt are prophane, and diſſolute, and licentious, and looſe; therefore many that profeſſe love to Jeſus Chriſt, their love does grow cold and dead; no life hardly at all, no ſigne that they are alive from the dead; if they do beleeve after a manner, there's all, they doe not live in Jeſus Chriſt; if they have any hope of mercy or heaven, that's all they have, it is not a lively hope that may quicken them up in Gods holy wayes; if they do ſee their ſinnes, there's the utmoſt, it is a dead ſight, that does not excite them unto ſtrictneſſe and preciſeneſſe of living; if they do follow good and godly duties, alas there be few that do ſo, but if they do go ſo farre, it is cleane without heart and life; as though any thing would ſerve Gods turne well enough; what a horrible thing is it when a dead Chriſtian is as good as no Chriſtian at all! No matter how many Chriſtians we have, alas none of us are true, but ſuch as are alive from the dead.

Secondly, is it ſo that a dead Chriſtian is even as good as no Chriſtian at all? then learne hence my brethren, what a dangerous thing it is to be a dead-hearted Chriſtian. Uſe 3.

First, all that we do with a dead heart, 'tis as good as nothing; as Paul ſayes of Love, Had we all faith, and all knowledge, yet if we have not love, we are nothing, 1 Cor. 13.2. Whatſoever we do, if we do not do it out of love, all's nothing: So I may ſay of life, whatſoever good duty we do, if we do not do it with life, it is but a dead worke: and therefore it is no more then nothing. When the Prophet David would do good duties, ſo as to do them to good purpoſe indeed, you ſhall ſee how he labours againſt a dead heart, Quicken me after thy loving kindneſſe, ſo ſhall I keepe the Teſtimonies of thy mouth, Pſal. 119 88. ſo we may ſay too, Lord quicken me after thy loving kindneſſe, ſo ſhall I Preach, ſo ſhall I heare, ſo ſhall I do thy holy will, ſo ſhall I go up and downe doing good; Now as long as a man does it with a dead heart, it is even all one as if a man had not done it at all; a dead man is no man, as the A-postle sayes; God quickens the dead, and calls things that are not: works, dead things are no things; so dead works are no works, as Solomon sayes. There is no worke, and no device, and no wisdome, and no purpose in the Grave whither thou goest; That is, when men are dead, then they can do nothing. So is it here as long as we are dead, we can do nothing. True because we have the life of sense, and of Nature, and of a naturall Conscience in us, we may counterfeit good workes, as a Painter may make a man, though he cannot make a living man: So as long as we are dead-hearted, we do but paint out good duties before God: all our prayers are but painted prayers, all the good works we do, are but paint, there's none of them to the life. As God sayes of the Jewes, you will say they did very many good works, they Fasted and Prayed, and Sacrificed, and many other things they did. But what sayes God? They are vanity, their works are nothing, Isa 41.9. As a dead Corps, there be Eyes, and nostrils, and eares and mouth: But when the life is out, they are as good as nothing. So it is with a dead heart, we may thinke we Preach much, and study much, and heare much, and professe much, and do much: the truth is, we do nothing.

2. Secondly, all that we do with a Dead heart, it does not please God. God sayes, My sonne give me thy heart, Prov. 23.26. Ye know the heart, that is Primum vivens, that's the first living thing in us: Now if we give God never so many performances, yet if all our heart be not with them, what cares he for them all. when they are a company of heartlesse things? When the Apostle had said, that to be fleshly-minded is Death, by and by he concludes; so then, sayes he, They that are in the flesh, cannot please God. Rom 8. 8. would that please any of us, that one should come and take up a dead stincking carcase, and lay it before us? No more can it please God, to lay a dead duty before his heavenly Majesty; ye know, a dead carion, it is loathsome, as long as life remaines in it, that's a sweet thing, and it preserves it from stinking; and therfore the heathens called the soul the salt of every living thing, because the life is a preserving thing, it preserves a thing sweet; but when the life is gone out, presently it becomes odious; so is all that we do, when we do it with a dead heart, it is odious with God, it cannot be accepted with him, as the Apostle Peter speakes, Ye also as lively stones are built up a Spirituall house, a holy Priesthood, to offer up Spirituall Sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ, 1 Pet. 2.5. That is, the Apostle had compared true Christians unto stones, now he correcteth himselfe, did I call true Christians stones? I pray, do not mistake me, I do not meane for Deadnesse, but for firmnesse, a Stone is a dead liveleesse thing. O sayes he, ye must be Stones, I, but ye must take heed of deadnesse, ye must be lively, otherwise ye cannot offer acceptable sacrifices unto God; This is even as a Jew should have taken a dead Sheepe out of a ditch, and laid it on Gods Altar; This is abomination to God: even so are dead doings to Almighty God, as Vinegar to thee teeth, and smoake to the Eyes; so is a Sluggard to him that sends him, Prov. 10, 26. That is, when a Master sends a servant on his errand, if he go dully about it, even as if he had no life nor heart in him at all to do his masters businesse, this will not please him, nay, it will offend him, as smoke does the Eyes, or as Vinegar does the Teeth, it will make him looke with a sowre looke upon such a Servant. So beloved, when God bids us serve him in all our wayes, may be we are not so grosse as not to go about it at all, but we go about it with a dull and a dead heart, this does not please God one whit, nay, he takes it ill that we should thinke he will accept it at our hands. As when the Iewes had no heart to Gods holy and pure worship, it was too chargeable to them, it put them to too much charges; what a whole Sheepe, and a whole Lambe every morning? besides many whole ones at other times, whole Bullocks, whole Oxen, and whole Goates, this was even as death to them, they went up to Gods Temple with a dead heart; nay they thought much to give him of the beſt, they gave him the torne and the maimed, now mark what he ſayes; ſhould I accept this at your hand, ſaith the Lord, Malac. 1.13. He took it ill, they ſhould think he would accept it; ſo when we think much to be ſo preciſe and ſo ſtrict, to pray ſo much, to heare ſo much, to mind him ſo much, and to deny our ſelves ſo much, to watch ſo much over our hearts, to humble our ſelves ſo much, what? May we not keep one luſt? May we have no more liberty then ſo? May be we doe ſome thing this way, but God knows how, with a dead heart it is: the Lord takes it ill, that we ſhould hope he will accept this at our hands.

Thirdly, all that we doe with a dead heart, it cannot yeild us any comfort: True, if we were quickened up towards God, if we ſerved God with all our heart and ſoule and life, this would comfort us indeed; to ſeek him daily in a lively manner, to goe into his preſence with all our mind; if we went eagerly adayes to the thorne of grace, if we were earneſt in Prayer, earneſt againſt ſinne, earneſt for all goodneſſe, this were a ſigne of his favour, and a Teſtimony of the true grace of life, this would comfort our hearts exceedingly; this would breed peace in our conſcience as the Apoſt. ſpeaks, To be ſpiritually minded is life and Peace, Rom. 8.6. there's life, and therefore there is peace. The reaſon is this; becauſe lively works alone can truly pacifie Conſcience; when a man hath been a profeſſour all his dayes, and done never ſo many things; yet if the Conſcience can ſay, yea, but all theſe are dead works, all this while I have gone on with a dead heart, this foules the conſcience; it can never have true peace. How much more ſhall the blood of Chriſt purge your conſcience from dead works, to ſerve the living God? Heb. 9.14. It ſhall purge the Conſcience from dead works; dead works foule the conſcience; whether they be dead for matter or manner; ſinne is a dead work for matter, and good duties heartleſſely done are dead works for manner; now both foule the Conſcience; the conſcience remaines under guilt; continues without peace, it is an ill Conſcience; why? Becauſe the Conſcience knowes it hath the living God to ſerve, that will not like of ſuch workes; when a man payes in his rents only by halves, or by dribblets or with light mony, the Kings receiver will not give him an acquittance; my Brethren, Conſcience is Gods receiver, no wonder it does not give you an acquittance, when ye pay in only waſht duties, clipt obedience; If ye ſerved God with life, Conſcience would give you an acquittance; when ye have done a dayes worke in his harveſt, it would acknowledge the receipt of it, well done good and faithfull ſervant; it is well done in ſome meaſure. This made Paul full of life every day; Herein do I exerciſe my ſelfe, to have alwayes a Conſcience void of offence towards GOD, and towards men, Act. 24.16. that is, I do not onely go on in good duties both towards God and towards men, but this I do alwayes, I do even exerciſe my ſelfe, that I may have an acquittance from mine owne Conſcience when I have done; that my conſcience may give me a true diſcharge; well done, I have done well in ſome meaſure; now as long as we are dead hearted and hollow in Gods wayes, our conſcience can never give us a diſcharge; no marvell, that ſo few of us have Peace of Conſcience, when we are ſo dead-hearted as we are: If we would ſtir up our ſelves to ſerve God with all our heart and life, we ſhould have Peace; but till this be done, we can never looke to have Peace and comfort.

Fourthly, Though we have comfort in time of proſperity, yet we cannot have comfort in affliction, if we be of a dead heart; how many are there that ſeem to have comfort while they are well, but when they come to be ſick, and at deaths doore, then they are all to peeces? Then they ſee they have no Grace, no Faith, no good cards to ſhew; then they are ſtript ſtarke naked, then their Conſcience ſees what they are; O, I am a wretch; how have I deceived

my selfe! so beloved, though we have comfort in time of Prosperity, yet if we be dead hearted, we can have no comfort in Affliction. As David sayes, This is my comfort in affliction, thy Word hath quickened me, Psal. 119 50. When the word of GOD hath quickened our hearts, and made us lively in all manner of goodnesse, this will yeild us comfort in affliction. But if we be dead to all spirituall wayes, though we scramble up hopes now, they will not hold when affliction comes; now what a fearfull thing it is? We shall all come to affliction ere long; for man is borne to trouble as the sparks fly upward, as Job speakes; nay we know not how soone; man knoweth not his time, as Solomon speakes; but as the Fishes are caught in an evill net, so are the Sons of men snared in an evill time, when it falleth suddenly on them. And God onely knowes what sore afflictions we may have; the Cup of affliction is in Gods hand, and he tempers it and powres it out as his pleasure is. I say, what a fearfull thing is it not to have comfort then, when we have most need of comfort? And if we have not comfort then, we are utterly undone; now my brethren it is not a dead dull profession will yeild us comfort then. Let us think of this; as God sayes, What will ye doe in your day of visitation? to whom will ye flye for help then? Isa. 10.3. So may I say, though ye can be quiet and comfortable enough now, in the dayes of health and peace, your deadnesse does not trouble you now; but what will ye doe in the dayes of visitation? Doe but consider what a sorry comfort ye shall have then; assuredly a dead heart will afford not a syllable of true comfort then.

Fifthly, we can never blesse God with a dead heart; a dead heart is not able to affirme upon any good ground that God is his; or that the Promise is his; or that Christ is his; The soule knowes Christ is a quickening spirit, and they that have him, are quickened up by him, the promise is a promise of life, and
5. they cannot be dead that are the possessors of it; we cannot blesse God either for love or mercy or grace, or any thing else; when we would blesse God for any of these things, the deadnesse of heart, it will be objected to us; O, I am so dead, that how can I hope that these things belong unto me? Let my soule live, and it shall praise thee, Psal. 119 175. When the soule is alive towards God, then it can praise God; then it knowes, all the good it hath, it hath it in mercy; doubting and deadnesse doe ever goe together, or it's a great marvell. And indeed what is deadnesse of heart towards Christ, and all his holy Gospell, but a secret doubting whether it have any part in it or no? as when a poore man sees a rich treasure, it does but dead him the more, because he sees no interest he hath in it; if he could see he had an interest in it, this would quicken up his heart, and put it out of it's dumps. And is not this now a miserable condition when a man cannot praise God? If he pray, it is but in a sorry manner, no life, no heart at all. But for blessing and praising of God, that he cannot doe at all, except he be in a fooles paradise; and dreame of a false gift. This is a dreadfull condition, when we are hindred from that which God most delighteth in; what is there that more delighteth God, then to blesse him and praise him? The Lord sayes we never honour him otherwise, Who so offereth me praise, he glorifieth me, Psal. 50.23. Now we can never offer God praise, except our heart live.

Sixthly, Religion is a very irksome thing unto us, as long as we are dead-hearted; what is it that takes away the grievousnesse of it, but a lively heart? When the heart is dead, it must needs be very tedious; very tedious to be thinking of God, to be meditating of death or the world to come, to be im-
6. ployed in Prayer, to be constant in the humbling of the soule, or the abstaining from our naturall inclinations, to be discoursing of repentance, or studying of Gods heavenly Kingdome; to be imployed in the Word, or to go through dirty and frozen wayes to it, to goe and repeat it in our Families, or to urge it upon our hearts, O what weary tedious duties are these, when the heart is a dead heart! This is the reaſon why the world lets them all generally alone, and never troubles their hearts with them at all, becauſe they have no life in them; and many that are better-minded, find them very tedious, becauſe they are dead-hearted; as Solomon ſayes, Correction is grievous to him that forſaketh the way, Prov. 15. 10. now as long as we are out of the way of life, while we are dead-hearted, we forſake the right way, and therefore correction is grievous unto us, nay, all the commandements of God are grievous unto us; does a dead heart rejoyce to go to Prayer? Nay, generally he is loth to go to it; is he glad that the Sermon Bell rings; is he glad at an opportunity to do good; Nay, does he not ſhrink & winch, and draw back? We ſee this in the Jews, how irkſome the Sabbath was to them, when they were held from buying & ſelling; O that the Sabbath were over, Amos 8. 5. It may be, men do not find the Sabbath ſo tedious now, becauſe they help themſelves by talking of the world, by taking liberty that way, but if they were held to it, as they ought to be, would they not wiſh it to be over? The like we may ſee in the young man, what an irkſome thing was it to him, to heare that he muſt ſell away all? The text ſayes, he was ſad at that ſaying, Mark 10. 22. Now is not this too a very hideous thing to be dead-hearted, when it makes all the wayes of God tedious? Nothing ſhould be more delightfull unto us then they, they are perfect freedome; there is great reward in them, they are the beſt wayes of pleaſantneſſe, and all his paths are peace; and if we were quickned in our hearts, we would ſay ſo too, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks; when he had ſaid, That none of Gods Commandements are grievous, 1 Joh 5. 3. in the next words he gives a reaſon of it; O ſayes he, He that is born of God overcometh the world; that is, he that hath the life in him that cometh from above, he hath gotten above the world, he hath put all the irkſomneſs of them. The irkſomeneſs of any Commandement, does not lie in the commandement, that is ſweet and pleaſant, but it lyes in deadneſs of the heart; a dead heart will ever count them grievous.

Seventhly, as religion is an irkſome thing to a dead heart, ſo a dead heart, if it ſhould take it up, it will in the end be weary of it; as we ſee in the example of Iſrael when they grew to be dead-hearted towards God, at laſt they were weary of his worſhip, they went and deviſed othergets worſhips, and eaſier kinds of Religion, they were weary of his. Thou haſt been weary of me O Iſrael. Iſa. 43. 22. we ſee this in Judah too, Behold what a wearineſſe is it? Mal. 1. 13. This is too plaine and palpable, how are we grown weary of God, and of his pure ſervice? We have had the Goſpell ſo long, till we are even weary of it; weary of ſanctity, weary of ſpiritual truth; whence are all innovations, but becauſe people are weary of the old way? Many that have been very forward in Preaching, and in hearing, and very zealous of good courſes, they begin to abate, to ſide with the times, to remit of their former ſtrictneſs. Whence is all this? Whence is it that we ſee ſo many Apoſtates, that once loved good people, now do not? once were very zealous againſt diſorders, now are not; once were againſt humane deviſes, now are not; now they can brook any thing well enough; they are weary of their firſt pitch, they were wound up too high, now they let themſelves down again. All this is becauſe men have no life in them; they are dead to what they did profeſſe; you ſhall ſee many a man ſmitten at the word, and there he is knockt down and ſees what wretched courſes he hath taken that will lead him to hell; well, he goes and reformes and growes very preciſe, and now there ſhall not be a Sermon but hee'l heare it; there ſhall not be any good Chriſtian duty, but he will take it up, hee'l leave his old acquaintance, hee'l joyne himſelf to good people, hee'l have very good orders in his Family; all this is well, if 'twould hold; I but if this man do not go on to get the grace of life, in the end hee'l be weary; a dead heart be it never ſo forward, it will end in wearineſſe. It is meerly for want of quickening, that any man growes weary of well-doing; as the Apoſtle ſayes; Be not weary of well-doing, for in due time, ye shall reap, if ye faint not, Gal.6.9. take heed ye do not let quickening go; if ye let your quickening go, directly you'l grow weary; if ye suffer your selves to faint, if ye do not get Aqua-vitæ, to cure your fainting fits; you'l be weary of well-doing; now beloved what a pittifull thing is this, that we should be weary of well-doing? If any of us have begun to do well, O how should we labour, that we may never grow weary; however things go, though Persecution arise, what ever dealings we meet with at the hands of the wicked world, yet never to give in; what ever flesh and blood say, what ever discouragements we meet with, from without or from within, we should earnestly labour, that we may never be weary of well-doing, never weary of preaching to their Conscience, never weary of attending on the word, or of searching our hearts, or of resisting of sinne, or of redeeming our time, or of keeping our garments, never weary of washing our hands in innocency, and keeping of our selves, that the wicked one touch us not; and therefore what a dangerous thing is it to be dead-hearted? For that's the high way to be weary of well-doing at the last. This then is the second use, that we are to make of this point; to see what a dangerous thing it is to be a dead Christian.

Revel. 3. 1.

And art Dead.

I Come now to the fourth thing, and that is this; What it is to be a living Christian. First, I will describe it by the efficient cause. Secondly, by the Instrumentall cause. Thirdly, by the parts of it.

1. For the first, The efficient cause, that makes one a living Christian, is God: as the Psalmist sayes, He is the fountain of life, Psal.36.9. He is the fountain of all life; it is he that makes one a living man. He giveth life and breath to all, Act.17.25. If he should take away our naturall life, we dye and turne again unto our earth; as long as he breatheth on us we live; as Elihu speakes, the breath of the Almighty gives me life, Job 33.4. yea all the world would be a dead Chaos, if he did not quicken it; there's a kinde of life in every thing that hath being. But it would be a dead Masse, if he did not concurre with it; what is money, and meat, and clothes, and friends, and life, and health it self? Men think they are well to live, when they have them all. True, if he blesse them and quicken them unto us; but if he be wanting to them, they are dead things and can do us no good; nay, the word of life it selfe, it is but a dead letter without him; all the ordinances of God, we see they minister life to some, because God puts life into them, but if he do not put life into them, they are sap-less and cadeverous things; so that God is the author even of our naturall life, as John sayes, In him is life, and his life is the life of men, John 1.4. in him we live, and move and have our being; and therefore it is a great sinne not to be thankfull to him for our naturall life. David blesses God for his naturall life very often; life is a very great blessing, a poor thing that hath life, a living Dog, is better then a dead Lyon. A man will give skinne for skinne, and all that he hath for his life. I am sure many of us may be very glad of life, for if it were gone now, we should be in hell; and therefore we had need to make much of our naturall life, yea, every houre of it, lest we dye before we be converted, and brought home to God.

But this is not the life that we do speak of; we speak of spirituall life, and God is the author of that more especially; when a man is alive towards God, he is the only cause of it. He spiritually moveth our hearts by the holy Ghost, and begets us againe after a strange, and an ineffable manner; by joyning us his spirit to our spirits, his minde to our mindes, and his will to our wills, he revives all the powers of the soule with his Presence; and therefore this life is called the life of God; which the world are strangers to, and aliens from, Being alienated from the life of God; Eph.4.18. So likewise it is called the life of Jesus, 2 Cor.4.11. He onely is the author of it. Thus ye see the efficient cause of it.

Secondly, The Instrumentall cause of this life, is true Faith; this is the ligament that couples this life and a man together; that now he is said to be a living man; ye know God is the onely living God; they that are not united unto him, remaine in the congregation of the dead; now faith unites a man unto him; faith is the having of him; He that hath the Sonne, hath life, and he that hath not the Sonne hath not life, 1 Joh.5.12. When a man cleaves unto God, by a true and lively faith, this man hath life; as Moses sayes, That thou mayst love the Lord thy God, and that thou mayst obey his voyce, and that thou mayst cleave unto him; for he is thy life, Deut. 30 20. Though a man hath not that strong faith that some have, whereby he hath a cleare evidence of Gods love and favour in Jesus Christ, though a man have not this faith, yet if he have a faith of adherence, and cleaving unto God, this man is a living Christian; this man is joyned unto the true life; This is the true God, and life eternall. 1 Joh.5. 20. And therefore whosoever cleaves to him, hath life; if he will not away from him, he will still seeke him, still pray unto him, still make him his refuge, though he have no feelings, that is not it; if a man will never give over seeking of God; He beleeves God is in the fountaine of all life and peace, and grace and comfort, and Gods way is the onely way; he beleeves himself is a cursed wretch in himself, and that all hope is in Christ, now if this man have such a faith whereby he adheres, though with never so much weakness, this man is alive. This is the faith whereby a Christian lives; as Paul sayes, The life that I live, I live by the faith of the Sonne of God, Gal.2.20. Thus ye see the Instrumentall cause of it.

Thirdly, now for the Parts of it. The parts of it are three.

The first part is the life of Justification; ye know every man by nature is a dead man; as a malefactour that hath commited an offence that is death by mans Law, we say he is a dead man; so we have all offended God from the womb, which is death by Gods Law; and therefore we are dead men; now when God hath justified a man freely by his grace, when God hath given him a pardon in Christ Jesus; now he is a live man; and therefore Justification as ye heard, is called Justification of life, Rom. 5 18. Now beloved this life is not in the man that does live, but in Christ that he lives by; this life supposed no life in this party; no, it lookes upon him as a dead man in himselfe. But God counts him alive in Jesus Christ; as the Apostles sayes, Christ is our life; Col. 3.4.q.d. This life is not in us, but in Christ; so that this life denominates a man alive; as Christ denominated the Damosel alive, that was yet dead. The Damosell is not dead, sayes he, Matth.9.24. Ye know the Damosell was dead at that time, when Christ said so, and yet he said she was not dead, because he had life for her; she had life in him; now when he raised her up, then she had life in her too.

And so I come to the second part of this life; and that is the life of Sanctification, and this life is in him that doth live; for though he were dead before to all goodnesse and holinesse, and alive unto sinne, yet now he is made dead unto sinne, and alive unto God; as the Apostle speakes, Likewise also reckon ye your selves to be dead indeed unto sinne, but alive unto God, through Iesus Christ our Lord, Rom.6.11. This life is called the life of grace, and new obedience, when a man is quickened up to all the wayes of God; You hath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses and sins, Eph.2.1. And this is the quickening that I would faine open to you.

3. The third part of this life, is the life of Joy and comfort; ye know when a mans eyes are opened to see his sinnes, and his damned estate, by reason of them, the Law comes, and that kils him, his very heart dyeth in him: now when God propounds to him a Saviour, and causes him to beleeve in him, this revives his heart againe; this yeelds him some joy and comfort; so that true Joy is a life too; we may see this in the Children of God, let their joyes and comforts be all gone, this makes them all amort, this makes them very heavie and sad, as if they had no life at all in them; as the Church sayes; Wilt thou not revive us againe? That thy people may rejoyce in thee, Psal.85.6.

Now my brethren, all this is onely by way of Preface; to come then to the question, what is a quickened Christian? a Christian that hath onely a name to live, but is dead? Dead towards God? Dead to all good duties? no: But that is quickened up to them: as death is taken in a metaphorical sense, when we say, such a one is dead to God, dead to the holy ordinances of God, we do not meane properly dead, as if he were naturally dead, and had no soule in his body; but we take it in a metaphorical sense: so is life here to be taken too; namely for the activenesse of a thing; when a thing is not active, we use to say, it is dead; as Sarahs wombe is said to be dead; he considered not the deadnesse of Sarahs wombe, Rom.4.19. That is, her womb had no activity to conceive; now when a wombe is active this way, then we say it is quick; so a coale that hath fire in it, is said to be a live coale: There flew one of the Seraphins, having a live coale in his hand, Isa.6.6. We call it a live coale, because it is active; it is able to burne; whereas if that fire were out, it were not able to burne, and therefore then we call it a dead coale; so when a man is active towards God, Take him in Prayer, there he can act now; take him in selfe-deniall, in reconciling of himselfe, in humbling of the heart, in mourning for sin, in hungring after righteousnesse, even as a man does after his appointed food, take him in any of the things of God, though he were like a dead coale afore, yet here he can act now; now he can move this way; when one is like a block in good duties, that man is dead; we call moving things living things; Every thing moving that liveth, Gen.9.3. When a thing cannot stirre, that we call dead; when a man is not stirring in heavenly things, he is stirring enough in earthly, but he cannot stirre in heavenly things; that man is a dead Christian, though he professe never so much, yet if he be not stirring towards God from day to day, he is dead; I thinke it meet to stirre you up, sayes Saint Peter, 2 *Pet.*1.13. That is, I thinke it meet to quicken you up. Now beloved, this being so, if ye would know what it is to be alive towards God, let us but finde out a little, what is the life of a man.

1. First, what is the life of a mans Understanding? people thinke that bare knowledge is, and approving of Gods wayes, and thinking of them now and then; they thinke this is the life of their understandings But you shall see these are not it; therefore we will search out what is the life of the understanding.

2. Secondly, what is the life of the Will, or of the Heart? people are apt to thinke that wishings and wouldings, and velleities, if they have some volitions towards God and all holy courses, they thinke their wills are alive, so; these are not it; therefore we will search too, wherein the life of the Will does consist.

3. Thirdly, what is the life of the Conscience? people generally do conceive that if their consciences do check them for their sinnes, and smite them for evill, and excuse them in other things that are good, then their conscience is alive; now we desire to enquire, what is the life of the Conscience indeed.

4. Fourthly, what is the life of the Affections? I gave you a touch of these when I shewed you what it is to be dead; now let me speake of them more fully, to shew you what it is to be alive.

For

For the firſt, what is the life of the Underſtanding? ye know there be many things in the underſtanding; knowing, approving, ſtudying, determining; now the world thinks that when the underſtanding is ſo farre wrought upon, as to know Chriſtian religion, to approve it, to ſtudy it, to determine aright upon things, evill things to be evill, good things to be good; duties to be duties, ſinnes to be ſinnes; now they ſuppoſe their underſtandings are alive. But the truth is, none of all theſe are the life of your underſtandings. The underſtanding hath another life beſides theſe. The underſtanding may have all theſe, and be dead.

As firſt, for Knowledge, I need not ſtand to prove that; the dead Heathens, the Apoſtle ſayes they knew God; When they knew God, they glorified him not as God, Rom. 1.21. Knowledge is not enough; as our Saviour ſpeaks; If ye know theſe things, bleſſed are ye if ye doe them, Joh. 13.17. Nay, literall knowledge does not ſo much as give the underſtanding true light, much leſſe life; a great learned Divine that is wicked, his underſtanding is ſtill in darkneſſe; nay, it may leave him more dead, then thoſe that are groſſely Ignorant; as the Prophet ſayes of them that had knowledge; I will get me to the great men for they have known the way of the Lord, but theſe have altogether broken the Yoke, Jer. 5 5. They were more dead, their hearts were more averſe from all goodneſſe. Bare knowledge is a poore thing, and yet people are apt to glory in it; the Apoſtle makes a piſh at it; We know we have all knowledge, 1 Cor. 8.1. q.d. Is that ſuch a piece of matter? Never tell me of your knowledge; I know ye all have knowledge; but that's a poore thing; nay, the greater is thy woe, if thou haſt not a quickened mind, as Solomon ſayes, He that increaſeth knowledge, increaſeth ſorrow, Eccleſ. 1.18. Thou increaſeſt thine owne ſelf-condemning, the more thou haſt; the greater knowledge in thy Boſome, the more thou feeſt to condemne thee, 'tis like a ſword in thy bowels, that daily galls thee, and wounds thee; and therefore little reaſon to think that knowledge is the life of the Mind, it is not ſo much as the light of the mind; take heed ſayes our Saviour, That the light that is in thee be not darkneſſe, Luke 11.35. That is, thou mayſt have a great deale of light, and yet be in darkneſſe, nay, in worſe darkneſſe, then Ignorant blind people that have no light at all; If the light that is in thee be darkneſſe, how great is that darkneſſe! Matth. 6.13. Such people are more ſenſeleſſe at the word, harder to be wrought on, they have the more diſtinctions to deceive their own ſoules, they think too well of themſelves; they are too wiſe, to be fooles, that they may be wiſe, they are farther off from confeſſion; if they had leſſe knowledge, it may be more hope to doe them good. But having ſo much knowledge in a carnall mind, it is made a ſtrong hold againſt grace; it is with ſuch people as it was with Babylon; Thy wiſdome, and thy knowledge hath perverted thee, Iſa. 47.10. True knowledge is a good thing; but when a man is fleſhed with it, that he takes himſelf to be ſome body, this marres all; but I will ſpeak no more of this. 1.

Secondly, for approving of the Truth; that cannot be the life of the mind neither; when a man approves goodneſs, and good people, this indeed is an excellent mercy of God, to make a man approve goodneſs, and good men. O how are ſuch bound to be thankfull! few goe ſo farre. But alas if thou goeſt no farther, thy mind is not yet quickened up to God; as the Apoſtle ſhewes, that a man dead in his ſinnes ſtill, may yet approve the beſt things; Thou knoweſt his will and approveſt the things that are moſt excellent, Rom. 2.18. Herod approved John the Baptiſt, and his preaching. Achiſh King of Gath approved David and all his wayes; nay, the devill approved Chriſt; I know thee who thou art, the Holy one of God, Mark 1.24. Suppoſe thou approveſt all the wayes of Chriſt, O what good wayes they be! thou likeſt his promiſes, thou counteſt his Ordinances admirable good and lovely. O conſider what the 2.

Apoſtle ſayes, happy is the man that condemneth not himſelfe in that he alloweth, Rom. 14.22. So may I ſay to thee, doſt thou allow of all ſtrictneſs and pureneſs and preciſe people? O ſayeſt thou, the preciſer the better! this is well; now thou art a happy man, if thou doſt not condemne thy ſelf in that which thou alloweſt; thou alloweſt of the ſtricteſt Servants of God; but if thou condemneſt thy ſelf now, and thy Conſcience can tell thee, I but I doe not ſet my ſelf to be as they are: I can be looſe my ſelf; poore creature, thy allowings and approvings will riſe up in judgement againſt thee; ſo that this is a poore thing too; approving of goodneſſe may be in a Perſecutor; Saint Paul tells us that the Jewes did allow of his Religion; and yet they would not leave perſecuting of him, Act. 24.15. nay, Chriſts perſecutors, they allowed of all goodneſs, they profeſſed ſo much at leaſt; for a good work we ſtone thee not; therefore approbation cannot be the life of the Mind neither.

3. Thirdly, thinking of God and of the Word, that is not the life of the mind; and yet many men hang upon this too, that they think of God, and of his wayes, and of their latter end. True, ſome are ſo graceleſſe, that they come not thus farre; God is hardly in all their thoughts, Pſal. 10 4. But though a man doe think of God, and of heaven, and of Gods Lawes, indeed 't's a great mercy of God; it may doe a man a world of good, and it did David, this made him return into the way whereſoever he went. I thought upon my wayes and turned my feet unto thy Teſtimonies, Pſal. 119.59. yet if this be all, this is no argument of life. The wicked Jewes, Chriſt confeſſes they thought upon God and upon the Scriptures, nay more, they thought to have eternall life in them; Search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternall life, Joh.5. 39. This is ſo farre from being an Act of life, as that if a man live in ſinne for all that, it aggravates a mans ſinnes. The drunkard when he goes to the Ale-houſe, it may be he thinks of the word of God, that ſayes, a drunkard ſhall not inherit Gods Kingdome, and yet he will goe though; a lyer when he lyes, it may be he thinks at the ſame time, of the word of God, that ſayes the devill is a lyer, and lyers ſhall lie in the lake that burnes with fire and brimſtone.

4. Fourthly, ſtudying is not the life of the Mind; this is that which bewitches many Miniſters; they ſtudy all the day of God and his Kingdome, and of eternall life; they are all the day ſtudying of Jeſus Chriſt, and of faith and repentance, perhaps they think this is heavenly-mindedneſſe. O they love a life to ſtudy Divinity; as the Jewes ſaid, We delight to know thy wayes, Iſa. 58.2. I grant, ſtudying is an intenſe act of the Mind, but that it is a lively act of the mind, that I deny; that is not alwayes ſo; nay, ſtudying may be in the higheſt degree in a mind that is dead to what it ſtudies, though never ſo eager to it, as it is ſcibile of divine things: for what is ſtudying? Studying is nothing elſe but the boulting out of the logique in the Scripture; now if a man reſt there, he is never the nearer, if it doe not recoyle on his own mind, when he ſtudies of Grace, if he doe not ſeek how to get it; when he ſtudies the fall of Adam, and originall ſinne, if he doe not get it mortified in himſelf, all this is nothing; we ſee the poore ſimple Ignorant people ran after Jeſus Chriſt, when the great Students of Divinity were ſo farre from doing ſo, that they ſate and derided them for their labour, yea, and called them ſilly Simplicians, as it had been a giddy humour in them; therefore Studying cannot be it neither.

Well then, it remaines to ſhew you what is the life of the Mind, that if the mind doe give that unto God, it is alive towards God, I anſwer; All theſe are the dull acts of the mind, they may be in the mind concerning God and all his wayes, yea, in a very high degree, and yet the mind dead towards the ſame. The Apoſtle tells the Jewes in his ſecond Epiſtle and the firſt Chapter, That they knew all theſe things before: I but ſayes he in the third Chapter and the the firſt verſe, I would ſtirre up your minds, that is, I would quicken up your minds; as we uſe to ſay, when a man looks about him, when a man gives his mind to a thing, this is the ſtirrings of the mind, now the mind is quickened up.

Now there be ſix ſtirring acts in the minds of men; and look which way they ſtand, it's moſt plaine the mind is alive, whether to God, or to the things of the world.

The firſt, is the Application of the Mind.
The ſecond, is the Meditating of the mind.
The third, is the Conſidering of the mind.
The fourth, is the Remembring of the mind.
The fifth, is the Deviſing of the mind.
The ſixth, is the Judging of the mind.

Theſe are all the ſtirring and lively acts of the Mind, and the mind does not let out theſe acts any way, but that way, that a man is alive to, whether it be to the world or the creature.

Firſt, I ſay, the Application of the mind; the mind hath this nature in it, though it know a thing never ſo much, or approve it, or think of it, or ſtudy it, yet except it doe incorporate with the thing, it doth not come to apply it; if it incorporate with the mind, then it will apply it; as we ſee in a Worldling, whatſoever good husbandry he knowes, if he know any way of getting of gaine, he applyes it, and takes it to himſelf; why his mind is alive to the Profits of the world, he can reliſh ſavour in them; So when the mind begins to be applying of divine things, now it is alive unto God; as Eliphaz ſaid to Job; Heare it and know it for thy good; Job. 5.27. That is, doe not onely know it, but be quickened up to apply it to thy ſelf for thine own good, as the Prophet ſayes; Hearken diligently, and eate ye that which is good; Iſa. 55.2. That is, I would have your minds not onely to attend, but let them be quickened up to apply, and feed upon what ye know; let it be your food, a quickened mind is like the Diſciples of Jeſus Chriſt; when Chriſt ſaid, One of you ſhall betray me; they were all very ſorry, and they began every one of them to ſay, Lord is it I? Matth. 26.21. They all did apply it, you ſee how his ſpeech ſtirred their minds, they fell preſently to apply; ſo when a man cannot heare any ſinne ripped up; but preſently he cryes out, Lord is it I? Is it I that am guilty of this ſinne? O if it be I, let me ſee it, that I may leave it; if he heare of any threatning; he ſayes, Lord is it I? O teach me, that I may be humbled; when he heares of any grace; Lord is it I that have this grace? O if it be not I, O let it be I; a quickened mind is an applying mind; now if the mind be yet dead, it cares not for applying though it know never ſo much, yet it lets the word ſtill be a ſtranger unto it, it does not take it home to it ſelf; like the Hearers there in Hoſea; as God ſayes, I writ to them the great things of my Law, but they were counted as a ſtrange thing, Hoſ. 8.12. They would not take them home, now a quickened mind takes them home; this reproof is to me, this Commandement is to me; nay, when a reproof to ones thinking of all other ſhould ſeeme leaſt to concerne him; as when our Saviour Chriſt ſpake againſt rich men; O how hardly ſhall a rich man enter into the Kingdome of God! yet the Apoſtles took it to themſelves; they were amazed, ſayes the Text, Matth. 19 25. One would have thought the doctrine ſhould little concerne them; alas, they were not ſo rich, but they applyed it though, fearing leſt that little that they had ſhould draw their hearts away from God; this then is the firſt.

Secondly, the meditating of the Mind; this is another ſtirring act of the mind; a naturall man may think of his eternall good now and then, but this is nothing, his mind is dead for all that. But when a mans mind runs on ſuch things, now it is alive; look what your minds doe run on, that your minds are alive alive to; Becauſe it is moſt certain, that that is it which you reſpect moſt as David ſayes; I will meditate on thy precepts, and have reſpect unto thy wayes, Pſal. 119.15. A dead mind may light on good thoughts, but what man meditates of them, when his mind runneth upon ſuch themes; this mans mind is alive to them he gives his mind to them; as Paul ſayes to Timothy; Meditate on theſe things, give thy ſelfe wholly to them, that thy profitting may appeare, 1 Tim 4.15. You may ſee this in ungodly men, they doe not onely think of the world, for ſo a godly man may doe and muſt doe, but their minds run on the world; they give their minds to it; It is the Apoſtles ſaying; They mind earthly things, Phil. 3.19. It may be they know gracious things, but they mind earthly; they cannot find in their heart to give their minds to Gods word and will: So that, would you prove your ſelves and your minds to be alive towards God? Labour that your minds may bend their meditations that way; let your minds run on him, and how ye may have his favour, and how ye may keep it, how ye take heed of offending of him a man is yet dead, that does not give his mind to theſe things; whoſe mind does not run on them daily. And therefore beloved as ever ye doe deſire to have a proof of your life towards God, let your minds run on theſe things, give diligent heed that they may not ſlip out of your minds; as the Apoſtle ſayes, Ye ought to give ſo much the more diligent heed to the things which ye have heard, leſt at any time ye let them ſlip, Heb 2.1. If they doe ſlip away ye know not how (as the fiſh will let them goe if ye doe not take heed) call for them againe, as God ſayes, Bring it againe to mind, O ye tranſgreſſors, Iſa. 46.8.

3. Thirdly, the conſidering of the Mind; when the mind looks curſorily on things, what is this but the remiſſeneſſe and looſeneſs of the mind? Now when the mind comes to conſider ſeriouſly of them, now it quickens up it ſelf; now it looks wiſtly and intentively on them indeed; alas all our knowledge of the truth, all our approving of good courſes, all is nothing without conſideration; our knowledge and approbation are dead things without this; even as good, as if we had no knowledge at all, for all the good it will doe us, if we doe not conſider; as God ſayes, Iſrael doth not know, my people doe not conſider, Iſa. 1.3. Look what our minds doe conſider from day to day, that our minds are lively on; conſideration is the eagerneſſe of the mind, when the mind cares not for an object, it will not trouble it ſelf to conſider of it, a leſſe act will ſerve ſuch a thing well enough; but look what the mind is inclined unto, there it ſhall not goe ſtightly and lightly to work, there 'twill take paines, nay, it counts it no paines to perpend and to weigh things as in a Ballance; as it is ſaid of Mary, look what ſhe heard from Chriſt, ſhe kept it and pondered it in her heart, Luke 2.19 ſhe pondered it, and weighed it in a ballance, O it was matter of great weight with her mind; where the mind is alive, there it will conſider and ponder and weigh, nay, there is not a circumſtance, but the mind will take it to conſideration. Take a man that is alive to the things here below, how conſiderative is that man, in all matters of that nature? As for example now, for his gaine; he takes every thing into conſideration that may make for his gaine; He will have his wits about him, when he buyes or ſells, when he ſowes or reapes; he conſiders with himſelfe, that he will not ſow too ſoon, or too late in the yeare, or a grain that the ground will not beare, he conſiders how long it was ſince it was fallow, how long it will beare, till it be laid fallow againe; he conſiders when he may ſell deareſt, when he may buy cheapeſt; when is the beſt time to put off a commodity. This is the livelineſſe of his mind in theſe things. Take this man now for his ſoule, his mind is ſtarke heavy, and looſe thoughts ſhall ſerve turne for that, he does not conſider here. But when a man is alive unto God, now his conſiderations run out this way, now he is conſiderative this way, for his ſoule, for his ſpirituall and eternall good. Beloved, conſideration is a lively act of the minde; as you may ſee there in Moſes, Know therefore this day and conſider it in thy heart; that the Lord he is God in heaven above, and upon the earth beneath, Deut. 4.39. That is, do not only know it, but quicken up thy mind to conſider it; this will do thee good indeed; this is a very perfect Act of the minde; as we ſee in David: when I conſider the Heavens the worke of thy hands, the Moone, and the Starres which thou haſt ordained; then I ſay Lord what is man? Pſal. 83.4. You ſee how ſtirring his mind was, when he conſidered the heavens and the earth, it wrought mightily on him; it made him the more humble. Others ſee the Heavens every day, and it does not move them one whit to Humiliation before God. But when the mind comes once to conſider, then it ſhakes off its dulneſs and remiſſneſs, then it growes buſie, ſuch a man will not go to Prayer, but he conſiders what he goes about, what a great God he is to ſpeak to, what a vile creature himſelf is that is to pray to him; he will conſider how he may pray with faith and hope and ſeeing of his wants; how he may riſe up from his knees not without profit. Now he will not go to the word, but he will conſider what it is he repaires to, now all his mind is how he may get good, now he is buſie in every duty; when he is tempted to do as others do, he conſiders what the iſſue will be, and this makes him forbeare. Beloved, this is the life of our mindes, when they conſider things, when we conſider our latter end, when we conſider Gods promiſes, when we conſider his threatenings, when we take his Commandements into our deep conſideration, when we conſider the danger of ſin, we do not only know all theſe things but we conſider them. Though we know ne're ſo much, except we conſider what we know, our mindes are lumpiſh and dead, conſideration is activity of the mind; and therefore if we would prove our ſelves to be alive towards God, let us put on conſideration adayes.

Fourthly, the Remembring of the mind; when the mind forgets it ſelf every day, this is nothing but the deadneſs of the mind; for if it be alive to a thing, it will be ſure to remember it ſelf of that, if it can Can a Maid forget her ornaments, or a Bride her a tire? Yet my people have forgotten me, dayes without number, Jer. 2.32. That is, my people are dead-minded to me; if they regarded me, they would remember themſelves every day, to ſerve me; look what a man is alive to, the mind will be ſure to remember us of that; we can have no journey to take, but our minds remember us of it; no buſineſs to do, to feed our Cattel, to milk our Kine every morning, and evening, to ſheare our ſheep every Lammas, if we forget any thing in this kind, preſently it's a hundred to one, but we remewber our ſelves: Now when a man is alive to the beſt things in ſome meaſure, he will remember himſelf of them every day; ſo David did, I remembred thy name O Lord, yea, in the night too, and ſo I kept thy Law, Pſ 119.55. I remembred my ſelf, and I would be ſure to do what God bid me do, it may be his heart began to ariſe, but preſently he remembred himſelf, and beat it downe againe; it may be ſome other luſt began to be up, but by and by he remembred him, and checked his own ſoule; when the mind is alive towards God, the knowledge of the word does not lie dead in that man, but ſtill he remembers it at every need; when the Sabbath is comming, then thinks he, I remember what God bad me do, Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy; when the Sacrament comes, then he remembers himſelf, O thinks he, Let a man examine himſelf, and ſo let him eat of that Bread and drinke of that Cup; Now the mind thinkes, I will labour to remember God continually; what ever I forget, I will not forget him; when I riſe up when I lie downe, ſtill I will ſet my ſelf to remember him; when I go out, when I come home; what ever the Devill ſay, what ever the fleſh whiſper, I will labour ſtill to remember God; if I be tempted to wrath; then I deſire to remember what God ſayes; Give not place to the Devill; when I feel ſpirituall lazineſs, then I will unfeignedly endeavour to remember what God ſpeaks unto me, Curſed is he that does the work of the Lord negligently, &c. 4.

5. Fifthly, the inventings or the devisings of the heart, where the mind is naturally bent and alive, there it is witty; if riches, if preferment, if pleasure, if learning be a mans lust that he lives in, there he is witty; So when a man is alive unto God, his wit will have that way it's vent: as Christ sayes, I find out witty inventions, Prov.8.12. He speakes not only of himself, but of his grace in every one, that is this; when the mind is alive and set towards Christ, it will find out witty inventions; nay, it's a strange thing though men have no parts, yet if they be worldly, how witty they are for such matters; and so for good people, whose mindes are turned towards God, though they be of very weake parts, yet how witty they will be in good things; what pretty wayes they will have to do good, to shun offences; to break occasions of sinne; as a Minister in his preaching; as Paul sayes, I caught you with guile, 2 *Cor.*12.16. So let a man have a liberall mind; the Prophet sayes, he will devise liberall things, Isa. 32 8. Mercy and truth shall be to them that devise good; Prov. 14.22. Whence comes the blockishnes of our minds but from this, that our minds are so dead, if our minds were more alive towards God, it would make us more graciously witty, we should devise good things, find out admirable inventions, it would teach us plots against Satan, plots against the flesh; as the wicked, their mindes are full of sinfull devices, fetches, stratagems, policies, a man would wonder to see how witty the Devill is in them, to carry them headlong to hell, &c.

6. Sixthly and lastly, The judgement of the Mind; when the minds last dictate is for God: When a man is judicious, this is it that leads men a dayes, their judgments, not all their knowledge, nay, learning; you shall have many a learned man will use to play the foole, and does every day very foolishly, because his judgment is foolish; the reason is, a man never takes any course, nor speakes any word, nor thinkes any thought, but first his judgment tels him, it is best to do so that time, never does the Drunkard turn in at the Ale-house, but his Judgment sayes to his Will, choose to turne in: you will say, it may be he knowes he ought not to do so, I, but it is not mens knowledge that leads men, but mens judgments; When mens judgments say, this is not for me, this is most pleasant, this is most profitable, this is most honourable, this is most delightfull: now when the judgement of the mind is in some measure set towards God, now the mind is quickened: as David sayes, I esteeme all thy precepts concerning all things to be right, and I hate every false way, Psalm 119. 128. That is, by the mercy of God, I have good judgement, be, the way what it will be, though never so pleasing to the flesh, still my judgement sayes, Choose Gods way, that's evermore best.

Thus farre we proceeded the last day, namely to learne or see what is the quickening of the Mind; that ye may know whether our understanding be dead or alive: now what remaines but this, that we all labour for such an Understanding: many of us understand much, so much that if it were quickened up to us, is would do us a world of good; if we did use to apply it and make it our own, if we would give our mindes to it, if we would ponder it and seriously weigh it, and remember it for our use in all our wayes, if we had a devising mind for good, a mind plotting for heaven, and contriving how we may best glorifie God, and secure our own soules. A judicious mind, a practicall mind. This is a good understanding indeed; as the Prophet sayes, A good understanding have they that doe thereafter, Psal. 111. 10. When what we understand does not lye dead in our heads, but our minds are quickned up to it, this is a good Understanding, my brethren, this understanding is not to be had in books, God only can help us with it, as David sayes, O Lord, give me understanding & I shall live Ps.119.144. You will say, what need he keep such a stir for understanding? Had not he the Law before his eye? Could not he read there, and get underſtanding? O but it will be all dead, Lord unleſs thou give me underſtanding from above, if thou wilt give me underſtanding, then I ſhall live.

Now I come to the Heart, to ſearch what the life of the heart is; every Act of the heart, is not an argument of life.

1. Firſt, there be outſide Acts of the heart; people thinke if they do not diſſemble before men, then they are no Hypocrites. O they are hearty they ſay; as there is an outſide of the outward man, ſo there is an outſide of the heart. Thou mayeſt be hearty in ſome ſort in good duties, and yet be ſtark dead; namely if it be only the outſide of the heart; My Sonne keep my ſaying in the midſt of thy heart, Proverbs 4.21. Not in the out-ſide of thy heart, no, no. I would have the in-ſide of thy heart too; a man that is alive to the world, the world hath not onely the heart, but the very in-ſide of the heart; the world is deepe in the heart; ſo if thou beeſt alive towards God, God is in the deep of thy heart, the word is deep in thy heart, not like the ſalt water in the Sea onely, on the Top. Ye know what became of the Seed, that wanted depth of the earth, Mat 13.5. So it is with the heart, when the word does not get into the depth of it, it never quickens in it. The heart may be ſo farre towards goodneſs, as to bring a man to good duties adayes, it may bring one to Sermon, or to Prayer, to others of the Ordinances of God, and other good courſes, but what's all this, as long as it is dead? the life lies in the bottome of the heart, look what the bottome of the heart ſtands unto, that's a man alive unto, then thou art alive towards God, when the bottome of thy heart is unto him; when thou laboureſt to obey him from the bottome of thy heart, when thou calleſt upon him from the bottome of thy heart, like Sugar at the bottome of the Cup, ſtir up the bottome, the beſt is at bottome, ſo thou muſt ſtir up the bottome of thy heart, The heart is a deep thing, Pſal 46.6. Though Religion be on the top, yet if the world be in the deep, thy heart is dead towards God; as it is with a puddle, it may be cleere at the top, faire water at the top, but there's nothing but mudde at the bottome.

2. Secondly, there be flitting Acts of the heart, be they never ſo deep in the heart, yet if they do not ſtay there, the heart is dead ſtill. Solomon ſayes of his Father; He ſaid unto me, let thy heart retaine my Words, keepe my Commandements and live, Prov. 4.4. Though the word does ſtirre nere ſo much for the preſent, this is not life, except thou retaine it, and hold it faſt, a man may have many flaſhes of life in him, but as long as the heart does not keep them, it remaines dead, They that ſeeke the Lord, their heart ſhall live, Pſal. 22.26. That is, when it is not a flaſh, but it is an Act that abides by a man, the heart is ſtedfaſtly ſet towards God, now his heart lives; now when people are moved only by fits, they are humbled by fits, and ſtartled by fits, their righteouſneſſe is like a morning dew, ye know there the dew is every morning, but all the day it is gone, may be when morning comes, there it is again. It it true, there may be horrible offs and ons in the Children of God, to the confounding of their faces before God. But I do not ſpeak to diſcourage them. But let us take heed, we may have admirable flaſhes of life, fits of humblings, fits of enlargements, fits of ſelf-denyall, fits of great eagerneſſe after God the heart may be towards God for a fit, a falſe heart; as the Children of Iſrael; their heart was firmly towards him for a fit, They remembred that God was their rock, and that the high God was their redeemer, but their heart was not right with him, they were not ſtedfaſt in his Covenant, Pſal. 78.35.37. Marke, It was but a fit; like Eſaus crying for a fit. This is a poore argument of life then; nō, no; the flitting acts of the heart, may be no acts of Life.

3. Thirdly, there be wouldings and wiſhings in the Heart, and theſe cozen the world more then any other; theſe they thinke verily are effects of true Life.

1. Firſt, becauſe theſe are not in the out-ſide of the heart, but lye, or at leaſt ſeeme ſeeme to lye very deep in the heart; it is very certain, that many Naturall men would give the whole world if they had it, as they do verily conceive, that they had true Grace, that they were Saints, that they could leave their ſinnes, that they were in a child of Gods caſe, they deeply wiſh it, it is a profound Would in their hearts; and therefore now when they ſee ſuch yearnings in their hearts, they do verily apprehend; this is Life certainly. Hence it is that they will ſay they would from the bottome of their hearts ſerve God, they have nere a luſt but they would fain have God deliver them from that; indeed they confeſs in their conſciences, if they might have a thouſand worlds, they cannot give it over, I but they would fain they could, & thus they deceive themſelves; becauſe this act ſeemes to be from the depth of their heart; this fancy you may ſee to be in mens hearts out of. *Mic.*6.6,7. Where ye ſee, though they could not find in their hearts to walke humbly before God, to live juſtly and righteouſly, yet they would give thouſands, they could; O ſay they, what would not we give for the ſin of our ſoules? No queſtion but they thought they were alive, but God told them they were not.

2. Secondly, another reaſon why they thinke this is a token of Life is, becauſe this is no flatting act neither; But they have theſe wouldings every day; nay, you can never come to them, but ſtill they have theſe, they would do well; nay, they would do as well as the beſt; thus they hope they have a fountain of living water in them that ſpringeth up daily; thus it was with them in the Prophets, They ſeek me daily ſayes God, Iſa.58.2. They thought it was their every dayes work to ſerve God, and where they did faile, they thought they could ſay, they would do better, they ſought the Lord daily.

3. Thirdly, becauſe they find that this is attributed to the Saints; as the Apoſtle ſayes, Ye cannot do the things that ye would, Gal.5.17. Nay, the Apoſtle Paul himſelfe, ſpeakes it of himſelfe, The good that I would, that do I not, and the evill which I would not, that do I, Rom.7.19. So that thus they argue now, when they find this ſame woulding in their hearts, and cannot do as they would, O ſay they, I may ſay with the Apoſtle, the good which I would do that do I not; I cannot do as I would. Thus they hood-wink their owne ſoules. It is very true, theſe be the Saints groanes, and a part of their ingaine towards God, that they cannot do as they would, this makes them a burthen to themſelves. And ſo again when they find themſelves diſturbed and limited and ſtraightened by their fleſh, this is a comfort to their ſoules, and an argument of Gods infinite goodneſſe unto them, that they can unfeignedly ſay, they would do better; they do pleaſe him in ſome meaſure through his grace, and they would pleaſe him better; they do ſome good by his heavenly ſpirit, and they would do more; they do reſiſt every ſinne, and they would reſiſt it more. This is very true. But yet how many thouſands lull themſelves aſleep in ſecurity, by the fancy of this thing! The heart may put forth daily wouldings, and be as dead as a carcaſſe to all the workes of grace; as our Saviour Chriſt ſayes, Strive to enter in at the ſtrait Gate; for many ſhall ſeeke to enter in, and ſhall not be able, Luke 13.24.q.d. O ſtirre up your ſelves, quicken up your hearts, do not only ſeek to enter in; many ſeeke to enter in, O they would enter in, and they would faine enter in, alas, alas, they are dead, they cannot; therefore quicken up your hearts, and do ye more then ſo; I acknowledge that woulding is an argument of life in the heart, in theſe caſes;

1. First, when a man does beleeve God in ſome meaſure, and then would beleeve more, does oppoſe every known ſinne, and would oppoſe it more, does follow all manner of goodneſs, and would follow it more, when a mans would is above the ſimple will, as when a man will reach as high as he can, and then ſtreins himſelf to reach higher, he takes all the Stools and Ladders that he can, and ſtands on tip-toes, and would reach higher; this is an Act of the will with ſome life; and therefore the Apoſtle when he ſayes that Chriſtians would more then they do, Gal. 5. 17. In the verſe going before, he tels them they muſt walke in the ſpirit though q.d. If ye ſhould ſay, ye walke in the ſpirit and do not, ye deceive your own ſelves; ſo that the woulding it ſelf, is not a living act.

Secondly, a woulding is an act of a living heart, when it is a laborious woulding; ſo that there is another thing in the will that is the living act and not woulding; namely, when the heart labours, and therefore the woulding is not it; I labour, ſayes the Apoſtle, yea, I laboured more abundantly then they all, 1 Cor. 15. 10. Mark though he ſaid in another place that he would; the good which I would doe, yet that was not all, that had been a dead act, if that had been all; therefore he laboured together with it. Well then; let us come to ſhew you, what the life of the will is. In a word, the life of the heart is, when the heart will doe a thing, may be it is hindred a thouſand times, but in ſome meaſure it will doe it, coſt it never ſo much, though fleſh and bloud, and world, and devill, and all be againſt it, yet it will doe it; now the heart is alive, it will believe, it will repent, it will ſtrive againſt ſinne, it will ſet God before its eyes, it will love him above all, feare him above all, regard him above all. I ſay though it meet with never ſo many hindrances without and within, pull-backs, rebellions, yet it will doe it, now it's alive; When the ſpirit indeed is willing, Matth. 26. 41. As Paul ſayes, To will is preſent with me, Rom. 7. 18. When a man can ſay it from the bottome of his heart, that a will is preſent with him. I will be ruled by God, I will deny my ſelf; though the fleſh be never ſo violent, and it may be many times, often beares down all before it, yet there is a will preſent, that will ſtand it out, and that can never be borne downe: the act may be borne down, now affections may be borne down; but this ſtill is preſent, I will be for God, he is my beſt, his will is my rule, his Law is my line, and I will be at his diſpoſe; When this is thus in generall, through all the wayes of God, this is a living heart; when to will is preſent with it, as the Author to the Hebrewes ſayes, His will was to live honeſtly, Heb. 13. 18. As ſoone as ever the prodigall Sonne was come to this paſſe, that he could unfeignedly ſpeake, I will ariſe, I will goe to my Father, Luke 15. 18. You ſee his father preſently ſayes he was alive; this my Sonne was dead, but he is alive againe; ver. 24. you will ſay, what if one had bound him hand and foot, that is all one; he will goe, he will wraſtle, he will bite the cord aſunder; if he cannot doe that, O how he will cry out, O how they bind me here! I will ariſe; he will ſtrive, he will not be quiet, he muſt goe, and he will goe; his will is abſolutely to goe, ſtopt or not ſtopt, his will is ſimply to goe, if he can but get away, and leave an arme behind, nay, a foot behind, nay both, he will crawle, but he will to his Father; ſo when a man will leave his ſinfull courſes, and he will have God for his God, he will have Chriſt, and there he wil hang; come death, come feares, come temptations, there he wil hang. This is that which God accepts, when the hearts wil is to God, If there be firſt a willing mind, it is accepted, 2 Cor 8. 12.

Now that this is the Life of the heart, I prove it thus.

Firſt, becauſe this is the perfecteſt operation of the Heart, when it abſolutely willeth a thing. There be many operations of the heart, but none of them is perfect but this, as David ſaid to his Son, My Son know thou the God of thy Father, and ſerve him with a perfect heart, and with a willing mind, 1 Chron. 28. 9. q.d. This is a perfect heart, when thy wil is to ſerve him; how ever things goe, thou wilt ſerve him; then thy heart is abſolutely ſet towards God, this is the whole heart, I cryed with my whole heart, heare me O Lord, I will keep thy Statutes, Pſal. 119 145. What's the deadneſſe of men, but becauſe either they have no heart to Gods wayes, or but halfe hearts? as it is ſaid of Ephraim, their heart is divided, and God hath but a piece: but when a man hath an abſolute will hereunto, now he is alive, now his heart is perfect towards the Lord his God; as it is in ſinne, when a man does not onely goe on in ſinne, but he will doe it, his will is abſolutely that way, this man hath a perfect heart towards Satan, ſo it is here.

2. Secondly, becauſe this is the might and ſtrength of the Heart; while a mans heart puts forth inferiour acts towards God, he is dead to every good word and work. If he have any heart at all, it is but ſo ſo, as God ſaid of Judah, How weak is thy heart, Ezek. 16.30. Such a man the Devill can eaſily take him off at any time for a need; ſuch a one can never ſtand it out to the end. But he is off and on, becauſe the might of his heart is not towards God; now when the will is abſolutely towards God, this man muſt needs be alive; for the might of his heart is towards God, as the Lord himſelf ſayes, Thou ſhalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy ſoule, and with all thy might, Deut. 6.5.

3. Thirdly, becauſe this makes every thing poſſible; naturally a man cannot believe, he cannot reſiſt his own fleſh, he cannot overcome the World, he cannot live godly in all his wayes, he cannot forgoe his beloved luſts. But now when the heart comes once to be willing towards God, now every thing is poſſible. I may ſay of him, as Chriſt ſaith of Faith, All things are poſſible to him that believes, Mark 9.23. So all things are poſſible to him that willeth; as we uſe to ſay, there is nothing hard to a willing mind. And therefore godly men in CHRIST JESUS, the Apoſtle calls them, οἱ θέλοντες εὐσεβῶς ζῆν, &c. 2 Tim. 3.12.

4. Fourthly, becauſe this takes in the manner of good duties too, as well as the matter; it is more a thouſand times, then the bare doing of them, a dead heart will ſerve to doe them. But when the heart is made willing, this is more then the bare naked deed; as Paul ſayes to the Corinthians about Almes, ye have begun not onely to doe, but alſo τὸ θέλειν, To be willing a yeare agoe, 2 Cor. 8.10. As he ſayes of his Preaching, If I doe it willingly I have a reward; but if againſt my will, &c. 1 Cor. 9.17. That is, q. d. I may preach indeed, I may have ſo much heart to it, as to doe the deed, alas that is nothing; becauſe if I doe it willingly this is it; this is it, Brethren, this is the right manner too.

5. Fifthly, this is an argument that the Heart hath an inward principle; what is the life of the heart, but an inward principle of acting? Look where the heart is alive, there it works from within; there needs no compulſion to a covetous heart, to have regard of his profit, no; he regards it moſt willingly; he hath an inward principle to regard it; and therefore he is alive to it; Now when the heart puts forth its will towards God, now it hath an inward principle of agency; it needs no conſtraint, as Peter ſayes to Miniſters; Feed the flock of God, not by conſtraint but willingly, 1 Pet. 5.2 That is, doe it very lively, doe it with an inward principle, not becauſe ye ſee others feed, not becauſe ye ſee the diſgrace, what will people think, if I ſhould not Preach conſtantly; not becauſe ye dare not doe otherwiſe, Conſcience will flye in your face, alas, ye may doe it, that's with a dead heart. But doe it willingly; where note this is the hearts life, this is an inward principle of the heart; now the heart will doe it, though no body elſe doe it, though he be hated for his labour, though he have no thanks for his paines amongſt men. Thus ye ſee this is the Life of the heart.

Now for your better underſtanding, we will open this more particularly, this willingneſſe of the heart; you ſee in the life of the heart, and it containeth ſeven things.

Firſt, the Inclinations of the heart.
Secondly, the intentions of the heart.
Thirdly, the Elections of the heart.
Fourthly, the Averſions of the heart.

Fifthly,

Fifthly, the Appropriating of the heart.
Sixthly, the Savourings of the heart.
Seventhly, the Caring of the heart.

Beloved, theſe are the living Acts of the heart if theſe be converted to God in you, now your hearts are alive towards him. Theſe make up the whole willingneſſe of the heart.

Firſt then, the Inclination of the heart; it may doe a thouſand good things, with a dead heart. But mark if your hearts be inclined towards God; then ye ſerve God with a live heart, if the Lord hath inclined your heart to him; I have inclined my heart to performe thy Statutes alwaves, even to the end, Pſal. 119.112. Hath God made you doe thus, hath he inclined your heart to his Name? Once ye were without heart, but now he hath inclined your heart to doe good, now ye find ſweet inclinations to every good duty, ye doe not goe to them as a Beare to a Stave, but now ye have an inward diſpoſition to them, he hath given you a feeling of your ſinnes and your wants, and that carries you to Prayer; a feeling of your Ignorance and forgetfulneſſe; and that carries you to Sermons, that ye may learne more of God, that ye may ſee more into your own unworthineſſe, that ye may be ſtirred up in all his wayes; ye doe not onely ſhun your own iniquities in ſome meaſure, but your heart is inclined unto it, inclined to think of God, inclined to holy talke, inclined towards them that are Godly-minded; ye had no diſpoſition to the works of God heretofore but now the Lord hath not onely put you upon them, but inclined your heart towards them; ye feele inward impreſſions that bow you; others may be have had good talke, but you feele an unfeigned deſire to be edified, and that bowes you unto it. Others may be doe good things, but the Lord hath bent your heart to them; when you went to good duties heretofore, ye went againſt the haire, as a Stone does upwards, but now in ſome meaſure, the Lord hath put in a new nature, and ye feele an internall mover. This is Life now.

2. Secondly, the Intentions of the heart, We have a ſaying in Divinity, Voluntas ſuâ naturâ vult finem, the heart naturally wills the end. Now if God were our end, if communion with him, and ſanctifying of God in our hearts and lives, were our end, our heart could not be dead towards his wayes; nay, we ſhould be very eager after them all; all our deadneſſe comes from this, that God is onely a matter by the by, with us: But if he were our end, then we would be mainely for him, and how to approve our ſelves to him. Would we talke as we doe, if edification were our end? Would we keep ſuch company as we doe, if mutuall help towards eternall life were our end? Look what the heart does intend from day to day, the heart is very earneſt after it; therefore thoſe that intend to riſe if they can in the world, they are very earneſt in the purſuit after the fame, flatter, fawne, pleaſe, humour, they will doe any thing to the attaining of it; if it be to ride an hundred miles, it's nothing with them; if it coſt them never ſo much. O how greedy are they! if a man intend to gather an eſtate if he can, or to live in pleaſure if he can, all the world are eager in their intentions; the heart runs naturally on after it's ends. Now when the heart is alive towards God, theſe intentions are towards him, now the heart ſtandeth thus, ſo I may obey God, ſo I may take heed of diſhonouring God, ſo I may keep my heart cloſe to him, this is that I doe deſire; now I goe to work, ſo I may keep the world from carrying away my heart, I ſhall be glad; now I am going to Prayer, ſo I may draw down a bleſſing, and get ſome farther help to walke before God, this is the thing I ayme at; now I goe to be in ſuch a company, ſo I may diſcharge a good Conſcience, carry my ſelf well, and not bring diſhonour to God, and the like; you may ſee this in Paul, what was the matter he was ſo eager to deny himſelf, I count all droſſe and dung? the intentions of his heart were after Chriſt; O ſayes he, that I might know him, Phil. 3.10.

Thirdly,

3. Thirdly, the Elections and chooſings of the heart; this is another part of the hearts life; no man is dead to that which he chooſes rather then any thing elſe; now if we did ſtill chooſe the wayes of God, we could not be dead to them; when we are dead to them at any time, it is becauſe we could even find in our heart, to make another choyce; and therefore if we would know whether our heart is alive unto goodneſſe, whether doe we chooſe the way of goodneſſe every day before any other way? As David ſayes, I have choſen the way of truth, Pſal. 119.30. As the Lord ſayes of the good Eunuches; They chooſe the things that pleaſe me, Iſa. 56.4. Beloved, what ever we doe, or think, or ſpeak, ſtill there be two wayes propounded to us, one that is Gods way, another that is our own way, now which doe we chooſe every day? what thoughts doe we chooſe rather of the two to think, what words doe we chooſe, what actions, what courſes; when we are together, what conference doe we chooſe; when alone, what doe we chooſe? there be two kinds of eating, and drinking; which chooſe we? When we are provoked, there be two wayes to take, either to be impatient, and ſuffer our paſſions to ariſe, or to quell them, and beat them down, which doe we chooſe? doe we ſay as that good man ſaid; Lord let thy hand help me, for I have choſen thy precepts? Pſal. 119.173.

4. Fourthly, the Averſions of the heart, ye know the heart it chooſes what it likes, ſo there is ſomething that it ſhuns; now if thou wouldſt know whether thy heart be alive towards God, doe but think with thy ſelf, what it uſes to ſhun when thou art angry, is it diſgrace or ſinne? it ever ſhuns ſome thing or other; either what God diſlikes, or what thou; every day and houre, ſomething it puts off; does it put off things that are offenſive to thy fleſh or things that are offenſive to God? Here lies thy hearts life; if thy heart be alive towards God, it is of this temper, to put off thoſe things that are diſpleaſing to God; I hate vaine thoughts, ſayes David, Pſal 119 113. Mark, his heart was of this temper, to put off all thoſe things that were contrary to God; it may be many of thoſe thoughts his own heart would have rather kept, but when his heart was alive towards God, he put them off though; I have refrained my feet from every evill way, that I may keep thy word, Pſal. 119.101. Now when good things ſhall be put to a man every day by the Word, and by Conſcience, and a man hath a refuſing heart to them, this is a dead heart; as God put to Judah to returne, but they refuſed to returne. Jer. 5.3. God put ſhame before them for their ſinnes, but they refuſed to be aſhamed, Jer. 3 3. Now my brethren, examine your boſomes, how ſtand the refuſals of your hearts, doe you refuſe good or evill every day? If thou canſt refuſe temporall evill and not ſpirituall, thou haſt a dead heart.

5. Fifthly, the Savourings of the heart; this is another piece of the hearts will; ſomething there is that every heart ſavours moſt, and that is it which it is alive unto: now then if thy heart be alive unto God, it will ſavour the things of God moſt, it will not onely doe good duties, but ſavour them too; not onely heare the word of God, but it will have an admirable ſavour with the heart, as the Apoſtle ſayes, It will have the ſavour of life unto life, 2 Cor. 2.16. As the Church ſayes to Chriſt, Becauſe of the ſavour o' thy good oyntments, therefore the Virgins love thee, Cant. 1.3, O how it will ſavour a reproof, how it will reliſh! but if holy things have no ſweet ſavour in thy heart; it may be thou canſt not for ſhame of the world not ſeeme to ſtand for them, thy conſcience will not let thee, but thou wilt give them a good word, and ſeeme to approve them, but there's no more ſavour in them, then in the white of an Egge, nay, they are irkſome, and untoothſome, they doe not goe merrily down with thee, like ſweet conſerves; aſſure thy ſelfe, thy heart is a dead heart.

Sixthly, the Cares of the heart, this is another ſhew of the hearts life; what the heart is alive to, it carketh and careth for it, and therefore if thy heart be alive towards God, how carefull will it be that it may not offend him? Yea what care, 2 Cor. 7.11. As the Apoſtle ſayes to Titus; I will have thee affirme conſtantly, that they which beleeve in God, muſt be carefull to maintaine good works, Tit. 3.8. Therefore if a Miniſter be alive towards God, he will be full of care for his people, how he may pull them from their ſins, how he may draw them to God, how he may moſt do them good, as Paul ſayes of Timoth. he will naturally care for your Eſtate, Phil. 2.20. True, a man hath many things to do in the world, many cares how to live, how to pay rent at quarter day, what may become of his poore Children, &c. I but if the heart be alive towards God, it will labour to caſt theſe cares upon God, Caſt all your care upon him, 1 Pet. 5.7. But for heavenly things, for the having and keeping of a good conſcience, it will be full of cares about theſe things; yea, how it may get to be more afraid of ſinne, how may I get a weaned heart from the earth? it will be caring how he may be provided for evill times, how he may ſtand in the woſull day.

7. Theappropriating of the heart, the eſteeming of the heart, what's the hearts jewell, that's the heart moſt alive to; now thinke, what does thy heart prize moſt of all? if it be alive toward God, he is deareſt to thee; his will dearer then thine, his glory then thy credit, his word then thy life; as Paul ſayes, I do not count my life deare, ſo that I may finiſh my courſe with joy, Act. 20 24. This was the Jewell of his heart, how he might do the worke that God ſet him to do, that he might finiſh his courſe; ſo likewiſe if thy heart be alive, Love will be like a precious oyntment, Pſal. 133.2. Heavenly wiſdome more precious then Rubies, Prov. 3.15. A promiſe will be precious to the heart, 2 Pet. 1.4. So alſo Faith will be a precious thing, 1 Pet. 1.7. But above all CHRIST will be precious to the heart, To you that beleeve he is precious, 1 Pet. 2.7. Theſe are heart-jewels; theſe it endeares moſt; it will rather part with any thing then theſe; nay, it will morgage any thing to redeem theſe again. Theſe things are little eſteemed among men, in their Conſciences; indeed they ſay they are better then the whole world, I but their heart does not greatly eſteem them, nay, it ſlights them and ſeeks them accordingly; this is a dead heart.

Thus ye ſee what is the Life of the heart; it is the abſolute will of the heart, when the heart is inclined towards God, when it intends God, when it makes choice of his wayes, and puts off whatſoever is contrary to them, when it prizes and endeares every one of them all, when it ſavours them, and is full of care for them. I might adde another, the cleaving of the heart, when the heart cleaves to the Lord, as it is ſaid of Hezekiah, that he clave to the Lord, 2 King. 18.6. When the heart clozes in with God, and will not let him goe, no nor let his wayes goe, it ſticks to a godly courſe, all the world cannot pull him away, not fire nor faggot; though it be never ſo much hindred, and interrupted by the fleſh, yet now it hath a ſticking quality in it, as David ſayes, I have ſtuck to thy Teſtimonies, Pſal. 119.31.

Now becauſe when the heart is made willing on this faſhion towards God, there is left ſtill an adverſe unwillingneſſe, by reaſon of the fleſh; ſo that the heart can never put forth theſe acts, without horrible clogs; therefore now in a live heart towards God, there be other acts, that are not in a heart that is alive to the world. And the reaſon is this, Becauſe when the heart is alive to the world, the heart of its own nature is willing unto that, and there is no unwillingneſſe mixed together with it; never was it heard, that the heart ſhould be willing, and unwilling to the ſame thing, till ſaving grace came to divide aſunder the will in two; ye know the regenerate are two men apiece, and they have two wills, one towards God, and another towards ſin and the world; nay, its the ſame will, that hath both theſe branches in it, and this does much puzzle the hearts, when they find such a deale of unwillingnesse in them towards God.

Therefore I say there be other acts of life in the heart towards God, and they are five.

1. The first is the Preparing of the heart, whereby the heart prepareth it selfe towards God, 2 *Chron.*30.18,19. 1 *Sam.*7.3.

2. The second is the Combating of the heart, *Gal.*5.17,23. ὑπωπιάζω, I beat down my body, 1 *Cor.*9.27.

3. The third is the Endeavouring of the heart, it reaches forth it selfe, *Phil.*3.13. It stirs up it selfe; it awakens it selfe; Why art thou so sad, O my soule? *Psal.*42.5.

4. The fourth is the binding of it selfe by Determinations, and purposes; so Paul bound his own heart, with a determination before he came unto Corinth, 1 *Cor.*2.2. Daniel knowing how unwilling his heart would be to abstain from the Kings meat, though by grace he was willing; therefore his heart bound it selfe with a purpose; he purposed not to defile himselfe with the Kings meat, *Dan.*1.8. So *Act.*11.23.

5. The fift is the Groaning and sighing of the heart, as David though he were willing, yet feeling the unwillingnesse of the flesh, therewithall fetcht a groan, *O that my wayes were so direct, that I might keep thy statutes! Ps.*119.5. So Paul groaned earnestly to be dissolved, 2 *Cor.*5.2. This is the putting of the heart more forward. These I have named; you may name more it may be. But thus if the heart be alive towards God, it will doe: because it feels a great deale of unwillingnes, it gets what advantage it can of it self, to make it self willing; as the Church, ere ever it was aware, My soule made me like the Chariots of Aminadab, Cant.6.12. It sets it self right; as the soule when it's dead, it neglecteth this act quite and clean from day to day, as the Psalmist sayes of dull Israel, he calls them a generation, that set not their heart aright, *Psal.*78.8.

The next thing to be enquired about is the Conscience: what is the life of the conscience: and here the world is deceived too: for the conscience may be awakened very much, and yet never quickned indeed. First, a conscience awakened, may like all good things. Secondly, a conscience somewhat awakened, may oblige a man to all manner of good things. Thirdly, a conscience somewhat awakened, may be troubled about his sins. Fourthly, a conscience somewhat awakened, may urge one exceedingly to good things. Fifthly, a conscience somewhat awakened, may be very eager in this urging. Sixth, a conscience somewhat awakened, may prevaile very far with its eagernesse. Severally, a conscience somewhat awakened, may make one look at God, so far as it prevailes; all this may be in Conscience, and yet the Conscience never quickned indeed, so that you see what need there is to enquire what the life of Conscience is.

1. First, I say, the Conscience somewhat awakened, may like of God, and all his wayes; it may like of Gods judgements, be they never so terrible; as we see there in Pharaoh, when God plagued Ægypt; his conscience liked of Gods dealings, he thought in his conscience the Lord dealt righteously with him. The Lord is righteous, sayes he, and I and my people are wicked, *Exod.*9.27. So when Rehoboam was horribly beset with enemies, his conscience justified God, O he deales very rightly with me. The Lord is righteous, 2 Chron 12.6. So Adonibezek, when the Lord brought that lamentable judgement on his head, his conscience lik't of Gods doings; as I have done, so God hath done to me; so again the conscience awakened may like of Gods commandements; as Moses tels Israel, that God gave them no other Commandements but such as were right, and wise, and good in the sight of the Heathen, *Deuteron.*4.6,7,8. That is, they were such Commandements, that the Heathens thought in their conscience were good. Againe, the conscience somewhat awakened, may like of Gods

Gods people, that walk according to hoſe Laws and Commandements; you may ſee this in Balaam. O that I might die the death of the righteous! Num. 23. 10 His conſcience lik'd of their courſes; ſo Sauls conſcience did approve Davids courſes, Thou art more righteous then I, 1 Sam. 24. 17. A conſcience ſomew at awakened, may like of the beſt preaching, and the ſtricteſt Preachers, Never man ſpake like this man: O how mightily they lik'd him! Herod lik'd John admirably, he was glad for to heare him: profane Iſrael did wonderfully like the Sacrament of Gods preſence; when the Ark of God came into the Camp, they ſhouted with a great ſhout that the earth rang again, 1 Sam 4. 5. Now when a carnall man perceives this work to be in him, he is apt to conceive, this is true grace of life. Beloved, you ſee this is very falſe, Thou mayſt like of Gods dealings with thee, yea, thou mayſt think in thy conſcience, he deales very rightly with thee, though it be never ſo bitter; thou mayſt think in thy conſcience, his Commandements are good, though they be never ſo ſtrict; thy conſcience may like his Miniſters, and like his Precepts, and like his Ordinances, and his Sacraments, and yet be a dead conſcience.

Secondly, a Conſcience ſomewhat awakened, may oblige a man to all manner of good things; it may lay the Commandements of God to his charge. Conſcience may make him ſay not onely that the Commandements are good, but that it is his duty to doe them; we ſee this by experience in many carnall people; tell them of any Commandement, what is their anſwer? Oh you ſay well, I confeſſe it is my duty; every Drunkard will ſay thus, yea it is my duty never to be drunken; the Swearer will ſay thus, you ſay right, it is very true, I confeſſe I ſhould not take Gods name in vain; and therefore they are ſaid to be under the Law, Rom. 3 19 That is, they are bound in conſcience to the Law; their conſcience tels them they ought to doe it, their conſcience layes it on them as a bond; as the mad Prophet ſaid, Muſt I not take heed to ſpeak what God bids me ſpeak? Num. 23 12. Conſcience laid a muſt upon his ſoule. And this is the reaſon, why a naughty heart will put off a commandement of God, if he can when he ſees it goes againſt his profit, or his eaſe, or his credit, for he knows if he yeeld it to be a commandement of God, his conſcience will come over him and ſay, why then ye muſt doe it; as we read of the Prieſts and the Elders, they would not yeeld that Iohns Baptiſme was from heaven, O if we ſhould yeeld that, why then, Chriſt will ſay, Why do ye not beleeve? Mat. 21 25. Mark, the conſcience comes over a man in all that he knows God hath commanded, and it layes it to his charge; and you muſt doe this, and you muſt doe that, this is your duty; now when men ſee this, they are apt to conclude that their conſcience is alive; they think this is the life of their conſcience to lay Gods commandements to their charge. Alas brethren, the conſcience may be dead for all this, you ſee this in people that are dead in treſpaſſes and ſins. All that the Lord ſpeaks, that muſt I doe, Num. 23. 26. It was the ſpeech of a very wretch: thou mayſt have this principle in thy Conſcience, all that the Lord bids me, that muſt I doe; and yet be a dead man. O how does this beguile people, becauſe they feele ſuch a principle in their conſcience adayes! O thinks one, all that the Lord bids me, that muſt I doe: when people feel ſuch a principle as this, they think they are well; now if they doe offend at any time, they hold it to be but their infirmity, and there's an end But this is very falſe; the conſcience may have this principle in it and be dead.

Thirdly, a Conſcience ſomewhat awakened, may be troubled about his ſins; he may be troubled before he commits, he may be very loth to commit them, as we ſee there in Herod when he was betrayed his raſh Oath, and he was now tempted to behead John the Baptiſt, his Conſcience made him very loath to do it; the Text ſayes, He was exceeding ſorrowfull Mark. 6. 26. And the context ſhewes it was meerly, becauſe he thought in his Conſcience, he ſhould do very ill to behead ſo good a man, and therefore he was very loath; he was troubled in conſcience about it; ſo was Darius, when the Princes had wound him to caſt Daniel into the Lions Den, he was moved and troubled in Conſcience about it, he was very loath to doe it, he ſought a good while how to put off the temptation by getting away, how to avoid this great ſin, Dan. 6.14. So was Pilat troubled in Conſcience about the condemning of Chriſt, he went to it with a heavy heart; and as a Conſcience ſomewhat awakened, may be troubled before the committing of ſin, ſo it may be troubled in the committing of it. An example of this we have in Saul, when he committed that ſin, in ſacrificing before Samuel came, he was troubled in Conſcience in the very act. I forced my ſelfe, and offered a burnt offering. 1 Sam. 13.12. Mark, he did not commit the ſin hand ſmooth, as ſome doe, but he felt a reluctancy againſt it. Again, a Conſcience ſomewhat awakened, may be troubled exceedingly after committing of ſin; when Judas had betrayed our Saviour, you ſee how his conſcience was troubled after he had done; O ſayes he, I have ſinned, in betraying innocent blood, *Mat.*27. 4. Eſpecially at the hearing of a ſearching Sermon, or at a Faſt alſo, then the conſcience if it be onely awakened a little, will be troubled exceedingly for his ſins; when Samuel kept a Faſt there at Mizpah, the Text ſhews how they were ſmitten in conſcience for their ſins, in ſo much that th ey cryed out in the open congregation, We have ſinned againſt the Lord, 1 Sam.7. 6. And yet many of theſe very men, by and by ſhewed the rottenneſſe of their hearts: ſo that this is another gull, when men feele a lothneſſe in them to commit ſinne, trouble of conſcience before, and at, and after, they think this is true Grace doubtleſſe; doubtleſſe their conſcience hath life.

4. Fourthly, Conſcience ſomewhat awakened, may urge one to good things, and no queſtion but many of you that are yet in your ſinnes have found this to be true, how often have your conſciences urged you to give over your ſinnes? To look after the getting of Chriſt, to lead a godly life? How many heaves have your conſciences given at you? To hoyſe you up out of the ſtate ye wallow in, to make you more earneſt for heaven; more ſtrict in your walking, to provide for your latter end? When ye are at Prayer, how often does it urge you to dwell longer at it? As it is ſaid of Doeg, he was detained before the Lord, 1 Sam.21.7. He was held there, he would have gone away before, but he was held; now, what ſhould that be but his Conſcience? His conſcience urged him to ſtay long; ſo your conſciences urge you to be more attentive in hearing, more mindfull of preaching, more humble in your minds, leſſe worldly, more heavenly; you may think this is a lively conſcience; no, no, it is not; the truth is, the more your conſciences doe urge you adayes, the greater is your ſin, if ye yeeld not. But this is ſo far from life, that it argues you to be the more dead, if ye doe not obey. An urging conſcience is a great bleſſing, I, if men have eyes to ſee what the Lord does for them, to deliver their ſoules from the pit. This is the taking of men by the ſhoulders; now if thou pull away thy ſhoulder. They refuſed to hearken, and pulled away their ſhoulder. Zach. 7. 11. That is, the Lord ſet Conſcience upon them, and urged them to obey, as if a man ſhould take another by the ſhoulder, to drag him and haile him, and yet he would not. So when Paul ſpake to Agrippa, he felt an urging in his conſcience, O let me be a Chriſtian, and he confeſt as much too, Paul, almoſt thou perſwadeſt me to be a Chriſtian; it was almoſt done; he had a great heave; he was urged. But it would not do, ſo that this is no argument of life neither.

5. Fifthly, Conſcience ſomewhat awakened may be very eager in urging, it may be very importunate, every day digging in his ſides, every day whiſpering in his boſome; O thinke of God, O conſider thy ſoule, O Remember death; Conſcience may be earneſt and wonderfull eager with a man, O do not live as thou doeſt, O be not ſo careleſſe of God; what wilt thou dye and be damned? Wilt thou to hell? Wilt thou never have done? Away with thy ſinneſull courſes; away with thy dreamings; O beſtirre thy ſelfe; or thou wilt periſh; ſuch a conſcience had Pilate about Chriſt, it was eager with him not to condemne him. This Conſcience is an admirable bleſſing; and wo be to thoſe that ſtand out againſt it; it is like Iacob with the Angell, He would not let the Angell go till he bleſt him, Gen.32.26. Like the man that was importunate with his friend, and knockt, and knockt, and would have no nay, Luk. 11. 8. I am in bed; never tell me of your being in bed; I pray let me have three loaves; my children are in bed, I pray trouble me not; that is all one, ſtill he knocks, he will have him up; So when Conſcience is thus awakened and is importunate, and will not be anſwered, &c. Many a wretch hath ſuch an impudent conſcience as this. But this is ſo farre from an argument of life; as that it is a ſigne of a greater death.

Sixthly, Conſcience ſomewhat awakened may prevaile very farre by its eagerneſſe; It made the King of Jury do many things; It made the Heathens do the things contained in the Law, Rom.2.14,15. When the Phariſees came to tempt Chriſt, with the woman taken in adultery, Conſcience made them ceaſe, and go out, one by one, Joh 8.9 It made Paul live ſo unblameably as he did; Ye know concerning the righteouſneſſe that is in the Law, he was blameleſs, *Phil.*3.6. Now if ye look into the 23. of the Acts and the firſt, you ſhall ſee it was his Conſcience that made him doe ſo; Men and Brethren, I have lived in all good conſcience before God to this day; as ſince his Converſion, his ſanctified conſcience made him live godlily in Chriſt, ſo before his converſion his naturall conſcience holpen by good education made him live unblameably: ſo that, what with the one, and what with the other, he could ſay he had lived in a good conſcience to that day; that is, either morally good, or ſpiritually good: and therefore it was Conſcience that made him doe all that he did. People think, I indeed, if they did good duties for outward by-reſpects, then they ſhould thinke they were unſound, but conſcience ſets them a worke, and therefore they gather, they are ſound and alive towards God; no beloved, Conſcience may make a carnall man goe againſt all outward by-reſpects, and do very good duties. This we ſee in Balaam, he went againſt all outward ſelfe-reſpects, and followed Conſcience; for a houſe full of Silver or Gold, he would not goe beyond the word of the Lord to doe leſſe or more, Numb. 22. 18. So Judas went againſt his credit, and his profit, and all; ye know, when his conſcience told him the money was unjuſtly taken, he went and threw it downe: ſo did Michah, the man was an Idolater, and had ſtollen eleven hundred pieces of Silver from his Maſter, yet when he heard his mother curſe, he reſtored all againe. O thought he, what ſhall I heare my mother curſe? his conſcience roſe up againſt that, and made him make reſtitution. Why do carnall men pray in ſecret? no queſtion but it is Conſcience that makes them; may be when they are tempted to a ſinne in ſecret, they will not do it, and it is the Conſcience that with-holds them; in this ſenſe they do good duties out of conſcience; now is this Conſcience alive? No, it does not follow, ye ſee this may be in naturall men and women. 6.

Seventhly, Conſcience ſomewhat awakened, may make one look at God ſo farre as it prevailes; you may ſee this in Laban. The man was a wicked man; yet he lookt at God in not hurting of Iacob; though it were in the choyce of his hand, yet he would not hurt Jacob; and he lookt at God in the thing. O ſayes his conſcience, the God of your Father ſpake to me yeſternight, Gen.31.29 He abſtained from hurting of Iacob, and he lookt at God in the abſtaining from it. Becauſe God had forbidden him, therefore he will not hurt him; ſo it was with King Cyrus, he was a naturall man too, yet when he took order for the building of the Temple at Ieruſalem, his conſcience made him look at God in the thing. O ſayes he, the Lord God of Heaven and earth 7.

hath charged me to build him an house, Ezra. 1.2. So when Iehu destroyed Ahabs house, and Baals Priests, he himselfe sayes how he lookt at God in the thing; come see how zealous I am for the Lord of Hoasts; so when the Philistines sent home the Arke of the Lord, they would send it home honourably, with a very rich present, and the Text sayes, how they lookt at Gods glory in the thing. O say they, let us give glory to the Lord God of Israel, 1 Sam 6 5. Thus you see how the world are deceived about the life of the Conscience; when people have these operations of conscience within them, they think their conscience is alive and good towards God.

Now that these cannot be the life of Conscience, I prove it.

1. First, because all may be in naturall men, as ye have heard in Laban, in Pharaoh, in Balaam, in Micah, in Saul, in Darius, in Iudas, which were dead in trespasses and sins; what life can be in a dead man? It is very true Conscience is least dead of all the powers of the soule; the Pelagians say the Wil is a pure virgin, that's as false as the Devil is false; if any faculty be a pure Virgin, it's the conscience; all the religion that is left in a naturall man, God hath planted there: There's the effect of the Law there, Rom. 2.15 The whole nature of man is like a Countrey taken by the Enemy, except one little Fort; may be that's batter'd too; but it is not quite taken; so is the Conscience, after the whole man is quite vanquish't by sinne, except onely that, and that's batter'd too in a wofull manner. But it is not quite taken, the Lord will ever keepe a part in that, to have the man at controll when he pleases, and as farre as he pleases: But yet it is so farre taken too, that there is no spirituall life left at all in it; man is dead in trespasses and sins, and so is the conscience too.

2. Secondly, the Conscience notwithstanding all these may be deader then ever it was. I confesse these are flashes of life, that God sparkles into mens consciences, but they use to goe out againe, and leave the conscience as dead, and deader then ever before they came; we see it in Pharaoh, that hardened his heart worse afterwards, Exod. 9.34. So did Balaam, though his conscience were so quick for a spurt, yet within a while, he could goe, and lay a stumbling block before the Children of Israel, to make them sin, Rev. 2. 14. And we see it to this very day, many smitten in Conscience for a time, afterwards their smitings cease, and they grow more stiffe then ever they were, like water that hath been heated, it freezes afterwards the more.

3. Thirdly, the Conscience notwithstanding all these is soon pleased; though it seeme to be eager, and earnest, and zealous for God, yet any little thing will content it; if it were alive nothing would content it, but meerly indeed the favour of God, the Image of God, sincere conforming to God. But this conscience is soone pleased againe; it is but angry a while, if but halfe the Lords due be brought in, this Conscience is satisfied; Like the unjust Steward, that set downe fifty for an hundred, Luk. 16.6 When the man goes on praying, and doing good duties, may be, the conscience is whist, though it be but a forme; when he hath reformed a little, conscience thinkes it hath enough; we may see this in Balaam; when he had found that worke of Conscience, that he could deny Balac's house full of Silver and Gold, to stand for God, presently he concluded that God was his God; If Balac would give me his house full of Silver and Gold, I cannot go beyond the word of the Lord my God, Num. 22.18. Like the wretched Jewes, they brought God, the blind and the lame, and the torne, and the sicke, and then they thought much that they should be called despisers of God, Mal. 1.6,7,8 Saul was commanded to destroy all the Amalekites, now though he spared some his conscience was content. I have done the will of the Lord, sayes he; such a conscience as this is soone pleased, like little Children, it cryes, it takes on, it sets up its Pipes, but a little thing stills it; may be a Rattle, or an Apple, or a Brasse Counter; so my Brethren though a mans conſcience be thus as ye have heard, yet it is a very childe, it will be ſoone ſtilled; let him but beſtir himſelf a little towards God, and go on in a pretty handſome way, this conſcience will quickly ſay it's well.

Fourthly, the Conſcience that hath but theſe ſtirrings, is ſo farre from being alive, that many times it will be a help unto ones luſts; which if it were alive it could not be. But thus it is though, when theſe works are reall, it will ſerve to help a mans luſts; when a mans luſts would faine have ſomething or other done, then ſteps in thy Conſcience, and will help the lame dogge over the ſtile; as we ſay Herod had a luſt to make away John the Baptiſt; O but he's a good man ſayes his Conſcience, and thou muſt not cut off his head, Mark. 6.20. O but he was urged now to do it, by Herodias her daughter; and he had ſworne to grant her hearts requeſt; now ſee how his Conſcience helpt him to do it. Thou haſt ſworne an Oath, and thou muſt make conſcience of that; therefore cut off his head. So it was with the Jewes, when they have a luſt to crucifie Chriſt, their conſcience found out a trick for it; We have a Law, ſay they, and by our Law he ſhould dye, becauſe he made himſelf the Sonne of God, John 19.7. Mark, they made it matter of Conſcience; what they murder Chriſt? They put him to death unjuſtly? No, God forbid; we have a Law, and are bound in Conſcience to keepe it. So when a man hath a luſt, as to weare long haire; by and by he makes it a matter of conſcience to weare it; forſooth his head will ake; and he is bound in Conſcience to have a care of that; ſo if a man have a luſt of Covetouſneſſe, and not to give where is need; forſooth his conſcience findes a place in the Apoſtle to help it. He is worſe then an Infidell, that provides not for his own; and ſo he will make conſcience of that; ſo when a man hath wronged him, he hath a luſt of revenge, anon he findes out a trick, O it may tend to the diſhonour of the Goſpell; if he put it up: the matter is not ſo, but he is willing to thinke ſo; and he will make conſcience of that; is he revengefull now? No God forbid. It was a diſgrace to Religion, and he did it out of conſcience of that. Thus men will have what luſt they pleaſe, they can finde ſome Text or other, which they wreſt to make Conſcience of that; O how common is this.

Fifthly, this Conſcience is not univerſall, it culs out onely ſome particular ſinnes to be violent againſt, and lets alone others may be as bad; like Ahabs for the Vineyard; and let his Baaliſm alone; or if the Conſcience be againſt all manner of ſins, it is but in a fume, Cito redibit in gratiam. They are but like new Wine, in old Bottles; at laſt the Bottles breake and the Wine is all ſpilt; ſo all theſe works in an awakened conſcience, are only then while the conſcience cannot ſleepe. But when it can fall a ſleepe again, then the man can be quiet again; the conſcience is an old conſcience and not renewed, and therefore it is not able to hold them; well then, ye ſee theſe are not Conſcience's life.

You will ſay then, what is conſtience's life? When is the conſcience ſaid truly to be quickened? For the opening of this, ye muſt know there be two lives of Conſcience in a godly man.

The firſt is a relative life; whereby it's alive, when the man is alive. The ſecond is a ſimple life. The firſt, I ſay, is a relative life, whereby it is ſaid to be alive, when the man whoſe it is, is alive; for conſcience is the reflection of the ſoule, the ſoules privity to it ſelfe, between God and it ſelfe. And therefore if the ſoule be alive towards God, then the conſcience is alive too; as the Apoſtle ſayes; How much more ſhall the blood of Ieſus Chriſt, who through the eternall ſpirit offered himſelfe without ſpot to God, purge your Conſcience from dead works to ſerve the living God, Heb.9.14. Marke when a mans dead works are purged away, the conſcience is alive, when a mans ſelf is alive, and his works are alive, the conſcience is alive alſo; as we ſay of the goodneſſe of Conſcience, ſo it is with the life of Conſcience; though the Conſcience be never ſo good in it ſelf, yet as long as the man is not good, his Conſcience can never be good; Conſcience is ſaid to be good, as a Meſſenger is ſaid to be good; namely, when he bringeth good tidings; as David ſaid of Ahimaaz, he is a good man, and he bringeth good tidings, 1 Sam. 18.27. Though a Meſſenger be nere ſo good a man, yet if he do not bring good tidings, we ſay he's an ill Meſſenger. He ſent evill Angels among them, Pſal. 78.49. Calvin thinks it may be meant of good Angels, yet ſaid to be evill Angels, becauſe they brought evill upon Ægypt; ſo that's a good Conſcience that bringeth good tidings to a man; that he does believe, that he is in Chriſt, that he is a good man. True, a wicked mans conſcience may report well of him, as Abſolon did of the people, O your matters are goood, ſayes he, when they were ſtark naught: So thy conſcience may flatter thee, and ſay thy matters are good, when Conſcience can ſay truly, thy matters are not good. The conſcience is like a Regiſter or a Bill; now when it is a Bill of good Items; when all thy ſinnes are blotted out, and good things are written in; now it's a good Conſcience; ye know we call it a foule Bill, that hath foule crimes written in it; though the Bill be never ſo faire written, yet if it have foule crimes written in it, it's a foule Bill. Item, this man ſtole a Horſe. Item, he broke into ſuch a mans houſe. Item, he murdered ſuch a man; when ſuch a Bill as this comes in at the Aſſizes againſt a poore Priſoner, this is a black Bill; this is a foule Bill; ſo as long as thy Conſcience is a foule Bill. Item, I was borne in ſinne. Item, I have lived very looſely. Item, I have heard ſo many Sermons, and yet I have beene nere the better. Item, I have been at ſo many Sacraments, and yet I have gone on in my vile courſes, thy Conſcience is a foule Bill; this is a foule Conſcience; as the Apoſtle ſayes, a defiled Conſcience, Tit. 1.15. Now when the Conſcience is cleane, then it's a good Conſcience; ſo I may ſay of a lively Conſcience; the Conſcience is alive, when the man is alive; when his mind is quickened up towards God, and his heart which before was dead in treſpaſſes and ſinnes, now it's alive towards God; this mans conſcience is alive. The reaſon is, becauſe now his conſcience may ſay, I am alive; for Conſcience is the reflection of the ſoul on it ſelfe, and therefore if thou beest alive thy ſelf, thy conſcience is alive too: This is the firſt life; the relative life of conſcience, or its Teſtimoniall life.

This is called other-where the Teſtimoniall life of Conſcience.

Now that this is one life of Conſcience, is plaine, becauſe if a mans ſelfe be dead, Conſcience will ſay, I am dead; as Paul ſayes, ſpeaking of him and the Epheſians before their converſion; O ſayes he, ye were dead in ſins, Eph. 2.5. Look what a man is if the Conſcience be inlightned, it takes it on it ſelf; when David had ſinned, I have ſinned, ſayes his Conſcience. So let a man be holy, the conſcience preſently takes it upon it ſelf; as we ſee there in David, when he was holy; I am holy, ſayes his Conſcience, Lord preſerve my ſoule, for I am holy, Pſal. 86.2. So that if thou beeſt dead, thy conſcience is dead; if thou beeſt alive, thy conſcience is alive. But I let this paſſe.

I come now to the ſecond life of Conſcience, and that is, its ſimple life, Conſcience hath another life of its owne; for as when the man is alive, the conſcience is alive, ſo the conſcience is quickned up to doe its duty, when it quickens up the whole man to doe his, as the conſcience of the good people that offered to the Tabernacle was a quick conſcience: their conſcience was quick to doe its duty, becauſe it quickned them up to doe theirs; Their heart made them willing, Exod. 35 29. That is, their Conſcience made them willing. Though the Conſcience be never ſo eager, that is not it; it never does its duty with life, till it make thee to doe thy duty with life. The conſcience of the godly may be is not ſo eager, neither does it keep ſuch a do, as many a wicked mans Conſcience. The more eager Conſcience is faine to be, it's a ſigne the man is the more dead; when the man is alive, his Conſcience ſtrees him with more eaſe; like a man that is willing to pay his debts, the creditor need no more then aske; whereas if the debtor be a very ſlye fellow, there needs the more bawling; ſo that if thou wouldſt know whether thy conſcience be quick; the queſtion is not whether it be eager or no, but whether does it quicken thee up to thy duty or no.

This then is the life of conſcience, when it makes a man do his duty ſincerely both towards God and man; when it makes a man believe with all his heart, when it makes him love God with all his ſoule, and minde to ſerve him in truth, to do his whole will, to humble himſelfe ſoundly before God for all his ſinnes, to make his peace with God, daily to pleaſe him and to walke before him in newneſſe of life. This is a living conſcience, This conſcience hath the grace of life in it; whether it do it by eagerneſſe or not, whether with a horrible ſtir and a great pudder or no; that is not it, if it make a man do his duty aright, then conſcience does its duty, this is conſcience's life. And firſt in regard of ſin.

Firſt, when the conſcience does not only check, but it checks to ſome purpoſe, when it ſmites ſo that all the ſoule feeles it, and lies down under it, when the conſcience does not only do its duty in this thing, but it makes a man to do his, it makes him ſmite himſelfe as the Publican did, He ſmote upon his breaſt, Luk.18.13. As Ephraim did, I ſmote upon my thigh, Jer.31.10. When a man is made to check himſelf, what have I done? Jer.8.6. When David numbred the people, the Text ſhewes how his conſcience was quick, his heart ſmote him, 2 Sam.24.10. Dull checks there may be in a wicked heart, yea, mighty checks, and mighty ſmittings, yea, greater for quantity then in any Childe of God, but all to little or no purpoſe; Davids Conſcience ſmote him to purpoſe you ſee there, it made him do his duty indeed, it was a Divine check, it was a check that put him into a right way again. So except thy Conſcience thus check thee adayes, may be thou forgetteſt thy ſelfe now and then, and then thy conſcience gives thee a check, O what a beaſt am I! & ſo ſets thee to rights againe; ſometimes thou art overtaken in paſſion, but then comes conſcience, and tels thee what God ſayes, O why do I give place to the Devill? and then thy paſſions go down againe. This is Gods Bit, that he guides his people by, as the Rider does his beaſt with a Bridle. The wicked are like your ſturdy horſes, that get their Bridle in their Teeth, God may pull hard at them, give them fiercer twitches, then he does his own Children, but they get the Bridle in their Teeth, and ſo they are unrulier: But when it is Gods Bridle to lead a man by, now his conſcience is alive, when it checks to purpoſe.

Secondly, when it does not only accuſe for ſin (ſo a naturall Conſcience may do) but it pulls a man down before God; and makes him cite himſelf effectually before his Tribunall. I make this a different work; for the accuſation of conſcience differs from its checking; the check is a ſpiritual laſh the conſcience gives the ſoul; now the accuſation gives the reaſon of its laſhing, O thou haſt ſinned againſt God; ye know this is a duty of conſcience too in regard of ſin, to accuſe. And then conſcience is alive, when it does this duty to purpoſe, to make a man to do his; namely to go and Confeſſe his ſin in a penitent manner. True, a wicked mans Conſcience does accuſe, but that drives a man from God; as it's ſaid of the Scribes and the Phariſees, When their Conſciences accuſed them, they went out, John 8.9. But when Conſcience is alive, it accuſes before God, it cites a man ſoundly before God; and what a vile wretch am I! it ſo does its duty in accuſing, that it makes a man to do his; freely to accuſe himſelfe, The juſt man firſt accuſeth himſelfe, Prov. 18.17. So it is in the Greek and the Latine. Haſt thou ſuch a Conſcience as this? This is a lively Conſcience; when thy Conſcience does not only do its duty to accuſe thee for every ſinne that thou doſt, but it makes thee to do thine, freely to accuse thy self before God; a wicked conscience may accuse, I, but it does not make the man to do his duty; he does not freely accuse himselfe, it is only forced in him; it is with Coaction and Compulsion. But its free in Gods Children; when Daniel went to confesse his sinnes before God, the text sayes, he set himself to do it; I set my face unto the Lord God, Dan.9. 3. That is, his conscience did not only do its duty in this thing, but it made him to do his.

3. Thirdly, when it does not only Condemne one for sinne; for so the wicked have condemning consciences, as the Apostles sayes; If our heart condemne us 1 John 3.20. That is, if we be wicked, as Paul sayes; Knowing that he that is such, is subverted and sinneth, being condemned of himselfe, Tit.3.11. That is, he is a very wicked Creature; so that a wicked mans conscience does Condemne. But I meane when the Conscience does not only condemne one for sinne, it does not only do its own duty in this thing, but it makes the man to do his; it makes him trample upon himselfe; as a damned wretch in himselfe, to save God a labour, as the Apostle speakes, if we would judge our selves, we should not be judged, 1 Cor.11.31. When Conscience makes a man freely to accept of damnation; Thou shalt accept of thy punishment, then I will remember my Covenant, Levit.26.41.42. When it makes thee lay thy Neck on the block; Lord the worst place in hell is too good for me: I have often told you a story in the Acts and monuments of the Church; when Edward the first, one of the Kings of England was a hunting and one of the standers by had displeased him, the King rid after him with a drawne sword for to stab him, the man run away for his life; the King rid over hedge and ditch to over take him, and when he man saw he had no way to escape, he fell downe, and held up his throat to the King saying if it please your Majesty here is my throat; The King melting towards him, shewed him mercy. So when conscience makes thee say, Lord, here is my throat, here is my soule, if it please thee thou maist send Satan to take it, and carry it to hell with him. Thou hast no way to escape, therefore offer thy selfe unto God; may be thy Conscience does condemne thee; alas that is not it, thy conscience does not its duty with any life, till it make the do thine; doest thou freely Condemne thy selfe; accept of thy punishment, lay thy head on the block, does thy soule lye groveling before God? This is alive conscience.

4. Fourthly, when it does not only pull a man from sinne and Iniquity; so it may do with the wicked and the ungodly; they feele many pulls every day, and may be their Conscience makes them leave many particular sinnes, though that's very rare as the times now be; but when the conscience pulles a man forth of every knowne sinne, when it so does its duty in this kind, that it makes thee to do thine; when thou pulleſt thy selfe with all detestation and loathing, out of pride, out of security, out of unbelief, out of hardnesse of heart, out of formality and all; this is a lively conscience; as Job sayes, My heart shall not reproach me so long as I live, Job 27. That is; as my heart does its duty towards me, so it shall make me do mine; I will yeeld to mine owne conscience in every thing; whatsoever sinne it tels me off, I will be sure to set my selfe against it; it shall not lie heaving at me, and I never stirre; then it would reproach me: but it shall never reproach me so long as I live. These are the lively acts of conscience about sinne.

The lively effects whereof are foure.

1. The first, is a penitent shame, that ever a man should sinne against God; when conscience does thus as ye have heard, then it produces this effect, that the man is ashamed before God; as the Apostle sayes, what fruit have you of those things whereof ye are now ashamed? Rom.6.21. People are apt to be ashamed befor men; Diodorus Cronus, when Stilpo askt him a rediculous question, & he could not answer him, he was so ashamed, that he fell down stark dead;

he

he thought it was ſuch a diſgrace to be non-pluſt. But if Conſcience were alive, and did doe its duty indeed, it would make us aſhamed for our ſins before God. Ezra was aſhamed before God for the ſins of the people, I bluſh, ſayes he, to lift up mine eyes unto thee. When a man is ignorant of God in Jeſus Chriſt, this would be a ſhame, I ſpeak this to your ſhame, 1 *Cor.*15.34. That is, if there be any grace in your hearts, certainly ye will be aſhamed that ye ſhould have no more knowledge of God. I ſay, when the Conſcience is alive againſt ſin, it makes a man aſhamed before God; it ſhews him his nakedneſſe before heaven, it propounds God before his eyes, ſeeing all his uncleanneſſe, and ſo it makes him aſhamed before him. Doſt thou count it a diſgrace to doe evill, a diſgrace to offend GOD, a confuſion of face to doe iniquity, though it be never ſo ſecret? Canſt thou not looke upon thy unworthy dealings with God, but it makes thee aſhamed in his ſight? This is the effect of a living Conſcience.

Secondly, another effect is penitent griefe and compunction of heart; ye may ſee this effect in the new Converts, they were prickt in their hearts, Act 2. 37. When their conſcience began to be alive, to ſmite them for their ſins, to accuſe them and condemne them, it grieved them exceedingly, it went to the quick, it was like a Dagger in their heart, it prickt them, it made them mourn for all that they had done. True, a naturall conſcience produces griefe; there's ne'r a wretch, but if his conſcience be awakened to check him, and accuſe him, and condemne him, it will make him to grieve for his ſins. But this is onely legall and ſurly. Now when the Conſcience is alive to doe its duty, as to make the man to doe his, now it makes him grieve out of love to God, out of love to grace and goodneſs; now he grieves becauſe he hath broken thoſe Commandements that he loves; he loves to obey God, O it is the unfeigned deſire of his ſoule to obey him, and therefore he grieves that he hath done the contrary. 2.

Thirdly, another effect is Penitent feare. It makes a man afraid to ſin againſt God againe; as the Apoſtle ſayes, Yea, what feare? 2 *Cor.*7.1. A naturall conſcience may cauſe a kind of feare too, nay, a horrible feare. *The ſinners in Zion are afraid, fearfulneſſe hath ſurprized the Hypocrites, &c. Iſa.*33.14. For a guilty conſcience cannot but work feares when its awakened, but this feare is meerly out of ſelf-love, and of bondage. But when the Conſcience hath done ſo its owne duty upon a man, that it hath made him to doe his, now it makes him filially afraid to ſin againſt God; as a true child feares to offend his Father: When a man hath this feare in him, this is a ſign of a living Conſcience. 3

Fourthly, another effect is Trembling deſpaire in ones ſelfe, it makes him ſee nothing but hell and damnation in himſelf; and it flings him down at Gods gate, as a man utterly undone in himſelf, having no hope in himſelf, for as God dealt with Paul, in regard of his recovery out of ſickneſſe, he brought him to deſpair of life in himſelf, 2 *Cor.*1.8. So does a living conſcience in regard of mercy, a naturall conſcience the effect of that, is to deſpair too. But that is to deſpair in God; becauſe when there is nothing but nature in the conſcience, how can it be otherwiſe? But when there is grace in the conſcience, grace in the heart, now though Conſcience repreſent to his damned eſtate, it repreſents withall the free grace of God in Jeſus Chriſt to all ſuch as are heavy laden, and ſo it is onely deſpair in himſelf; now haſt thou ſuch an effect in thee, to deſpair in thy ſelf, to fling off all thine own hopes, and thy own dependances, hangings, holdings; ye know the ſoul hath a thouſand thouſand ſuch, wiſhes, wouldings, purpoſes, duties, performances, theſe the ſoul hangs on. But now haſt thou this effect in thee, that thou doſt abſolutely deſpair in thy ſelfe? I mean ſelf-confidence with whatſoever good is in thee, be it grace, or whatever; doſt thou deſpaire in thy ſelfe? This is a ſigne of a living conſcience; now thou hang'ſt upon nothing, but the meere mercy and good will 4 of God. And this is the best hold in the world, though the world cannot abide it. Thus ye see for sin; The livingnesse of conscience in regard of sin.

Secondly, now for the livingnesse of conscience in regard of good. Then is the conscience alive to that which is good,

1. Firſt, when it goes and it does not onely urge a man to that which is good; so it did Agrippa; Almost thou perswadest me to be a Christian, Act. 28.28. When Paul spake unto him, it seems his conscience took hold of Pauls words, and it did mightily urge; it had almost done the deed; alas this is not it: a dead conscience may doe this, yea, with admirable importunity; as it is in many. But when the conscience doth not onely urge, when that does not onely doe its duty in this point, but it makes a man doe his duty too; the man freely urges himselfe, and freely sets himselfe to it and about it: as it was with David, When thou sayest, Seek ye my face, my heart said unto thee, Thy face Lord will I seek, Psal. 27.8. That is, when thou sayest thus in my conscience, seek my face, my heart ecchoed back, I will do so indeed: Mark, his conscience did not onely doe its duty, but it made him to doe his; as his conscience did urge him, so he took these urgings, and urged himselfe.

2. Secondly, when the Conscience hath life towards good, it excuses, and it does not onely excuse in part, for so it may do in a wicked heart; many a wicked man hath such an excusing Conscience, when he does good for the matter of it, as we read in the Heathen, Rom. 2.15. Their Consciences accusing; their Conscience did excuse in part. But it excuses full out; it tels him, he hath done it unfeignedly in the truth of his heart, that he does beleeve in God, that he does truly repent from dead workes, that he does in some poor measure, walke in new obedience from day to day; and that he stands guiltlesse before God, by faith in Jesus Christ: or if it do not excuse thus, it is meerly out of Ignorance of the thing given him of God; a living Conscience is an excusing Conscience; it does not onely say the thing that he does is good, but that he does it unfeignedly with all his heart; true, a naturall Conscience not awakened may do thus, but that's a misprision; for when it comes to see its own condition indeed, then it will be in another tale; ah I am rotten, I have beguiled mine owne soule to this very day; but a living Conscience can never be confuted, as it excuses, so its excuses shall stand before God, because it is quickened by the grace that is in Jesus Christ, his bloud is sprinkled on it.

3. Thirdly, when the Conscience hath life towards good, it approves a man and his wayes; it either may or does pronounce a man to please God. As it was with Enoch, he had a Conscience that told him he was approved of God; before his translation, he had this Testimony that he pleased God, Heb. 11.5. This is the nature of Conscience, if it be alive, to do its duty, and so as to make a man to do his, to tell a man that he is allowed of God; which is an admirable mercy, that a childe of God should have such an intelligencer in his owne bosome, that can tell him he is approved of God, no creature is able to expresse what comfort this is: none but good people can have this; others may be approved of men, others may heare that such and such do approve them, but they can never heare that God does approve them. These are the consciences onely towards good, which it can never do, it except it be alive.

Now the effects of these be, Firſt Joy, when the conscience does its duty towards God, and makes a man do his duty too, this worketh Joy in his heart; as Paul sayes, This is our rejoycing even the Testimony of our Conscience, that with sincerity and godly pureneſſe we have had our conversation in the world, 2 Cor. 1.12. There is no joy like this joy; wicked men may laugh, and seeme as merry as crickets, but in the midst of their laughter, their Conscience gives them but cold comfort: now when a man hath such a Conscience as this, that sets him about that which is good, this makes him have truer joy then all the world beſides; for howbeit the world are beſotted, that they do not looke after God; Yet the conſcience knowes it is goodneſſe only that will pleaſe God; and therefore when conſcience is privy to this, no tongue can ſpeak what joy this is unto one.

Secondly, another effect is boldneſſe and freedome from ſlaviſh feare: 2. There's a deale of feare in a mans heart, as long as he does not ſerve God and do the things that are pleaſing in his eyes, though it may be people do not feele this ſame feare as long as they are well and luſty, but let but conſcience be awakened, or let death ſeize upon them, then a feare will appeare; O how afraid are they to go before God! But let a man have ſuch a living Conſcience as this, this gives a man boldneſſe. The righteous are as bold as a Lyon, Prov.28.1. Thy conſcience is an admirable thing; without this all a mans boldneſſe is nothing. Thou maiſt hold up thy head very high, and outface all the world for a time, as bold as can be; tuſh thou art well thought of among all thy neighbours, But what ſayes thy Conſcience? If that cannot ſay thou art a gracious man, I tell thee thou canſt have no boldneſſe. But now if thou haſt this ſame living conſcience, now thou maiſt be as bold as a Lyon; though the world do accuſe thee, yet what ſayes thy Conſcience? If that excuſe thee, thou maiſt ſhew thy face, where thouſands ſhall be confounded. When Auſtin was accuſed by Secundinus to have come from the Manichees for feare of loſſe, and for hope of preferment, he comforted himſelfe with his Conſcience, I eſteeme not ſayes he what Secundinus thinks of me, ſo long as my Conſcience approves me before God; ſo alſo Paul, when the falſe Apoſtles accuſed him, O ſayes he, It is a very ſmall thing with me, that I ſhould be judged of you, 1 Cor.4.3. Thus ye ſee for good; what is the livingneſſe of Conſcience towards good. This is the ſecond thing.

Thirdly, now about Both, both ſinne and goodneſſe; when is the Con- 3. ſcience alive about both? Namely when it does inſtruct a man, and not only ſo, but it guides a man to ſhun the one, and to imbrace the other. This is a living Conſcience indeed, when it is a mans privy counſell from day to day. This is a Divine Counſell; its like a little privy Counſeller in a childe of Gods boſome, that the Lord in mercy hath placed there to direct him; as David ſayes, I will bleſſe the Lord for giving me Counſell, my reines inſtruct me in the night ſeaſons, Pſal.16.7. By his reines he meaneth his conſcience, now that did inſtruct him not only in the day time, but alſo in the night; if he were tempted to ſinne, his Conſcience inſtructed him, nay, I muſt not yeeld to that; if he found himſelf backward to any good duty, nay, ſtill his conſcience adviſed him, nay I muſt be forward to that. I confeſſe a dead Conſcience may give admirable counſell, and Inſtruction to the wicked; I, their conſcience proves it unto them. But it does not do its duty, for it does not make them to do theirs. Thus ye ſee what a living Conſcience is, when it ſo does its duty, that it makes us to do ours.

But it may be an humbled conſcience is pædagogus animæ, it is the Soules Object. Schoole-maſter, as Origen calls it: now a School-maſter may doe his duty, though he doe not make the Scholler doe his; for if he be diligent in teaching and doing of his office, the Scholler may be a dunce for all him: the beſt School-maſter may have a block-head and a dunce in his Schoole.

I anſwer, the reaſon is not alike.

Firſt, a School-maſter teacheth another, but Conſcience is a School-maſter, Anſw. not to another, but to a mans ſelfe; and therefore if the conſcience doe its duty indeed, it muſt needs make the man to doe his, becauſe his Conſcience is a School-maſter to himſelfe.

Secondly, again, a School-maſter is not alwayes by his Scholler, ſometimes 2. his back is turned; but Conſcience is ever by a man, and therefore if it did alwayes doe its duty, it might make the man to doe his.

Againe, Thirdly a Schoole-Maſter; it may be his Scholler is duller then himſelfe; and then though himſelf be never ſo learned, yet he cannot put his learning into his Scholler. But it is not ſo here, here the Scholler and the Schoole-Maſter is all one; one is no more dull then another; for looke how dull the one, ſo dull the other; look how active the one is, ſo active is the other, becauſe Conſcience and the man is all one; it is very true, the Conſcience by accuſation is eagerer then the man; for God may take a dead Conſcience, and ſtir it exceedingly, and he does ſo ordinarily in men; but theſe ſtirrings of Conſcience, are none of Conſciences ſtiring but Gods, My ſpirit ſhall not alwayes ſtrive with man, Gen.6.3. They are his ſtrivings with men. But the conſciences own quicknings, and the mans are all one; you will ſay how ſhall I know whether the quickening that is in my conſcience be my Conſciences, or only the Lords ſtirring in my conſcience? I anſwer.

1, Firſt, when thou art glad that thy Conſcience is ſo buſie with thee, it is very welcome unto thee, then the Lord hath made thy conſcience alive; then God does not onely ſtrive in thy Conſcience, but thy Conſcience it ſelfe is alive; as we ſee there in David, I will bleſſe the Lord for giving me counſell, my reines do inſtruct me, Pſal.16.7. When his conſcience did inſtruct him, he was glad of it, he bleſt the Lord for it; his Conſcience was alive. But now in a wicked heart, the more his Conſcience accuſes, and condemnes, and checks, the more buſie it is with him, the more unwelcome it is, and therefore he labours to ſtill it; may be he will ſtop it with ſome thing; may be ſome little reformation for the time, may be with Prayer, or ſome yeeldings thereunto; nay, there be ſome labour to drown it out-right, they will go to the Alehouſe, or to Cards, or among their boone companions, and ſo ſhake off thoſe dumps; Therefore my Brethren, if ye would have a ſigne, that your Conſcience is alive, be glad at its dictates, give them all the deareſt entertainment ye can. Bleſſe the Lord for them, and make very much of ſuch, they are the ſweet motions of Gods holy ſpirit quench them not; do not ſtop the mouth of them by half payments, let them have their full ſway.

2 Secondly, when thou calleſt upon thy Conſcience to be buſie; when thou uſeſt to ſtirre up Conſcience every day, winde it up as a man does his Clock, that it may be in continuall motion. So the Prophet did; Why art thou ſo heavy O my ſoule? Why art thou ſo diſquieted within me, hope thou in God, Pſal. 42.11. Marke, he tooke his conſcience and ſtir'd up himſelfe with it, a wicked man does not thus; his conſcience comes before it is ſent for, it is like an unbidden gueſt. And therefore if thou wouldſt know whether thy conſcience be alive, do but conſider whether this be thy courſe, if thou doeſt daily awaken thy conſcience, if thou doeſt ſet it a work, this is a ſigne of life in it; as Paul did, Herein do I exerciſe my ſelfe, that I may have a good Conſcience, void of offence, Act.24.16. He laboured for his conſcience, he called it up every day, he was active about it, ſo that the ſtirrings that are in wicked men, they are none of theirs, but Gods meerly to pull them out of the bottomleſſe pit, if it might be; in the meane time, his conſcience is as dead as himſelfe. Thus ye ſee what the life of the conſcience is. Firſt, there is a relative life of Conſcience; the Conſcience is alive, when the man is alive. Secondly, the conſcience is alive, when it preſſes to duty ſo, that it makes the man do his duty too; when is does not only check for evill, and accuſe for evill, and condemne for evill, and prompt a man that he ſhould take heed of evill, but it makes a man do his duty in all theſe; ſo alſo when it does not only urge a man to that which is good, and excuſe him and approve him, but in all theſe, it makes him do his duty too; ſo likewiſe when it counſels, it does only counſell and dictate what is to be done, and what not; but it ſo does all theſe particulars, that it makes the man to do his duty, in ſincerity from day to day. This is alive conſcience.

Now

Now that this is the live Conſcience, I prove it unto you by five Arguments.

1. Becauſe Conſcience was made not onely to doe all theſe acts, but to make a man to doe his, ſo that when conſcience does its own acts never ſo much, that's nothing to the life of conſcience; does thy conſcience check thee, and ſmite thee, does it whiſper never ſo much in thee? This is no Argument it's alive, except it make thee to be obedient unto God. Conſcience was given man for this purpoſe; and therefore then onely is it alive, when it is for this purpoſe in thy Boſome: when David would get up out of his temptations, you may ſee how he got up by conſcience; I communed with my own heart, and my ſpirit ſayes he made diligent ſearch, Pſal 77.6. That is, he communed with his Conſcience, what he knew about God, and ſo got himſelf up; this is thy conſciences office to tell thee what thou haſt heard out of the Word, and that is not all, but to lead thee, guide thee as the helme does the Ship. It is given thee to be thy keeper, as he ſayes, I was upright before him, and I kept my ſelfe from my iniquity, Pſal. 18 23. That is, this is my iniquity, his is the ſinne that I am moſt inclined to, I muſt keep my ſelf from that. Thus his conſcience was his keeper under God. 1.

Secondly, another Argument is, becauſe this is the way whereby godly people doe their duties, the Conſcience makes them doe their duty, it makes them believe, it makes them feare God, it makes them eſchew evill and doe good from day to day. Bleſſe the Lord O my ſoule, and forget not all his benefits, Pſ.103.2. When the Prophet would doe this duty, he made his conſcience preſſe it ſoundly upon him to doe it; ſo when he would waite upon God, he ſet his own ſoule and conſcience upon him, to make him to doe it; Waite on the Lord, be of good courage, he will ſtrengthen thy heart, waite I ſay upon the Lord, Pſal. 27.14. 2.

Thirdly, another Argument is, this is the deſcription of thoſe that have alive Conſcience, they are ſuch as make themſelves doe their duties continually; as the Apoſtle ſayes, He that hath this hope in him, purifieth himſelf, even as he is pure, 1 Joh. 3.3. That is, he is a man that makes himſelf doe his duty, his own ſoule and Conſcience ſayes thus unto him, Chriſt is a pure Chriſt, and I muſt be like him, as ever I hope that he will bring me into his Kingdome; and this makes him doe his duty; he purifieth himſelf, even as he is pure; I could quote abundance of places to prove this, 3.

Fourthly, another Argument is; when God ſpeakes to any that are alive from the dead, to doe their duties towards him, he bids them make themſelves to doe their duties on this manner; ſo Saint Paul ſayes, Having theſe promiſes, let us cleanſe our ſelves from all filthineſſe of the fleſh and ſpirit, perfecting holineſſe in the fight of God, 2 Cor. 7.1. That is, goe and aske your own ſoule, and Conſcience what have I not theſe and theſe Promiſes? Why then I muſt labour to be cleanſed from all manner of ſinne, I muſt perfect holineſſe in the feare of God; now ſayes he, let us make our ſelves doe our duties thus. 4.

Nay, fifthly, when God ſpeakes to them which are yet dead, and would turne them home unto him, he bids them doe thus in regard of the meanes; turne your ſelves and live you, Ezek. 18.32. That is, Let your own ſoules and conſciences conſider this is the way to live, ye cannot be ſaved without turning; as ever I would live for ever, I muſt be turned from all my ſinfull courſes; make your ſelves doe your duties in this manner; that is, uſe all the meanes, that the Lord hath given you to uſe, make your ſelves goe about it, not as though any man hath free will to turne himſelf; But he ſpeakes of the uſe of all meanes, that he puts into your hands; make your ſelves to uſe them; nay, no ſoule can ever look to be ſaved, except he doe not onely let his conſcience check him, & tell him thus & thus his duty is but alſo let his Conſcience make him doe his duty too; ſo that this muſt needs be the life of the Conſci- 5.

ence; when it does not onely doe its own duty, to check and to whisper, but also it makes a man to doe his.

Use 1. The Use of this is; Then we see here how few have live consciences, for people have Consciences that doe onely tell them they should be more carefull; they should give over such and such sinnes, they should believe, and they should be zealous, and they should be more setled, but O how few have Consciences that make them doe their duties? Numb. 15.40. That ye may remember and doe all my Commandments, and be holy unto your God.

Revel. 3. 1.

And art Dead.

WE are come to speak of this necessary point, when is a man quickened up towards God and all his holy wayes? We have shewed you three things concerning this already. First, what the life of the Mind is. Secondly, what the life of the Heart is. Thirdly, what the life of the Conscience is. Now there remaines two more, the one is the life of the Memory, the other is the life of the Affections.

4. Fourthly then, what is the life of the Memory? For the memory too may be dead, and the memory may be alive.

1. First, the Memory may be dead; when a man may be remembers, if ye aske him a thing, he can tell it, aske him of a Sermon, he can tell the Text and the points, and the particulars that were delivered in a Sermon, but here's all, its a dead memory, he never remembers it to any purpose, this is to remember, even as if a man did not remember, as Moses sayes, Remember and forget not that thou provokedst the Lord to anger in the Wilderneſſe, Deut. 9.7. That is, remember it, and doe not remember it with a dead memory. As Balaam remembred that God was angry with him in the way, no question but if a man had askt him about it a week or two after, he would have shewed that he did remember it, he could tell the place, the time, and the manner, and how it was in his journey, and how the Lord stood before him with a drawn Sword. But alas this was a dead memory; for his practice shewed plainly that he had forgotten it in effect. I say there is a dead Memory, a man may have an excellent memory to goe from point to point, nay, a better memory in this sense then many of Gods dearest Children, and yet this memory be a dead memory.

2. Secondly, there is a living Memory; a memory that hath life in it; as God sayes of penitent Ephraim; I doe earneſtly remember him ſtill, Jer. 31.20. Mark, God did not onely remember him, so he does remember all men, he remembers Reprobates and all, but he did very earnestly remember him: so when a man does earnestly remember God; the remembrance he hath of him is earnest, he remembers his word earnestly, he is earnest in remembring of his will, though there be never so many things, to put God out of his thoughts, he is daily tempted to forget himself in some thing or other about God, but he is earnest to remember, when a mans memory is eager after a thing, now it is a live Memory.

Now the question is, when the Memory is alive. For the handling of this, First, I will shew you what the memory is. Secondly, what a great blessing of God it is that we have a memory. Thirdly, when the memory may be said to be alive. Fourthly, we will prove it, and then we will make some uses of the point.

1. First, what Memory is. It is the Conservation of what we apprehend, as a man hath many things in common with a beast, so memory is in his fancy and imagination; for look what a man hath seen, or heard, or tasted, or smelt, or felt, felt, memory is the Conſervation of the ſame; ſome can remember the ſhape of Men, of Townes and Creatures, we can remember what colour things are of, what a taſte ſuch and ſuch meats have, ſuch a memory beaſts have, as we ſee in the milch Kine, they remembred their Calves, 1 Sam. 6.12. They went lowing as they went; thus the children of Iſrael remembred the fleſh that they had in Egypt, We remember the fleſh which we did eate in Egypt, Numb. 11.5. And this we call a Senſitive memory.

Secondly, Memory, moſt properly, is a faculty of the mind, whereby it preſerves the ſpecies of what it once knew, and therefore when a man is ſaid to remember he is ſaid to be mindfull, as David ſayes, be ye mindfull alwayes of his Covenant, 1 Chro. 16.15. That is, look you alwayes remember his Covenant, for when the mind once knowes a thing, memory is a certaine Paper of the mind, to retaine it and to keep it, and therefore it is called the ſoules ſtore-houſe; it is the ſoules treaſury, as our Saviour Chriſt ſpeakes; A good man out of the good treaſury of the heart, bringeth forth good things; and an evill man out of the evill treaſure of the heart, bringeth forth evill things, Matth. 12.35. Memory is the ſoules cheſt, where it keeps all its Jewels; that look what a man knowes, ſpecially if he like it, preſently he layes it up to keep by him, as it is ſaid of Mary, ſtill when ſhe knew any thing of our Saviour, when ſhe knew of any ſaying of his, ſhe kept it in her heart; Mary kept all theſe ſayings, Luke 2.19. Properly I ſay memory is a faculty of the mind, whereby when it knowes a thing once, it is able to keep it. This we call Intellectuall memory.

Thirdly, by conſequent, memory is in the Conſcience; for the ſoule of man being privy to it ſelf, what it knowes, what its told of God, what notions it hath, what it does, what it hath done, or what it hath not done, it hath a Paper to record this; and therefore in this ſenſe, we call memory the ſoules Regiſter; for thus it is in the Conſcience: ſo when the Sonnes of Jacob were privy to themſelves, that they had ſold their brother Joſeph, ye know how their Conſcience remembred what they had done, above twenty yeares after. O we are verily guilty concerning our Brother, in that we ſaw the anguiſh of his ſoule when he beſought us, and we would not heare, Gen. 42.21. Their Conſcience had regiſtred their fact up, and did remember it againſt them ſo many yeares after. So Adonibezek being privy to himſelf, When he cut off the thumbs and the great toes of threeſcore and ten Kings, and made them to gather ſcraps under his Table, you ſee how his Conſcience had regiſtred this, and could remember it againſt him another day, Judg. 1.7. So that memory is by conſequent in the Conſcience too. And this memory we call the Book of a mans conſcience. Theſe three are all the proper memories that we have, becauſe memory can properly be no where but where apprehenſion is; either ſenſitive apprehenſion, as in fancy; or intellectuall apprehenſion, as in the mind; or reflective apprehenſion, as in the Conſcience; They underſtood not thy wonders, neither did they remember them, Pſ. 106.7.

Fourthly, Memory in an improper ſenſe, is in the will and heart of a man, becauſe there is ſome retention too of what is paſt and gone; as let a man love or hate his brother, though that act be paſt and gone, yet there is ſome retention of that act againſt another time, for when a man hath hated one heretofore, he is the more ready to hate him afterwards; which is a ſigne that the heart does retaine what it did before, nay, ſayes Ariſtotle, there is memoria in pedibus: there is memory in the feet; there is memory in the hand; as the Pſalmiſt ſpeaks, If I forget thee O Jeruſalem, let my right hand forget her cunning, Pſ. 137.5. This is called remembring too in the Scripture, but this is improperly ſo called; this we call a habit or faculty, or a dexterity in acting by reaſon of precedent actings. Thus ye ſee what Memory is. Now this memory is of things that are paſt; for if things be preſent, we are ſaid to ſee them, or behold them, or ſo. But when they are paſt, now if we can ſee them ſtill, this is by way of remembring; indeed we may be ſaid to remember things both preſent and to come, in regard that our knowledge of them is paſt; as the Apoſtle ſayes, Remember them that are in Bonds; as being bound with them; Heb. 13.3. That is, though the thing be now preſent, yet I would have you remember it; becauſe your warning is paſt; this is a duty, ye have been told in times paſt, therefore look ye remember it. So Solomon ſayes, Remember thy Creator in the dayes of thy youth, Pſal. 12.1. That is, though thy Creator be not paſt, yet thy creation is paſt, and thou art not ſo young but thou haſt been told of thy duty in this thing in times paſt: O therefore remember that; nay, thus a man may remember that which is yet to come, as for example the Day of his death, that he muſt dye, and come to judgement; for though the thing be yet to come, yet he hath had warnings of it in times paſt, as Jeremy ſayes of Jeruſalem, her filthineſſe is in her skirts, ſhe remembred not her laſt end, therefore ſhe came downe wonderfully, Lam. 1.9. The Lord finds fault with her that ſhe did not remember her time to come, The reaſon is, becauſe ſhe was told of it aforehand in times paſt.

2. Now for the ſecond thing; that this is a great Bleſſing. Beloved it is a great bleſſing of God, that we have ſuch a faculty in us as to remember; it was a naughty ſpeech of Charoone that an excellent Memory is needfull for three ſorts of men. Firſt, for great Trades-men, for they having many buſineſſes to doe, many reckonings, many yrons in the fire, had need of a good memory, Secondly, great talkers; for they be full of words, had need to have a good Store houſe in their heads to feed their tongues. Thirdly, for Lyars; Oportet mendacem eſſe memorem, for they telling many untruths, had need of a good memory, to be able to remember what untruths they have told, leſt afterward they be taken in their lying, contradicting themſelves. I ſay this is a profane ſpeech, as though a good memory were of no other uſe, then for engroſſers of affaires, and talkative fellows, and forging companions; whereas memory is a great bleſsing of God, and the more we have of it, the more advantage we have unto our own eternall good, if we have a heart.

1. Firſt, it is a great bleſsing that what we once knew, we may alwayes know; now this may be by Memory: Were it not for this, we ſhould be Ignorant again as faſt as we learn. Whence is it that ye ſtill know to read, but becauſe ye remember your letters and ſpelling? whence is it that ye ſtill know your trades and your callings, which ye were taught ſo long ago, but ye remember how ye were taught? Ye once knew the grounds of Religion, may be ye were taught heretofore; if ye know them ſtill, it is becauſe ye remember them; were it not for Memory, we ſhould be as much to ſeek, as if we had never learnt ought: as Jude ſayes, I will put them in remembrance, though ye once knew this, Jude 5. That is, as ye once knew it, ſo I deſire that ye may know it ſtill; that it may ſtick by you, that you may make it your own; what a mercy is this? We cannot undertake to have alwayes the meanes of Knowledge, we may want Preaching; God knowes how ſoon; now if we have memory to lay up ſome knowledge, we may have the benefit of it, how ever things goe; may be God gave us a warning, to take heed of ſuch and ſuch ſinnes, now if we have a good memory, this warning may be ſtill preſent with us; we have had ſuch motions, ſuch convictions, ſuch ſights of ſinne, ſuch ſtirrings, ſuch manifeſtations of God to us, what a mercy is it that God hath given us ſuch a thing as Memory is? As we had them once, ſo we may have them ſtill if we remember them.

2. Secondly, memory is a great bleſſing, to bring our Knowledge to act upon all occaſions. How many thouſand truths doe we know, that we doe not, neither can we actually think of? now when we have uſe of thoſe truths, it is a great mercy, that the Lord hath framed a memory in us, where we may have them upon all ſuch occaſions; e. g. we know we ſhould be patient, may be we do not think of this duty for a day together, but now when we have uſe of it, then we may remember it; So for meekneſſe we know it, and for forgiving of wrongs, to reſiſt temptations, to deny our ſelves, to ſhun the occaſions occaſions of evill, we know all theſe things, but our knowledge cannot alwayes be in act; now when we have uſe of theſe truths, what a mercy is it that we have ſuch a thing as Memory is to remember them afreſh? Did David actually think of Gods gracious judgements alwayes? No, but when he had uſe of them, when he was at a dead lift, then memory brought him to minde; I remembred thy judgements O Lord, and comforted my ſelfe, Pſal. 119. 52. May be Peter had no occaſion actually to think of thoſe words of Chriſt, that John indeed Baptized with water, but ye ſhall be Baptized with the holy Ghoſt: but having a memory, that gave him the uſe of thoſe words in due time; then I remembred the word of the Lord, ſayes he, Act. 11.16. May be this truth is not thought of a twelve-moneth together, that ones enemies may be they of our own houſhold; now perhaps all on a ſuddain we have uſe of this truth, then we remember it: now is not this a great mercy, that God hath given us ſuch a thing; that we may put up his truths, as a man does his mony in his purſe, to take it out when occaſion is?

Thirdly, it is a great Bleſſing to have God alwayes with one; This Memory is ſuch a faculty, that if a man have a heart, he may have God alwayes with him, and Heaven with him: ye know that moſt men are without God in the World, what is the reaſon of it? But becauſe they will not remember him: How many doe know God very much? As the Heathens did, they knew him to be Eternall, to be Almighty, to be every-where, to be Holy and juſt, they knew him, but they did not like to retaine him in their knowledge, Rom. 1.28. That is, they let him goe away from them, they would not keep him in remembrance, as Nebuchadnezzer ſayes of his Dreame, when he had forgotten his dreame, It is gone away from me, ſayes he, Dan. 2.5. So people forget God, they let God goe away from them; Now beloved, this makes us without excuſe, when God hath given us a Memory, we might have God alwayes with us, if we had a heart; we need not let him goe away. The Memory is a deep vault in the Soule, where it may hide what it hath a mind to, that, nor men nor Devills can take it away from us; as the Iſraelites hid their Corne from the Midianites, ſo we may hide what ever our heart hath a liking unto in our memories, that we may have it alwayes with us, if we will; as it is ſaid of the good Merchant, when he had found the rich Treaſure he hid it, Matth. 13. 44. That is, he laid it up in his ſoules ſtore-houſe; as Solomon ſayes, my Sonne if thou wilt receive my words, and hide my Commandements with thee, Prov. 2. 1. I ſay the memory is a deep vault in the ſoule, where a man hides what he hath a mind to, that it may never be taken away from him: ſo that memory is an excellent thing; a man may have God alwayes with him, and heaven and all heavenly things, if ſo he have a mind to them. 3.

Fourthly, it is a great bleſſing, that if a man chance to goe out of his way, he may put himſelf in againe, ſeeing he hath a memory; I ſpeak of a Chriſtian, that hath once heard the wayes of God, he cannot goe out, but by memory he may put himſelf in againe. Memory is the ſoules Map; as David ſayes, all the ends of the earth ſhall remember themſelves and turne unto the Lord, Pſal. 22. 27. He ſpeaks of all Gods Elect; mark how they get into the way againe, they ſhall remember themſelves; ſo when ere a man ſteps aſid by pride, thus he may come in againe by remembring himſelf; O, God reſiſteth the Proud, the Lord ſayes he will give grace to none but the humble: Thus he may come in again; ſo if he ſtep aſide by too much yeelding to the World, thus he may ſet himſelf to rights, O woe is me, what have I done? Now I remember the love of the World is enmity with God; if he chance to have by-thoughts at the hearing of the Word, let him remember himſelf, O what a beaſt am I! I forgot I was in Gods preſence with him, I remember my ſelf, that I am before him; and thus he may correct himſelfe; So the prodigall Sonne did, when he had fetch't his wilde vagary, at laſt he remembred himſelfe, O how many 4.

*hyred Servants of my Fathers have bred enough? Luk.*15.17. He remembred what a good Father he had run away from, this fetcht him home again.

5. Fifthly, its a great Blessing to help a man to beleeve; though a man do not believe for the present; he heares the word of God, he heares that which might do him good, but for the present he does not believe; yet who knowes but this very Word may do him good another day, Memory may bring it to mind, through the goodnesse of God, and then he may believe it; as the Disciples of CHRIST, ye may read how that Christ spake some words, that did them little good for the present. But the Text sayes, that when he was risen again, then they remembred the words that he had said unto them and believed, *Joh.*2.22. Many times we are untoward for the present, and then the word does us little good, I but it's a blessing that we can remember; the same word may be represented by our memories to us, and may do the deed; as we see in the second son in the Gospel; his Father said to him, Go work to day in my Vineyard; ye know how distemper'd he was for the present, he answered and said, I will not, Matth.21.29. I afterwards he repented himselfe and went, that is, he remembred a fresh what his Father said to him, and that made him do it.

6. Sixthly, it's a great helpe to better Knowledge; it may be at the first, when we are taught, the word does not sink into our hearts, we do not understand it. But yet remembring what it was we were told, afterwards through the mercy of God something or other comes in, that now we can say, blessed be God, now I understand such a Truth, such a Promise, such a Commandement; and yet no new teaching, but remembring only what we read or heard; as sometime, one of the Jewish Doctors not understanding that place in the Prophet, where it is said, That God would sweep them away with the besom of destruction, Isa.14.23. Afterwards seeing a Maide come with her besom to sweep the house, now he saw the meaning of the place; so when Christ said to Peter, that before the Cock crowed twice he would deny him thrice; that Peter had a poore weake heart, and that he had a horrible deale of faint-heartednesse in him, and that he would deny his own Master, Peter understood not his words, he saw no such thing in his heart, as to thinke those words to be true. But when he had been in the High Priests Hall, and there had abjured his Master, and had heard too the Cock crow twice, and his Master lookt at him, now he remembred his words, and went out and wept bitterly, Matth.26.75. That is, now he saw the truth of Christs words, now he saw what a wicked heart he had, and lamented it. I say memory is a great help unto knowledge; as God sayes; O my people remember now what Balak King of Moab consulted; and what Balaam the Son of Beor answered him from Shittim to Gilgal, that ye may know the righteousnesse of the Lord, Mich. 6.5. How many things have we heard and seen, when we were Children, that then we never knew the meaning of? Yet afterwards when we come to have more wit, then remembring what they were, we understand them; as Christ said to Peter, when he went to wash his feet; what I doe thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter, Joh. 13.7. That is, when thou remembrest it hereafter, then thou shalt know my meaning in it.

7. Seventhly, Memory is an excellent help for a man to Preach to himself, Beloved we can but preach to you an houre or so, but seeing God hath given you memories, ye may preach to your selves all the day long; memory may help you to repeate the word every day in your hearts; as the Apostle sayes, speaking unto your selves, Ephes.5.19. So by reason of this blessing of God, ye may speake to your selves from day to day.

8. Nay Eightly, it's an excellent thing, for it may let you have the benefit of things before they be; your death is not yet, your last sicknesse is not yet, your salvation is not yet; the day of Judgement, the Kingdome of glory, these are not yet. I but, you having a Memory, ye may have much benefit by them in the meane meane time; ye may repreſent them to your ſelves as things preſent, and have a world of good by them; and ſo all the things that are paſt, no act of the Soule can make them ſtill preſent but Memory; your Child-hood is paſt, all the Sermons that ye heard heretofore are all paſt. O how many ſinnes have ye committed in times paſt! and how many dealings have ye had of God in the dayes that are paſt? Now having a Memory, except ye have graceleſſe hearts ye may do your ſelves good by all theſe, even as if they were now before you; If a childe of God be at a loſſe for the preſent, he may help himſelf by Memory; as David ſayes, I remembred the days of old; I call to remembrance my Song that I have had, Pſal.77.5.6. So if any of you be ſecure, ye may remember ſome thing or other that is paſt, which may awaken you again; hath God never ſhewed you your damned eſtate heretofore? Were ye never ſick heretofore, and did you not ſee that if ye had dyed in that caſe, ye had periſht? ye may remember that now, and awaken your ſelves; and how if God ſhould take you away in ſuch a caſe as that? It cannot be related what a Bleſſing it is that we have a Memory!

But let us come to the third thing; and that is this, when may the Memory be ſaid to be alive? I anſwer, there be two parts of the Memories deadneſſe towards God. The firſt is, an aptneſſe to forget God and all his Commands: Secondly, an aptneſſe to Remember thoſe things that are not ſo good for us; Now when thoſe two faults are rectified in ſome meaſure, then the Memory is alive towards God.

First, There's aptneſſe in your memories to forget God and all his commands; ye know God commands us to remember the Sabbath day to keepe it holy, Ex.20.8. How apt are we to forget it? How commonly is it out of our minds? So in the 78. Pſalme, and the 7. verſe, God ſayes there, He would not have us forget his works, but that we ſhould keepe his Commandements; now O how apt are we to let them leake out of our hearts? We have a helliſh art of forgetfulneſſe; how often do we forget our ſelves herein, and ſuffer the remembrance of God to be taken away from us? Ye have forgotten the exhortation that ſpeaks to you as to Children, *Heb.*22.5. How often do we forget to keep our ſelves unſpotted; Though we be told of the will of God, yet any little thing is enough to put it out of our minds, Slay them not leſt my people forget it; though we be told of our miſery, and the infinite danger we are in, may be at the firſt it moves us a little, but how ſoone do we forget it, and other things take us up? Now when this aptneſſe is rectified in ſome meaſure; when GOD hath a ſound impreſſe on our minds that we muſt needs remember him, and all the things that concerne our peace; when there's a Law in our mindes, that we will not forget God; as ye may ſee there in David, Bleſſe thou the Lord O my ſoule, and forget not all his benefits, Pſal.103.2. When our Memory is ſanctified, and is made the good Treaſury of our heart; when the Lord hath lifted up our Memory unto him, then it is alive.

Secondly, as by nature there's an aptneſſe in our memory to forget God, ſo there's an aptneſſe to remember other things that either are not good for us, or not ſo good; we are apt to remember injuries; nay, one injury will be thought on more then many good turnes; ſo likewiſe idle tales, we are apt to remember them; whereas good things goe out in our hearts like ſparkes in wet tinder. We may ſee this in the hearing of the word; the Apoſtle tearmes us forgetfull hearers, James 1.25. If a tale be told us in a Sermon, that we can remember; how many are apt to carry that away; whereas that which is wholeſome, and might do us more good; how apt are we to forget that? As a Divine ſayes, Our memories are like ſtrainers, all the pure milke runneth through, but if there be any droſſe, that ſtayes behind; or like a grate that lets the pure water run away, and if there be any ſtraws, and ſtickes, and filth, and mud, and drugs; that it holds; ſo is with our memories; by nature trifles, and toyes, and worldly things, them we are apt to remember like the Shepherd in York-shire, that could remember all his flock, he kept a thousand sheep, and if one should but change one Sheep and put in another he could tell which it was. But for gracious things our Memories doe soon forget them like Israel, thy son forgot all the workes of God, Psal.106.13. Now what is this but the corruption and deadnesse of our Memories towards God? May be we are apt to excuse it, alas we have weake memories, true, if we were as weake memoryed in other things, it were something; but when we can remember our pleasures, and profits, and tales, and any thing; when we go to buy, wee'l be sure to remember our selves there, when to sell, wee'l be sure to remember our selves there, that we will have to the worth if we can. But in matters of God there we forget our selves; this cannot be excused. Now when this is rectified in some measure, then our memory is alive when we will rather forget any thing else then God; rather forget our selves in all the world, then forget our duty towards God, when this study is once set up soundly in the soule in some measure, now the memory is alive. Thus ye see the third thing.

Now for the fourth, that this must needs be the life of the Memory, I prove it by arguments.

1. First, because the Memory hath hardly any other quickening, then the quickening of the man whose memory it is, so that when the mans mind is quickened together with his Conscience and heart, the memory is quickened too; as the Prophet sayes, I will never forget thy Precepts, for with them thou hast quickened me, Psal.119.93. That is, any memory is quickened up to thy Precepts, because with them thou hast quickened me; for we see commonly, that the faculty of Memory is much at one after conversion that it was before conversion; if it were a weake memory before; so it is after; only this, as the strength of it was let out towards the world and sinne, and selfe before, so now the strength of it is in some measure let out towards the best things. And therefore what can the life of the memory be, but the aptnesse of a man to remember God?

2. Secondly, because this is the only Practicall memory; ye know a man may have an admirable memory, to remember Sermons, whole Chapters in the Bible, and yet have a dead memory to God; a Sanctified memory, is a Practicall memory, as the Lord sayes, remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy, q: d. ye may remember still when the Sabbath is come, I this is the Sabbath day; that is not it, that's only a Contemplative memory. But I would have you have a Practicall memory; not only to remember the duty, but remember for to do it, for as the Contemplative understanding hath a faculty of conserving its species, so the Practicall understanding, hath a faculty of conserving its species too; as long as a man hath not this practicall memory, it is nothing. Because he remembred not to shew mercy, Ps.109.16. Mark the Lord does not finde fault with a man for not remembring of that duty, for may be he did remember that, I but he did not remember to do his duty; this is a live memory, when a mans practicall memory is towards God and his wayes. Now when a man is made again to remember God and all his holy wayes, now his memory must needs be made Practicall.

3. Thirdly, because this is the only Memory that represents things lively to the Soule. I say when a man is made in some measure apt and inclined to remember God, then and only then does his Memory represent God and his wayes lively to him; ye know Reason sayes, the life of the Memory must needs be in this, that it represents things lively and powerfully unto us, when it does not only shew us what we do remember, but it shewes it to the life: when it shewes it dully and bluntly, and obscurely, that's with a kind of forgetfulnesse, then a man remembers it to the full, when a man remembers to the utmost what he once knew, so that if a mans Memory be alive, it must remember to the full in a perfect manner; as David ſayes, I have remembred thy Name, O Lord in the night, and have kept thy Law, Pſal.119.55. That is, I remembred it, and remembred it to the full, I repreſented it powerfully to my ſelfe, ſo that I made my ſelfe to keep thy Law by it. I affected my own heart by what I did remember; as the Church ſayes, My ſoule hath them ſtill in remembrance, and is humbled within me, Lam.3.20. Well then ye ſee, that a lively memory is it that repreſents things lively to a man; now when a man is made again to remember God and his wayes, then and never till then does he repreſent God ſively to himſelf. Thoſe that have not this aptneſſe wrought in them, may be they remember God now and then, and the duties now and then, but they never remember them in a lively perfect manner.

The Uſe of this is, Firſt, if this be the only lively memory to be apt to remember God, then let us labour to get this ſame aptneſſe, into our mindes to remember God in all our wayes. Let us conſider, Firſt becauſe without this memory, all other memories are nothing. Iſrael had a memory to remember God; they remembred that God was their Rock, and that the high God was their Redeemer, Pſal.78.35. But that remembrance was nothing. So that if we be not thus mindfull of God, we are yet in our ſinnes; as God tells Judah, Becauſe thou haſt forgotten me, and caſt me behinde thy back, therefore beare thou thy lewdneſſe, Ezek.23.35. If a man were once pulled out of his ſinnes, if he once had that true conviction, and godly ſorrow, and reformation, and faith and amendement of life that is in being converted, the ſoule would have the lively remembrance of it ſtill, to make him go on as he hath begun; and therefore if we have not this bleſſed remembrance yet in us, it is moſt plaine we are yet in our ſinnes. Uſe 1.

Secondly, thy heart can never retaine Gods commandements without this ſame memory; as Solomon ſayes, My Son forget not my Law, but let thy heart keep my Commandements, Prov.3.1. 2.

Thirdly, The want of this remembring of God is the cauſe of all ſinne; Moſes ſpeaking of all the ſinnes of Iſrael, ſayes, they have forgotten the God that formed them, Deut.32.18. So again in another place; they have perverted their way, they have forgotten the Lord, Jer.3.21. So again it is ſaid in the Book of Judges, the Children of Iſrael did evill in the ſight of the Lord and forgot him, Judg.3.7. 3.

Fourthly, the want of this Memory, is the high way to deſtruction, the Lord will deſtroy them, that forget him; that do not remember to feare him, that do not preſſe it upon their mindes ſtill to regard him; the Lord will in the end, deſtroy all ſuch people; as he ſayes, Iſrael hath forgotten his Maker, therefore I will kindle a fire, that ſhall devour them, Hoſ.8.14. Beloved how do we looke that God ſhould remember us, if we will forget him? I will utterly forget you, Jer.23.39. 4.

Secondly, another Uſe is to ſhew you, how ye may get a live memory. There be ſeven cauſes of it. 2.

The firſt, is a true knowledge of God. I told you Remembrance is moſt properly in the underſtanding; now looke how a man underſtands God, ſo he does remember; if a man know God only literally, he remembers him no otherwiſe; but if a man know God aright, then he remembers him aright. The underſtanding can keep no other ſpecies then it hath; if it have a ſaving knowledge of God, then it hath ſaving ſpecies of God: No man can have other money in his purſe, then he puts into his purſe. if he would have Gold in his purſe, he muſt put Gold into his purſe; ſo if we would remember God aright, let us labour to get a right knowledge of him. I will eſtabliſh my Covenant with thee, and thou ſhalt know that I am the Lord, that thou mayſt Remember, &c. Ezek.16 62,63. 1.

Secondly, a new and a true Heart; mens Memories ever follow the nature of their 2.

their hearts; that they ever will remember that their Memory is to ſet to; ſee a man be Proud, he will ever remember his reſpect: let him do any thing that ſeemes to deſerve praiſe, he will ever remember to jet himſelfe; let him be at any time diſparaged, he will ever remember to be very much ſtirred; ſo let a man be Covetous, he will ever remember his profit, he will remember never to go againſt his profit, if he can otherwiſe chooſe; what ever he forgets, he will not forget that; ſo let a man be Bookiſh, let a mans luſts be to have learning, he will be ſure to remember that: now if a mans heart be ſet truly towards God, this will draw his mind towards God, now he will remember to pleaſe God, to have his heart in a ſweet frame; if he find any diſtemper in his heart, he will remember to remove that, if he can poſſibly; when the Heart is upright, it runnes thus; We will remember thy love more then Wine, the upright love thee, Cant. 1.4. So that if we would remember God with this alive Memory, we muſt get an upright heart.

3. Thirdly, a cleare and a diſtinct eſtate before God; as long as a man is confuſed in his Conſcience, he knowes not what to make of himſelf; this breakes the neck of true Memory; Methodus eſt mater memoriæ, diſtinctneſſe is the mother of Memory as we ſay. Let a man be confuſed in his notions, this ſpoileth all Memory; ſo it is here, as long as we are confuſed in our Conſciences, we know not where we are; we cannot remember God; we know not what to call to mind, his Juſtice or his Mercy, his Promiſes or his Threatnings; as David when he was to ſeeke at one time, he could not remember God to any purpoſe, I remembred God and was troubled, ſayes he, Pſal. 77.3. He was troubled horribly in remembring of him; like a man in his wooing, he is troubled to remember ought: now when a man hath cleared up his Eſtate, it's ſtrange to ſee how cleare he is in his Prayers, how cleare in his conſcience, cleare in his apprehenſions, where as another man knows not where he is; ſo that if we would remember God in all our wayes, let us labour to cleare up our eſtates; this will help us to remember him a thouſand times better then ever we did before, then we ſhall ſee his Promiſes diſtinctly, and every thing diſtinctly.

4. Fourthly, a Delight in good wayes; this is a very admirable help of memory; what's the reaſon, we are apt to forget any thing, but becauſe we do not regard it? the more the mind regards any thing, the more it remembers it; as the Prophet ſayes, I will delight my ſelfe in thy Statutes, I will not forget thy word, Pſal. 119.16. And ſo for hope too. Pſal. 78.7.

5. Fifthly, Meditation is another cauſe of this remembring of God; Meditationes ſalvant memoriam, ſayes Ariſtotle: the more a man thinkes of a thing, it is the deeper in his mind; when the good man had ſaid, He would remember Gods workes, Pſal. 77, 11. O ſayes he, I will meditate of them, verſ. 12.

6. Sixthly, the rubbing up of our Memories. The memory is a very lazie faculty, if it be not every foot rubbed up, it will be forgetfull; therefore we ſhould rub up our minds, if we ſee them ready to let his word ſlip, we muſt call it back againe; as the Lord ſayes, Remember this and ſhew your ſelves men, bring it to mind, O ye tranſgreſſors, Iſa. 46.8. Our memories are naturally exceeding ſlippery, they are apt to leake out that which is good; and therefore we ſhould take paines with our mindes; as the Apoſtle ſpeakes, Therefore we ought to give the more earneſt heed to the things that we have heard, leſt at any time we let them ſlip. Heb. 2.1.

7. Seventhly and laſtly, which is the maine of all, and that is the holy Ghoſt. But the Comforter which is the holy Ghoſt, whom the Father will ſend in my Name, he ſhall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatſoever I have ſaid unto you, John 14.26.

WILFULL IMPENITENCY THE GROSSEST SELFE-MURDER.

All they who are guilty of it, apprehended, tryed, and condemned in these Sermons.

Preached at Rochford in Essex not long before his death, by that able, faithfull, and laborious Minister of Jesus Christ, Mr. William Fenner, B.D. and made publick by one of his unworthy fellow-labourers.

Prov. 1. 24, 25, 26.

Because I have called, and ye have refused, I have stretched out my hand, and no man regarded: but ye have set at naught all my counsell, and would none of my reproof, I will also laugh at your calamity, and mock when your fear cometh.

Joh. 5. 40. 43.

And ye will not come to me that ye might have life. I am come in my Fathers name, and ye receive me not; if another shall come in his owne name, him you will receive.

To the Right Honourable, ROBERT RICH,
Baron of Leez in Eſſex, and Earle of Warvvick:
Abundance of Spirituall Bleſſings in Jeſus Chriſt.

PAul being upon a Propheticall wing, (for the Lord had poured upon him, not onely an Apoſtolicall, but a Propheticall ſpirit) doth foretell in 2 Tim. 3. 1. that in the laſt dayes perillous times ſhould come; thoſe who are full of carnall ſelf-love and unthankfulneſſe, will much encreaſe the danger of this laſt age of the World; (the Lord root up all ſuch weeds out of our hearts.) This (know alſo (ſaith he) there's the infallible certainty of it.

God hath, I hope, given your Honour ſuch a meaſure of love to the Publique, and ſo active a ſpirit to doe good to others, as will help to leſſen the danger of theſe evill times. And I would be ſo thankfull for favours received, that I might not be ranked among this diſhonourable Catalogue which here Paul ſums up, of ſuch as make bad times worſe.

It is your Honours happineſſe and advantage (as it was once ſaid of the Duke of Guiſe in France, that he did put obligations upon all) that you can engage very many; and amongſt the reſt, I muſt ever acknowledge my ſelfe one, who in one of the greateſt turnings of my life, by the good hand of God upon me, in your free conſent and noble bounty, have had ſo much comfort, in the neareſt and deareſt relation, that I never envied any other, but find matter of everlaſting praiſes to God for his goodneſſe to my ſelfe therein. And being under ſo great obligations, when I can produce nothing of my own worthy your acceptance, I take leave to act the part of a Midwife to this happy Birth which may call your Honour Father, as will appeare by the following Letter, that it was ultimately intended for your ſpirituall advantage; and it were now a kind of ſacriledge to keep that holy Iſſue from you, that is ſo much your own. It joyes the ſouls of me and many more of Prov. 30. 12; 11, 12.

your praying ſervants, that they have ſo much occaſion to praiſe their God on your behalfe, for ſo many able and faithfull Miniſters of the Goſpell, of the firſt, ſecond, and third magnitude, that your prudent fatherly care hath fixed, where you as Patron have been truſted.

Oh the many Chariots and Horſemen of Iſrael, that your Noble Father and you have brought triumphantly into Eſſex! (herein you did happily Patrizare;) the Lord continue the like care to build and repaire his Houſe, in thoſe who ſurvive you from generation to generation, that ſo your Houſe may ſtill be honourably ſupported.

Eccleſiaſticall Story ſpeaks of one Henricus Auceps, when he did fight againſt the Hungarians, made this vow to God, That if the Lord would give him victory againſt his enemy, he would purge his Country from Simony, which at that time mightily abounded therein. We want men of ſuch an heroicall zealous diſpoſition in England.

2 Kings 13. 14, &c.

Oh that all Patrons were more mindfull of their high truſt; then they would not ſo often betray the ſouls of people by putting off a friend &c. with a Living to ſome unworthy Chaplain. Doubtleſſe there is many a damned creature roaring in Hell, curſing covetous Patrons as well as unfaithfull Paſtors; for whoſe Bloud (in part at leaſt) they muſt be accountable to the Father of ſpirits, and judge of quick and dead. A moſt heavy reckoning, when the ſinnes of ſo many Congregations, to which Patrons are acceſſary by ſending ignorant and ſcandalous Miniſters amongſt them, are made theirs; whereas the leaſt of their own ſinnes unrepented of, will ſink them eternally.

God who is faithfull, will not forget your labour and coſt of love to the truly reverend man of God, Mr. Hooker, (who is now ſinging Hallelujahs in heavenly Manſions) when he was perſecuted by the * Archi-flamen of Canterbury. He will pay abundantly for the protecting and nurſing his Children, Heb. 6 10.

* There are many of great reading, who will undertake to make it appeare, that as Heatheniſh Feaſts Bacchanalia & Saturnalia, &c. were turned into Chriſtmas and ſuch other Feaſts, hoping thereby to win Heathens to Chriſt; ſo were Archi-flamens and Flamins changed into Arch-prelates and prelates, out of a good intention.

I know not how better to expreſſe my deep ſenſe of your moſt reall favour (the comfort whereof I daily enjoy) then by taking the humble boldneſſe to beſeech your Honour to adde one thing more, which indeed is the unum neceſſarium, whereby you will gain that better part, which ſhall not be taken from you; Namely, that you would ſtudy and pray that you may walk in the light and heat of that glorious Goſpel-conſtellation (for Miniſters are Stars, and the Angels* of the Churches) which you have endeavoured to fixe in your Orbe. Your Honour hath been ſo often at Sea, and there beholding the wonders of God in the deep, have been taught to wreſtle with him for mercy. It is an old ſaying, He that vvould learn to pray, let him goe to Sea. Beſiege Heaven with your unwearied importunities, that the Ark of the Goſpel, which you have provided for thouſands, may be your own everlaſting Sanctuary. And that your feaſting upon their dainties, may be fat and flouriſhing in your laſt dayes, ſtanding ſtedfaſt in theſe ſhaking times, and immoveable, keeping faith and a good conſcience (which too many having put away, concerning Faith have made ſhipwrack) more and more abounding in the work of the Lord, for as much as you know your labour is not in vain in the Lord.

Luke 10.42. Rev. 1.20.

*So acknowledged by the Tranſlators in the contents of the 2. Chap. of the Revel. They, it ſeems, did not think theſe Angels to be Prelates. Qui neſcit orare diſcat navigare. Jonah 1.5.

This through the grace of Chriſt, ſhall be the earneſt Prayer of him who is,

My Lord,

Your Honours moſt obliged Servant,

Thomas Hill.

THE RIGHT WORSHIPFULL, My much Honoured Friend, Sir NATHANIEL RICH.

I Have been often thinking what to ſend to you; at laſt this Theme which I have lately treated of in the Pulpit came into my mind; its of infinite uſe and neceſſity, and a truth little examined, conſidered, or layed to heart, yet marvellous neceſſary for humiliation to all the children of God, and of great weight for the making the world guilty before God. I had thought to have ſent it to my Lord of Warwick for his ſubciſive houres; and if you judge it profitable, after your peruſal of it, to commit it unto him from me, you ſhall do well. I am ſorry to heare of ſuch a Worthies ſickneſſe or weakneſſe; 2 King. 13.14. Now Eliſha the man of God was fallen ſick; the very words are able to ſtrike through. The Lord lend you health, and ſtrength, and peace, and comfort, and joy; it is not only matter of courteſie to pray for ſuch as you are, but of debt, and our neceſſities and duties call for it, and mine more eſpecially. The Lord be mercifull to me, and to many in raiſing you up, and make you plenus dierum, and ſerus in cœlum redire; that's all the hurt that I wiſh you: And ſo I commend you to the word of his power that is able to keep you, and reſt

Yours in the Lord Jeſus,

WILLIAM FENNER.

To the Christian Reader, who desireth to hold fast the form of sound words in faith and love, which is in CHRIST JESUS; and to advance Free-grace above Free-will.

MOst admirably wise and fatherly hath been the Lords care of his Churches in all Ages; and when there were false Prophets under the Old Testament, the Lord had his Jeremiahs to confute them, whom he made a defenced City, an Iron Pillar, and Brazen wall against all opposition. When the Devil stirred up Hymeneus, Philetus, and others, to undermine the truths of the Gospel, in the times of the New Testament, the Lord raised and accomplished his Pauls to confound them. You shall finde when the Churches of Christ are in a wilderness condition, and the Serpent casts out of his mouth waters as a floud after the woman (that is, multitudes of unsound and Heretical opinions,) the earth helped the woman, and opened her mouth, and swallowed the floud which the Dragon cast out of his mouth: that is, Jesus Christ had those here that did encounter and overthrow all false Doctrine, with which the devil by his agents endeavoured to poyson and destroy the Churches. Thus it was in the four generall Councels, namely, that of Nice, when Arrius a Presbyter of Alexandria denying that the Son of God was consubstantial with the Father, and asserting that there was a time when he was not, was confuted, and truth obtained a victory there, God stirring up many learned men to oppose him.

1 Tim. 1. 20. Rev. 12. 15. 16.

See learned M. Mede in his excellent Book on the place.

1. About A.D. 330. under Constantine the great, vixn.

And in the second, that of Constantinople, when there was a Macedonius who called the Holy Ghost a creature, many were able by the power of truth to confound him.

2. About A.D. 384. under Theodosius.

And the third, when a Nestorius, who denyed that the Virgin Mary could be called the Mother of God, Providence ordered it so that then a Council of learned Bishops and Elders at Ephesus should blast that opinion. And when an Eutiches (who in a diffrent way from Nestorius, who denyed the personal Union of two Natures in Christ) would have the immensity of the Divine nature in Christ, and that there was onely the Divine nature in him, another Counsell at Calcedon overthrew him.

3. About A.D. 490. under Theodosius the second, not Θεοτόκον, but χριστότοκον. About A.D. 456. under Martianus Calcedon. Cent. 5

Thus God had variety of Champions to contest with the most subtile and prevailing adversaries, from hand to hand; particularly, when there was Manes & Manichæi, who rejected the old Testament, and affirmed that man fell not by voluntary defection, but of necessity, because mans body was made of the Prince of darkness (wherewith Austin was levened before his conversion) The Lord had Chrysostom and others to hinder the spreading and prevailing of it.

Cent. 4. When there was an Arrius, who denyed the Divinity of Chriſt, there ſhould be an Athanaſius raiſed to overthrow him.

Cent. 5. When a Macedonius to oppoſe the Holy Ghoſt, then a Baſil to break him. When a Pelagius to advance Free-will into the Throne of Free-grace, then God would raiſe up an Auſtin, (that great light of the Church in his time) to depoſe that, and to reſtore this to its crown and dignity.

Dempſterus ex Walſida refert, eodem die quo ille in Anglia natus, tenebras errorum toti mundo offudit, ſummũ Eccleſiæ lumen Auguſtinum in Africa emicuiſſe. Abſque A. D 418. Note.

This Pelagius was born in Brittaine the ſame day that Auſtine in Affrick, he was the firſt preſumptuous advancer of the pride of Free-will. He did not think the grace of God to be neceſſary for the helping of Free-will, for good things in every act. This was condemned in the councell of Carthage, wherein indeed to ſave himſelfe he did equivocate in the word grace, acknowledging a naturall, an exciting, and after converſion an aſſiſting grace. This Doctrine was likewiſe condemned in the Synod of Paleſtina, 1200 yeers agoe, and therein Arminianiſm kild before it was born, by the ſtrength of that place, 2 Tim. 1. 9.

Damnata antequam nata Arminii opinio.

This Pelagius had his Scholars, Julianus and Cæleſtinus. Jeſus Chriſt would not then leave Auſtin without ſome Diſciples to conflict with thoſe (as Chryſoſtom had his Oecumenius, and Theophylact his Pediſſequi, his followers) ſo was there a Proſper, and Hilary Arelatenſis, to encounter the old Maſſilians, and Semipelagians in France.

Vide learned Arch-Bi. Uſhers moſt excellent diſcourſe of free-will in his anſwer to the Jeſuits challenge. About. A. D. 529.

And when there was a Fauſtus Regienſis (a moſt ſubtil adverſary) a Biſhop who did cloſely defend Pelagianiſm in two Books of Free-will; The Church ſhould have a Fulgentius, and Petrus Diaconus, and others to oppoſe him. Yea ſentence was then given againſt Pelagius and Semi-pelagians, in the Councell of Orenge. In the generall, that their opinions touching free-will and free-grace, were not agreeable to the Catholick faith.

Further, about the yeer 850, one Johannes Scotus (not he which wrote upon the Sentences with ſo much oppoſition againſt Thomas Aquinas, but another) wrote a Book againſt Predeſtination, which the Church of Leyden confuted with a godly and learned book.

When Gotteſchalcus, about the yeer, 849. ſpake of Predeſtination perilouſly, to wit, That thoſe who were predeſtinated to life, by the decree of Gods predeſtination were forced to do well: and thoſe who were predeſtinated to condemnation, were forced by the decree of God to do evill, he was reſiſted by Hincmarus and other learned men.

This infectious errour Pelagianiſm ſpread in England, where it was apt to take the deeper rooting, becauſe Pelagius himſelfe by birth was a Britaine: But the Lord raiſed learned Bradwardine Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury and ſome others to appeare in the cauſe of God, and of free-grace, and to fortifie the Churches againſt all Pelagians, whom Auſtin calls Inimicos gratiæ dei; and Fulgentius, Vaſa iræ dei.

Afterwards the ſubtilty of the Serpent inſinuated himſelfe into the Garden of the Church by the wit and learning of Fauſtus Socinus (another Infauſtus Fauſtus in Poland;) They who have opportunity to conſult Socinus books de Miniſterio, and the Catechiſmus Cracovienſis,

(a most subtil and dangerous book) shall finde there the seeds of Arminianisme, their Helena, there to be conceived (how ever Molina and other Popish Authors contend, as once the seven Cities did whose Homer was) their Media Scientia. They will grant a Divina Præscientia, but deny decretum Divinum to passe upon all things, leaving the will to it selfe to produce its own acts, which indeed is no lesse then a degree of Atheisme, setting up the second cause into the Throne of the first. Herein, and in divers other things the Arminians do tread in their steps, as will appeare to those who examine Peltius his book the Harmony of the Socinian and Arminian Doctrine. I wish that book were in English; it would make many blush now adayes to see how incogitantly (I hope that is the worst in many) they have run themselves into the Tents of Socinians & Arminians, and know not now how honourably to retreat.

Peltius his harmony of Socin. and Armin. Note.

About the yeere 1570. when Petrus Baro a French man, had infected Cambridge with that disease from France, (you see spirituall as well as bodily evils have come from France) and one Mr. Barret, who acted concurrently with him: but then God giving the Heads of Colledges with the Vicechancellor a prudent Zeale to oppose it, they sent up Dr. Tindal and Dr. Whitaker, to complaine to Arch-B shop Whitgift, which begot that Usefull Book of Articuli Lambethani.*

Vide M. Prins Aantiarmin.

* Soone after this journey Dr. Whitakers (rightly called his Cygnea Cantio) discovered and confuted the chief points of Arminianisme.

blessed soul returned to her eternal rest, having not long before in an admirable Concio ad Clerum

The Leaven came then into the Netherlands, and (as learned King James saith) Arminins was the first that infected Leyden with the Pelagian Heresie.* He was a strong and cleare parted man; and as it is said of Origen, Ubi bene nemo melius, ubi male nemo pejus; so there are some excellent discourses in his Workes, and others as desperately opposite to the Covenant of Grace, spattering all the links of the Golden chaine of our salvation, which is the great evill of Arminianisme. From a young student, Junius presaged of him, that he would be a very usefull, or most pernicious instrument in the Church of Christ. By this Junius (when the Lord had converted him from Atheisme, by reading the beginning of the first Chapter of the Gospel of John, wherein he saw such Majesty, that he thought that the Lord did therein detonare ab alto) the Lord gave a soveraigne antidote to his Church in those parts, against the infection of Arminianisme. As about the same time, by that glorious light, Mr. Perkins in England, whom the Lord made a Malleus both of Papists and Arminians, and by more cleare and condescending discoveries of Christ, made the deep mysteries of speculative, and the heavenly secrets of Practical Divinity, to meet in the Pulpit; and all this in a little time; for he lived but about 44. yeares, being born (ni fallor) in the first, and dyed in the last of Queen Elizabeths reign. Oh how much did he in a little time?

* Pelagianism oft called Heresie. Vide Dr. Featly's preface to his Pelag. Red.

But still the Devill will be casting weeds into Christs garden, picking up those that have been rooted out, and throwing them over the wall againe.

Now

Now he made use of Barnevelt in Holland, to bring Religion to serve State purposes, and so carried on the Arminian designe there. These differences about the power of Free-will, and such things as hang upon that (for there is the Primum movens*) now came to be reduced to five Articles, which begate the conference at* Hague, betwixt both parties; which is reported both by Brandius and Bertius.

As the name Protestants given first to the Princes and free cities of Germany that sought Reformation in the Diet at Spira, A D. 1529. and from them passed to us and other countries where it was effected.

About this time came up the name of Remonstrants, as the name Protestant had formerly. Whereupon Dr. Ames once Fellow of Christ Colledge in Cambridge, but in Dr. Caries time then Master of that place, it grew too hot for him, he not complying with the present ceremonies, and having Preached a Sermon at the University Church against playing at cards, which would not then be born) was by the disposing hand of divine Providence carried into those parts, where (as the Austin of that time and place) he did grapple with all the Patrons of Free-will. And as an Appendix to that conference at Hagu, (as it is set forth by Brandius) writ that most excellent book of his Coronis. But still Arminius his disciples acted to their utmost. Bertius, Grevinconius, and others, so distracted those Churches, that there was a necessity of calling a Synod, which God gave them as a happy remedy, An. Dom. 1618.

Synod of Dort A. D. 1618.

Oh the unwearied activity of adversaries to the cause of Christ! (which should make others blush to move so heavily in asserting the doctrine of Free-grace) before we could understand what the Anti-remonstrants in the Synod at Dort fully intended, we had from the Remonstrants Acta Synodalia, a book indeed that required an Ames to answer it (which he hath done most learnedly) where you have Magnum in Parvo, a great soul in a little body, a great deale of form in a little matter (as in his Bellarminus enervatus) that being done by the Fraternity with concurrent endeavours and quintessence of the best wits amongst the Remonstrants.

About the yeere 1627. Mr. Montague a man of great learning, and being backed by the then potent D. of Buckingham, opened his Arminian (and I had almost said Popish) pack, when the Lord used Bishop Carleton, Doctor Featly, Doctor Preston, and others, as happy Instruments to discover his adulterate wares.

Lately there sprung up a new brood of such as did assert Arminianisme, as Dutch Tompson fellow of Clare-Hall, Mr. Will. Chappel fellow of Christ-Coll. as the many Pupills that were Arminianized under his tuition shew, (whether by him or no, he best knows) but men are more confirmed in their suspition hereof, since they heard of his answerable actings in the University in Irel. but still as in Oxford, when there was any danger of spreading Armin. whether in Acts, Books, or Sermons, they had there Robert Abbot, Twisse, Prideaux, and other works to suppresse them: So in Cambridge God gave us lately Davenant and Ward, who did victoriously enter the lists with the most confident adversaries of Free-grace. And that bitter weeds could never take deep rooting in any of these three kingd. and thrive very fruitfully; there was in Ireland a most learned Arch Bishop Usher to crush it there, and a mighty man in these Controversies, Doctor Twisse (another Austin) to suppresse it in England. As learned and industrious M. Rutherford and others have done their parts successefully in Scotland. But alas Arminius now appears amongst us, not so much in the Schooles and Pulpits, as in popular meetings. who were after primæ magnitudinis.

For as Zanchius complained with much regret of the Lutheran Ubiquitaries, that he found them ubique, every where to vex and molest him so may we grieve, (O that we could with brokennesse of heart bewaile it) that our Universalists, are almost universally spread amongst us; It is gotten into our Netherlands, much into the fenny and moorish parts of this kingdome, yea amongst many people that love Jesus Christ, and therefore entertaine it, as conceiving it most for his Honour (the more are they to be pitied, and to be instructed with a spirit of meekenesse; shew them by Scripture evidence this is not Gods way of advancing Christ, and you recover them) it is now in Popular hands, we need such worthies as the Author of this following Treatise (blessed be the Father of mercy, the Fountain of every good and perfect gift, for his and many others fruitfull labours) who may condescend to parley with poore Christians at their Tables, in their shops, to follow them at the plow (as Reverend Mr. Greenham was wont to do) endeavouring to rectifie and reduce them. 2 Tim. 2. 24.

He knew how to deale wisely with subtile adversaries, that he might have the more advantage against them, grants them as much as he could with consistency to his own principles, that so he might the more easily confound theirs; only you will be so candid as to consider that herein he speaks ad populum; And therefore as the ancient Fathers, often useth the liberty of speaking like a Preacher, rather then as a Doctor of the Chaire. Πρὸς ἀνθρώπους, non δογματικῶς.

I reckon this a very strong argument to confute the power of Free-will to any spiritull action in a gracious manner, the wofull experience of mine owne wretched heart, being naturally so desperately wicked, opposite to any spirituall good. But this will not convince others; only by the way I would know how it comes to passe, if Arminius Doctrine be true, that we have Free-will, to choose that which is truly good, why Arminians are not all very good men? Will not this be an aggravation against them at the dreadfull day of judgement? Jer. 17. 9. Note. Note.

Therefore the Lord is most admirably gratious in giving us such Masters of the Assemblies to fasten such Scripture-truths as may hold us fast and close under the Covenant of Grace. Eccles. 12. 11.

He was a blessing to the Colledge where he was fellow, of Pembroke Hall in Cambridge (which hath been a fruitfull nursery to this Church, and an ornament to the University and after a burning and shining light in Staffordshire. He delighted much in preaching in an Evangelicall way from place to place, as pittying many poor pining seduced soules under blind and superstitious Ministers. The Lord fill their hearts with compassion to them, who have power in their hands to supply them, that so millions do not perish for want of vision. John 5. 35.

Afterwards the noble Earl of Warwick fixed him at Rochford in Essex, where he did speak and do great things to the honor of Free-grace. He lived there more by acting vigorously to his great Lord and Master Jesus Christ, in a few yeares, then most of us his Brethren do in many.

It is not enough loqui magna, unless we do magna vivere, as Erasm.

O that we who are left behind in these conflicting times, could more punctually and closely follow his example? Is it not studying the groundlesse topperies of Popery, nor the immersing our minds wholy into some dry disputes concerning some externalls and formes about Religion, (as too many do now adayes being engaged in a party) that will spiritualize us or our hearts, so much as Studying and Preaching over the Covenant of Grace; The mysterious and heavenly secrets of the Gospel rightly openly and wisely applyed, will by God's blessing breed a Gospel spirit in thee, leave a gracious tincture upon the spirits of Teachers and Hearers; whereas possibly for want of this, there may be a legall tartnesse and severity in the Spirits and Tongues of able and good men.

The gracious and powerfull Lord who only teacheth to profit, annoynt all his Saints with that holy unction that they may be able to discern of things that differ, clearly to distinguish betwixt truth and error. And that he may to this and other happy purposes, blesse abundantly this savourly, acute, and solid Treatise, shall be the earnest Prayer of him,

Who is thine in and for the Lord Jesus,

Thomas Hill.

The Groſſeſt SELF-MURDER.

EZEK. 18. 31, 32.

For why will ye die, O ye houſe of Iſrael? &c.

THe wicked in this Chapter diſpute againſt God; The Fathers have eaten ſowre grapes, and the childrens teeth are ſet on edge. Our Fathers have ſinned, and we are puniſhed: a common cavill in every naturall mans heart, when it's urged. Adam fell, and his poor Poſterity ſmart for it: If God will needs damn us, he may, we have no power for to help it: for Who hath reſiſted his will? This is mans Syllogiſm. God, who might ſend man to hell for anſwer, anſwers calmly: The diviſion of the Text.

Gods calm anſwer to their forward cavils in particulars.

1. By abjuration; As I live, ſaith the Lord, ye ſhall not have occaſion to uſe this Proverb any more in Iſrael, verſe 3.

2. By an Aſſertion: The ſoul that ſinneth, it ſhall die, verſe 4. No ſoul ſhall die but only the ſame that doth ſinne.

3. By explication of himſelfe: If a man doe that which is right, he ſhall live, verſe 5,6. If he have been never ſo wicked, yet if he returne, he ſhall not die, verſe 21.

4. By appealing to their conſciences: Have I any pleaſure at all that the wicked ſhould die, ſaith the Lord, and not that he ſhould returne and live? verſe 23. Have I any pleaſure? I appeale to all your conſciences, Have I any pleaſure at all, that the wicked ſhould die?

5. By retorting: Heare now, O houſe of Iſrael, Is not my way equall? or, Are not your wayes rather unequall? verſe 25.

6. By a Concluſion: Therefore I will judge you, O houſe of Iſrael, every one according to his wayes, verſe 30.

7. By a finall deciſion of the whole Contraverſie: Repent and turn your ſelves, &c. ſo iniquity ſhall not be your ruine: Caſt away from you all, &c. For why will ye die, &c.

Where we have theſe foure things. Four things very obſervable.

1. God diſclaimes all cauſe of their damnation from his ſecret will: I have no pleaſure in the death of him that dyeth.

2. He removes all cauſe of their deſtruction from his revealed will: Repent and turn your ſelves, &c. ſo iniquity ſhall not be your ruine; Caſt away, &c.

3. He diſavowes all cauſe of their deſtruction from his permiſſive will, as though that were guilty, or acceſſory to it; they can have no colour why they are not wrought upon; Make you a new heart, and a new ſpirit. Make;

The fault lies not at his door; no, it lies at your door, Make you a new heart.

4. He casts all the cause of their destruction upon ther own rebellious wills: Why will ye die, O house of Israel?

1. What is the cause you live in your sinnes, and die and perish in your sinnes? Is it because I am not mercifull? You know I am gracious, and full of mercy, and ready to forgive; why then, why will ye die, O house of Israel?

Israels perdition not from God but from it self.

2. Is it because I am swift to revenge? you know I am slow to anger, and give you a warning before I consume you; why then will ye die, O house of Israel?

3. Is it because I will destroy you for Ahaz, or Manasses, or Zedekiahs, or Adams sinne, quasi canis peccatum sus dependeret? you know that if the Son walk not in the Fathers sinne, I use to receive him, you can bear me witnesse; I call you to a new covenant: Why then will ye die, O house of Israel?

Rev. 13.8. Joh. 3.16.

4. Is it because ye have no Saviour? You know that the Lamb of God Christ Jesus was slain for you from the beginning of the world, that you may be saved upon faith.

5. Is it because ye have no power? ye know I offer you grace and power, and ye will not have it: Why then will ye die?

Id unum vos accusat, respicere non vultis.

6. Some Authors alledge five why's more. Why will ye, &c. Is it for this cause, or that cause, or that? Or what cause is it? No cause on Gods side; no, ye may thank your own wills if you perish; this, this only accuseth you, you will not be ruled: you are careless of God, Christ, Grace, and you will be so; ye are vain, and carnall, and be obstinate, and ye will be so. Woe unto thee, O Jerusalem; wilt thou not be made clean? when shall it once be? Jer. 13.27. He does not say, Wo unto thee Jerusalem, canst thou not be made clean? but wilt thou not be made clean?

Presuppositions not to be mistaken.

1 Presupposition not to be mistaken.

Licet aliquis non possit gratiam adipisci qui reprobatur à deo; tamen quod in hoc vel illud peccatum labatur, ex ejus libero arbitrio contingit, unde & merito sibi in culpam imputatur. Aq. par. 1. qu. 3. Art. 3 resp. tertium Arg. 23.

1. It's true, that a wicked man cannot repent, nor be converted of himself; but this cannot, does not hinder him. If a wicked mans cannot did hinder him, he might excuse himselfe before the Tribunall of Christ, Lord, thou knowest I did my best, I would have been ruled by thy word, but I could not; I would have been humbled and reformed better then I was, but I could not: If a wicked mans cannot did hinder him, he might excuse himself thus: But alas, he is not able to say thus, without peremptory lying; Lord, I could not choose but doe wickedly: I acted most wretchedly, but I could not otherwise choose. Though it was not in thy power not to be born in originall sinne, yet who necessitated thee to commit such grosse actuall sinnes? In Prov. 1.29. they hated knowledge, they did not choose the feare of the Lord They did not use any liberty of will to choose that which was good. What, was it because they could not? No, for albeit they could not, yet that was not the cause: No, They would none of my counsell, they despised all my reproof, verse 30. Mark; The reason why they did not choose, was not because they could not choose, but because they would not.

2. Presup.

Its true, God doth not give them power to believe, and to be renewed: but can they say, Though I would seriously, God would not? were they able to say thus? Though I desired heartily, God would not give me grace; then they had some colour to cast it upon God: I would, but God would not: But they cannot cast it upon him. How often would I have gathered thee together even as the Hen gathereth her chickens, but thou wouldst not, I would, said God; but you would not; nay, How often would I but you would not? Matth. 23. 37. Though God be not so willing as to give them all power to believe and be saved; yet he is aforehand with them.

3. Presup.

Its true, if the wicked should will as far as they are able to will, yet their will were not able full out; but this doth not excuse them, because God alwayes wayes reſolved to be aforehand with them. Indeed, as in Matth. 25.29. God gives his ſervants this rule by which he ever goes towards them, Unto every one that hath ſhall be given, and he ſhall have abundance; ſpeaking of things in eodem genere. But to apply it to a man in the ſtate of nature, is to ſay, Grace is given according to works: which is the very dreggs of Pelagianiſm. Yet however, all this is a moſt encouraging intimation. Let any man uſe the power that God gives him, and he ſhall have more; as he that takes paines for Learning: As he that uſeth meanes to increaſe his eſtate, may find in ordinary providence, that the hand of the diligent makes rich. He that uſeth a penny well, makes it two pence; he that uſeth two pennies very well, makes it a groat.

Mat. 25. 29.

Facienti quod in ſe eſt, deus facit quod in ſe eſt. Pelagia Er. Prov 10 4 & 10 22.

So that, though there be not ſuch an Infallibilis nexus, that God hath bound himſelf in the uſe of our naturall abilities to adde ſupernaturall graces; yet undoubtedly he will never be wanting to promote any good work, till men neglect or contemn. And this leaves men wholly without excuſe, and ſhewes, it is not their cannot, but their will not, which betrayes them to their ſpirituall loſſes; namely, their wilfull rejecting of Gods gracious offers.

It's true, God gives the wicked but one Talent, when he giveth his children foure, two at the leaſt; but they cannot ſay, he is auſtere, reaping where he ſowed not, gathering where he ſtrowed not. No, There's the ſame proportion between one Talent, and gathering one more, as there is between two, and the gathering of two others &c.

4 Preſup.

You know that they are ready to complaine, as Chriſt ſhewes it in the Parable. Lord I knew that thou waſt an hard man, reaping where thou haſt not ſown, and gathering where thou haſt not ſtrowed: But ye remember alſo the Lords anſwer, Thou wicked and ſlothfull ſervant, &c. *Mat.*25.26. Marke, he caſts the blame upon his wilfulneſſe, that he would not take pains for to trade. So the wicked complain, Alas, God hath not ſown any power of converſion in my heart, and will he look for to reap it? This is, auſtereneſſe and hardneſſe of dealing. Oh thou wicked and ſlothfull ſervant, &c. Why didſt thou not trade with the Talent that I gave thee? One Talent ſhould beget one, as well as two beget two, &c. But I gave thee wit, and thou buriedſt it in the earth, and haſt been earthly with it. I gave thee knowledge, and thou haſt hid it in the earth, and not traded for reformation according to it, &c. Alas, thou canſt not plead a cannot, but only a will not.

Its true, that if one wicked mans wil be more willing then another, it is not from himſelf but from God. For what haſt thou that thou haſt not received? 1 Cor.4.7. Its God that maketh one wicked man to differ from another in goodneſſe, and to be better then another. One wicked man is a drunkard, and another is better, &c. One wicked man is more wilfull, another is leſſe. Its God that makes this difference; yet notwithſtanding its his own fault, that he is not ſo good as his neighbour, eſpecially when he ſits under better helpes then his neighbour. The men of Niniveh ſhall riſe up againſt this generation, and ſhall condemn it, becauſe they repented at the preaching of Jonah, and behold, a greater then Jonah is here. See, this generation was worſe then Niniveh; Niniveh repented a great way, even in ſackcloth and aſhes; but this generation doth not. I grant, it was God that did make them doe more then this generation doth doe. For all would be alike wilfull, if it were not for him. But yet this generation cannot plead in judgement, Lord, thou waſt not ſo gracious unto us, as to Niniveh; No, Jeſus Chriſt expreſſely telleth them, Niniveh ſhall riſe up in judgement againſt them, q. d. Niniveh was not ſo wilfull as you. Niniveh would, but you would not. Our Saviour Chriſt aſcribes it to their wilfulneſſe, that they were not ſo willing as Niniveh. Niniveh would, but you would not. Thus you ſee the ſuppoſitions, which I beſeech you remember as we goe, leſt perhaps you miſtake us.

5 Preſup. 1 Cor.4.7.

Mat.12.41.

The reaſon why the wicked doe not repent nor come out of their ſinnes, is not be- Doct.

cauſe they cannot (though they cannot) but becauſe they will not.

Act. 5. 3. Peter ſaith to Ananias, Why hath Satan filled thy heart to lie to the holy Ghoſt, to keep back part of the price of the Land? Was it not once in thy power? Before thou didſt promiſe, 'twas in thy power whether thou wouldſt promiſe or no; did any force thee to promiſe? and when thou hadſt promiſed, did any squeeze the lie out of thy tongue, that thou ſhouldeſt tell a lie to the Holy Ghoſt? did any drag thy fingers to the money, and force thee to handle it? No, thou wouldſt lie, and thou wouldſt finger it.

Seven Demonſtrations to prove this.

1 Demonſt. 1. The wicked think they have power, and yet they will not doe according to their thoughts. What's the reaſon they preſume to repent another time, but becauſe they think they have power? what's the reaſon they hope to repent on their death beds, but becauſe they think they have power; or at leaſt, that they are able to beg power of Chriſt Jeſus? Now by their own thoughts God will convince them, that they doe not [illegible] not; like the ſluggard, Yet a little ſ little more folding of the hands to ſleep; enough, and doe all his buſineſſe e're therefore does he preſume to lie a [illegible] out of thy ſinnes yet, time enough yet thou art able to ſhift for Heaven a[illegible] make a good old man, and a young whore-maſter can plead, Did not D[illegible] could get up againe as well as he. [illegible] though he were able to repent as wel[illegible] he repent at laſt gaſpe? as though h[illegible] they can leave off their ſinnes for a [illegible] doe not, is only becauſe they will not. of his own in his purſe, and yet will n[illegible] the reaſon he will not open his pur[illegible] thinks he hath it, and can; but he wi[illegible] formed, is, thou wilt not.

1 Demonſt. 1. The wicked thinke they have power to repent.

Prov. 6. 10. All the free will mongers reaſon why they do not repent is becauſe they will not. Out of their own mouth will God condemn them.

Luk. 23 40.

2 Demon. 2. They will not try. 2. Demonſtration; becauſe thou canſt or no. Therefore thou doſt [illegible] a Maſter bids his ſervant carry a Sack but cannot you try, ſayes his Maſter, try; why then he is wilfull; if his M[illegible] to carry it, it were ſomething, then [illegible] when he will not be at the paines to try, will not, thou doſt not every day in arenam deſcendere, [illegible] thou doſt not ſtudy and labour every day to ſhun all temptations, and prevent all thy ſins, thou doſt not go about the cleanſing of thy Family, the purging of thy Houſe, thou wilt not go about it, and therefore the reaſon is, becauſe thou wilt not. Nay its all one whether thou haſt power yea or no. To what end ſhould God give thee power? for thou wilt not uſe it. Nay, how doſt thou know but when thou goeſt about it, thou mayeſt meet with ſome power? but thou wilt not try; cut down thy drunken ſign, and try; never let drinking and ſwilling be in thy houſe, and try, ſet up conſtant holy conferences and try, frequent Prayer in thy Cloſet and try, &c. But I have try'd again and again, and yet it will not do; every day try though, ſi crebro jacias aleas, aliud jecexis, though thou haſt thrown the Dye a hundred times, yet next time may be thou ſhalt throw a good caſt; But thou wilt not try: I would have healed Babel, but ſhe would not be healed. The field of the ſlothfull is all grown over with Thorns, and Nettles had covered all the face thereof, and the ſtone wall thereof was broken down, Prov. 24. 31. What's the reaſon he hath hath not a good crop? becauſe the ground would not bear it? No, how does he know? he will not try, he will not plow it, and harrow it, and weed it, and manure it, and ſow it, he will not try, therefore 'tis becauſe he will not.

3. Demonſtration. God offers thee many good motions of power: I will help thee, and I will inable thee, and thou wilt not be helped: God caſts in theſe good motions, and thou caſts them out. Stand ye in the waies, and ſo ask for the old paths, and walk therein, and ye ſhall find reſt to your ſoules; but they ſaid, We will not walk therein. O doe but ask for the good way, and labour to walk in it, Ile help you, and aſsiſt you; but we will not, ſay they. I ſet Watchmen over you, ſaying, Hearken to the ſound of the trumpet, but they ſaid, We wil not hearken, ver 17. This is plain Engliſh, as we ſay, you will not; ye have preaching every Sabbath, and every week, but ye will not; God ſends you good motions every day and houre, but ye will not; when a beggar will not be helpt, why does he ſtarve? what becauſe he cannot chooſe? no, he ſtarves becauſe he will ſtarve.

Thou ſhalt heare one day of this diſmall watch-word, Give account of thy ſtewardſhip, for thou mayſt be no longer ſteward. What doſt thou talking of thy want of power? I could not doe this, and I could not doe that; where are my goods that I lent thee? give account for thy memory. Lord, I remember this and that tale, this & that bawble; thou evill & unprofitable ſervant thou, and why couldſt thou not remember my Commandements as well? give account for thy wit. Lord I have contrived buſineſſes, bargaines with it, I have jeſted, quirped, been merry with it; thou evill and unprofitable ſervant thou, why wouldſt thou not be witty for God, and for the good of thy ſoul? &c. God hath given a great deale of power more then ever thou bringeſt to act, and therefore thou art wilfull.

5 Demonſtration; the more power thou haſt to repent, the more thy will is againſt it. The more meanes that God doth vouchſafe, the more Preaching, the more knowledge, the more reproofs, the more enlightnings, the more power thou haſt to repent, the more thy will is againſt it. Bernard ſayes, ſuch a one is cauſe they cannot (though they cannot) but becauſe they will not.

Act. 5. 3. Peter ſaith to Ananias, Why hath Satan filled thy heart to lie to the holy Ghoſt, to keep back part of the price of the Land? Was it not once in thy power? Before thou didſt promiſe, 'twas in thy power whether thou wouldſt promiſe or no; did any force thee to promiſe? and when thou hadſt promiſed, did any squeeze the lie out of thy tongue, that thou ſhouldeſt tell a lie to the Holy Ghoſt? did any drag thy fingers to the money, and force thee to handle it? No, thou wouldſt lie, and thou wouldſt finger it.

Seven Demonſtrations to prove this.

1 Demonſt. 1 The wicked thinke they have power to repent.

1. The wicked think they have power, and yet they will not doe according to their thoughts. What's the reaſon they preſume to repent another time, but becauſe they think they have power? what's the reaſon they hope to repent on their death beds, but becauſe they think they have power; or at leaſt, that they are able to beg power of Chriſt Jeſus? Now by their own thoughts God will convince them, that they doe not give over their ſinnes, becauſe they will not; like the ſluggard, Yet a little more ſleep, yet a little more ſlumber, yet a little more folding of the hands to ſleep; the ſluggard, he thinks he can riſe time enough, and doe all his buſineſſe e're night, though he lie a little longer, and therefore does he preſume to lie a while longer: So thou art loath to come out of thy ſinnes yet, time enough yet, thinkſt thou; thou haſt ſecret thoughts, thou art able to ſhift for Heaven afterwards, Tuſh, an unhappy youth may make a good old man, and a young Saint an old Divell. Hence it is that the whore-maſter can plead, Did not David commit adultery too? as though he could get up againe as well as he. The drunkard, was not Noah drunk? as though he were able to repent as well as he. The Thief on the Croſſe, Did not he repent at laſt gaſpe? as though he could ſhift as well at laſt: ſo they think they can leave off their ſinnes for a need; and therefore the reaſon why they doe not, is only becauſe they will not. He that thinks he hath a hundred pound of his own in his purſe, and yet will not give a poor body a half penny: what's the reaſon he will not open his purſe to give? becauſe he cannot? No, he thinks he hath it, and can; but he will not; So the reaſon why thou art not reformed, is, thou wilt not.

Prov. 8. 10. All the fre will mongers reaſon why they do not repent is becauſe they will not. Out of their own mouth will God condemn them.

Luk. 23. 40.

2 Demon. 2. They will not try.

2. Demonſtration; becauſe thou doſt not ſo much as try whether thou canſt or no. Therefore thou doſt not ſtick at a cannot, but a will not; when a Maſter bids his ſervant carry a Sack of Corn to the Mill; I cannot, ſayes he; but cannot you try, ſayes his Maſter, cannot you goe about it? no, he will not try; why then he is wilfull; if his Maſter ſhould ſee him ſweating and ſtriving to carry it, it were ſomething, then he would ſay he ſtuck at a cannot; but when he will not be at the paines to try, he ſticks at a will not. So thou ſtickſt at a will not, thou doſt not every day in arenam deſcendere, ſweat at good duties, thou doſt not ſtudy and labour every day to ſhun all temptations, and prevent all thy ſins, thou doſt not go about the cleanſing of thy Family, the purging of thy Houſe, thou wilt not go about it, and therefore the reaſon is, becauſe thou wilt not. Nay its all one whether thou haſt power yea or no. To what end ſhould God give thee power? for thou wilt not uſe it. Nay, how doſt thou know but when thou goeſt about it, thou mayeſt meet with ſome power? but thou wilt not try; cut down thy drunken ſign, and try; never let drinking and ſwilling be in thy houſe, and try, ſet up conſtant holy conferences and try, frequent Prayer in thy Cloſet and try, &c. But I have try'd again and again, and yet it will not do; every day try though, ſi crebro jacias aleas, aliud jeceris, though thou haſt thrown the Dye a hundred times, yet next time may be thou ſhalt throw a good caſt; But thou wilt not try: I would have healed Babel, but ſhe would not be healed. The field of the ſlothfull is all grown over with Thorns, and Nettles had covered all the face thereof, and the ſtone wall thereof was broken down, Prov. 24. 31. What's the reaſon he

hath not a good crop? becauſe the ground would not bear it? No, how does he know? he will not try, he will not plow it, and harrow it, and weed it, and manure it, and ſow it, he will not try, therefore 'tis becauſe he will not.

3. Demonſtration. God offers thee many good motions of power: I will help thee, and I will inable thee, and thou wilt not be helped: God caſts in theſe good motions, and thou caſts them out. Stand ye in the waies, and ſo ask for the old paths, and walk therein, and ye ſhall find reſt to your ſoules; but they ſaid, We will not walk therein. O doe but ask for the good way, and labour to walk in it, Ile help you, and aſsiſt you; but we will not, ſay they. I ſet Watchmen over you, ſaying, Hearken to the ſound of the trumpet, but they ſaid, We wil not hearken, ver 17. This is plain Engliſh, as we ſay, you will not; ye have preaching every Sabbath, and every week, but ye will not; God ſends you good motions every day and houre, but ye will not; when a beggar will not be helpt, why does he ſtarve? what becauſe he cannot chooſe? no, he ſtarves becauſe he will ſtarve. O ſayſt thou, I doe heare the Word, and I cannot heare it better; I doe pray daily and I cannot pray better, &c. Thus thou retorteſt upon God, as the unprofitable ſervant, Lo, there thou haſt that is thine: Lo, here's the beſt faith thy ſpirit helpes me to, here's the beſt obedience that thy power enabled me to, &c Lo, there thou haſt that is thine, thou helpeſt me with no more, I was not able to do better; quo ore poteſt hoc dicere? ſayes Gualter, with what face canſt thou ſay thus? is this all that God hath offered to enable thee? ah thou wilfull creature; The Lord hath offered to helpe thee to a thouſand times more, but thou wouldſt not be helped.

3 Demon. They refuſe the help which God offers.

Jer. 5. 16.

Mat. 25. 2.

4 Demonſtration. God hath not only offered thee power to do more, and thou wilt not take it but alſo given thee more power, and thou wilt not uſe it, and therefore the reaſon why thou doſt not, is becauſe thou wilt not; God hath given thee one talent of power at the leaſt; why doſt not thou put it out to the mercchandizers and occupy with it? τάλαντον ἐκάστῳ δύναμις, ſayes Chryſ. The power that God hath vouchſafed thee is thy talent. Why didſt not thou imploy it to the utmoſt? every Sermon gives thee a new power, a new price? ſo every good counſell gives thee a new power; what art thou better? every bleſsing thou haſt had, gives thee a new power, wherein art thou purer? does God give thee but eyes? thou haſt more power to glorifie him then he that hath none, &c. Every mercy helps thee with a new power; but wherein doſt thou uſe it? God hath given thee a good memory, how haſt thou ſtuft it? means and maintenance, how haſt thou honoured God? why, &c. thine own conſcience accuſeth thee, thou haſt waſted his goods, waſted them upon belly and back, which have devoured more thoughts then ever his worſhip could have, thou haſt waſted them upon thy credit in the world, and thy pleaſure, and thy luſts, and thy fleſhly deſires. How is it that I heare this of thee? Thou ſhalt heare one day of this diſmall watch-word, Give account of thy ſtewardſhip, for thou mayſt be no longer ſteward. What doſt thou talking of thy want of power? I could not doe this, and I could not doe that; where are my goods that I lent thee? give account for thy memory. Lord, I remember this and that tale, this & that bawble; thou evill & unprofitable ſervant thou, and why couldſt thou not remember my Commandements as well? give account for thy wit. Lord I have contrived buſineſſes, bargaines with it, I have jeſted, quirped, been merry with it; thou evill and unprofitable ſervant thou, why wouldſt thou not be witty for God, and for the good of thy ſoul? &c. God hath given a great deale of power more then ever thou bringeſt to act, and therefore thou art wilfull.

4 Demon. And will not uſe the power which he hath given.

Luke 16. 2.

5 Demonſtration; the more power thou haſt to repent, the more thy will is againſt it. The more meanes that God doth vouchſafe, the more Preaching, the more knowledge, the more reproofs, the more enlightnings, the more power thou haſt to repent, the more thy will is againſt it. Bernard ſayes, ſuch a one is a perverse man that God is faine to say to, quid faciam tibi ? What shall I doe unto thee? O Ephraim, what shall I doe unto thee ? for thy righteousnesse goes away like the dew. Hos. 6.4. The more meanes thou enjoyest, the more thy righteousnesse goes away; one would think the more the Sun-shine of the Gospell ariseth, the more your righteousnesse should encrease; it goes the more away, like the dew the more the Sun riseth, the more it vanisheth away; many of you, the more Preaching you have, the farther ye are off, a man might be acquainted with you heretofore, but now that you have been soundly rebuked for your sinnes, the further you flye off: some of you that were somewhat forward heretofore, are mockers now; some of you that were somewhat towardly heretofore, are more covetous, and wasfish, and Passionate, and Worldly: like the weeds, the more they are pluckt up, the more they doe grow; or like the earth, the more it is washed, the dirtier it proves: so the more meanes ye have to be enabled to good, the wilfuller ye are.

5 Demon. They grow worſe by the means.

Hos. 6.4.

6 Demon. Their cannot is voluntary. A Morall impotency.

6 Demonstration; because they cannot, is a voluntary cannot; thou hast wilfully brought the most part of thy cannot upon thee. I cannot give to the poore sayest thou; yea, but thou hadst it once, and thou hast wilfully spent it; thou hadst Lands, and Meanes, and commings in, but thou hast spent it at the Ale-house; thou hast consumed it on the game-house. Thus thy cannot, is a voluntary cannot, causa causæ est causa causati: thy will was the cause of thy cannot, and therefore thy will, is the acuse of thy not giving to the poore. I cannot read, sayes one, and no marvaile if I be ignorant; but thy Parents would have set thee to Schoole, and thou wouldst be a trewant, therefore art willingly ignorant; I cannot remember a Sermon, sayes another, no wonder though I repeat it not in my Family but forget it as I do: but thou hast willingly ram'd it with matters of the World, or hast weakned it with drinking, and therefore thou art wilfully forgetfull, &c. The unprofitable servant was curst that had layd up his pound safe in a Napkin: he did not lessen it, nor imbezele it, but only layd it up. and yet he was curst because he did not διπλῶν περσεργάζειν, sayes Chrysost. he was cursed because he did not double his pound; ah the woful estate that thou art in; if he were accursed that did lay up his pound, what shall become of thee that dost lessen it? he did not double his abilities, and therefore he was cursed; thou dost not only not double thy abilities, but thou dost lessen them. God hath inabled thee to do many a thing, and now thou art not able, thou hast willingly lessened thine ability; now then thou canst not excuse thy self that thou canst not, because thou hast brought this cannot on thy self: Thou canst not weep at a Sermon, but thou couldst once, thou canst not resist such a lust, but thou couldst once, and thou hast willingly brought this cannot on thy soul, and therefore this is all the cause, because that thou wilt not.

Luke 19.20. Chrysost.

Jer. 5.31

7. Demonstration. May be thou canst not; yea, but thou art contented with thy cannot; thou canst not be holy, and thou art contented not to be; thou canst not crucifie thy lust, and thou art contented with this cannot, nay thou wouldst not be able. Sir, I tell you how you may put up this injury if you will; but Sir you shall not make me put it up; I will not be directed by you, as it was with desperate Judah, my people love to have it so. Thou art carnal, and thou lovest to be so; were a man in the stocks, and not able to get out, yet if he be contented to be there though he cannot get out, that is not the reason of his staying, but he will not; thou canst not walk humbly and holily, and thou lovest to have it so; what would you have me so pure forsooth? So then the reason is because that thou wilt not; if thy will were not it, thou wouldst never be content with thy cannot; the congregation is bad, and thou lovest to have it so, the more custome thou shalt have for thy Ale-house; like a bad Clerke of the Assizes, I heard one speak it my self, he was glad there was so many Rogues, he had the more money; so some of you are glad there be so many ny frequenters of the Ale-bench, ye have the more cuſtome, ye love to have it ſo, ye cannot reforme the ſinnes of one another, and ye love to have it ſo.

The Preſuppoſitions premiſed, and the Demonſtrations prefixed, it followes now that I lay down the ground of this neceſſary truth.

(Scil.)

The reaſon why a wicked man doth not turn unto God, is not becauſe he cannot, (though he cannot) but becauſe he will not.

He cannot ſay this at the day of Judgement, Lord, thou knoweſt I left every ſin that I could, and I took all the beſt courſes that I could to become a new creature, but I could not. A wicked man ſhall not be able to ſay thus without lying. The man in the Goſpel that had not on the wedding garment, could he ſay, Lord, I was not able to go to the ſhop of the Goſpell to ſeeke one? No, he was ſpeechleſſe, Matth. 22.12. God finds out the hypocrite, though but one, and when once diſcovered, he is confounded and ſilenced with the guilt of his own wilfulneſſe.

The firſt Ground.

The firſt Ground is this, which is obſerved by our learned Divines at the Synod at Dort, namely, Art. 3 & 4 its refut. 3 error. poſit.

Every man can do more good then he does, and ſhun more evill then he does, though I confeſſe not in a gracious manner. If I can prove this to be true, it will neceſſarily follow, that the reaſon why a wicked man does not returne, is not becauſe he cannot, but onely becauſe he will not.

Arguments to prove it.

1. Conſider, if a man can do more good then he doth, nothing can hinder him from doing more then he does but his will. when the fire can burne more, it doth burne more, becauſe it hath no will to come between the power of burning and the act of burning to ſuſpend it. The fire is a naturall agent, and therefore burnes as much as it can: but a man is a voluntary agent, and therefore when he can do a thing and does not, 'tis becauſe his will comes between to ſuſpend it; So that the reaſon is this, he will not. Pilate he had power to crucifie Chriſt, and power not to do it, John 19 10. he had power not to do it; why then does he crucifie him? not becauſe he had no power to do otherwiſe; he confeſſes himſelf he had power to do otherwiſe, but he crucified Chriſt, becauſe he would do ſo. When a man hath power to do a thing, or not to do a thing, its the will that either ſuſpends or determines. 1 Conſid. Every man can do more good then he doth.

2. Conſideration, that if a man can do more then he does, and yet will not, he muſt needs voluntarily hinder himſelfe from doing that which he cannot; the reaſon is, becauſe a man muſt firſt do that which he can, before he can come to that part which he cannot. Suppoſe a lame man were to go to London from hence, and not able to go one mile of the journey, but there ſtands one at the Church-ſtile, that offers, if he will but crawle thither, to carry him; he is able to crawle ſo farre as the Church-ſtile, but he will not; does not he voluntarily hinder himſelfe from going to London? that which he can do muſt be done firſt, before that which he cannot. So ye that live in your ſinnes, you muſt firſt do that which you can, before you can look that God ſhould helpe you to do that which you cannot; if thou doſt all that thou canſt for ought that thou knoweſt, Chriſt, though he have not abſolutely engaged himſelfe, ſtands at the Church-ſtile, there ready to help thee. There be men in the world whom he is reſolved to help; thou doſt not know but thou art the man. Chriſt hath not told thee any thing to the contrary, but onely he bids thee do what thou 2 Conſid.

canſt; canſt not thou cut off thy long haire? are no Sizzers able to cut it? have not you a Tongue in your heads, ye that keep diſorders in your Alehouſes? cannot you ſay, get you hence ye drunken companions, here's no entertainment for you? you muſt do that which you can, before you can expect Chriſts help to do that which you cannot; and if you will not do that which you can, you do voluntarily hinder your own ſelves from doing that which you cannot; Joſhua could not ſtand before Ai, nor hinder a cloſe Achan from taking the golden wedge; but when it was taken and known, he was able to make him an example. Joſhuah he faſted and cryed unto God all day untill night, that the Lord would mercifully ſave him and all Iſrael; Now heare that anſwer the Lord gives him, Get thee up ſayth he, why lyeſt thou here? *Joſh.*7.13. Iſrael hath ſined, go and execute Juſtice, go and do that firſt, and then I will anſwer thee about Ai; for if Joſhuah would not have done what he could, the Lord would never have helpt him to do that which he could not. So thou prayeſt for mercy and grace, oh that God would convert thee, and pardon thee; get thee up ſayes God, doſt thou ſtand praying for mercy as long as ſuch things and ſuch things are not reformed? thou haſt drunkenneſſe in thy houſe, go and reforme that; thou art in league with a ſort of baſe luſts, goe and reforme them; if thou wilt not do that which thou canſt, how canſt thou be ſure God will help thee to do that which thou canſt not? no thou ſticketh at a will not, as long as thou refuſeſt to do that.

3. Conſid. 3 Conſider if a man will not do that which he can, neither will he do that which he cannot, if he could; the ſervant that will not go five or ſix miles in a day which he can for his Maſter, neither would he goe a hundred miles for his Maſter if he could; you that can reforme outwardly, at leaſt if you would, and yet will not, neither would you reforme more if you could; ye have money in your purſes, cannot you ſpend it better then upon ſwilling and drinking and gaming? ye can well enough, but ye will not. So you would do, had you that true riches, Luke 16.11. ye have naturall abilities; if ye will not be faithfull in them, ſo it would be if ſo be yee had better; ye that have morall and civill endowments, if ye will not be faithfull in them, neither would you if God ſhould lend you more, &c. ye are able to avoid ſwearing and lying, but ye will not, neither would ye avoyd all other ſinnes if ye could; if a man will not do that which he can, neither will hee do that which hee cannot, if he could.

4. Conſid. 4. Conſider, if a man will not do that which he can, can or cannot all's one to him, all ſticks at his will. I cannot repent, and I cannot give over my ſinnes, ſayeſt thou; and I pray thee who told thee that thou canſt not? I am naked ſayes Adam, and who told thee that thou wert naked? ſayes God, Gen.3.11. So may I ſay, who told thee thou canſt not? does not thy own conſcience tell thee tis becauſe thou wilt not? I cannot digge ſayes the lazy Steward, and to begge I am aſhamed, Luke 16.3. I cannot digge; if he had a cudgell about his back, it would make him to digge; to begge I am aſhamed, ſayes he; he was not aſhamed to cozen his Maſter of his goods, but he was aſhamed to begge. I have married a Wife and I cannot come, Luke 14.20. No, what did his Wife tie his legges? there is Prov.22.13. a Lyon in the way, I cannot goe out ſayes the ſluggard: alas thy owne ſluggiſh wilfull wills are this cannot. Can or cannot all's one to them, they never come to try whether they can, yea or no: the ſluggard never looke out to ſee the Lyon in the way, but he dreamt there was one there, and he was willing to believe it, he would not go out to ſee: the idle ſteward did not trie whether he could digge, yea or no; if he had taken the Spade in his hand, and gone about the work, 'twere another matter; but I cannot dig, sayes he; he never would put it to triall, but takes another course without trying of that; so that alls one, can or cannot, if a man will not do that which he can, can or cannot, alls one to him.

5. Consider, If a man will not do that which he can, this will make a mans conscience when he comes to speak in sober sadnesse, thank himself for his perishing. mens consciences do but jest with them now, while they can say, tush tis because I cannot believe, and because I cannot repent; but at the houre of conviction, or the day of judgement at farthest, then conscience will speake in sober sadnesse, when I was hungry, ye gave mee no meat, sayes Christ, when I was athirst ye gave mee no drinke, I was a stranger and ye took me not in, sick and in prison and ye visited mee not, Matth. 25. 43. Mark, Christ puts no cannot on their consciences at the day of judgment; could they say, alas, we had never a bit of bread for to do it, never a drop of drink for to do it? no, you shall see how their consciences were mute; they could not say that they could not; could not ye comfort Christs deare members as well as mock them? could'st thou not take them into thy house as well as carnall acquaintance? its worthy observation to consider, that generally Gods threatnings do not run against Cannots, nor his judgements against Cannots, but against mens particular sins, that they might have avoided; for though mens sinfull consciences do necessarily incline men to sin, yet not unto this sin, nor that sin, non determinat necessario ad hoc vel illud malum, hic & nunc, say our Britain Divines at the Synod. Sinfull concupiscence does not necessarily determine men upon these and these sins, with the particular circumstances which they live in, as this rapine, this lye &c. Thus ye see this will make a sure ground of our Doctrine if so be we can prove it. 5 Consc.

Every man can do more good then he does, and avoid more evill then he does.

This is a most certain and infallible truth, and needs no confirmation, but I will prove it notwithstanding.

First, because God doth complain against the Wicked for the voluntary doing no more good then they do, what so much preaching and no more good? so many meanes and no more fruit? &c. so God complaines against Israel, nevertheless they departed not from the sins of Jeroboam, &c. and there remained the groves also in Samariah, 2 K. 13. 6. the grove also; what not so much as the grove cut down? and ye must have the sins of Jeroboam, that were enough stubbornness one would think; but must ye suffer the grove also? reform nothing, no, not the grove under your face? see how God girdeth their wilfull security that they would do no more good then they did? nor so much as cut down that grove? so many warnings and threatnings, &c. and yet the grove also? yet thy filty Tongue, thy covertousnesse also, &c. not only keep thy other lusts, but thy prophanesse also. 1 Argu.

Secondly, because otherwise there were no roome for praise nor dispraise, if a man could do no more good then he does, nor shun no more evill then he does, then no man could be praised nor dispraised; you know that wicked men and women may do many commendable things, at least more commendable ones then others; does not our Saviour discommend Bethsaida, and Corazin, in comparison of Tyre and Sidon? woe unto thee Corazin, woe unto thee Bethsaida; for if the mighty workes which have been done in thee, had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented in sackcloth and ashes, Math. 11. 21. might not they have shewed so much repentance at the least? could not they have put on sackcloth on their loynes, and poured ashes on their heads if they would? they might have done so much at the least, and honoured the workes and Preaching of our Savivour with an outward honour at the least. You that have such abundant teaching as ye have, ye might honour the Gospell with some outward honour at the least, that would be more commendable, which most of you will not. 2 Argu.

Tametsi impossibile erat Iudæis converti per externum prædicatorem Evangelii absq; præterminante gratia; quia tamen obdurati erant Iudæi propria malitia quàm Tyrii & Sidonii, id circo à scrutatore cordium corripiuntur Do. Prid. lect. de med. scient. p. 65.

3. Argu. Thirdly, becauſe otherwiſe there would be no roome for the ſword of the Magiſtrate; if a man could omit no more ſinne then he does, then what meanes our Pillories and Gallowes, &c. and other puniſhments upon Malefactors? will any man be ſo vain as to ſay Achan could not chooſe but take the Babyloniſh garment? certainly he might have let it alone if he would: why haſt thou troubled us, ſayes Joſhuah. Joſh. 7.25. Alas, he was not able to anſwer, oh Sir I could doe no otherwiſe: No, no, he might have omitted it, and therefore the Law of man is favourable to ſuch as offend againſt their wills; it does not hang ſuch as kill againſt their wills.

4. Argu. Fourthly, becauſe though a carnall man cannot put off the old man, nor ſhake off the dominion of ſinne in generall, nor deny himſelf, but his very nature is ſinfull and fleſhly, he does naturally ſinne, yet it is not his nature to commit this ſinne at this time, and in this manner; the wickedeſt man under Heaven goes about his ſinne with previall deliberation, and a moſt free diſpoſition of the meanes; the drunkard goes freely into the Ale-houſe, and calls freely for a jugge or two or three, as his luſt is; his Hoſt he freely ſuffers theſe diſorders in his houſe, and freely goes to the Tap and does draw it, &c. Ephraim did willingly walke after the Commandements, Hoſ. 5.11. The wicked King of Iſrael commanded them that will worſhip at Bethel, and they did freely and willingly obey it. Pilate willingly contented the people, and therefore he ſcourged our Saviour, Mark. 15.15. For though all this was done by the determinate counſell of God, yet Gods counſell put no ſimple neceſſity upon his will; he did freely and willingly doe it; the wicked they turne the grace of God into wantonneſſe, Jude 4. Mark, the Grace of God; whereby they might doe more good then they doe, and avoid more evill then they doe. 'ts true, a wicked man is the ſervant of ſinne. and cannot but ſinne, he is naturally a ſervant of ſinne; of ſinne I ſay, but he is voluntarily and freely a ſervant of this ſinne, for the Lord gives him reaſon, and counſell, and good motions. and many common graces, whereby he may be freed from this or that act, but he will not, he will break out into theſe and theſe filthy paſſionate words now and then; ſay reaſon what it will, and common grace what it will, he will doe it, he will doe this, and he will doe that. I confeſſe, that when a wicked man is deſperate, and given up of God, then it is otherwiſe, then his will is ſo greedy, that he cannot take it off; but he is the more inexcuſable, becauſe his will is then double.

5. Argu. Fifthly, A wicked man can do more good, &c. for a godly regenerate ſoul may avoid more ſin then he does. Though God have freed him from the ſlavery of ſin, and he is become the ſervant of righteouſneſſe, Rom. 6. 18. nevertheleſſe they may do more good then they do, and avoid ſin a great deal more then they do; what man will ſay that David could not otherwiſe chooſe but commit that adultery which he did, and that murder which he did, I appeal to your conſciences ye ſoules that are godly. When ye pray, forgive us our Treſpaſſes, do not ye acknowledge with all that ye have been wanting to the grace of God? Do not ye confeſſe it with ſhame that you have given way to ſundry temptations that by the grace of God ye might have overcome? and that ye have omitted many a good opportunity, that by the grace of God ye might have made uſe of it? I deny not but God does irreſiſtibly convert his Elect at the firſt, and infallibly carry them on to the end for the main, but in particular actions he does not ſo; but though their wills be now free by grace, yet they may freely ſin, even when they obey; and freely obey, even when they tranſgreſſe; and ſo they are forced to confeſſe they might avoid more evil then they doe, and doe more good then they doe.

Inſuperabiliter movet, qui tamen ſit aliqua reſiſtentia.

Again, A wicked man may doe more good then he does, and avoid more evil then he does; I prove it by induction upon his conſcience

By theſe Particulars.

Firſt, for the outward acts of ſin in the members; thus all profane perſons, drunkards, drunkards, &c. ye are all convinced undeniably in your conſciences, theſe are ſins in the very outward members; voluntas it is domina membrorum; can ye ſay ye cannot paſſe by an Ale-houſe when ye turn in? ye cannot come unto Sermons? your own legs they ſhall judge you; can you ſay you cannot give over your oathing and lying? &c. your own Teeth and Lips ſhall judge you, &c. If you doe not root out theſe ſins, its without doubt becauſe ye will not. The Lord hath made all the outward man at the command of the Will; and therefore if the outward man be out of order, 'tis becauſe ye will: μηδεὶς οὖν λέγετω ὅτιὲν τάλαντον ἔχω, οὐδὲν δύναμαι ποιῆσαι, ſayes Chryſoſt. Let no man ſay I have but one Talent, and I have no power to be good; a Talent hath power to goe for a Talent, and twelve pence for a ſhilling, and if it doe not, 'tis becauſe ye will not. Haſt thou not power over thine own outward members, vouchſafed thee of God? the Lord in mercy lets thy will have a deſpoticall power over thy members as the Moraliſts call it, and why canſt thou not bridle them? as Chriſt ſaid to the Officer that ſmote him, If I have ſpoken well, why ſmiteſt thou me? John 18.23. Couldſt thou not have held in thy fingers? thou art inexcuſable then for all thy profane ſins.

Secondly, Thou haſt naturall affections in thee, and by them thou mayſt do more good then thou doſt, and ſhun more evil then thou doſt. Thus all civill Profeſſors, are left inexcuſable: Canſt thou not get more ſtrictneſſe of walking though not for love unto God, yet for love unto thy ſelf? be more frequent in good duties for hope of Heaven, and for fear of Hell; thats better then nothing; better do them ſo then not at all. What cannot a man do for ſelf-love and for fear? there is never a duty of Religion, but a man may every day do for love unto himſelf and for fear. God hath left theſe affections in thy ſoul on purpoſe. I know this is not enough; but what of that? Why doſt thou not go ſo far as thou mayeſt? what aileth thee that thou canſt not tame down thy pride for feare of Gods judgements, and bridle thy baſe paſſions for fear of Hell? It is not unknown that God hath vowed to deſtroy all the workers of iniquity: Tis not unknown that he hath prepared Hell for ſuch as thou art, as long as thou liveſt as thou doſt: Thou knoweſt this is true, and thou knoweſt God will be as good as his word, and thou art not able to abide it. Why doſt thou not curbe thy proud ſtubborn luſts for fear of this Hell? That's better then nothing; if thou canſt not do it for love, yet why canſt thou not do it for feare? haſt thou not as much reaſon as a brute creature, that is greedy of meat, yet a whip-ſtick is able to ſcare him from it? an horſe is deſirous to ſtand ſtill, yet a ſpur and a rod is able to make it go faſter; and is not Hell more fearfull then all rods? Why doſt thou not take heed for fear, leſt God ſhould ſend thee to Hell? a ſinner and a hypocrite are inexcuſable herein, for Hell may fear them; the ſinners in Sion are afraid, fearfulneſſe hath ſurpriſed the hypocrites; who among us ſhall dwell with everlaſting burnings? Eſay 33.14. who of uſe is able to dwell with everlaſting flames? and hypocrites may go ſo far; fear Hell, and abſtain from a million of ſins, for fear of theſe everlaſting burnings: canſt thou ſay thou canſt not reſiſt ſin for fear of Gods judgements? No, thou canſt reſiſt ſin for fear of leſſe evils then ſo; the fear of mens ſeeing thee can keep thee from committing adultery in the market-place, and cannot the fear of God reſtrain thee from it in private? thou dareſt not tranſgreſſe the Kings Lawes for fear of the Gallowes; and cannot the fear of Hell reſtrain thee from tranſgreſſing of Gods? Gods diſpleaſure is greater then the Kings, and thou knoweſt it: God is truer in his Law then any mortall man, and thou knoweſt it: and feareſt thou not me? fear ye not me, ſaith the Lord? will ye not tremble at my preſence, Jer 5.22. Canſt thou ſay thou art not able to fear him ſo much as ſervilely? that is not ſo; for when thou art ſick, and ready to dye, then thou wilt fear him, then oh thou wouldſt fain become a new creature, and all out of fear of the great God; and canſt thou not now? No, no, now here be pleaſures to be had, and thou wilt have them; here is the World, and thou wilt carke; here is buſineſſe, and thou wilt be doing, and thou wilt not find leaſure for God. No, thou wilt not; canſt thou not doe this that God bids thee at leaſt out of feare? this is nothing but a lye of Satan, thou wouldeſt doe them all for feare of a man. Suppoſe there were Lawes made that every man who does not pray in his Family Morning and Evening, ſhould aſſuredly be hanged: whoſoever ſweares an Oath, ſhould be hanged as ſoon as he hath ſworn it: Whoſoever breake out into any bitter rayling ſpeech, ſhould ſuffer death. Suppoſe I ſay to all the duties of Religion it were death to omit them, & the King had made ſuch a certaine ſure Law, I dare ſay there would be many millions of Profeſſors more in England then there are; rather then ye would be gibbeted, many ſwearers would never ſweare more; many lyars never lye more; many profane houſholders never omit Prayers in their Families more; and couldeſt thou doe this for feare of a man? why canſt thou not then doe it for feare of the great God?

Thirdly, The Lord hath given thee naturall counſell, and naturall reaſon and prudence: Oh ſayeſt thou, I am tempted before I am aware, and the paſſion is up before I am aware, I cannot help it for my life. No, I believe thee when the Devill is once up, there is no allaying that foul Fiend for the preſent; Thou canſt not immediately allayit. But why canſt thou not prevent it with counſell and deliberation? the very Heathens have done this, and thou haſt advantage of all Heathen. God hath given thee not onely reaſon in thy head, and a naturall conſcience in thy breaſt, but alſo direction in his Word to prevent it, and if thou doſt not, thou wilt not: are the luſts of thine appetite violent? why then doſt thou not fore-caſt for to reine them? why doſt thou not abſtaine from going to Feaſts a while? why doſt thou not ſtint thy Trencher with ſo much? If thy luſts be on fire, why doſt thou feed them with fuell? Are the luſts of anger and wrath predominate in thee? thou rapſt out an Oath before thou art aware; why then doſt thou not as Chryſoſtome would have thee, Set forfeitures for every Oath? Why doſt thou not intreat Gods people ſeverely to reprove thee, and exact a fine of thee for every miſgoverning word? Why doſt thou not bawke ſuch acquaintance as may occaſion thy Tongue to caſt out Oaths? Why doſt thou not club down thy luſts with argument upon argument? ſhall I be touchy to be damned, and proud to be damned? &c. even arguments of ſelf-love are able to knock them down. I doe not know how; No? that's becauſe thou wilt not know; They know not, neither will they underſtand, Pſal. 82.5. So thou knoweſt not, neither wilt thou underſtand; that's the reaſon thou ſtill walkeſt in darkneſſe; why doſt not thou oppoſe thy luſts at firſt riſing? non obtinebis ut deſinat, ſi incipere permiſeris, ſayes Seneca; thou canſt never get victory except thou be here firſt in the Field. The Lord hath given thee counſels on this faſhion; why doſt thou not uſe them? onely becauſe thou wilt not; haſt thou impediments? Clarancus had them too, but he overcame them ſayes Seneca. Why doſt not thou? If thou wilt not, thou doſt willingly periſh; thou mightſt doe more then thou doſt, but thou wilt not; and thou mightſt ſhun more then thou doſt, but thou wilt not.

Fourthly, becauſe thou wilt ſay all theſe things are but naturall, and morall, and civill, I may periſh for all theſe; but alas I am not able to doe any thing ſpiritually: I cannot believe, I cannot repent; though this be very true, yet thy plea is no excuſe; for though they be naturall, yet they are firſt. Firſt that's in order which is naturall, and afterwards that which is ſpirituall, and if thou ſtickeſt there, thou ſtickeſt at a will not. The Lord hath taken a ſufficient courſe to humble thee, and thou wilt not be humbled; thou ſayeſt thou canſt not obey ſpiritually, I grant it, its moſt true: nor repent ſpiritually: why then wilt thou not be humbled that canſt thou not? As God ſaid to Pharaoh, How long wilt thou refuſe to humble thy ſelf before me? Exod. 10. 3. There is externall hum-humiliation, as Ahabs humiliation, thou mayeſt come to, before that humiliation thou canſt not expreſſe: why art thou not humbled with that which thou mayſt? 1 King. 21. 9

Firſt then, why doſt thou not ſee thy caſe to be damnable? Doſt thou not know that judgement is paſt upon all to damnation? Rom. 5.18. All men are damned out of Chriſt. Whoſoever is not a new creature, is not in Chriſt, but is a damned man to this day: thou knoweſt the Lord himſelf doth ſay thus: what hinders thee now from deducting a particular therefrom? If upon all men, then upon me; if all be damned to this day that are not new creatures in Chriſt, then I am a damned man to this houre: This Logick God doth vouchſafe thee; why doſt thou not reaſon on this faſhion? I am a damned man and a damned woman to this day: if thou wouldeſt be brought to this paſſe, there might be ſome hope of thee, but thou wilt not; thou wilt ſcrape up ſome hopes or other, thou wilt not believe this; Believe thus, ſayes God, but I will not, ſayeſt thou: no, thou wilt have thy luſt ſtill, and thou wilt not believe this; if thou wouldeſt believe verily thou art a damned man, becauſe thou art not a new creature in Chriſt, may be thou wouldſt never have done till thou art one, thou wouldeſt forſake all, and follow Chriſt in all things, but thou wilt not.

Secondly, but I cannot, ſayeſt thou: why then wilt thou not deſpaire in thy ſelfe? a man muſt deſpaire as he is, otherwiſe he can never get into Chriſt: as long as a man lives and does after the fleſh, he can have no true hope of mercy, or pardon, or any thing, no, he is a dead man, all the Angels of Heaven cannot help him; if there were a thouſand Chriſts, he ſhould periſh without them; and why wilt thou not deſpaire in thy ſelfe? Deſpaire? God forbid. I'le never deſpaire while I live, God is more mercifull then ſo, and I hope I need not deſpaire, Chriſt died for ſinners, and I were a foole if I ſhould deſpaire. Thus thou pleadeſt with God for thy vain hopes; but why wilt thou? ſayes God, why wilt thou plead with me? thou haſt tranſgreſſed againſt me, Jer. 2.29. Thou pleadeſt for hopes, and lieſt in thy ſinnes, why wilt thou? Mark, the will is ſet on it, thou wilt plead: thou mightſt deſpaire of thy ſelfe, but thou wilt not, and therefore thou wilt wilfully periſh.

Thirdly, but I cannot pull down mine own heart, nor maſter mine own will ſayeſt thou; No? Why then canſt thou not goe and reſigne it to God? Lord, here is a proud heart, I cannot humble it; Oh, here is a ſtony heart, I cannot break it: Lord doe thou; here is a rebellious heart, I cannot ſubdue it: Lord doe thou; but thou wilt not reſigne up thy heart, thou wilt not ſet about it as well as thou canſt; they will not frame their doings to turne unto God, Hoſ. 5.4: they will not; ſo thou wilt not frame thy ſelfe to doe it as well as thou canſt: And therefore thou doſt willingly goe on, and thou art wholly inexcuſable before God; and when he ſends thee to Hell, thou ſhalt know thine own will brought thee thither. Thou mighteſt reforme thine outward man, but thou wilt not; thou mightſt bridle thy Luſts and thy Paſſions, butthou wilt not; thou mighteſt take a thouſand good opportunities, but thou wilt not. And therefore thou haſt no excuſe before God, thou doſt willingly periſh. Its true thou canſt not, may be, but neceſſity is not it, but thou wilt not: indeed if thou didſt every day labour to fight againſt thy luſts, and reſiſt to the utmoſt, and couldſt not, then it were neceſſity, but thou doſt not, nay thou wilt not. He that reſiſteth and then cannot, he may plead, Lord, what a wofull neceſſity of ſinning am I in! but thou giveſt way to thy luſts, and therefore thou art inexcuſable, and thou doſt willingly periſh.

The

The Second Ground.

THe ſecond now followes. Every wicked man is ſlothfull and negligent: Thou evill ſervant and ſlothfull, ſayes Chriſt, Matth. 25.26. Thou haſt been lazie with the Talent I gave thee. I gave thee preaching and teaching, and thou haſt been lazie to heare it. I have given thee knowledge of that which is good, and thou haſt been lazie to improve it. I have pulled thee to Prayer by the motion of my Spirit, and thou haſt been lazie at the duty: Thou evill and ſlothfull ſervant, I have given thee many a ſweet opportunity to be rid of that baſe luſt that thou art moſt addicted unto, and thou haſt been lazie to leave it. This is another ground of this Doctrine Now if this be ſo, thou muſt lay the blame on thine own will, and not on Gods denying the power; becauſe ſloth is a fault of the will. I cannot call him a ſluggard that ſticks at a cannot, but onely him that ſticks at a will not. He that labours and ſtrives as much as he can, none will call him a ſluggard, but him that can labour more, and will not. Sloth is a voluntary fault of the will: How long wilt thou ſleep O ſluggard? Prov. 6.9. How long wilt thou? Its not a fault of impotency, but of will.

Five Demonſtrations to prove this.

1 Demon. Firſt, if thou be ſlothfull to good duties, then thou doſt onely imagine a company of cannots. I cannot doe as I would ſayeſt thou: No, why then art thou ſlothfull, to make more imaginary cannots? A ſlothfull man imagines more cannots then there be. I cannot goe this journey ſayes he, I ſhall be weary, I ſhall be rob'd, I ſhall fall off my horſe; I cannot travell it: the way of a Prov. 15.19. ſlothfull man is a hedge of thornes, but the way of the righteous is made plain, ſayes Solomon. The ſlothfull man he imagines there's a thorn-hedge in his way; I ſhall be prickt, I cannot get over it; What? is there a thorn-hedge in the way? No; for the righteous that goes it, he finds it plain, he ſees none, no, there is no ſuch thorn-hedge in the way, but he does imagine one; and therefore his will not is his let, not his cannot; for he does but imagine a cannot. So doſt thou ſay, I cannot doe thus and thus; why then art thou ſlothfull to imagine more cannots, and thorne-hedges then there are? I cannot live then. Oh I cannot goe ſo often to Prayer, and if I ſhould doe ſo as you ſay, I ſhould be houred at up and down; you tell me I am a Hell-hound for my pride and my paſſions; Oh if I ſhould believe this, I ſhould never have merry day more. Alas alas theſe are but imaginary cannots, imaginary Thorne-hedges. I cannot be ſo ſtrict, neither can I put it up. I ſay thou doſt but imagine a company of cannots, and therefore thou wilt not.

2 Demon. 2. Demonſtation. If thou be ſlothfull to good duties, then thou makeſt every little difficulty a cannot; nothing but an impoſſibility is a cannot, but if thou be ſlothfull, thou makeſt every little difficulty a cannot. I cannot turn mine own heart, nor break mine own heart: but why then art thou ſlothfull, to make every little difficulty a cannot? a ſlothfull man makes every little difficulty a cannot. Prov. 20.5. The ſlothfull man will not plow by reaſon of cold, and therefore ſhall he beg in harveſt and have nothing. He will not plow by reaſon of cold, he ſticks at a very little difficulty; his fingers are ſo tender, forſooth, they muſt not ake, his toes are ſo Lady-like they muſt not ſmart, becauſe its a little difficult, therefore he will not doe it; He will not plow by reaſon of cold; Well, beg then and ye will: cannot you endure a little cold? yea, he could endure it, but it would be difficult; and therefore ſayes the Text, He will not plow by reaſon of cold. He does not ſtick at an impoſſibility, for then indeed he could not. But the ſlothfull man will not plow by reaſon of cold; he ſticks onely at a difficulty, and therefore he will not; nay if he ſhould labour ſoundly indeed, his very labour would keep him from being acold; the truth is, its the labour of plowing that he is againſt; and therefore every little cold ſhall ſerve for an excuexcuſe. So why art thou ſlothfull to count every petty difficulty a cannot? its an uncomfortable thing to be alwayes poring on my ſinnes, I cannot abide it, its troubleſome to be Tongue-tied. What not ſpeake a word but onely with warrant from Scripture? I cannot abide it; what never helpe my ſelfe at a dead lift by telling a lye? never right my ſelfe by a little revenge? never comply nor ſort with ſuch and ſuch old acquaintance, becauſe they drop out an Oath now and then before they are aware? O I cannot abide it. What thus preciſe? I am not able to abide it. No, canno'? cannot thy ſtubborne will ſtoop to a little difficulty? get thee to Hell, and ſee if thou canſt abide that, and there thanke thine own will for thy perdition.

3. Demonſtration, if thou be ſlothfull, then thou turneſt thy very abilities into cannots; not onely all difficulties, but alſo thine abilities into cannots. Like a drone that is lazy, he loſes his abilities that he hath. By much ſlothfulneſſe the building decayeth. Alas I am very dead-hearted, ſayeſt thou; nay, but O man the time was when God quickned thee at a Sermon, why didſt thou let it decay? the time was when thou wert a little well affected, why didſt thou let it decay? time was when thou wert ſober, and leſſe given to wrath and paſſions, and why didſt thou let theſe good conditions decay? the Lord gave thee them heretofore, and thou haſt played the ſluggard with them, and therefore now they are decayed. Thy quickening is decayed, thy ſorrow for ſinne decayed, thy meltings decayed, through much ſlothfulneſſe the building does decay He that is ſlothfull in his worke, is brother to a great waſter: So thou art brother to a great waſter, becauſe thou art ſlothfull. 3 Demon. Eccleſ. 10.18.

4. Demonſtration. If thou be ſlothfull, then thou doſt voluntarily naile thy ſelfe unto cannots. There is many a ſinne that now thou art a ſlave to, that thou mighteſt have trodden under thy foot, but now thou canſt not; thou mighteſt have gone further and further on in reformation, if thou hadſt held on when thou wert going; like a Coach, its eaſier to make it runne on when once its going, then ſtirre it when once it ſtands ſtill; and now thou canſt not now thou art nayled to it, like the doore to his hinges. Now thou canſt pray and pray and grow ne're the better; hear and read and ne're the holier: As the doore turneth upon its hinges, ſo doth the ſlothfull man on his Bed. The doore goes to and fro, to it goes, and fro it goes, it goes may be all the yeare long, and ſtill it hangs juſt upon the ſame hinges, and after ſeven yeares travell, it hangs there where it did; its nayled to its hinges. So its with a ſluggiſh heart; he goes to a Prayer and from a Prayer, to a Sermon and from a Sermon, to a good duty and from a good duty; and ſtill he hangs juſt on the ſame hinges, he hath gotten no ground, is juſt where he was; ſo thou art juſt at the ſame paſſe after a thouſand prayers and a thouſand Sermons, and millions of good duties, ſtill thou hangeſt on thy old duties, ne're the more pure to this houre. 4 Demon. Prov. 19.24.

5 Demonſtration Sloth is a lazy putting forth by halves of that power one hath. This alſo is the very nature of Sloth; when a man hath more power then he ſhewes, but he is lazy to put it all forth. The Scripture uſes a compariſon of a man that hides his hand in his boſome, and though he have meat ſtanding before him, yet he will not ſo much as bring it to his mouth. A ſlothfull man hideth his hand in his boſome, and will not bring it to his mouth. What? why does he ſtarve? becaule he hath not any meat? No, the meat ſtandeth before him: becauſe he hath not any hands? No, he hath a hand in his boſome: becauſe his hand hath the dead Palſie, & he not able to ſtir it? No, he will not put it forth, He will not bring it to his mouth, ſayes the Text: So when thou art Praying, thou wilt not put thy ſelf forth: when thou art reforming, thou doſt 5 Demon. Prov. 19.24.

not put thy ſelfe forth; when thou art about any good ſervice, thou doſt not put thy ſelfe forth; here is a Sabbath before thee, and a Sacrament before thee, but thou wilt not reach it to thy mouth; thou wilt not put thy ſelfe forth. The Lord tells thee this ſinne will breake thy necke, and thou wilt not ſo much as reach it to thy mouth, nor apply it to thy heart; may be it would humble thee, and feed thee, but thou wilt not reach it to thy mouth; what a deale of power haſt thou? but thou putteſt it forth by the halves, when thou art examining thy conſcience, thou putteſt thy ſelfe forth by the halves, thou mighteſt put thy ſelfe forth many degrees more, but thou wilt not.

Oh beloved, this ſame point will ſtrike the World dumb before God, even this, why d d ye not put your ſelves forth to the utmoſt? Thou haſt ſomewhat more in thee then by reaſon of thy lazineſſe thou doſt put forth.

Six arguments to prove it.

There is more then by reaſon of Sluggiſhneſſe thou putteſt forth.

1. Arg. Firſt, its a ſigne it is in thee, becauſe when God does convert a ſinner, he does not put in new powers and faculties into the ſoul: he does not put in a new faculty of thinking and underſtanding, and willing, and affecting, and remembring; No, the ſoule hath theſe faculties already, underſtanding already, and thinking already, and remembing and deſiring already, and willing already; but God does not put in new faculties, but turnes them that are there unto himſelfe: like a Watch out of frame, the wheeles are there ſtill, the ſpring ſtill, and every parcell there ſtill, but all out of frame, and the artiſt ſets them in frame; ſo the Soule hath them in it; True, it requires the omnipotent power of God to turne all theſe faculties to him. Notwithſtanding thou doſt voluntarily turne them unto other things, and not unto God. They are every one in thee, as thou art a man. But God may not have them, nay and thou mighteſt put them forth to more then thou doſt. Other things can have them ſuperfluouſly, but God may not have them. (I intend not a power of doing the leaſt good in a gracious manner, nor to engage God to give thee grace onely.)

When God comes to work grace, he finds in thee indeed Paſſiva capacitas & potentia obedientialis, but their owne naturall faculties are raiſed to ſupernaturall acts upon the ſupernaturall object, God.

2. Arg. Secondly, its a ſigne it is in thee. (I meane ſtill ſo farre forth as to demonſtrate thee ſlothfull.) I ſay its a ſigne it is in thee, becauſe thou canſt ſhew as great power otherwiſe: When a ſervant can runne a race for his ſport, why will he not on his Maſters errand when he bids him? Its a ſigne it is in him, and he will not put it forth. Canſt thou not ſpare an hour every day for private Prayers unto God, ſometime for to meditate and belabour thy heart? Thou canſt ſpare twice as much for thy belly and thy back, and thy profits. Canſt thou not ſhed tears for thy ſins? Thou canſt ſhed tears for madneſſe, and wrath, and vexation. Canſt thou not tell how to glorifie God? Oh my parts are very ſhallow, gifts very ſmall, &c. but thou art wiſe to do evill. Jer. 4. 22. They are wiſe to doe evill, but to doe good they have no knowledge. Its a ſigne it is in thee, but thou wilt not. Thou canſt not ſpeake for God, thou canſt not be angry againſt ſinne, nor lay to heart the miſeries of Gods Church: No? but thou canſt find thy Tongue faſt enough for to raile, and clamour; and thou canſt even burſt with anger when thou art croſt. Its a ſigne its in thee, a ſigne there is wit enough in thee, and ability enough in thee to take paines. Thou haſt it for other things, but thou wilt not put it forth for the Lord. Oh how does this provoke the moſt High! Hoſ. 7. 9. That ſtrangers ſhould devoure all thy ſtrength; like Ephraim, ſtrangers devoure devoured all his ſtrength. God might have none of it, but ſtrangers and ſtrange luſts could have it: The World can have thy paines and thy cares, the things of the World they can have thy thoughts and thy ſtrength, and not I, ſayes CHRIST. As a Maſter complaines of his refractory Servant, you can doe it for your ſelfe, and doe it for others, but you will not doe it for me; a ſigne it is in thee, but thou wilt not put it forth.

Thirdly, a ſigne it is in thee, for thou canſt ſhew it to whom thou liſts, like a ſluggard that will worke at idle times; ſo thou canſt ſerve God when thou haſt nothing elſe to doe; like Pharaohs conceit of the Iſraelites, That they would ſerve God becauſe they had nothing elſe to do. Ye are idle, idle ye are, therefore ye ſay, Let us go and do ſacrifice unto God Becauſe they had nothing elſe to do: So when thou haſt nothing elſe to do with thy Tongue, then thou canſt give it to God; nothing elſe to do with thy thoughts, then thou canſt think of God, when thou haſt no uſe of a lye, then thou canſt tell truth, &c. a ſigne it is in thee; it is not the telling of the truth; it is not the ſpeaking very gently and modeſtly, that is not in thee to doe, but thou wilt not put it forth; nay thou canſt be ſoundly provoked while ſome are in company, and yet ſtill as quiet as may be, a ſigne it is in thee. 3 Argu. Exod. 5. 17.

Fourthly, a ſigne it is in thee, but thou art ſo ſluggiſh thou wilt not put it forth, becauſe the rod is able to whip it out of thee; Like a Boy that is idle and can ſay nothing, yet his Maſter is able to whip it out of him, then he can ſay it very roundly. So thou canſt not think of theſe things, yet let God laſh thee, and whip thee with ſickneſſe, or with the pangs of death, Then O I have beene a Drunkard, and I have beene naught, I have beene wicked, and Oh if God would recover me, I would not for a world ſinne ſo as I have done: Then thou canſt weepe, and then canſt cry, and then O for the Miniſter! A ſigne it is in thee, for a rod puts in no new, but onely laſhes up that which lay there; as the Twigges of the rod have no vertue in them to put learning into the Boy, but its a ſigne it was in him. Ah thou wretch thou, thy blood lies on thine owne head; why then doſt thou not now put thy ſelfe forth? Thou canſt, but Oh it kills thee to thinke now of taking paines after ſuch things; It kills thee now to goe to thy beads and lie at weeping croſſe, and be ſo holy forſooth; Oh it kills thee now to take paines hereabouts, like the ſluggard, the deſire of the ſluggard kills him, for his hands refuſe to labour. He deſires to have a crop but it kills him to go to the Plough; he deſires to have his markets, but it kills him to go thither. So thou deſireſt to go to Heaven, but it kills thee to take paines; Mortification, Selfe-Deniall, Repentance, Humiliation, Examination of Conſcience, Reformation of life; Oh theſe kill thee to thinke of them. A ſigne much is in thee; but it kills thee to put it forth. 4 Argu. Prov. 21. 25.

Fifthly, A ſigne it is in thee, becauſe thou canſt do a hundred times more when thou art pleaſed; like a wilfull lazy ſervant, you could do it better if you were pleaſed, ſayes his Maſter. So as long as thou art pleaſed thou canſt be more religious, a ſigne it is in thee. Rehoboam, his firſt yeares were religious; Peter Martyr obſerves, he was well pleaſed that ſame while he ſaw it was for the eſtabliſhing of his kingdome. And the Levits came to him, from Ieroboam, ſo long he was pleaſed, and then he was religious, but afterwards not; and why not afterwards too? Its a ſigne it was in him, but he was not well pleaſed; So Ioaſh did right in the ſight of the Lord all the dayes of Jehoiada. Why? then he was well pleaſed with Religion, for it helpt him to root out Athaliahs faction; Iehoiada had beene the ſaviour of his life, the helper of him to the Kingdome, the Lord protector of his Nonage, 5 Argu. 2 Kings 12. 2.

the eſtabliſher of his Scepter. All this while Religion did pleaſe him, but afterwards he would not do right in the ſight of the Lord. Why? becauſe other things now pleaſed him better; but its a ſigne it was in him. They on the rock, they could heare, and profeſſe as long as the Goſpell did pleaſe them, they heard Luke 4 13. it with joy, that pleaſed them well. Ye know joy is a very pleaſing thing, and then they could be forward to profeſſe it. A ſigne it was in them, but in time of affliction and perſecution, nay now the Goſpell did not pleaſe them, and therefore they fall off. So thou canſt love a child of God as long as he pleaſeth thee, nay thou canſt commend him for his holineſſe; O its a credit to thee to be acquainted with ſuch a one; but when ſome thing does not pleaſe thee, then thou canſt hate him in thy heart; all theſe are ſignes it is in thee, but thou wilt not put it forth.

6 Argu. Sixthly, a ſigne it is in thee, becauſe thou wilt ſhew it in Hell; there Dives ſhall ſhew it was in him to have regarded a godly poore Lazarus, to have reſpected the ſalvation of his five brethren; there he ſhall ſhew it was in him to feare
Luke 16. 28. Hell more then he did. Then the wicked ſhall ſay: What hath pride profited us? And what have riches and meanes advantaged us? Then they ſhall ſee it was in them not to count them for hypocrites, and Fooles, and mad Men, that were more religious then themſelves. We fooles counted their life madneſſe, and we had them in deriſion, and lo they are received amongſt the Saints, Wiſd. 5. 3. 4. 5. And therefore it is in thee, why then wilt thou not put thy ſelfe forth? I ſay this will ſtrike you all dumb before God at the laſt day; why would you not put your ſelves forth? and how do you ſtand lazing and idleing out the dayes of your own peace?

Ye cannot have any one excuſe.

No excuſe will ſerve impenitent ſinners turne at the laſt day. Firſt, Ye cannot ſay no body hired you: Indeed the carefulleſt ſervant in the World muſt of neceſſity be idle when none will employ him; why ſtand you here idle all the day long? No man hath hired us Lord, Matth. 20. 6. Marke, they have an excuſe that they were never hired into the Vineyard. That was more neceſſary idleneſſe; but you have beene hired, nay you were hired very early in the morning, and therefore why ſtand you here idle all the day long?

Secondly, Now thou art in Gods Vineyard, thou canſt not ſay I cannot profeſſe, I cannot profit by hearing, nor profit by praying, &c. Thou canſt
Prov. 18. 23. not ſay ſo; for why doſt thou not labour? in all labour there is profit. Never did a man labour but ſome profit or other he did get; but thou wouldeſt not labour, but thou ſtoodeſt lazing and idleing. Faine wouldeſt thou be ſaved; faine eſcape Hell and damnation, and oh that this were to labour for it! Like the ſluggard that deſireth a Harveſt, and yet is idle; O utinam hoc eſſet laborare: He lies loytering and playing, and oh that this were to labour! Oh that this were to plough and to ſow! If his Bed were the Plough, and his Pillow the Teeme, he would then drive it well: So doſt thou, utinam hoc eſſet reſipiſcere, thou goeſt on minding the things of this life, carking and caring, &c. Vtinam hoc eſſet reſipiſcere. O that this were to repent, and this were to go to Heaven: thou art negligent of prayer, and, Faith, and Holineſſe, Chriſt Jeſus ſave me, Thus cryes the Drunkard, Chriſt ſave me, and thus the Worldling, Chriſt Jeſus forgive me. Thus like a ſluggard thou wiſheſt, O that this were believing and ſerving of God! Like the ſluggard I ſay, O that this were to labour! thou mighteſt profit if thou wouldeſt labour; in all labour is profit; but thou wilt not labour, and therefore inexcuſable. O what a ſpeechleſſe creature ſhalt thou be before God at the laſt day! This is the ſecond ground of the Doctrine; The reaſon why a wicked man does not turne unto God, is not becauſe he cannot, but becauſe he will not. I ſay the ground of it is this.

Every wicked man is ſlothfull and negligent.

Stirre

Stirre up your ſelves ye whoſe heart the Lord hath awakened; Though the wicked be ſlothfull, will ye be ſlothfull alſo? O what infinite reaſon hath the Lord to correct us, every one of us all? How wofully ſlothfull are our hearts! I cannot maſter my unruly heart, ſayes one, and I cannot caſt out this ſame hard-hearted Devill: Thus we ſay like the Diſciples of Chriſt, we could not caſt him out. O faithleſſe Generation, how long ſhall I be with you, ſayes Chriſt. Mat 9 19. Cannot caſt him out? Why? he could goe out by Preaching and Faſting; So theſe ſame diſtempers of heart, theſe frozen-hearted Devills would goe out ſoon enough by Faſting and Praying; But oh we are ſo lazy thereat, and ſo cold, and ſo dead, and ſo drowſie, we doe not take paines. There is teaching in abundance; and why cannot ye learne; There is miſery enough on the Church, and why cannot we mourne? There is woe enough a comming, and why cannot we provide for't afore-hand? God will whip out theſe lazy weeds out of us, if we belong to him; O it provokes him! as Vineger to the Teeth, and ſmoke to the Eyes, ſo is the ſluggard to him that ſends him. Ah thou lazy drone; this 'tis to ſend a leaden-heeld drone of ones errand; it makes the Maſter look as ſowerly on him, as if he had drunken a Porringer of Vinegar. So beloved, this our ſloth to good things it doth deeply provoke God; there is many a mercy we loſe, becauſe of our ſloth; many a grace we never attaine, nay many a croſſe and many a trouble doe we get by reaſon of our ſloth. Oh let us ſtir up our ſelves, and blow up the ſparks that are under the embers, or elſe it will be evill and bitter, that God will make us to ſuffer. And you that live in your ſinnes, let me tell you, ye can never look for mercy except ye ſhake off your ſloth; ye may deſire to be converted, and pardoned, and ſaved, and ſo forth; but the ſoul of the ſluggard deſireth and hath not; but the diligent ſhall be made fat. 'Tis the diligent, the diligent onely that ſhall be fatted with grace; but ye may deſire all dayes of your lifes, but ye ſhall never have grace, except ye take paines. Nay, your own raines ſhall torment you in Hell; Oh how did I idle out my time, and let ſlip occaſions; and I would die, and I would to hell, and I would not doe otherwiſe, and woe is me that ever I was born, &c. Prov. 10.19

The third Ground.

A wicked man will not ſet himſelfe to uſe all the meanes that he may.

HE is not only ſlothful in the uſe of the ſame, not only he wil not do as much good as he may, but alſo he will not ſo much as uſe the meanes conſtantly in any faſhion. I cannot, ſaith he, repent, nor be ſuch a new creature as you talke of; Why then wilt thou not uſe the meanes? This makes thee inexcuſable. All the whole World both godly and ungodly have a cannot; indeed the ungodly their cannot is larger and begins ſooner, but the godly their cannot is much leſſened, and begins further off. The Lord inables them to goe further then all the wicked of the World; but beyond that, there begins their cannot. I ſay all the whole World have their cannot; I call that the meanes of grace, which is between their can and their cannot. As Prayers and hearing the Word, and ſtudying, and meditating, &c. The Lord ſeeing all men in their cannots, hath appointed ſuch meanes as they can, whereby they are to ſeeke unto God to do that which they cannot. Now a child of God whoſe cannot is in ſome meaſure healed by grace, he can pray in faith, and heare in faith, &c. And therefore Prayer in faith, hearing Gods Word in faith, &c. are his meanes to get more: he cannot obey more, nor believe more, but he uſes theſe meanes that he may. But a wicked man, his cannot is larger, he cannot pray in faith, and do theſe in faith, and therefore the faithfull doing of theſe duties are not his meanes. I cannot do ſo, ſayes he; no, but thou Liberum arbitrium libertatis.

mayſt ſet upon them all, and doe them in as good manner as thou canſt; that is thy meanes. Though thou canſt not pray in faith, yet thou canſt ſet up conſtant prayers in thy family though, ſuch as they are: Thou canſt not conferre with grace, but thou canſt conferre about grace every day: thou canſt not repeat the Word to thy houſhold in faith, but thou canſt repeat it in as good a manner as thou art able; that is thy meanes. Now, if thou wilt not uſe the meanes, thou ſtickeſt at a will not, and when thou doſt periſh, thou muſt thank thine own will, thou ſtickeſt at a will not. The firſt queſtion Chriſt asks thee is this, what canſt thou doe? As when the ſonnes of Zebedee beg'd to ſit one on the right hand, and the other on the leſe, this they could not, except God did vouchſafe them a new gift. But what can ye doe? ſayes Chriſt, are ye able to drink of the Cup that I am to drink of, and be baptized with the Baptiſme that I am baptized with? We are able, ſay they, Matth. 20.22,23. Ye ſhall drink, &c. Mark, he puts them to doe that which they can, and then bids them leave that which they cannot unto God. I ſay, the firſt queſtion Chriſt asks thee is, what canſt thou doe? I cannot be a Saint, Lord help mee to mercy, &c. Yea, but what canſt thou doe? Canſt thou not uſe theſe and theſe meanes I appoint thee? If thou wilt not doe them, neither will I help thee. This is the nature of meanes, to be a meanes to that which one cannot. A child of God can pray in faith, but he cannot maſter ſuch a luſt, and therefore he prayeth in faith that he may. He can heare the Word preached in faith, but he cannot get his heart to it as he would, and therefore he heareth in faith that he may. Doing theſe in faith are the meanes; now this is not the meanes of the wicked, for they cannot doe any thing in faith; but their meanes is to ſet about them at leaſt, that they may. I cannot pray in faith, ſayeſt thou, yea, but thou canſt ſet up conſtant Prayers in thy Family though, ſuch as they are: thou canſt not caſt off thy ſinnes in faith, thou mayſt caſt them off though; a godly man may doe theſe things in faith, and therefore that is his meanes. But that which is his can is thy cannot; and that which is his meanes, thou muſt uſe meanes unto. Thou muſt pray that thou mayſt pray in faith, repeat the Word, that thou mayſt repeat it in faith: reforme thy life, that thou mayſt reform it in faith; and ſeek the Lord, that thou mayſt ſeek him in faith. Now, if thou wilt not ſet upon the meanes thou ſtickeſt at a will not; I confeſſe here is the difference, the godly have a promiſe upon their uſing of their meanes, they uſing them in faith, but thou haſt no promiſe; yet who knowes what God may doe? As the King of Nineveh ſaid, Let's cry mightily to God; let's caſt away theſe and theſe ſinnes, who knowes if God will turn and repent? Jon. 3.9. he had no promiſe, he could not tell whether God would forgive: He would ſet upon the meanes, he would cry mightily; and it hit well, for God ſpared the City: if thou wilt not ſet upon the meanes, thou doſt willingly periſh; and here I cleared two things, 1. That God appoints every man the meanes that he may uſe, he may uſe thoſe meanes that God commands him as meanes. 2. That if he will not, he does wilfully periſh.

Note.

This confounds the Helena of the Arminians.

Arguments to prove a wicked man may uſe the meanes that God appointeth as meanes.

I cannot heare the preaching of the Word, ſayeſt thou, I am deaf, I cannot heare Sermons, then that is not thy meanes: reading, which thou canſt; and meditating, which thou canſt, is thy meanes. Every man may uſe the meanes that God does appoint him as meanes.

1 Argu. Firſt, becauſe its the very nature of meanes to come between ones can and his cannot, and therefore they are called media, becauſe they come in the midſt between a mans can and his cannot. By what meanes may I goe up to London? flying in the Aire is not any meanes. No, that is a Birds meanes and not mine, for I cannot doe it; but my meanes is going, if I have legs; or riding if they be not able: or carrying if I cannot ride. Every mans mediums come in between tween that which he can and that which he cannot, and he is to uſe them, that that which he cannot he may be enabled to doe.

Secondly, becauſe God does not exhort men like a company of ſtocks and ſtones, but as men that are edifiable by his words. If there were no means they could poſſibly uſe, they were like ſtocks and ſtones. If they had no eares as means to let it in, no underſtanding as means to conceive it, no power of willing at leaſt to ſet about it, then we ſhould preach to a company of ſtocks. There muſt be ſome means propounded, that men are enabled to uſe (though by any power of their own they cannot doe it graciouſly) or elſe as good preach to a company of ſtocks. Now God proteſts he draws men as men may be drawn: I draw them with cords of a man, *Hoſ.*11.4. That is, with ſuch cords as a man may be drawn with, not like a company of ſtocks and of ſtones; if ye have but the carnal reaſon of a man, theſe cords they would draw you. God draws you like men, with cords of a man: indeed in the quickning of the heart, and in point of repentance, a man is no more active then a ſtone. But when he draws you to the means, he draws you like men, and therefore ye may come if ye will, and if ye be but men, theſe cords are cords to draw men.

Thirdly, becauſe Gods anger is very reaſonable; when a Maſter is angry with a ſervant that may doe a thing and yet will not, we call his anger a very reaſonableanger. I know Gods anger is very reaſonable, for things which thou canſt not; becauſe once he gave thee power; but when he commendeth the meanes, now this anger is very reaſonable. We our own ſelves count his anger very reaſonable in the like caſe; what will he not do it? No not uſe the meanes for to do it? Would not this anger any body? Say we ſo, for theſe things ſake comes the wrath of God upon the children of diſobedience. Eph. 5.6. That is for Adultery, for Fornication, for vain words, and vain hopes to be ſaved; for theſe things comes the wrath of God upon the children of diſobedience. He does not ſay for not being renewed, for not being converted, but for theſe things comes the wrath of God forth. He's angry for that, but his wrath comes generally forth upon men for theſe things becauſe they will not uſe the meanes; They will not give over thoſe ſinnes which are the hinderances to converſion. This is very reaſonable; if a man were not able to do it, there would be ſome ſhew at leaſt of unreaſonableneſſe in Gods anger; but there is not any ſhew of unreaſonableneſſe in his anger, when men will not buckle to the meanes which they may. When God commanded the Egyptians to ſubmit and be humbled, they would not; he commanded them at leaſt to uſe the meanes to let his people goe, and they would not. You ſhall ſee how the Text ſayes his anger now was very reaſonable: there is a ſweet phraſe, *Pſal.*78.50. He made a way to his anger: in the Hebrew tis he weighed a path to his anger. He weighed it in a ballance: Mark how reaſonably and proportionably God is angry. He puts his anger and mens ſins in a ballance, and weighs out the right meaſure of anger. When a ſervant forceth a maſter to be angry whether he will or no, he cannot complaine his Maſters anger is unreaſonable; he may go of his errands, and he will not; he may do this buſineſſe, and he will not; if he cannot do the buſineſſe it ſelfe, yet he may uſe the meanes, and will not. Now his Maſters anger is very reaſonable, becauſe he forceth him to be angry: as the churning of milk bringeth forth butter, ſo the forcing of wrath bringeth forth ſtrife. Prov.30. 33. He does even churn his Maſters paſſions, and he forceth the ſame, as a churner forcing the milk to become butter, ſo he forces ones kindneſſe to become anger; and therefore the anger is very reaſonable. So God is very reaſonable in his anger: wilt thou not uſe the meanes to be quickned? Suppoſe thou canſt not quicken thy ſelfe, but wilt thou not ſee about the meanes? This churneth the Lords anger, and his anger is very reaſonable. 3 Argu.

were ſenſeleſſe and quite dead, and could doe nothing, his offer were not ſerious: ſhould a man offer an hundred pounds to a dead carkaſe, here is an hundred pounds for you, if you'l take it, Ile give it you; this offer were not ſerious, becauſe the dead carkaſe is not able to ſtir, but is ſenſleſſe. True, in matter of Converſion it ſelfe a man is as dead as a carkaſe; nevertheleſſe he is not abſolutely a dead carkaſe to all uſe of the meanes; he hath the life of nature, and of reaſon, and of ſenſe, and therefore when God offers his Kingdome in the meanes, this offer is ſerious. Turne you at my reproofe, behold I will poure out my ſpirit unto you, Prov. 1.23. He ſpeaks there even of Reprobates and all, and he ſeriouſly offers them his Spirit, and therefore they might have gone about the means, but they would not; Vocatio Dei eſt ſeria, as our Divines doe all ſay, and therefore the means he appointeth may be uſed.

5. Argu. Fiftly, becauſe Gods reproofs are very equall. Should a man reprove a Cripple for not running, this reproofe were not equall, becauſe he is not able to doe it. I grant when God reproves the wicked for being ſinfull, ſuch reproofs are all equall, though they be not able to be without ſin: but then equality is grounded upon ſomething before, namely upon their voluntary Apoſtaſie and inability in Adam. But when God reproves them for not ſetting about the means, his reproofs then are very equall, and the equality is grounded upon their wilfulneſſe preſent; Will ye not feare me? ſayes God; I doe this and this. Mark, his reproof is very equall. God reproves Iſrael for not obſerving his Statutes, ſaying, the ſtatutes of Omri are kept. Mal. 6.16. You can obſerve his ſtatutes, why cannot you ſet about mine? he ſets up a Temple, you can goe conſtantly to it, why cannot you goe conſtantly to mine? The reproof was very equall. If thou wilt not ſet upon the means, thou art moſt equally condemned. I cannot Preach ſo often as ſome doe, nor be ſo much reſident as ſome are. No? Why wilt thou not give over one of thy two Livings then? Thou art able to doe that; If thou wilt not ſet upon the means, thy condemnation is equall. Thus I have confirmed this firſt Point, namely, that the wicked may uſe thoſe means, that the Lord commands them as means.

In the ſecond place I ſhewed, that this being thus, thy condemnation muſt be wilfull, if thou wilt not uſe all the means.

Arguments to prove it.

1 Argu. Firſt, The Lord will not help that man by a miracle to goe, that hath legs to goe and will not. Thou ſayſt thou wouldſt faine goe to Heaven; Tell me, what legs hath God given thee? what means hath he lent thee? If thou wilt not uſe them, the Lord will never help thee without. Had the Iſraelites had any means to have gotten over Jordan, as Ships, or Barks, Boats, or Bridges, or Fords, and they would not, he would never have helpt them over without. You know the Lord parted the waters, Joſh 3. 13. but if they had refuſed the means, he would not have kept them on this manner without: if they had food ſufficient in the Wilderneſſe to eat, and they would not, he would not have rained food down upon them; had they had Shoomakers, and Drapers, and Cloth ſufficient to come by, and they would not, he would never miraculouſly have kept their garments from wearing. Its a tempting of God, when thou haſt the means, and wilt not be diligent in them, to deſire God to help thee without; thou wouldſt have thy children Gods children, thy family Chriſts family; then uſe the means. Set up the conſtant Invocation of Gods Name Morning and Evening among them; ſet up Reading, ſet up Catechiſing, and every good thing, or thou canſt never expect it. Wouldſt thou be holy and heavenly? then uſe the means; Talk of Heaven in thy meetings, reaſon about grace, inquire of good ſouls, and how may I come by an humble heart? How may I get faith, and be led by the Spirit? If thou wilt not be conſtant in the uſe of the means, all thy prayers to God are nothing but temptings. Thou art troubled with by-thoughts; thou ſayſt thou wouldſt fain be delivered there-from, then uſe the means means, be not ſo long without God every houre, pray every day oftner, ſtrive in the duty the harder; if thou wilt not uſe the means, God will never help thee without. Thou art full of thy doubtings, thou ſayeſt thou heartily deſireſt to be freed; then uſe them means, or thou lyeſt: give over thy broad walking, thy broad acquaintance; thoſe that have no more holineſſe in them then the ſtock, are thy boſomeſt friends; if thou wilt not uſe the means, God will never aſſure thee without, nor convert thee without; if Dives his five brethren will not heare Moſes and the Prophets, they ſhall have no miracle from the dead, Luk. 16.18 if God lend thee the means, he will not ſave thee without.

Secondly, God will not bate a farthing of the price he ſets thee at; when a Tradeſman hath once ſet his loweſt price, he will not goe lower. Now the uſe of the means are Gods loweſt price, the Lord will not bate a farthing of that; wherefore is a price put into the hand of a foole? Prov. 17.16. the means of grace are this price, and the price is in thy hands; when the Lord vouchſafes thee the means, he'l not bate thee a farthing of this price. He ſets this price on his mercies and graces, thou muſt uſe all the means; not as though grace might be valued, no, it exceedeth all prices: or as though grace were not free; yea, its free and without price: its fit though that this price ſhould be ſet upon the almes, that the proud beggar ſhould chooſe to receive it; if thou wilt not give the price that God hath put into thy hand, thou art worthy to miſſe it; I will give ſo much, and labour ſo much, and pray ſo much, and reforme ſo much. No, no; that will not do, Chriſt will have tother odde penny too, thy filthy ſpeaking muſt off, and thy baſe paſſions and old courſes muſt off, he'l have thee ſtoop to all his holy means, wouldſt thou have it cheaper? Mine own children and Saints never had it cheaper. Not Abraham, Iſaac, not Jacob, nor Paul, they were fain to uſe all holy means, to abandon every luſt, to ſet up every duty, invocation in their families, meditation in their hearts, examination in their conſciences, holy communication in their mouthes; none of my Saints had it cheaper: & thou makeſt a mock of them for praying ſo much, and profeſſing ſo much, ſo much hearing, and ſo much gadding after Sermons, &c. Well, well, I'le not bate thee one duty, nor one luſt, nor one carnall deſire, I'le have thee ſet about all, or thou ſhalt never have mercy. Yea but I cannot find in my heart to put up this, nor to be abridged of this, and ſhall Chriſt and thou part for one ſingle farthing? Periſh then, and go and thank thine own will for it in Hell. God is reſolved upon this price, & this is the loweſt. 2 Argu.

Thirdly, God will never be brought out of his walke, thou canſt never look that God ſhould come out of his walke to ſhew thee any mercy, or give thee any grace. Now the way wherein God walkes, is the means of grace and of ſalvation; There thou muſt look for God, or thou canſt have no hope for to find him. Suppoſe a poore petitioner ſhould come with his petition to the King, he can never look to have the King come downe hither to Rochford to grant it him; No, he muſt go up to the King. The King is at Court at White-Hall, and there he may have him; if he will not go thither, he is wilfull, and if his petition be not granted, he may thank his own will: So thou canſt not looke to fetch God out of his own walke, the means of grace and ſalvation, endeavour to obey him prayings, cryings, ſeekings, &c. Theſe and other means of ſalvation are his walke, theſe are the wayes wherein they muſt wait to find God, if they would have him; in the way of thy judgements have we waited for thee. Iſa. 26.8. There the Godly wait for the Lord in the way where his walke is; he will not be ſpoken with, but only there in his walke. If thou wilt not ſeeke him there, thou maiſt thank thine own will, if thou miſſeſt him; ye that are negligent to hold out in Gods wayes, ye can never look to find mercy while ye live. Pray for mercy, and cry for mercy, and grone for mercy, ye muſt looke to periſh without it: if ye will not ſeeke it in his wayes; you'le ſeeke him in ſome, but you will not ſeke him in all, aſſure your ſelves then you ſhall miſſe of him; do you thinke 3 Argu.

the King will come to you, to grant your petitions? you muſt goe up to him, and take him where he is to be ſpoken with. God will not be ſpoken with but onely in his wayes; the Jewes received Sacraments enough every meales meat is a new Sacrament in the Wildernesſe, afterwards they prayed prayers enough, but I will not heare you ſayes God; nere tell mee of your ſeeking for mercy, waſh you, make you cleane, put away from you the evill of your doing. Learne to do well; come now and lets reaſon together, if your ſins be as red as Scarlet, I'le whiten them. Now he'l be ſpoken with if you will come hither; What not erect his feare up in thy family? not give over thy baſe carnall comforts? keep ſuch diſorders under thy roofe, and in thy life? ſweare ſtill? and give place to the Devill ſtill? curſed paſſions ſtill? mock at my children ſtill? Doſt thou walke in theſe wayes and hope to find good? No; as good cut off a doggs neck, as give him ſacrifice of prayers as long as you walke in your own wayes. Eſay.66.3. you muſt ſeeke him in the wayes that he walkes in, and not chooſe your own wayes, heele never come out of his way for any of you all; what ſhall I doe Lord? ſayes Saul, he would faine have ſpoken with God there. No, no, goe to Ananias, &c. if thou wilt not ſeeke him in his way, thou art well ſerved if thou miſſeſt him.

I beſeech you conſider this point, you can never looke to be ſaved, except youle ſet your ſelves to do what you may, and uſe all thoſe means that you may; for though the uſe of the means does not ſave you, yet they are the way, though not cauſa regnandi, yet via regni; and if you will not conſtantly uſe them, you can never have his Kingdome.

Reaſons of it.

Firſt, becauſe Heaven is an end, and an end can never be gotten without means; the end is eternall life. Rom.6.22. eternall life is an end, and therefore except the means be all uſed, you can never attaine it.

Secondly, God hath annexed it to the means; all Heaven and Earth can never ſeparate them; either uſe all the means that God hath appointed, or elſe he hath decreed it, ye ſhall never be ſaved. When he hath once appointed theſe and theſe ſhall be your means, theſe ſhall you uſe for't, ye ſhall never be ſaved without them. When God hath appointed their abiding in the ſhip a means of their eſcape, you ſhall ſee what Paul ſayes, except theſe abide in the ſhip ye cannot be ſaved, Act.27. So tis for Heaven, except ye abide in the means ye cannot be ſaved.

Thirdly, Every ſoul muſt give an account before God, how he hath uſed the means, whether he hath uſed them all yea or no. And according as the account is he can give, ſo ſhall his judgement be. God hath ſworne this, as I live ſaith the Lord; God hath pawned his own life upon this, that thus it ſhall be. As I live ſaith the Lord, every knee ſhall bow to me, and every tongue ſhall confeſſe to God: every one of us all ſhall give an account unto God, Rom.14.11,12. every one of us, God will exempt none, we muſt all be brought to an account for theſe things: will not thy heart bow to it? As I live ſaith the Lord, I'le make every knee bow to it, I'le make you bow or I'le break you for ever: as good do it as not, for ye ſhall give an account whether ye have done it or no.

Fourthly, beloved, God will not ſet up another door into Heaven for any man in the World: either come in at this, or you ſhall never come in. He'l never make another Bible, either be ruled by this or by none: He'l never chalk out another way, either go this way or chooſe, and periſh in thy wilfulneſſe. The drunkards way ſhall never be his way: the worldings way ſhall never be his, nor the lazy Goſpellers his, not the careleſſe profeſſors his, hee'le never change wayes, nor are my wayes your wayes, Eſay 55.8. you muſt amend your wayes, Ier 7.3. and come unto his way, or ye ſhall never eſcape the evil to come: can there be any reaſonabler way then this?

Proofes.

Prooſes.

Firſt, Some of the meanes that God hath appointed you may do them without labour, you may do them with eaſe: do but ſay, I will, and it is done: What labour is it to ſay, company-keepers ſhall not ſit drinking in my houſe? There is never an Ale-houſe in your Town, but if they will, they may root out diſorders from their houſes: their own wills do deſtroy them. Its no labour in the world to do this, and will ye not do it? periſh then, and thank your own wills.

Secondly, ſome of the means that God hath appointed, are eaſier then them, onely that you would give way to another to do them: may be the wife would have prayers in the family, if the husband would give way. The Miniſter would teach you, if you would give way: The Lord Jeſus might work many things in you, if you would give way: this is leſſe then to will. You that have good Wives, who would reform ſundry things, if you would give way,&c. I beſeech you apply it particularly to your ſelves, your ruin is wilfull, if ye yeild not, and will not give way.

Thirdly, Some of the means are yet eaſier; for ſome of the meanes of grace are better for you, even in your carnall and worldly reſpects. Youl ſay that's the eaſieſt of all for a man to favour himſelf and his fleſh: As for example, the reforming of your gaming, dicing, carding in your Innes, your drunkenneſſe and bezeling o're the pot; your pride and your geygaws, and the like: would not this favour your purſes, and be more agreeable to your very carnall reſpects? and therefore you that do not reform theſe, you pluck wilfull perdition on your heads.

Fourthly, ſome of the means of grace, its harder to omit them then to uſe them: Many of you meet with more hardſhips in the omiſſion, then you could light upon in the practice of them: I need not inſtance the particulars, they are very familiar.

Fifthly, ſome of the meanes of grace, be they hard, yet they are but hard, they are not impoſſible for you to uſe. They will ask no more then a little labour and diligence, and therefore omitted onely by reaſon of wil-nots.

I hope by this time you ſee clearly the truth of this ground. If ye will not ſet your ſelves to uſe the means of grace and ſalvation, when ye die you muſt needs lay the blame on your wills: And why will ye ſo? Why will ye die, O houſe of Iſrael?

But notwithſtanding the evidence of this truth, The wiſdome of the fleſh, which is enmity againſt God, fils carnall minds with many objections againſt it: from all which I ſhall endeavour to vindicate it, by anſwering them all in order.

1 Object.

THe firſt objection is drawn from thoſe Scriptures which ſay they cannot. 2 Object.

From their own willingneſſe, they would, but they cannot. 3 Object.

Is from their own deſires, they deſire to do it, but they are not able. 4 Object.

Is from their reſolutions, they purpoſe, but whether they will or no, they are faine to break their good purpoſes. 5 Object.

Is from their good endeavours (as they ſay;) they labour againſt their ſins, and yet they are tranſported into them, to ſwear before they are aware, to be overtaken in company, &c. We will anſwer them in order.

1 Object.

As to the firſt Objection from the Scriptures whichſay they cannot, I anſwer. anſwered.

Indeed the Scripture ſpeaks of five cannots.

There are five cannots in Scripture:

First, of a naturall cannot; every man is born by nature under a cannot believe, and a cannot ſee God: But there is difference between thy cannot repent, and thy doeſt not repent: there is difference betwixt theſe two. 1 Cannot.

The cauſe of thy cannot is one thing, and the cauſe of thy doeſt not another. The cauſe of thy cannot is the carnalneſſe of nature, but the cauſe of thy doeſt not, is the wilfulneſſe of thy will. The naturall man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are fooliſhneſſe to him; neither indeed can he, for they are ſpiritually diſcerned, 1 *Cor.*2.14. Where the Apoſtle gives a different cauſe of a naturall mans cannot, and his does not: when he ſpeakes of his cannot, he tells us the cauſe of that is becauſe grace is ſpirituall, and he is carnall. Neither indeed can he, becauſe they are ſpiritually diſcerned: but when he ſpeakes of his does not, you ſee he alledges a different cauſe of his does not. The naturall man does not receive the things of the ſpirit of God, they are fooliſhneſſe unto him; he counts them all fooliſh: He is ſo wilfull in his own carnall reaſon, that he counts it folly to deny it. Thou canſt not do thus and thus doſt thou ſay? Why then wilt thou count it folly to do ſo? when a man croſſes thee of thy will, thou counteſt it folly to put it up; I were a foole if I ſhould be ſo preciſe as ſome be: I were a foole if I ſhould not ſuffer a little diſorder in my houſe, as long as I gaine by it: This is meere wilfulneſſe; this, and not a cannot, is a cauſe of thy doeſt not. Thou canſt not indeed becauſe thou art carnall, but thy cannot is dead and not operative: thy will is the cauſe of thy does not; Like the wilfull blind man, He was blind and would not open his eye-lids. He could not ſee, but his cannot lay dead, for he would not open his eye-lids: his cannot is not operative till he will open his eye-lids. If he could ſee, yet he could not till he would open his eye-lids, ſo thou wilt not open thine eye-lids.

Secondly, the Scripture ſpeakes of a deliberate cannot, when a man cannot do a thing, onely becauſe he cannot find in his heart to do it. Thou canſt not repent of this and that ſinne and forſake it, the truth is, thy cannot is this, thou canſt not find in thy heart to forgoe it. Such a courſe is profitable and pleaſing to thy fleſh, thou canſt not find in thy heart to abandon it, thou canſt not find in thy heart to be friends with ſuch a one; to part with thy vanities, or to abridge thy ſelfe of thine angry ſpeeches when thou art ſtird, &c. Thou canſt not find in thy heart to do it. As the Jewes, you cannot believe, ſayes Chriſt, becauſe ye ſeeke honour one of another. Joh. 5.44. they would faine be well thought of all their acquaintance, and therefore they could not find in their heart to believe in Chriſt. Oh that would make thee to be out of favour with the Phariſees, and to be counted baſely of in the World. Therefore they could not find in their heart to believe, now this is no excuſe; thou canſt not turne unto God, thou canſt not find in thy heart to part with thy luſts, this is thy cannot.

3 Cannot. Thirdly, the Scripture ſpeakes of a judiciall cannot, as a rogue cannot goe, becauſe for his loytering the Magiſtrate hath lockt him in the ſtocks; This does not excuſe thee one jot; ſhall the villaine be wilfull in his loytering and then complaine of the Magiſtrate that he is not able to go about his worke? I cannot goe about my worke ſayes he; and who bad him be ſo idle as not to goe about it, when he might? Thou haſt gone on may be wilfully in thy ſinnes and now the Lord hath inflicted a judiciall cannot upon thee. Thou canſt not come out of thy ſinnes, nay the Lord hath caſt this cannot upon thee in judgement; he hath ſet thee in the ſtockes for thy wilfull ſecurity. As the wicked Jewes, they could not believe, ſayes the Text, becauſe Iſaiah ſaith, He hath blinded their eyes, and hardened their hearts, Joh. 12.39,40. could they excuſe themſelves for their cannot? No, the Lord had ſet them in the ſtockes for their wilfulneſſe and ſecurity. They could not believe, for they had wilfully provoked the Lord to caſt this cannot upon them in judgement.

4 Cannot. Fourthly, the Scripture ſpeaks of a compounded cannot; A cannot in ſenſu compoſito, as we call it, a cannot in a compounded ſenſe. As a Drunkard cannot tender his family, his poore wife and children. No, as long as he lies bowſing ſing on the Ale-bench he cannot, in a compounded ſenſe he cannot. Ariſtotle ſets it out by ſitting; he that is ſitting cannot walk, that is, as long as he is ſitting he cannot walk. As Chriſt ſaith of a carnall man, he cannot be my diſciple: he cannot in a compounded ſenſe: He that comm th to me, and hates not father and mother, and wife, and children, yea and his own life, cannot be my Diſciple; *Luk.*14.26. he cannot indeed, ſo long as he ſtands upon theſe terms, My father will not love me, and my mother will not like me; if I ſhould be one of your Diſciples, my friends would not own me; I muſt doe as I doe, or I cannot keep my wife and children. Indeed as long as thou ſtandſt on theſe terms, thou canſt not be a Diſciple of Chriſt, thou canſt not in a compounded ſenſe, but if thou wouldſt; divide it, thou mightſt: no man can ſerve two maſters, *Mat.*6.3. mark, compound them together and he cannot; but if he would give over one, he might ſerve the other: thou canſt not thou ſayeſt, No, I yeeld thee in a compounded ſenſe thou canſt not, thou canſt not as long as thou art thus careleſſe as thou art, as long as thou favoureſt thy ſelf in ſuch and ſuch luſts, thou canſt not. The compounding of thy ſecurity and lazineſſe with Religion, that is the reaſon why thou canſt not; this is it that makes our prayers hard, and our repentings hard, our believings and all our performances hard, becauſe we would fain be compounding. We have much adoe to Pray, our hearts can hardly be brought to wreſtle, much adoe to be humbled, our wils will hardly ſtoop, if it were not for theſe compoundings, theſe duties were eaſie. And what excuſe haſt thou hence? none at all: for its a cannot onely in the compounded ſenſe that thou makeſt it.

Inward diſeaſe ſets men amiſs.

Note.

Fifthly, the Scripture ſpeaks of a humbling cannot, a cannot not to bolſter thee up in thy excuſes, but onely to humble thee, that thou mayſt be driven out of thy ſelfe unto God. A ſervant cannot live, except it be his Maſters pleaſure to take pitty on him; Is this any pretence to him to anger his Maſter? or to be negligent of his Maſters commands? nay rather it forceth him to be ſo much the more carefull to obey him, and to be humble before him. So the Scripture ſayes, that thou canſt not without God, except God ſhew mercy on thee to convert thee and ſave thee, thou canſt not be accepted of him. All this is to humble thee, not to help thee with excuſes. Tuſh I cannot doe as his Miniſters doe bid me, I cannot mortifie theſe ſins, I cannot be ſo ſtrict, this is too much preciſeneſſe you ſpeak of. O murmure not, this cannot is only to humble thee: murmure not among your ſelves; No man cometh to me, except the Father draw him, *Joh.*6.43,44. This is no reaſon why thou ſhouldſt murmure or cavill, or be ſtubborne as thou art, thou canſt not come at Chriſt, except the Father take pitty on thee to draw thee. Thou haſt ſo much the more reaſon to be humbled, and not to goe on wittingly and wilfully as thou doſt. Canſt thou not be holy and ſaved, except he be pleaſed to pitty thee? in what a wofull caſe then art thou, to provoke him as thou doſt? So much ſhall ſuffice for thy firſt Objection drawn out of the Scripture.

5 Cannots

The ſecond thing thou objecteſt, is thy willingneſſe; thou wouldſt as thou pretendeſt, but thou canſt not.

I anſwer thee for this.

Firſt, may be its the will of thy conſcience, and not the will of thy heart; thy heart is carnall and unacquainted with God, and ſo its contented to be, onely thy conſcience would have thee grow better and more heavenly, but thy heart will not yeeld; and therefore all thy willings are nothing but deludings. they are onely the willings of conſcience, and not of thy heart. Thou art chafing and fretting every foot, thy conſcience tells thee thou ſhouldſt not; thou art praying carnally every day, when thou haſt done, conſcience ſayes thou ſhouldſt pray holyer then ſo; conſcience would, but thou wilt not, conſcience would have thee get aſſurance for Heaven, but thou wilt not be at the pains. Alas, this makes thee inexcuſable, for now thou condemneſt thy ſelfe, and yet wilt ſin; Thou art inexcuſable O man whoſoever thou art that judgeſt, for wherein thou judgeſt another, thou condemneſt thy ſelfe, Rom. 2. 11. Mark, when a man condemneth himſelf, he is inexcuſable. (I doe not now quote it for the particular the Apoſtle does inſtance there for judging another) for the truth is is the ſame, whatſoever ſinne we doe inſtance in, the truth is this that Paul grounds his ſpeech on: He that condemneth himſelf in a ſin, and yet will goe on in it, that man is inexcuſable. What now haſt thou gotten by thy plea? thou wouldſt, thou ſayſt; this makes thy ſinne to be worſe, in that thy conſcience would, and yet for all that thou wilt not.

Note.

Secondly, may be its a copulative will; thou haſt a will to repent and be godly, but it is with a copulative will. Repentance and ſome luſt, Godlineſſe and ſome luſt; thou wouldſt fain pleaſe the Lord and thine own luſt too; be religious and proud too; believe in Chriſt and covet too, and be vain too, &c. Thou haſt a will but it is a copulative will, to ſerve God and do this too; Piſh, cannot I ſerve God, and doe this too? No, no, this ſame copulative will is a flat contradiction. Couple light and darkneſſe? Chriſt and Belial? 2 Cor 6. 15. Its a contradiction to imagine to couple them, for they cannot poſſibly be coupled. And therefore this ſame copulative will is nothing but a mockery, and the truth ſtill is this, thou wilt not.

Thirdly, May be thou haſt a woulding will; this is no will, but onely a velleity; ſo thou haſt a woulding will. I would do as well as any other, but I cannot; to ſpeake properly this is no will, for its onely that will wherewith fooles will things impoſſible; I would I were at London with a wiſh, ſayes he; I would I could flie as well as an Eagle. Theſe things are impoſſible, and therefore its no will, but meere folly; thus may be thou willeſt grace, I would with all my heart I could do as God ſayes, God knowes my heart, my will is good, I would be better then I am; And yet thy conſeience can call for ſomething or other to be mended, and thou wilt not. This is an impoſſibility, and therefore no will; like the foole that would ſit in his chaire, I, and would I were at London, he would faine be at London, and ſit ſtill. So thou ſitteſt at the ſame paſſe, I would I were in Chriſt; thou wouldeſt faine be in Chriſt, and yet thou art loth to ſtirre out of that baſe temper thou art in. This is an impoſſibility, a folly and no will; woulding and no willing. I grant the Saints of God have their wouldings, and their would does go further then their will; their will is abſolutely ſet to be holy, and they would be more holy; their will is deeply to be humbled, and they would be deeper; their would is grounded on a will, they will in ſome meaſure and they would goe further. I will, oh that I could will more! But thou that lieſt in thy ſinfull eſtate, thy would is pure folly. A would grounded upon a will not, is foppiſh; the Saints would is grounded upon a will; but thine, the root at bottome is this, thou wilt not.

Note.

Fourthly, may be thou haſt a generall metaphyſicall will, but to come particulars, there thou wilt not. I hate the Saints of God? God forbid; I'le never hate them while I live; and yet come to this Saint and that Saint, him thou wilt hate; him? He is the verieſt hypocrite in the Country, and keepes more adoe then needs. Thus thy will is good to a company of metaphyſical Saints in the clouds; but thoſe that are Gods Saints in particular, thou mockeſt. I be ſtubborne againſt the Commandements of God? I will not be ſtubborne againſt them; yea, but this and that Commandement thou wilt not obſerve. Thou wilt not thinke beſt of them of whom thou ſhouldeſt, nor take up that carriage in meetings that thou ſhouldeſt; thou haſt a good will to the Commandements in affliction, but thy will ſtands againſt the particulars of them. Generals are but Notions, when they are abſtracted from the particulars. And therefore thy will is but a Notion; the will when it willeth indeed, willeth particulars, this particular duty, this particular Ordinance. Indeed good, in,

When carnall men can diſcover no other blemiſh in the Saints, then they charge them with hypocriſy.

the generall is the object of the will, but when the will comes to will in the exerciſe of it, it pitcheth on particulars.

Fifthly, thou haſt no true will, I ſpeak ſtill to the carnall, I ſay thou haſt no true will, becauſe if thou truly didſt will, thou couldſt; if thou didſt truly will to believe, and will to be a new creature, thou couldſt; for the will it hath potentiam executivam, ſo farre as it will &c. It hath an executing power to goe ſo farre as it wills; if thou didſt truly and really will to ſpeak holy, thy will would make thy tongue to put it in excution. If thou hadſt a will, thy will would command execution, my tongue ſhall ſpeak the praiſe of the Lord, ſayes David, Pſal. 119.171.172. my ſoul it ſhall praiſe thee, verſe 175. I grant the woulding of the will goes further then all execution can goe, to will is preſent with me, but how to performe that which is good, I find not, Rom 7.18. I quote this place the rather, becauſe many wreſt it to their own deſtruction Oh ſayes a wicked man, I have a good will, I would as Paul ſayes, but I cannot performe, thus men miſinterpret this place; for look how farre Paul would, he could performe, for the will hath potentiam executricem, and an imperative force over the man. What he did will, he did performe, he performed it in his heart, and tongue, and hand, &c. but he would draw his will forwarder then it was, but he could not; his very will was partly unwilling, he could not indeed performe ſo much as he would, that is, he could not draw on his will ſo ſtrongly as he would. His will was not perfectly ſanctified, no Saint in this World hath any perfect compleatneſſe of will; and therefore his performance is not perfect, becauſe his will is not perfect I ſay if thy will be converted to God, thou thy ſelf art converted to God, obedience ever goes as farre as the will. And therefore if thou art willing, its certain thou art obedient; if ye be willing and obedient, ſayes the Text, Iſa. 1.19. whoſoever is willing to obey, that man does obey in ſome meaſure, becauſe the will hath power of execution, and the whole man at command. This is the reaſon why Divines ſay, that the ſincerity of the will is the condition of the Goſpel; wherefore if thou beeſt not obedient, neither art thou willing to obey; all the powers of thy ſoule, and all the members of thy body, thy will hath an actus imperativus to command them. Now if thy will will not command them to yeild, thou art not ſo much as willing at all. If a Juſtice of peace ſhould tell me he would give me a warrant, and yet when all comes to all he will not command his clerk to write it, nor his own hand for to pen it, I ſee plainly he will not. Doſt thou ſay, I would obey Chriſt, and I would deny my ſelf, why then doſt thou not command thy Clerke to write it? If thy will will not command tongue, Tongue thou ſhalt never talk ſo unprofitably as thou haſt done, and Eare thou ſhalt never hearken after vanity as thou haſt done; and thoughts, Thoughts ye ſhall never run at rovers as ye have done. If your will were but willing it would command your whole ſoul, Soul thou ſhalt not doe as thou haſt done: as Davids will commanded his ſoul, O my ſoul bleſſe the Lord and forget thou not all his benefits, Pſal. 103.2. Nay, he commanded all that was in him, all that is in me bleſſe his holy Name, ver. 1. So if thou wert willing, thy will would command all thy ſoul; ſoul thou ſhalt not be ſo ſeldome at the throne of grace as thou art, &c. Thus much of the ſecond objection drawn from the will.

Objection the third.

But thou deſireſt to doe it, and therefore thou doſt not ſtick at a will not.

3. Objection, anſwered.

I anſwer thee, who can tell beſt what is in thee, God or thine own heart? verily the Lord that did make it is likelieſt to know beſt: Now the Lord ſayes peremptorily, thou deſireſt not grace; yea, and thy heart ſayes ſo too, and the Lord heares it. though thou heareſt it not; they ſaid unto God, depart from us, we deſire not the knowledge of thy wayes, Job. 21.14. Nevertheleſſe, becauſe thou ſtandeſt ſo ſtoutly upon it, that thou doſt deſire grace, I'le tell thee the reaſon of thy miſtake.

Firſt,

First, thou haſt putative or thinking deſires, thou thinkeſt thou deſireſt, and therefore thou art miſtaken; like Seneca's young ſcholar, that ſaid, he deſired to be good. I doe not ſay, ſaith he, he lies, but putat ſe cupere, He thinks that he deſires; ſo thou ſayeſt thou deſireſt; I will not ſay thou lyeſt, but thou thinkeſt thou doſt ſo; now alas thy thoughts are the vaineſt things in the 2 Kings 5.31 World. How long ſhall vain thoughts lodge within thee? Jer. 4.14. thy thoughts are very vaine, there is no truſting in them. Naaman thought, I thought, ſaith
Eſt. 6.6. he, but how wide his thought was the ſtory declares. Haman thought, he thought in his heart, ſayes the Text; but theſe thoughts came to nothing but a Gallowes and a Halter. Iſhbibenos thought, but you know what his thoughts did come unto; it fell foule on his own head, nothing is more vaine then the thoughts of carnall mens hearts, ſo thou thinkeſt thou deſireſt, alas thy thought is but vanity.

Secondly, thou haſt ignorant deſires, thou doſt deſire to be one of Gods Saints, thou deſireſt it ignorantly; for when thou comeſt to ſee who the Saints be, namely, ſuch and ſuch whom thou conceiveſt to be ſtrange people and Puritans, then thou haſt no deſire to be one. Thou deſireſt to goe after Chriſt, thou doſt ignorantly deſire it, for when thou ſeeſt thou muſt take up his croſſe, then thou haſt no deſire thereunto; as the Prophet ſpeaks of Chriſt in the perſon of the wicked, when we ſhall ſee him, there is no beauty that we ſhould deſire him, Eſay. 53.2. thou deſireſt with ignorant deſires before thou ſeeſt who he is; but when thou ſeeſt who he is, thou doſt not deſire him. Thou deſireſt his grace, thou deſireſt to believe and repent, and to put up injuries, theſe are ignorant deſires before thou ſeeſt what they be; but when thou ſeeſt what they be, what the injury is that thou ſhouldſt put up, then thou doſt not deſire to put it up; what the ſinne is that thou ſhouldſt leave, then thou doſt not deſire for to leave it; when thou ſeeſt them, then thou doſt not deſire them. When we ſhall ſee him, there is no beauty that we ſhould deſire him.

Thirdly, thou haſt wandering deſires. Oh ſaith one, you have a happy turne, you have good Preaching, and good meanes to be godly, and be edified. I deſire to be ſo; but alas our Miniſter does not Preach, and we have a dumb dog; and I am in a very wicked place, If I were as you are, I ſhould count my ſelf happy. God knowes, I deſire heartily the edification of my ſoul; thus thy deſires wander after other mens caſes; and thou wilt not ſtirre out for thine own. How doſt thou deſire to be edified, when thou wilt not ſtir out two or three miles to be edified? Thy deſires are like wandering vagrants, that will be every where wandering, but only there where they ſhould be. So thy deſires goe roving up and down, you are happy; and he is happy and thou art unwilling in the meane time to labour, where and how God hath appointed thee. Theſe are none but gadding, wandering deſires; better is the ſight of the eyes then the wandering of the deſire. Eccl. 6.9. thy deſires wander abroad to a roming company of wiſhes, but thou wilt not obſerve that which God gives thee to ſee; thus much of the third Objection drawn from deſire.

The fourth Objection.

Thou reſolveſt and haſt good purpoſes, but oh thou canſt not performe them.

I anſwer thee, doe but conſider what thy purpoſe is, and thou ſhalt ſee how thou art cozened; theſe purpoſes thou ſpeak'ſt of are only voluntates de futuro. I will hereafter look to it better then I have done heretofore. Hereafter I will, I purpoſe, that is hereafter I will; alas, this will for hereafter is no will.

Firſt, becauſe its only to ſhuffle off the willing for the preſent. Now the heart is unwilling to obey, and therefore it puts off the commandment to hereafter, not for any ſuch deſire that it hath to doe it hereafter, but only becauſe it is unwilling to doe it for the preſent. Like a man that is unwilling to lend, Ile lend you hereafter, ſayes he. Say not unto thy neighbour, goe and come again, again, & to morrow I will give thee, when thou haſt it by thee. Prov. 3. 28. His purpoſe to lend him to morrow, was onely becauſe he would ſhuffle off the lending him to day. And therefore this purpoſe of willing hereafter, is no will at all, but onely to ſhuffle off the willing for the preſent. Thou haſt the opportunity by thee, why doſt thou not take it? thou haſt the temptation by thee, why doſt thou not reſiſt it? doſt thou ſay thou haſt a will for hereafter? that is but a gull, that thou mayſt not will for the preſent.

Secondly, this will for hereafter is no will, becauſe it goes without Gods, no will can go without God. Gods will is now, he would have thee now, and thou wilt not, thou wilt hereafter, but then may be he will not. He that will not when he may, when he would he ſhall have nay; afterwards when thou wouldſt fain be converted, and pardoned, &c. Lord open to me, nay but O man, when I would thou wouldſt not; now thou wouldſt, but I will not, thy will for hereafter goes without Gods, and therefore tis no will.

Thirdly, thy will for hereafter is no will, becauſe thou ſhalt miſſe thoſe ſuppoſitions that thou willeſt upon.

Firſt, thou ſuppoſeſt thou ſhalt have fewer temptations hereafter. O when theſe troubles are over, and theſe temptations are over, I will, nay, but O man, when theſe are all over, new ones will come; and if the temptation for the preſent be a hindrance, ſome temptation or other as bad thou ſhalt meet with, that ſhall hinder thee hereafter much more, & therefore this ſuppoſition is falſe.

Secondly, thou ſuppoſeſt thou ſhalt be fitter hereafter; but, Qui non eſt hodie, cras minimus aptus erit, if thou beeſt not fit now, much leſſe wilt thou be afterwards; thou'lt be unfitter and unfitter, like meat, the longer it is kept, the unfitter tis to be eaten, and therefore this ſuppoſition is falſe too.

Fourthly, thy will for hereafter is no will, but a mockery. Antigonus ὁ δώσων, Antigonus, I will give, this is not good in mens Lawes, much leſſe in Gods. Dabo, I will give; this is no gift, ſayes the Law. So reſipiſcam, I will repent; this is no repentance, ſayes God. Thus you ſee this Objection is nothing, never tell me of thy purpoſes, thy purpoſes are willings for hereafter, and they are no wills at all.

The fifth Objection. 5 Object. anſwered.

Thou endeavoureſt and laboureſt to ſerve God, and to be ſaved.

I anſwer thee, Alas? Is this to labour for grace, and for Heaven when thou laboureſt ſo idlely? as God ſaid of that faſting ſo may I ſay of thy labour, is this the faſt that I have choſen? to afflict a mans ſelfe for a day? So, is this the labour that I have choſen? To labour ſo as thou laboureſt? but I need not to inſiſt on this plea, thy conſcience is able to anſwer it. Thou labour? thy conſcience knowes well enough thou art lazy, thou doſt not labour for holineſſe; ſo then thy impenitency is wilfull, and thy damnation wilfull, and thy ruine wilfull.

To conclude then, underſtand all you that will not hear and obey.

Firſt that your deſtruction is from your ſelfe, you cannot caſt it upon God: he offers you the means to eſcape it, and you will not, Hoſ 13. 9.

Secondly, your deſtruction is moſt juſt you cannot alledge ſeverity and cruelty; no; your ſelves are cruell ones. You judge your own ſelves unto Hell. The Lord preſſeth the Goſpel of grace upon you, and you put it off Act. 13. 46.

Thirdly, your deſtruction is inexcuſable, you having nothing to excuſe you: God hath taken away all cloaks of excuſes, he hath offered you ſaving knowledge, & you would not, a Chriſt, and ye would not: good motions, counſells, threatnings, and you would not. Your mouthes are quite ſtopped when you periſh, Matth. 22. 12.

Fourthly, your deſtruction is unavoidable; if you would have relented and yielded, there might have been hope, but you would not. You have hardned your necks, and what's that but a will not? Therefore you ſhall be deſtroyed without remedy, Prov. 29 1.

Fifthly, your deſtruction is pittileſſe; what eye can pitty you? Will will have will, though Will will have woe, as we ſay; not God, nor Angels, nor Saints, no eye can pitty you. If the thiefe will ſteale, and will to the Gallowes, let him go, he is no object of pitty: as we ſay of a wilfull man, no tale can tune him to take heed, ſo no means can tune you to take heed; and therefore when you rue it, you cannot be pitied.

Sixthly, your deſtruction is grievous; of all plagues, none will fret more then thoſe which one hath wilfully puld on himſelfe. You'l one day gnaſh your own teeth, curſe your own wils, banne your own hearts; woe is me, I am under the rod, and my ſelfe gathered it; in Hell, and my ſelfe kindled it. I might have prevented it, but I would not.

Now followes the Application.

Uſe 1: Learne inſtruction then, leſt ye periſh wilfully; reforme as much as you may, downe with all your diſorders, ſtumbling-blocks of iniquitie, and all the Idals of your hearts, and caſt them into the brooke Kidron. Set up good courſes as much as you may, uſe all the means to ſalvation as humbly as you may; let not any family be without the due worſhip of God in it. Fathers, ſuffer not ſinne in your children, nor Maſters in your ſervants, lie not, ſweare not, covet not, omit not the exerciſes of hope, leſt ye juſtly, inexcuſable, unavoydably, pittileſly periſh, and ſo reproach your owne wils for ever in Tophet; as David then ſaid unto Solomon, after he had ſet him buſineſſes to do, ariſe therefore and be doing, and the Lord be with thee, ſayes he, 1 *Chron.*22.16. So I may ſay to you, Ariſe and be doing; up, ſet about it, uſe no excuſes, humble your ſelves before God, ſee your miſery and bewaile it, and the Lord be with you.

But may be you will ſay, this Doctrine is Pelagianiſme, or Arminianiſme at leaſt. Nay then, let me tell you, tis Arminianiſme to hold the contrary. You make your wills to be your own, and free for to will, that ſay your will is to repent, but you cannot. And if God ſhould give you a poſſe, ye profeſſe your ſelves to be of the Pelagian hereſie; if God ſhould give you a power you would adde the will. To paſſe over this, and ſo to go on.

Except the beliefe of this truth do ſink into thy heart, thou canſt never ſoundly be humbled; if thou ſhouldſt ſay, Lord, I would faine have repented all this while, but I could not, thou never ſoundly wert humbled: a man is never humbled as long as he excuſes himſelfe: thou ſayeſt I would be holier, I would pray better, and I would reform more, but I cannot; this is to fall to excuſes, and not to be humbled: For,

Firſt, thou excuſeſt thy ſelf for all tranſgreſſions beſides originall. A man muſt be humbled for his actuall ſins as well as originall, and count himſelf inexcuſable for one as well as tother. But thou pitcheſt all thy humiliation upon thy Apoſtacy in Adam, if now thou pleadeſt a cannot. Lord I confeſs I was conceived in ſin, but now I cannot do withall; I cannot do otherwiſe though I would never ſo fain. I cannot but drink now & then & be drunk, I cannot but rap out an Oath now and then in my haſt, &c. I confeſs I brought this cannot upon me in the loyns of Adam; but upon the ſuppoſall of that, doeſt thou bid me give over my ſins? I cannot; this is not to be humbled but to fall to excuſes. Its true, actuall corruption which naturally flows from originall, requires that one and ſelf ſame humiliation that originall does. But otherwiſe thou muſt be humbled with a new humiliation for thine actuall tranſgreſſions, or elſe thou art not humbled but pleadeſt excuſes. David humbles himſelfe for both, with one humiliation for the one, *Pſal.*51.5. with another for the other, *v.*3. But as long as thou pleadeſt on this faſhion, thou excuſeſt thy ſelf for thy actuall ſins, and never art humbled.

2 Excuſe. Nay 2ly. thou excuſeſt thy ſelf for thy originall ſin too. Lord, I would be without ſin, but I cannot, if I could I would: belike then if it had been thy caſe as it was Adams, thou wouldſt not have eaten of the forbidden fruit. And therefore it was his fault and not thine, thou wouldſt not have ſinned if thou couldſt have otherwiſe chooſed. And therefore thou excuſeſt thy ſelfe for that too for thou ſayeſt thou wouldſt not have ſinned if thou hadſt been as he, he ſinned when he might have otherwiſe chooſed; but thou wouldſt not have done ſo. Thus thou excuſeſt thy ſelfe for thine originall ſinne too; And therefore thou canſt not be humbled as long as thou pleadeſt thus; the truth is thou didſt willingly ſin as well Adam. God made man upright, but they have ſought out many inventions. Eccleſ. 7. 29. he ſpeaketh of Adams being upright; God made Adam upright: he does not ſay but man hath found out many inventions, as though it were his fault alone that was created upright. No, God made man upright, but they, marke, he caſts the blame upon every man as well as Adam; but they have ſought out many inventions. Thus we muſt be humbled for our originall corruption: but thou canſt not be humbled as long as thou pleadeſt on this manner; no, thou excuſeſt thy ſelfe, and therefore thou wert never yet humbled. Note.

Nay thirdly, thou excuſeſt thy ſelf for every ſin, thou makeſt all thy ſins to be nothing but infirmities, as though Pauls caſe were thine: the good which I would do, that do I not, and the evill which I would not do, that do I. I would be godlier then I am, but I cannot; and therefore thou makeſt all thy ſins to be infirmities. What is a ſin of infirmity but a ſin the will proteſteth againſt? thou ſayeſt that thy will proteſteth againſt every one of thy ſins, thou wouldſt leave them, but thou canſt not. See then how farre thou art from ſound humiliation: thy preſumptuous ſins are all nothing with thee, thy ſtubbornneſſe nothing, and thy wilfulneſſe nothing, no all thy ſins are infirmities. Nay, thou makeſt thy ſins to be purely and only infirmities, invincible infirmities; invincible infirmities are the moſt excuſable of all. Now when thou ſayeſt thou ſticketſt at a Cannot, thou makeſt thy ſins not only infirmities, but alſo invincible infirmities, ſuch as thou canſt not poſſibly avoid; thou wouldſt fain avoid them but thou canſt not: and therefore if thou goeſt this way to work, thou canſt never be humbled. 3 Excuſe. Sin of infirmity.

Nay fourthly, Thou commendeſt thy ſelfe more then God. nay if ever God ſhould enable thee and give thee power to be a new creature, thou makeſt thy ſelfe more beholding to thy ſelfe then to God. The will is more then the power: the will to believe, and repent, and conver, is more then the power: Actus ſecundus eſt nobilior actu primo. To be able to believe, and to be able to repent, and become a new Creature, theſe are but firſt acts If God would help thee to theſe, thou ſayeſt thou wouldſt adde tother. Thou wouldſt believe, and thou wouldſt convert, and thou wouldſt be a new creature: if God would give thee the power, thou wouldſt adde the Act. And therefore thou commendeſt thy ſelfe more then God: for in morall powers which have a further reference unto Act, the act is more noble then the power. The truth is, the will is better then the power of doing; and both is of God, and ſo the Apoſtle does ſhew it. Its God that worketh in you, ſpeaking of the Saints, Its God that worketh in you both the will and the deed,, Phil. 1. 13. Mark, the will and the deed: Firſt the will, and then power to bring it into deed; the will is the primary bleſſing of God. And this is the reaſon why a Child of Gods eſtate is now better under Chriſt, then it was before in innocency; for then he had only power if he would, and now both the will and the deed. I ſay this is the truth, the will is more then the power; and therefore thou wert never humbled in thy ſelfe, that pleadeſt, O I would, if I could; thou makeſt thy ſelfe more beholding to thy ſelfe then to God, if God ſhould ever convert thee, and therefore thou art not yet capable of converſion; why? thou art not yet humbled, but ſtandſt at proud terms with the Lord. 4 Excuſe. Note

5 Excuſe. Nay fifthly, thou canſt not ſo much as pray to God for a will, thou art ſo proud, that thou art conceited thou haſt that already. I have as good a will to be good as any body elſe, but I cannot poſſibly do as I would; ſo that all thy prayers to God are a mockery: The godly humble ſoul prayes as the ancient Church uſed to pray; Lord give me a will to be good, which my will is ſet againſt. But thou canſt not pray ſo, thou art a richer beggar then ſo; for thou hadſt a good will already thou thinkeſt. A man cannot pray for a thing the lack whereof he is not ſenſible thereof: If any man lack wiſdome, let him aſk it of God, James 1.5. He cannot pray for a thing if he do not think that he lacks it, nor thou for a will, for thou doeſt not think that thou lackeſt it. Nay if God ſhould convert thee, thou canſt not give him thanks for converting thee, for thy will needed none: may be thou wilt pray for poſſibilities till thou haſt them, and give him thanks for poſſibilities when thou haſt them, but thou canſt not pray for a will, for thou thinkeſt thou haſt it; nor give him thanks for thy will, for that is thine own: So that thou art deviliſhly proud, never humbled ſince thou wert borne: Nay thou art ſo proud, that all thy prayers are but mockeries, and thy giving of thanks is a mockery. How canſt thou look that God ſhould convert thee, when as thy proud heart tells God before hand, thou wouldſt not thank him if he ſhould?

Apud Caſſandrum, Domine, dece me quod no volo.

6 Excuſe. Nay ſixthly, Thou caſteſt all the blame upon God; for its even juſt as if thou ſhouldſt ſay, I cannot help it, if God be not pleaſed to enable me, how can I help it? my will is as good as anothers, ſuch are ſo forward and ſo Heavenly, God gives them the power; but my will God knowes is as good as theirs, I would fain do as well as the beſt, but I cannot; O if God would enable me, I would. O Beloved, take heed of theſe conceits, for ye caſt all the blame upon God; whereas the blame is in your ſelves, ye would not be enabled. I ſay ye caſt all the blame upon God.

Carnal men excuſe themſelves, and caſt the blame upon God.

1 Demon. Firſt, becauſe ye caſt the blame upon nature, its my nature, and I cannot; I would, but its my nature and I cannot. Thou layeſt the blame upon thy Nature, and therefore thou caſteſt the blame upon God for not helping thee to a better nature: it is God that juſtly determines mens natures. Ones nature is more cholerick, anothers more fearfull, another more lazy, anothers more luſtfull. Doſt thou lay the blame upon nature, my nature is more ſubject to choler, and wrath? Alas, thou layeſt the blame upon God, for its he that diſpoſeth of mens natures; and therefore, thou takeſt part with thoſe wretches that ſaid, why haſt thou made me thus? Rom. 9.20. thou layeſt the blame upon God, I would not do thus, but onely 'tis my nature, and I cannot helpe it. No. And wilt thou lay the blame upon God? No, no: this is thy nature and thou art contented with this nature.

2 Demon. Secondly, Thou doſt caſt the blame upon temptations, it is my hard hap to fall upon temptations. I was tempted or I would not have done it: this is to caſt the blame upon God too, for it is his providence to order temptations. Such and ſuch temptations for one man, ſuch and ſuch for another, ſuch now, and ſuch then. Its the providence of God that diſpoſeth which and which temptations every man ſhall have. One ſhall have temptations to Pride, another temptations to Wrath, another to Revenge, another to Coveteouſneſſe. Its true, God tempteth no man, but he orders the temptations of men. Let no man ſay he is tempted of God, for God tempteth no man. No, every man is tempted to ſin by his own luſts. Thus thou wouldſt ſay if thou wert humbled, but thou layeſt the blame upon God: it was long of temptations that I did it. This is as if thou ſhouldſt ſay, 'twas long of God that I did it, becauſe 'twas Gods providence that ſuffered theſe temptations to be laid for thee.

Jam. 1.13.

3 Demon. Thirdly, becauſe thou layeſt the blame upon the times, the times are very hard. I would not goe in this faſhion, but onely that the times require it. I would be more given to faſting and repeating the Word, &c. I would willingly ly be more forward then I am, but the times are very bad; This is to lay the blame upon God, for God ſetteth every mans time. If I had been in Chriſts time, or Pauls time, or Queen Elizabeths time, I would have done thus and thus; thou layeſt the blame upon God, for God ſetteth every mans time; When God from eternity made his common-place-Book of all the whole World, he appointed ſuch and ſuch to live firſt, ſuch next, and ſuch laſt; Such and ſuch to live here, and ſuch there; Such at Rochford, and ſuch at London; ſo ſayes the Apoſtle, he hath made of one blood all Nations of men, to dwell on all the face of the Earth; and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitations. Act. 17.26. Mark, he hath appointed the times, and the places, the times when they ſhall live, and the places where. God ſetteth mens times and therefore thou which layeſt the blame upon the times, layeſt the blame upon God.

Fourthly, becauſe thou layeſt the blame upon this Commandement, if it were any Commandement but this, I would doe it, but this I cannot doe; if it were any other injury but this, any diſgrace but this, I would willingly put it up, but I cannot put up this; if it were any duty but this, I would doe any thing but this; but to root out all diſorders out of my houſe, alas I cannot doe this, I cannot live, as good keep no Inne at all, as not ſuffer men to call for what they would, I cannot doe this; this is to caſt the blame upon God too, that he ſhould make ſuch a Commandement as this; he ſhould have done well to have made another Law, and penned a nother Goſpel, and then I would have kept it: thou layeſt the blame upon God, for it is God that made all theſe commandements, theſe are the commandements of the Lord, Deut. 6.1. The Lord made all the Commandements, and this too, and therefore if thou layeſt the blame upon this, thou layeſt the blame upon God. 4 Demon.

Fifthly, becauſe thou layeſt the blame upon ill fortune and bad luck; it was my ill fortune to marry a ſhrew, and I cannot but fret and lie out of doores. Alas! marriages are made in heaven, and God hath decreed them; thus thou layeſt the blame upon God: 'twas my ill fortune to miſcarry, to light upon ſuch a companion, to be ſo overtaken as I was, I would willingly have had it to have been otherwiſe, but I had not the luck of it, and it fell out very unluckily; thus thou committeſt two evils, thou playeſt the Atheiſt in ſpeaking of fortune, like them in the Prophet that prepared a table for fortune, as the word ſignifies, Eſay. 65.11. I ſay, thou committeſt two evils, one in calling it Fortune; the other, thou layeſt the blame upon God, for that which thou profoundly calleſt fortune and luck, its θεῖον τι καὶ δαίμον ὥτερον, ſayes Ariſtotle, the very Heathen is able to tell it is God, and the Scripture puts it for Gods providence; and therefore when thou layeſt the blame upon ill fortune, thou layeſt the blame upon God; ſo that hence we may ſee, that thou canſt never be humbled as long as thou pleadeſt on this wiſe before God. I would very willingly, but I cannot: I ſay, thou canſt never be humbled, becauſe this is to lay the blame upon God. Indeed a child of God, that of unwilling is made willing, he may plead a cannot before Chriſt, without laying the blame upon God. Lord, I cannot humble my proud heart, nor crucifie this bewitching luſt of mine, Lord I am not able to doe it, I beſeech thee to help me. I ſay a child of God that is ſincerely willing to doe it, may plead a cannot before Chriſt; nay Chriſt his promiſe can no where be applyed, but where the ſoule can truly plead a cannot. He giveth power to the faint, to him that hath no might I will encreaſe ſtrength, Eſay 40.29. when the ſoule lies tugging and pulling at his heart, and cannot pull it up, ſtriving and endeavouring, and uſing all holy meanes and cannot, its even faint with pulling and tugging at that which it cannot. As we know twil make any man faint to be tugging at a milſtone, which he cannot pull up. When the ſoul lies thus at a cannot, I will give power, ſayes Chriſt, though it have no ſtrength, I will enable it: a child of God 5 Demon. Note That which men call fortune is Gods providence.

that is willing, may plead a cannot, without laying the blame upon God; but then he humbles his ſoul for his former wil-nots, nay for his too too many wil-nots for the preſent. But thou canſt never be humbled while thou liveſt, if thou pleadeſt thus a cannot, becauſe thou layeſt the blame upon God.

Nay ſixthly, thou canſt not be humbled, becauſe thou doſt not onely lay the blame upon God for thy ſinnes, but thou findeſt fault with all Gods proceedings, it is as if thou ſhouldſt ſay, why does he bid me repent, when he knowes I cannot? why does he yet complaine? Rom. 9.19. he knowes I cannot: why does he wooe me to doe that which I cannot? or promiſe me bleſſings if I doe, when he knowes that I cannot? why does he help me to more and more knowledge? he does but hurt me with knowledge, and make my ſins to be worſe, which I cannot forſake. My ſinnes are now againſt knowledge, and Miniſters tell me that is worſe; this is all that I get by your preaching; nay thou findeſt fault with all Gods correction: why does he puniſh me for not doing of that which I cannot? thus thou art farre from being humbled: the truth is, thou mighteſt get a greate deale by knowledge, by exhortation, and reproofs, and corrections, but thou wilt not: is it not eaſier to leave a ſinne when thou knoweſt it, then when thou art ignorant of it? to be moved when thou art exhorted, then when thou art not admoniſhed at all? to forſake a ſinfull courſe when once God hath imbittered it to thy fleſh by corrections, then when it was ſweet? Is it not eaſier to give over drunkenneſſe, when the exceſſe is bitter to thy ſtomack, then when it was pleaſant? ſo it is with every other ſinne; thou mightſt get a great deale of God by every one of Gods dealings, but thou wilt not. Why ſhould ye be ſtricken any more? ye will revolt more and more, Eſay. 1.5. Ye will, ſayes God, this is Gods language: he finds fault with thy will, but thou findeſt fault with his will: Why does he ſmite me more and more; I cannot but revolt? I cannot doe as he would have me; may be thy luſts are more mannerly then to ſay thus; but this ſecret grumbling is in thee, if thou ſayeſt that thou ſtickeſt at a cannot, and therefore thou canſt not be humbled.

Uſe 2: Which diſcovers the hearts deceitfulneſſe.

In the ſecond place, if it be thus, the reaſon why thou doſt not amend, is not becauſe thou canſt not, but becauſe thou wilt not.

See here then the deceit of thy heart.

If God would give me grace, I would willingly doe any thing; this is nothing but the deceitfulneſſe of thy heart, which is deceitfull above all things. For thy heart does but here lie unto God; I would very faine, if God would enable me: thou lyeſt; God knowes it is not ſo: like the wilfull Jewes, they would be Gods people, they would ſtay themſelves upon God; God tels them in effect they lied, I knew thou wert obſtinate, and thy neck is an iron ſinew, and thy brow braſſe, Iſay. 48.4. wouldeſt thou believe me? No, no, I know thou art obſtinate and wilt not; ſo God knowes thou art obſtinate. I cannot ſee this is a ſinne to ſay faith and truth; I cannot ſee 'tis a ſinne not to pray daily in my family, not to repeat the Sermon every Sabbath: if I could ſee it were a ſinne, I would amend it; no, no, thou lyeſt unto God, thou art obſtinate, and thou wouldſt not have it a ſinne, and thou wilt not believe it, and if thou didſt know it to be one, thou wouldſt not reform it.

Secondly, hereby thou dodgeſt with God, and thou tempteſt the Lord. If God would give me grace, I would doe it; this is nothing but dallying and trifling with the Lord; for why doſt thou not ſet about it, and try every day what thou canſt doe? if God would but quicken me, and perſwade me, and compell me, and enable me, I would doe it. Alas thou dodgeſt with God, as the people of the Goſpel, if he will come down from the Croſſe, we will believe in him, Mat. 27.42. they had no will to believe in him, this was nothing but dodging: Chriſt had done enough for them to make them believe if they had any ſuch will, and this was nothing but a pretence of their deceitfull heart.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, hereby thou ſhuffleſt off the word, when thou haſt heard it, God give me grace to doe ſo as he hath taught me this day, alas I cannot my ſelf, God give me grace, and ſo ſhuffleſt it off, and thinkeſt no more of it: like (thoſe you call) God-fathers in ſome places, as ſoon as ever they are charged at the Font to look to the child, and ſee him brought up in religion, they preſently goe and put off the charge on the Father, I pray you take the charge upon you: ſo thou layeſt the charge at Gods doore; when God gives thee any duty in charge thou layeſt it at his doore, as though it ſtuck there, and there thou letteſt it lie, not ſetting about to doe it: God give me grace, repentance is his gift, and if he doe not give it, I cannot repent, I would but I cannot, if he doe not give it: the ſpeech is very good, and becomes a godly ſoul that makes conſcience of the means, to ſay it, but thisis thy ſhuffling to lay it at Gods door, as though it ſtuck there; God tels thee plainly, it does not ſtick at him, he would have all to come unto repentance, 2 Pet. 3.9. but thou wilt not come, and this is the deceit of thy heart to ſhuffle it from thee.

In the third place, Is it ſo, that the reaſon why thou doſt not amend, is not becauſe thou canſt not, but onely becäuſe thou wilt not?

Oh then my brethren learn to be humbled.

This point calls for Humiliation.

Uſe 3. Engage to humiliation.

Firſt, here lies eſpecially the pride of the heart, not in mens cannots, but their will-nots wwhen a ſoul does whatſoever it can, reforms as much as it can, uſes as many means as it can, and as often as it can, this is not a proud heart, but a proud heart is that eſpecially that ſticketh at a will-not. If ye will not heare. my ſoul ſhall weep in ſecret places for your pride, Jer. 13.17. Mark, for your pride, if you will not; he does not ſay, if you cannot, my ſoul ſhall weep for your pride, if ye ſtick at a cannot, but if ye ſtick at a will not. Doe not think this point does lift up mens wills, no, this point does as much beat at the humbling of the will, as any point under heaven; for here lies the pride of the will, and therefore here ye muſt be humbled.

Secondly, here lies eſpecially the hardning of the heart: when a man ſticks at a cannot, he does not more and more harden his heart, but onely ſticks at the ſame hardneſſe he had. Beloved, thou doſt then harden thy heart when thou wilt not obey, and therefore here's moſt need of thy humbling, to be humbled for thy wil-nots; its ſaid of Pharaoh, he hardned his heart, Exod. 9.34. what follows? he would not let the children of Iſrael goe: thy will-nots theſe are they that harden thy heart. Doſt thou complaine of the hardneſſe of thy heart? O goe and humble thy ſoul for thy wil-nots, theſe are the hardners of thy heart, nay let me tell thee, thou haſt no hardneſſe of heart no more then an infant or a babe, but only that which thy wil-nots have made thee, and therefore thou haſt great reaſon to be humbled for thy wil-nots.

Thirdly, here lies eſpecially the ſtubbornneſſe of the heart; when a child that is commanded by his parents to obey, ſticks at a cannot, he obeys as far as he can, but onely he ſticks at a cannot, he is not ſtubborn; ſtubbornneſſe is when one ſticks at a will not: If a man have a ſtubborn ſon which will not obey the voice of his father, Deut. 21.18. ſo here lies eſpecially the ſtubbornneſſe of thy heart, and therefore here's moſt humiliation required.

Fourthly, here lies the greateſt deſpiſings of the Commandement of God; Authority is never ſo much deſpiſed as when men will not ſubmit to it: a Father is deſpiſed when a ſon will not hear him; and a Maſter is deſpiſed when his ſervant will not do as he bids him; nay a commandement cannot be deſpiſed but by will nots, it may be omitted, and not obeyed by cannots, but it cannot be deſpiſed but by will-nots; if ye ſhall deſpiſe my ſtatutes, ſo that ye will not do all my Commandements, &c. Levit. 26.15. O what infinite reaſon haſt thou to be humbled, that deſpiſeſt the Lord? He cannot endure that men ſhould deſpiſe him; he can put up any other wrong rather then this, that men

ſhee ſo long him: but to be ſlighted and deſpiſed he will not [illegible] it. For three tranſgreſſions of Judah, and for foure, I will not turn away the puniſhment thereof, becauſe they have deſpiſed the law of the Lord, Amos 2. he will not turne away the puniſhment of this ſinne, when men doe deſpiſe him. What infinite need then haſt thou to be humbled under thy will not? thou deſpiſeſt the Commandment.

Vſe. To [illegible]

It is a word to you that are Godly; O what mercy hath the Lord ſhewed to you, and how ought you to be thankfull? Never was there ſuch mercy as this, to ſhew mercy to the wilfull. O woful ſoul, be his miſery never ſo great, he is not the fit object of mercy: for though miſery be mercies object, yet joyn'd with wilfulneſſe its not to be pitied. You have been as wilfull as any, all cut out of the ſame rock; the Lord hath not onely helpt you to mercy and grace, but alſo to a will to take it. When Lot was unwilling to goe out of Sodome the Lord took him by the arm, and carryed him perforce; now ſee how the Text expreſſes it: The Angels took hold of his hand, the Lord being mercifull unto him and they brought him forth, Gen. 19. 16. As if he ſhould ſay, Would you fain ſtay? you ſhall not, the Lord was mercifull to him whether he would or no. So you had no mercy on your ſelves, but the Lord had; ye were wilfull againſt mercy, and the Lord faſtned mercy on you, whether ye would or no, *He commanded his loving-kindneſſe, Pſal.*42.8. Goe meet and ſeize on them, Goe loving-kindneſſe, and make them take ye: not as though God converted you againſt your wills: for when he converted you, your unwillingneſſe was taken away, but he made you of unwilling, willing. Oh the infinite mercy of God, and the infinite cauſe you have to be thankfull!

5 Uſe. A ſeaſonable Item to all rebellious ſpirits.

In the fifth place, to you that ſtand out in your wilfulneſſe ſtill; is it ſo that ye ſtick at a will not? then be exhorted to be much in abaſing your ſelves before the Lord: your ſtoutneſſe is intollerable, that you dare ſet up the bryars and thornes againſt God in battle: down with them and be wiſe: you harden your own hearts, and diſable your ſelves more and more for repenting of it; ye deſpiſe the Lords name by the ſtubbornneſſe of your froward will, you can never be ſaved except your wills ſtoop. Before Chriſt will meddle with a ſoule, he wil firſt ask, Art thou willing? as he asked the blind man, What wilt thou that I doe unto thee? Lord, ſayes he, that I may receive my ſight. Luke 18. 41. So the firſt queſtion he puts to thee is, What wilt thou? Lord that I may be humble, converted, purged. If thou beeſt wilfull, though he never take thee in hand, but leave thee to thy ſelfe, he will be juſtified in thine eternall confuſion.

Pſal. 51. 1.

Firſt, Is it not enough that thou haſt willingly fallen in Adam, but thou muſt willingly ſtand out again? God now calls thee to means of grace, thou haſt ſtood out once already, and wilt thou be wilfull to ſtand out again? as Iſrael, though in a miſtake, ſaid to their brethren, is the iniquity of Peor too little for us; from the which we are not cleanſed to this day? but that ye muſt turne away this day too? Joſh. 22.17. So may I ſay, is your willing apoſtacy in Adam too little for you, from the which ye are not cleanſed to this day, but ye muſt willingly ſtand out againſt Chriſt too?

Secondly, conſider the very Saints of God that have not halfe ſo many wilfull nots as you, that ſtick more truly at a cannot; I would do good and cannot. I ſay the very Saints of God they labour to humble themſelves even [illegible] O wretched man that I am ſayes Paul, Rom.7.24. does Paul cry out, O wretched man that I am? he was a Saint of God, and heire of heaven and ſure of bliſſe; does he cry out of himſelfe, that he was wretched? oh what infinite need then haſt thou to be humbled! Thou art yet a child of hell, and heire of damnation, wilfull in thy ſins to this houre, Oh wretched man that I am bled; thy ſinne is moſt ſhamefull, for thou corrupteſt thy ſelf; they have corrupted themſelves, Deut. 32.5. ſo thou corrupteſt thy ſelf, thy will corrupteth it ſelf.

Thirdly, conſider the more ſhamefull ones ſin is, the more reaſon to be humbled;

Nay fourthly, conſider there's no greater ſhame then to make away ones ſelf; thou deſtroyeth thy ſelf; Oh Iſrael thou haſt deſtroyeth thy ſelf More credit to be ſtab'd by the high way, nay more credit to be hang'd on a Paribulum as a Malefactor, then to murder ones ſelf. Put him into a hole, drive a ſtake through his body, ſet a Monument of ſhame on him. (I doe not know whether it be ſo among you, but it is ſo in ſome places, when a man murders himſelf.) So thou doſt murder thy ſelf, nay more thy beſt ſelf, thou makeſt away thy ſoul. Be vext then with thy wicked will, what a mad man am I? I will have this luſt, and I will have that paſſion, like the people, we will have a King over us: no, ſayes Samuel, the Lord your God is your King; nay, but we will have a King So thou art wilfull, and thou wilt doe thus; Oh doe not doe it, the Lord hath forbidden thee; Nay, but I will doe it. Thus thou art wilfull, and thou wilt to Hell; vex thine own heart with this. When a wilful Malefactor comes afterwards to know that if he had not been wilfull the Judge would have ſaved him, Oh how will it vex him! he could even rend his own haire, and tear his own fleſh, what a mad man was I! I forſook mine own Clergy; ſo thou foreſakeſt thine own Clergy, thine own mercy they that obſerve lying vanities forſake their own mercy, Jonah 2.8. vex thine own heart with it, ſay I have forſaken mine own mercy.

Wilfull diſobedience is ſinne unmade 1 Sam. 15.22

Fifthly, conſider if you would but vex your own ſouls with this ſerious conſideration, it would make you kick your luſts under foot, and cry out upon them, out upon you, get ye hence, as they cryed out upon their Idols, Eſay. 30.22. get ye hence, get ye hence, here is no entertainment for you from henceforth. I forſake mine own mercy as long as I keep you.

Having ſhewed you, that except your beliefe of this point be rooted in your hearts, ye can never be humbled:

FIrſt, becauſe hereby you excuſe your ſelves from all your tranſgreſſions beſides originall.

Nay ſecondly, ye excuſe your ſelves for your originall ſinne too.

Nay thirdly, you make all your ſinnes to be nothing but infirmities, invincible infirmities.

Nay fourthly, you commend your ſelves more then God.

Nay fifthly, you block up the way to the throne of grace.

Nay ſixthly you caſt all the blame upon God.

Firſt, becauſe you lay the blame upon nature.

Secondly, becauſe thou caſts the blame on temptations.

Thirdly, becauſe you lay the blame on the times.

Fourthly, becauſe you lay the blame upon the Commandement.

Nay ſeventhly, you find fault with all the dealings of God.

Oh take heed then of theſe baſe pleas and pretences: for,

That I may interpoſe four or five particulars unnamed.

Firſt, this ſame pleading is the cauſe why you are lazie and idle in the uſe of means; namely, becauſe we ſuffer our hearts to plead, Oh we cannot doe thus, we cannot beat down this evill; why did the unjuſt Steward refuſe honeſt labour to work for his living? I cannot dig, ſayes he, Luke 6.3 therefore he refuſed to labour; ſo this is the cauſe why ye pray no more, and reform no more, &c. Ye ſet your hearts thus to plead, I dannot doe it: This is the reaſon why ye are backward to labour; how know ye what may be done if ye would buckle to labour? but alas, I cannot doe it, ſay you; and therefore ye are dead and dull, and ſluggiſh to every good Ordinance. Shake off theſe lazy-hearted pleas, otherwiſe yee'l never buckle to labour.

Secondly, this ſame pleading brings up an ill report upon piety and godlineſſe; generally men think Religion is ſo irkſome, and Holineſſe is impoſſible; We cannot be Saints, and we are not able to be ſo holy, theſe pleas bring an evill report on Religion. Like the Spies that brought an evill report upon Canaan. *Num.*13.23. What ſayes the Text in the verſe going before? we be not able to get it, ſay they, verſ.31. this made the reſt of the people think hardly of their going into Canaan: they generally thought it was to very little end. Oh they were not able to winne it: ſo ye bring an evill report upon the Heavenly Canaan, the fleſh is too ſtrong, the divell too ſtrong, temptations too ſtrong, and its impoſſible to grapple with them all, we are not able to get maſtery. I ſay this brings up an evill report on Religion, ye diſcourage one another. I cannot get quickning, and I cannot deny my ſelf. Ye bring up an evill report upon theſe duties, and ye are guilty of the evill report that goes up and dowr.

Thirdly, this ſame pleading is a murmuring againſt God q.d. Why does God give me ſuch Commandements that I cannot obſerve? Why does he charge me to root out a luſt that I cannot root out? this is to murmur againſt God. Like thoſe murmuring Diſciples in the Goſpel, when they were told they muſt feed upon Chriſt, and as the body feeds upon meat, ſo your ſoules muſt feed upon Chriſt; this is a hard ſaying, who can heare it, ſay they? Chriſt conſtrued this ſpeech to be murmuring, Joh.6.60,61. We cannot do this, and this is ſo hard we are not able to do it. The text ſayes it was murmuring, When Jeſus knew in himſelfe that his Diſciples murmured at it; that pleading of a cannot was a murmuring. So when thou grumbleſt on this manner, I cannot walk thus, I cannot believe thus, &c. this is to murmur againſt God, nay this will bring thee to Apoſtacy at laſt, if thou ſuffer thy heart to plead thus. May be now thou art a forward profeſſor, yet beeſt thou never ſo forward and favoureſt any luſt, and I cannot give it over, I cannot root it out, &c. I ſay this will break thy neck at the laſt, if thou doſt not looke to it. So it was with thoſe forenamed Diſciples, they were very forward Profeſſors, for they were the Diſciples of Chriſt ſayes the text; yet thoſe Diſciples, they went away back and walked no more with Chriſt, verſe 66. their pleadings of their cannots, drove them to Apoſtacy; they went away back. So thou wilt go away back, and fall into Apoſtacy if thou ſuffer thy heart to ſtand pleading of cannots in this manner.

Fourthly, this is the ſawſieſt excuſe of all excuſes, many ſinners excuſe their own ſelves but there is more mannerlineſſe in all their excuſes: I pray thee have me excuſed, ſayes one, I have bought five yoke of Oxen, and I pray thee have me excuſed; ſayes the other, I have bought a purchaſe, I pray thee have me excuſed. Theſe though wretched excuſers and turned out from all mercy, yet they were ſomewhat more mannerly; but I cannot come ſayes thou: have married a Wife, and I cannot come, Luke 14.20. this is a moſt ſawcy excuſe, thou telleſt Chriſt in plaine termes, I cannot come, q.a. ye may even ſave your labour to invite, for this is ſhort and long, as we ſay, I cannot come. This I put in onely by the by.

I have ſhewed you ſome of the deceits of the heart in pleading theſe cannots.

Firſt how it lies unto God.

Secondly, how it dallies with God.

And then I ſhewed you the ſtrong reaſon we have to be humbled under theſe will-nots.

Firſt, becauſe here chiefly lies the pride of the heart, not in mens cannots, but in their will-nots Jer.13.17.

Secondly, here lies chiefly the hardning of the heart, Exod.9.34.35.

Thirdly, here lies chiefly the ſtubornneſſe of the heart, Deut.21.18.

Fourthly,

Fourthly, here lies chiefly the great despising of the Commandements of God, Levit. 26.15.

Fifthly, now to goe on, here lies the reason why Divines say that the conversion of a sinner is a harder work then the Creation of Heaven and Earth: for thus they doe reason; when God created Heaven and Earth, he had nothing to resist him; as he had nothing to help him, (he made all of nothing) so he had nothing to resist him. There was but one difficulty in the Creation of Heaven and Earth, but in the conversion of a sinner there be two difficulties.

First, here is the same difficulty that was in creation, for God makes a Convert of nothings; he had nothing to help him, not one thought, not one desire, not one good inclination: and therefore the Scripture calls it a new Creation; whosoever is in Christ is a new creature, 2 Cor. 5.17. that is, is created anew. And therefore there was nothing præexistent, no not one thought, all the thoughts of men are only evill, and that continually. So there is the same difficulty, that was in the creation of Heaven and Earth: and then,

Secondly, there is another difficulty more then there was in the creation: for as there was nothing præexistent to help, so there was nothing to resist. But here is something to resist, the will it resisteth: now the cannot does not resist. No, the bestowing of new powers is no more then another Creation, but the changing of the will is more then another Creation; for the will it resisteth, yea and it sets all the soul a resisting. Carnall reason resisteth, carnall desires they resist, all the soul it resisteth: and the greatest resistance of all is the resistance of the will; for the will is the utmost strength of the soul. And therefore here lies the infinite difficulty of the conversion of a sinner, namely in the turning of the will: it requireth more power, then was required to the creation of Heaven and Earth. God put himselfe forth more when he converted a sinner, then when he created a World; and therefore the Scripture calls the day of conversion of mens wills, the day of his power. Thy people shall be willing in the day of thy power, Psal. 110.3. In the day of thy power; marke, its called a day of thy power, when he converteth a people to be willing. Why? becaus the will did resist him: nay No: God had his own selfe to resist him; anger steps in his way to resist him, Convert him not Lord, his wilfulnesse hath anger'd thee; Justice: steps in to resist him; save him not Lord, his sinnes have dishonoured thee. Nay he had his mercy to resist him; Mercy steps in, Lord he hath abused me, save him not. Indeed had a sinner yeilded as soone as he sinned, mercy would not resist him; but mercy had beene dealing with him, and he abused all mercy. And therefore he had mercy to resist, nay and wisdome one would think to resist too; what a wilfull foole? pittie him not Lord; there is no reason he should be pittied, if he will perish let him perish. I say, in the conversion of a sinner, as there was nothing to assist him, so there was all to resist. The will does resist him, nay God had himselfe (as I may so speak) to resist him, yea, and mercy to resist him: it was not so in the creation of Heaven and Earth. The creature had never provoked God not, to create it, but the sinner hath provoked God never to convert him: so that now God must have power over himself, if he mean to convert him. Oh then what infinite reason hast thou to be humbled: thou resistest God, as Stephen told the Jewes, you have alwayes resisted the holy Ghost, Acts 7.51. so thou hast resisted Gods spirit; yea, thy will does resist him, & that is the strongest thing to resist in the world. His word comes to convert thee, & thou dost resist his motions, his mercyes, his corrections, his ordinances, & all holy means to convert thee, thou dost resist them; nay his spirit contendeth within, and thou dost resist him.

I gave you five things to consider, what it is to stick at your will nots. I beseech you consider yet farther.

First, If you will not, Gods Ministers have discharged their duties, and have left your blood on your own heads, they can goe no further if you will not; the Groom can but carry the Steed unto watering, as we say, if he will not drink, he cannot help it: so they can't help it, your blood lies upon your own heads, they have discharged their duties. When Abrahams servant objected, and how if the woman will not? Abraham he answers, if the woman will not be willing, then thou shalt be cleare of my oath, Gen. 24.8. So Lord, how if they will not, may we say? nay if they will not, let them choose, thou art cleare: the Lord hath sworn us to preach and teach, and exhort, and reprove, and invite you to grace; but if we doe so, and you will not, we can't help it, your blood is on your own heads: we have discharged our oath and our duty, we would be glad that you would; but if now you will not, we have discharged our duties. Nay,

Secondly, if you will not, the Gospel hath delivered its errand, ye are guilty of your own everlasting perdition; the Gospel hath delivered its message, and this is the message, Whosoever will, let him take of the Water of life freely, Revel. 22.17 This message hath been delivered to you often; its the last exhortation in the whole Bible: like one in the evening of the market, he is even about to take down his standing, I have told you my lowest price, if you will have it, take; if not, choose, I must be gone. So this is the end of Gods book: as if he should say, I am even a closing up my book, speak quickly, if ye will, come and welcome; but if not, I am gone. If yet you will not, you will not submit: nay but you will have your lusts, and your stomachs will not come down, you will not stir a jot beyond your painted civility and formality, you will not be more conscionable then you have been, nor frequent holy duties more then you have done, nor get more holinesse then you have done; then if Wil wil have wil, Wil must win woe. Nay, Thirdly, if you will not, the blood of Jesus Christ hath done that it came for: it came to tender you mercy upon very easie terms; to offer you grace and pardon, and salvation and Heaven, and all upon very free cost. If you had rather that sinne should be your master, then that Christ should be your master; if you will not hearken and obey, I say the blood of Christ hath done that which it came for; and your soules shall know ye shall be worse offered: you have knowledge of the truth, Christ hath offered you very faire, and you cannot but know it, and yet you will not submit to it; assure your selves you shall be worse offered, for next to your wil nots, comes Christ leaving you desolate. As Christ told Jerusalem, I would, but you would not: what followes? Behold your house is left unto you desolate, Mat. 23.37,38. So Christ would and you would not; he hath given you gracious offers, but you will not: therefore you may look to be worse offered, your souls to be desolate. Nay, Fourthly, if you will not, ye murder your own souls: when a man hath murdered himself, the Coroner comes and he does sit on him, and he enquires, and he examines, and who hath murdered this man? and when he finds that it was himself that did murder him, so he concludes, and that man is branded for murdering of himself; so you murder your own souls. The Jewes their souls were all murdered; well, when the Coroner sate on them, he concluded they had murdered themselves: O Israel thou hast destroyed thy self, Hos. 13.9. So if the Coroner sit on thee, its most certain he shall find thou hast murdered thine own self; O what a company of you is there, your souls are quite murdered; one in one sinne, another in another: who hath murdered these men? not God, he was ready to help them; not the Minister, he did use all meanes to save them; he hath not been wanting to teach them and exhort them. No, your own selves have murdered your selves; you would be carnall, and you would be proud, and you would not lie down to the word: when the Coroner sits on you, he must necessarily conclude, you have murthered your selves; your own wils have condemned you.

You

You remember what exhortations we gave you, as ever you regard mercy to humble your ſelves. We told you the firſt queſtion Chriſt askes, is, if ye be willing, as he ask'd the blind man, what wilt thou? Luk 18.41. if thou beeſt not willing, he'l never take thee in hand: the ſubjects of the Kingdom of grace muſt be willing. Chriſt will never come into a ſoul, where his will may be affronted by another; Heaven cannot bear two Suns, nor one heart two wills; if thy will be not crucified, and made agreeable to Chriſts, Chriſt cannot dwell in thy heart, there would be two contrary wills in one heart; and this cannot be: if Chriſt come, he will have theſe and theſe luſts turned away, which thou wouldſt fain keep; he will have this done and that done, and thou wilt not: two contrary wills can never ſtand together. No, if thy will be contrary to Chriſt, Chriſts will will be contrary to thine: if thy will be to do that which will offend him, his Will will be to do that which will vex thee: If ye will walke contrary to me, I will alſo walke contrary to you, Levit. 26.23. 34. No, no, your wills they muſt bow, or Chriſt will not take you in hand: the will is the generall preſuppoſition of all the whole Goſpel · the ſumme of the whole Goſpel is this, to deny a mans ſelfe, and to take up Chriſts Croſſe and to follow him: now ſee the will is preſuppoſed as ready; if any man will come after me, let him deny himſelfe, &c. Luk 9.23. ne're a commandement of the Goſpel, ne're a promiſe, ne're a one paſſage but preſuppoſes the Will: Chriſt will not open his mouth except thy will be brought down.

Calum non patitur duos ſoles.

Note.

A few words to you that are the redeemed of the Lord, and ſo I'le make a concluſion of all. I pray God ſmite home this point into your hearts; for though your wills be tamed and ſubdued in regard of the wicked, you do not ſtand out as they do, nevertheleſſe obſerve you this point: there's many a Canaanite that remaines ſtill in our boſomes, that we may thank our own wills for not rooting out. We do not put our ſelves forth ſo much as we might, nor labour in the Lord ſo ſeriouſly as we might, nor walke ſo cloſe as we might: oh beloved theſe ſame will nots do us all the miſchief that ever is done us. For.

An awakening for the redeemed of the Lord.

Firſt, We never ſin againſt Goſpel but onely upon will nots: indeed we ſin againſt the law in every of our cannots, but we never ſin againſt the Goſpel, but onely in our will nots. The Goſpel requires nothing of a believer but that which is given him, and therefore we never ſin againſt the Goſpel, but onely in our will nots: this is the voice of the Goſpel, ἐάν τις θέλῃ if any man will, John 7.17. Oh then let us ſtir up our ſelves, ſhall we ſin againſt Goſpel, and be angry againſt mercy?

Note.

Secondly, we can never diſpleaſe God, but onely upon will nots. I ſpeak onely upon Gods people; we can never ſtaine our acceptance with God, but onely in our will nots: though we cannot but ſinne in our prayers, but ſinne in our duties, but ſinne in every thing that we do; yet this does not ſtaine our acceptance with God, nor blemiſh it one whit, when God hath our wills; for if there be a willing mind, it is accepted according to that which a man hath, and not according to that which a man hath not, 2 Cor. 8.12. But when God would have us mend this, and we will not, and reform that, and we will not, we let ſecurity and ſloth break into our wills; here and here onely do we diſpleaſe our good God: this is a main thing to conſider, is there but one thing wherein we may diſpleaſe God, and ſhall we not take heed of that?

Thirdly, Conſcience can never condemn us but only upon wil nots; when a child of God ſinnes, and he cannot otherwiſe chooſe, his conſcience can never condemn him. A child of Gods cannots, be they never ſo many, nay if they were millions more then they are, they never hinder ſincerity; ſincerity is rooted onely in the will; it is our wil not that is the breach of ſincerity, and therefore here onely the conſcience condemns: does our conſcience reproch us in our wayes? let us thank our wil nots for this: have we little peace? it is becauſe of the rebellion of our wil nots. Ah, ah! this is an infinite evil, for it hinders our comforts, it hinders our boldneſſe of acceſſe to the Throne of grace, it hinders our patience, and every good duty, this does us infinite hurt, it ſtabs to the heart, and wounds our very ſoul, when our conſcience affordeth little peace, O it hinders very grievouſly; all this is long of our wil nots, becauſe we will not be ſo carefull and ſo circumſpect as we might.

Fourthly, God can never be ſo angry with us but only upon wil nots: its true, as long as a man is not in Chriſt, all the ſcore ſtands, and God is angry for all; but God is angry for nothing but wil nots in his children, as Nehemiah ſayes of Gods people in Judah, they would not heare, therefore God gave them up into the hand of the people of the land, Nehem.9.30. God is not angry with his people for cannots, but onely for their wil nots; it is for our wil nots that God does not ſo goe out with our Miniſters, nor ſo quicken his word to your hearts. Is it for our wil nots that he threatens our land, and begins to abridge us of our ſpirituall food, and ſhewes ominous ſignes of his departing away from us; and are we not even ſick unto death for theſe wil nots? We complaine of our deadneſſe, and what trow we is the cauſe, but our wil nots? we complaine of our corruptions and of the leaneneſſe of our ſouls, and whom may we thank, but our wil nots? we might grow more then we doe, what lets us but our wil nots? What makes ſome of us goe down the winde, as we ſay, but becauſe we will not ſtand on our guards? Theſe, theſe, brethren, theſe will nots of ours are the reaſon why God is provoked againſt us. O let us put forth our ſelves, and ſhake of theſe wil nots, leaſt anger break out, and there be no remedy; for ones crooked ſervant to be ſtubborne, it is but his kind, but for ones child to be ſtubborne, this angers the father indeed.

Concluſi. There is more in a wicked man then by reaſon of ſlugiſhneſſe he putteth putteth forth, 16

Arguments to prove this.
Its a signe it is in him, ibid.
1. Argu. Because when God doth convert a sinner, he doth not put in new powers and faculties into the soul, ibid.
2. Because he can shew as great power otherwise, ibid.
3. Because he can shew it too when he list, 17
4. Because the rod is able to whip it out of him, ibid.
5. Because he can do an hundred times more when he is pleased, ibid.
6. Because he will shew it in Hell, viz. That it was in him to do more then he did, 18
3 Ground. A wicked man will not set himselfe to use all the means that he may, 19
Demon. A wicked man may use the means that God appointed as means, 52
1 Argu. Because 'tis the very nature of means to come between ones can and his cannot. 20
2. Because God doth not exhort men like a company of stocks and stones, but as men that are edifiable by his words, 21
3. Because Gods anger is very reasonable, ibid.
4. Because Gods offer of his kingdome to the wicked is serious, ibid.
5. Because Gods reproofes are very equall, 22
Conclusi. His condemnation must be wilfull, that will not use all the means, ibid.
Proved by three Arguments.
1 Argu. God will not help that man by a miracle to go, that hath legs to go, and will not, ibid.
2. God will not bate a farthing of the price he sets thee at, 23
3. God will never be brought out of his walke to shew thee any mercy, or give thee any grace, ibid.
Conclusi. Gods Kingdome cannot be attained without a diligent use of the means, 24 Reasons of it.
1 Reas. Because heaven is an end, and an end can never be gotten without means, ibid.
2. God hath annexed it to the means, ib.
3. Every soul must give an account before God how he hath used the means, ibid.
4. God will not set up another door into heaven for any man in the World, ibid.
Further proofes and encouragements to use the means.
1. Some of the means that God hath appointed, you may do them without labour, 25
2. Some of the means that God hath appointed, are easier then them, ibid.
3. Some of the means are easier yet, ib.
4. Some of the means of grace, its harder to omit them then to use them, ibid.
5. Some of the means of grace, be they hard, yet they are but hard, they are not impossible for you to use, ibid.
Objections.
The first Objection's drawn from the Scriptures which say they cannot,
The Scripture speaks of five cannots. 1. Of a naturall cannot. 2. Of a deliberate cannot, 3. Of a judiciall cannot. 4. Of a compounded cannot, 5. Of a humbling cannot. 25
Thou wouldest (as thou pretendest) but thou canst not. Perhaps its the will of thy conscience, and not the will of thy heart, 2. May be its a copulative will, Repentance and some lust, Godlinesse and some lust. 3. May be thou hast a woulding will, this is no will but only a velleity. 4. May be thou hast a generall Metaphysicall will, but to come to particulars, there thou wilt not. 5. thou hast no true will, because if thou didst will, thou couldst, 27
Thou desirest to do it, but art not able.
Who can tell best what is in thee, God or thy own heart? But the reason of this mistake is, 1. Thou hast putative or thinking desires, thou think'st thou desirest. 2. Thou hast ignorant desires, 3. thou hast wandering desires, and therefore thou art mistaken, 29
Thou resolvest and hast good purposes, but oh thou canst not performe them.
These purposes thou speakest of are onely willing for the future. 1. Because its onely to shuffle off the willing for the present, 2. This will for hereafter is no will, because its goes without Gods,

2. It is no will, becauſe thou ſhalt miſſe thoſe ſuppoſitions that thou willeſt upon.
First, thou ſuppoſeſt thou ſhalt have ſewer temptations hereafter, 2. Thou ſuppoſeſt thou ſhalt be fitter hereafter.
3. Thy will for hereafter is no will but a mockary. 30
Thou laboureſt to ſerve God, and to be ſaved.
Is this to labour for grace and heaven, when thou laboureſt ſo idly? wherefore thy impenitency is wilfull, thy damnation's wilfull, and thy ruine wilfull. 81
Hence alſo it followes, 1. That your deſtruction is from ſelf, 2. Your deſtruction is juſt, 3. Your deſtruction is inexcuſable, 4. Your deſtruction is unavoydable, 5. Your deſtruction is pitiileſſe, 6. Your deſtruction is grievous. 31

Application.

Uſe 1. of Inſtruction, Thou canſt never be humbled unleſſe thou believe this truth; a man is never humbled as long as he excuſes himſelf. Now. 32
1 Excuſe. First thou excuſeſt thy ſelf for all Tranſgreſſions beſides originall, ib.
2. Now thou excuſeſt thy ſelfe from originall ſin too; Lord I would be without ſin, but I cannot, ibid.
3. Nay thou excuſeſt thy ſelf for every ſin: thou takeſt all thy ſins to be nothing but infirmities, ibid.
4. Nay thou commendeſt thy ſelfe more then God, ibid.
5. Nay thou canſt not ſo much as pray to God for a will: thou art ſo proud that thou conceiveſt thou haſt that already, 34
6. Nay thou layeſt all the blame upon God, ibid.
1. Demon. First, becauſe you caſt the blame upon nature, its my nature and I cannot, ibid.
2. Secondly, thou doſt caſt the blame upon temptations; its my hard hap to fall upon temptations, ibid.
3. Thirdly, thou layeſt the blame upon the Times, the times are very bad, ib.
4. Fourthly, thou layeſt the blame upon this Commandement. If it were any Commandement but this, I would do it, 35
5. Fifthly, thou layeſt the blame upon ill fortune and bad luck, ibi.
6. Nay, ſixthly thou findeſt fault with Gods proceedings, 36
Uſe 2. This diſcovers the deceitfulneſs of thy heart, ibid.
First, thou wouldſt very faine, if God would enable thee: but thy heart doth but lye unto God, ibid.
Secondly, hereby thou dodgeſt with God, and tempteſt the Lord, ibid.
Thirdly, hereby thou ſhuffleſt off the word, when thou haſt heard it, 37
Uſe 3. This point calls for great humiliation; for 1. Here lyes eſpecially the pride of the heart, not in mens cannots, but their will nots, ibid.
2. Here lyes ſpecially the hardning of the heart, ibid.
3. Here lyes eſpecially the ſtubbornneſſe of the heart, ibid.
4. Here lyes the greateſt deſpiſing of the Commandements of God. ibid.
Uſe 4. To quicken the thankfulneſſe of the Godly. 38
A ſeaſonable Item to all Rebellious ſpirits, ibid.
1 Is it not enough that thou haſt willingly fallen in Adam, but thou muſt willingly ſtand out again? ibid.
2. Conſider the very Saints of God that have not halfe ſo many will-nots as you, that ſtick more truly at at a cannot, ibid.
3. Conſider the more ſhamefull ones ſin is, the more reaſon to be humbled, ib.
Nay fourthly conſider there's no greater ſhame then to make away ones ſelf 39
5. Conſider if you would but vex your own ſoul with this ſerious conſiderations, it would make you kick your luſts under foot, ibid.
The danger of baſe pleas & pretences.
1. This ſame pleading is the cauſe why you are lazy and idle in the uſe of the means. viz. becauſe you ſuffer your hearts to plead, oh we cannot do it, ibid.
2. This ſame pleading brings up an evil report upon piety and Godlineſſe, 40
3. This ſame pleading is a murmuring againſt God, q.d. why does God give me ſuch commandements that I cannot?
4. This is the ſawcieſt excuſe of all excuſes, ibid.

5. Nay, here lies the reason why Divines say, that the conversion of a sinner is an harder work then the creation of heaven and earth, first because, 41.
Here is the same difficulty that was in creation, for God makes a convert of nothing, ibid.
2. As there was nothing præexistent in the creation to help, so there was nothing to resist; but here is something to resist, the will it resisteth, ibid.

The danger of sticking at a will not is further cleared.

1. If you will not, Gods Ministers have discharged their duties, and have left your blood on your own hands. ibid.
2 If you will not, the Gospel hath delivered its errand, ye are guilty of your own everlasting perdition, 42
3. Nay thirdly, if you will not, the blood of Jesus Christ hath done that it came for, ibid.
4. If you will not, you murder your own souls, ibid.

A seasonable Item to the redeemed of the Lord, that they take heed of will nots; for, 43
1. We never sin against Gospel, nor dispise God, but onely upon will-nots, ibid.
2. Conscience can never condemn us, nor God can never be angry with us, but onely upon will-nots, ibid.

The end of the Table.

OF CATECHIZING.

Question. 1.

What is Catechisme?

Answ. It is the teaching of the Principles of the Doctrine of Christ, namely of Repentance from dead works, and of Faith, *Heb.*6.1. To them that have need of milke and not of strong meat, *Heb.*5.12. as being babes in Christ, 1 *Cor.*3.1. and the lambes of Christ, whom the Minister must feed as well as his Sheep, John 21.15.

Quest. 2. Who must Catechise besides the Minister?

Answ. My Parents must Catechise me, and teach me the truth of the Lord, *Isa.*38.19. My Father must teach me the information of the Lord, *Ephes.*6.4. And my mother too must, *Prov.*1.8. So did Solomon's mother teach him, *Prov.*31,1. Yea, and the master of the house where I dwell, though he be not my father, yet he must teach me, if I be but one of his household, Gen. 18.19.

Q. 3. How if Parents do not teach their Children.

Answ. They are cruell Ostriches, and their hearts are hardened, *Job.*39.16. And God hath taken the Spirit of wisdome from them, *vers.*17. They loose their own soules, and do what in them lyeth to cast away our soules too; as ever they meane to keep their own soules, they must teach us, *Deut.*4.9.

Q. 4. Why hast thou a Name given thee in Baptisme?

Answ. Because the people of God named their children then; so did Abraham name his Son Isaac at Circumcision, *Gen.*21.3. The parents have power to appoint the name what it shall be, *Luk.*1.60.63. Which ought not to be one of a bad signification, for that is a shame, as the name of Nabal signifieth a foole, 1 *Sam.*25.25.

Qu. 5. What use doest thou make of thy name given thee in Baptisme?

Answ. Two uses: First, to teach me Christianisme, that I must give up my name unto God to be his servant; Jude a servant of Christ, Jude 1. Iames a servant of God, *Iam.*1.1. Moses Gods servant, *Iosh.*1.2. Secondly, that I keep my name unspotted and undefiled; for God only accounts upon such Names, *Revel.*3.4. And therefore it is fit I should not change it, unlesse upon a great occasion, as Abram afterwards was called Abraham, *Gen.*17,5. Nor give any cause why any nick-name should be set upon it, as Esau to be called Edom, *Gen.*25,30. The Pope that changeth his Christian name, sheweth himself to be Antichrist, 1 *Joh.*2.22.

Qu. 6. Why would God have thee Baptized?

Answ. For four reasons: First, to teach me that I was borne by nature the Child of wrath and damnation, *Ephes.*2,3. Secondly, to give me the washing of regeneration, or renewing of the Holy Ghost, *Tit.*3,5. Thirdly, to Covenant with me, that I ſhould walke in newneſſe of life, *Rom.*6,4. Fourthly, to diſtinguiſh me outwardly from ſuch as are not Gods people, but infidels and Pagans; for it is a badge and ſigne of my profeſſion, *Gen.*17.11. And not to be omitted by any meanes, verſe 14. Not contemned nor neglected, the contempt of Baptiſme is damnable, becauſe its an ordinance of God, not the want of it when we are hindred from it in the leaſt degree, ſeeing it is a matter of Salvation or damnation, *Mark.*16.16.

Q. 7. What is required in him that is Baptized?

Anſw. He muſt have Faith; the Eunuch had faith actually before he was baptized, *Act.*8.37. Or at leaſt be in the ſanctifying Covenant of faith, and ſo even a Child is cleane, 1 *Cor.*7.14.

Q. 8. How then can babes be Baptized?

Anſw. Children ought to be Baptized, 1. For all the Jaylors houſe was baptized, *Act.*16.33. And all Stephanus houſhold, 1 *Cor.*1.16. Whereof it is likely Children were part. 2. For children were Circumciſed, *Luk.*1.59. Now Baptiſme is the circumciſion of Chriſt, *Coloſ.*2,11,12. 3. And when Peter urged Baptiſme upon his hearers, he preſſed it with this argument, becauſe the Promiſe was made to you and to your children, *Act.*2.39. The Covenant to Abraham and his Seed ſtands everlaſtingly, *Gen.*17.7. In ſubſtance to them which are the children of faithfull Abraham, *Rom.*4.16.

Q. 9. Can Babes have Faith then?

A. Firſt, they may have the ſeale of Faith, Rom 4.11. Secondly, they may have the Spirit of God, *Luk.*1.15. Which is a Spirit of faith, 1 *Cor.*4,13. Thirdly, they may have faith ſo accounted, for they may be ſaid to believe, *Matth.*18.6. Fourthly they may have ſeminall Faith, for they may be borne again, and then the ſeed of God abideth in them, 1 Iohn 3.9. As children have a reaſonable ſoul, though yet they have not actuall reaſon to know the right hand from the left. *Ionah.*4.11. ſo they may have the ſeeds of faith, though they do not actually believe, becauſe knowing and believing go together, 1 Iohn 4.16.

Q. 10. Have all elect Babes then this Spirit of Faith, and this ſame ſeminall Faith, in their Baptiſme?

A. Some have, as firſt Ieremiah was ſanctified in the wombe, *Ier.*1.5. Iohn leapt in his mothers womb for joy in Chriſt, Luke 14.4. Secondly, ſuch as ſhew ſtrange inſtincts and aptneſſe in Religion and godlineſſe as ſoone as they can ſpeak plaine almoſt, as Timothy, who ſavingly knew the Scriptures from a child, 2 *Tim.*3.15. but all have not, for ſome live in ſin till 20 yeares after, as Paul was not converted till he was at the age of a man, Acts 9.3. Being ſenſuall before, and therefore without the Spirit, Iude 19. Nevertheleſſe though he had not the Spirit dwelling in him from the womb, yet he had the Spirit ſeparating and keeping him, for a day of converſion, *Gal.*1.15. But his Circumciſion, and his Baptiſme were not actually availeable to the ſealing of remiſſion of ſins, till he did call on the Name of the Lord by Faith, Act. 22.16.

Q. 11. What benefits haſt thou by Baptiſme?

A. Three: I am thereby ſealed, Firſt, to be a member of Chriſts body the Church, 1 *Cor.*12.13. Secondly, to be one of the Sons of God. Iohn 1,12,13. For ſo was Chriſt ſealed Gods Son, Iohn 6.27. in his Baptiſme, Matth. 3.17. Thirdly, to be an inheritour of the Kingdome of God, Marke 16.16 Standing benefits have no need of reiteration, therefore there is no need of reiteration of Baptiſme, for there is no often put to it, as there is to the Lords Supper, 1 *Cor.*11.25. For it is a Sacrament of regeneration or the new birth, *Tit.*3.5. A man cannot be born twice, Iohn 3,6,10. for the ingrafted word of God doth dwell for ever in him, 1 *Pet.*1.25.

Q. 12. Have all that are Baptized theſe benefits?

A.

A. No, for the Spirit bloweth where it liſteth, John 3.8. and doth not tye himſelf to the water of Baptiſm, Matth. 3.11. Neither is this Baptiſm which is outward in the fleſh, Rom. 2.28. Eſau was Circumciſed, yet God hated him, Rom. 9.13. Simon Magus Baptiſed, in the gall of bitterneſſe, Act. 8.13,23.

Q. 13. Who be they that have not theſe benefits?

A. No man can know them, till by their fruits we may know them, Matth. 7.13. Indeed Parents are bound to believe the beſt, and hope the beſt, for ſo Charity doth in all things that are not yet manifeſt, 1 Cor. 13.7. But for all our Charity, they cannot be vouchſafed forgiveneſſe of ſinnes, unleſſe they joyne amendment of life to their Baptiſm, Act. 2.3.8. Nor ſaved, that anſwer not out of an upright Conſcience to Chriſts interrogatories, though they were waſhed, 1 Pet. 3.21. And yet members in Chriſts viſible Church, and veſſels in his houſe, 2 Tim. 2.20. And called Sons of God though rebellious, Iſa. 1 2. And may be ſaid to be begotten with an outward regeneration, Deut 32.18.

Q. 14. What diddeſt thou promiſe and vow in thy Baptiſm?

A. Three things; Firſt, Repentance of my ſinnes, for he that liveth in ſinne is of the Divell, 1 John 3.8. Secondly, faith, for he that believeth not is condemned already, John 3.18. Thirdly, obedience to all Gods Commandements, for curſed is he that obeyeth not, Jer. 11.3. All theſe things was I taught in my Baptiſm, to obſerve all my life after, Matth. 28.19,20. Now all this obedience muſt be done by the power of faith in Chriſt, Col. 3.17. And therefore it is called the obedience of Faith, Rom. 16.26. And this faith worketh by love, Gal. 5.6. And love muſt ſet me on work to keep Chriſts Commandments, John 14.15.

Q. 15. Art thou bound to performe thy Baptiſm, Vow and Oath?

A. I am bound, Pſal. 50.14. Or elſe I ſhall be utterly cut off, Nah. 1.15. Yea, I am perjured elſe, in making ſuch a Covenant, Hoſ. 10.4. And Chriſt will be a ſwift witneſſe againſt me, Mal. 3.5. And if I now live in ſinne and doe not keep my vow, it is better for me I had never taken this vow upon me, Eccl. 5.5.

Q. 16. What is Beliefe or Faith?

A. It is the gift of God, Epheſ. 2.8. whereby I believe the words of Chriſt, Pſal. 119.66. and find reſt in my ſoul in him, Matth. 11.29 So that now it is no more I that live, and work, and doe, but Chriſt that liveth in me, Gal. 2.20.

Q 17. How many wayes is Faith taken?

A. Six; firſt, Hiſtoricall faith, Jam. 2.19. Secondly, a dead faith, Jam. 2.26. Thirdly, a temporary faith, Luke 8.13. Fourthly, a bare hoping faith, Acts 8.13. Fifthly, a miraculous faith, 1 Cor. 13.2. Sixthly, this ſame ſaving and juſtifying faith, Rom. 5.1. A Reprobate may have the firſt five and be damned; for there is but one Faith, Epheſ 4.5. which the world knoweth not, for it is a myſtery, 1 Tim. 3.9, and the moſt men ſay they have it, if we will believe them; yet if we will believe Chriſt, few have it, and it is very ſcarce, Luke 18. being the faith of the Elect, Tit. 1.1.

Q. 18 Doe not wicked men ſay they believe in Chriſt?

A. Joh. 2.23. but Chriſt will not believe them, nor commit himſelf unto them, verſe 24. It is not a bare believing of Chriſt in the clouds, but the having of Chriſt in a man, that giveth a man life, 1 Joh. 5.12. It is living in Chriſt as well as believing in Chriſt, Joh. 11.26. The wicked may ſay they have faith, Iam. 2.18. But if Chriſt be not in them by his ſpirit, 1 Ioh. 3.24. for all this faith they may be Reprobates, 2 Cor. 13.5. Not every one that ſwam after the Ark, and cryed after Noah in the ark, and clambred and hung upon the ark but onely they that were in the ark were ſaved, 1 Pet. 3.20. So onely they that get into Chriſt are new creatures, 2 Cor. 5.17.

Q. 19. Why ſo?

A. Faith if it be unfeigned, 2 Tim. 1.5. ingrafteth a man into Christ, Rom. 11.23. If a man be not ingrafted into Christ, he ſhall burn in hell-fire, Ioh. 15.6.

Q. 20. What reaſons be there of this?

A. Two: Firſt, the ſentence of the Law cannot otherwiſe be true, the ſame ſoul that ſinneth, that ſoul ſhall die, Ezek. 11.18. Therefore all the Elect muſt have ſuch a faith, that they may be one with Chriſt, and Chriſt with them, Ioh. 14.20. that Chriſt's death may be their death, 2 Cor. 5.14. Secondly, Chriſt is the life of them that believe, Col. 3.4. As the life of man is in him, and the life of every creature is in it, Gen. 1.30. ſo is Chriſt in a believer: This is a myſtery, Gal 3.27. which whoſoever hath not, the wrath of God abideth on him, Ioh. 3.36.

Q. 21. Doſt thou believe the Articles of faith?

A. Yea, I believe in God the Father Almighty, maker of heaven, and ſo forth; which being a form of ſound words, I muſt hold faſt in faith and love. 2 Tim 1.13.

Q. 22. Why doſt thou ſay, I believe?

A. Becauſe I cannot be ſaved without a particular Faith of my own, Iam. 2. 18. (The juſt ſhall live by his faith, Hab. 2 4.) Whereby I may ſay, Chriſt gave himſelf for me, Gal. 2.20. and that he is my Saviour, Luke 1.47. for faith is my life, Ioh. 20.31. As David could ſay, I live, Pſal. 116.2. So he could ſay, I believe, verſe 10. Neither is this preſumption in a believer, for he knowes that Chriſt is his Redeemer in particular, Iob. 19.25. Yea in the time of ſpirituall deſertion, he can ſay, My God, my God. Pſal. 22.1.

Q. 23. Is not this preſumption in ſome?

A. Yea, it is preſumption in many; for if a carnall Profeſſor ſhall ſay, my God, Hoſ. 8.2. the Lord pardons not his ſinnes for all this, but is an enemy unto him, verſe 3. As the body without the ſpirit is dead, ſo faith without works is dead alſo, Iam. 2.26. Ignorant faith is no faith, but unbeliefe, 1 Tim. 1.13. Faith asks who, and what, who is the Lord that I may believe? Iohn 9. 36. For faith is an explicite knowing faith, through Faith we underſtand, Heb. 11.3. Knowledge is partly before Faith, 1 Iohn 4.16. And partly after Faith, 2 Pet. 1.5. A man muſt know what he believes, or elſe he cannot believe, Iohn 38. Yet faith is not ſo explicite, but there is ſome implicitenеſſe in it, as long as we live here, 1 Iohn 3.2.

Q. 24. How canſt thou ſay, I believe, can a man know that he believeth?

A. A man may know that he believeth, 2 Tim. 1.12. Even by that help of Gods Spirit, 1 Cor. 2.12. For he hath that witneſſe in himſelf, 1 Iohn 5.10. Indeed while he is a Babe in Chriſt, it may be he knoweth not a Babe is a Babe, though he underſtand it, he underſtands as a babe, 1 Cor. 13.11. Yea in the time of temptation too, a man is a man, though in a ſwound he knoweth it not; in ſuch a caſe David may feare he is caſt off for ever, Pſal. 77.7. Alſo when paſſions are violent, as overmuch grief, or overmuch joy, Luke 24.41. But a child of God when his unbelief is at the worſt, hath an inckling that he doth believe, Mark 9.24. Or props himſelf at leaſt with this belief, that he hath believed, 2 Cor. 4.13. Howſoever faith bringeth evidence and aſſurance with it at the laſt, Heb. 11.1.

Q. 25. What ſay you of them that have the Spirit of bondage?

A. The child of God had it once, but then he hath it no more to feare againe, Rom. 8.15. Thoſe that think they have aſſurance, and ſometimes conceit they are aright, and ſometimes feare, the Lord joynes ſuch with unbelievers, Rev. 21.8. By fearfull are meant ſuch as dare not confeſſe Chriſt in evill times, They live in darkneſſe, and know not whither they goe, whether to Heaven or to Hell, Iohn 12.25. The godly may fall ſometimes into ſuch feares, that Chriſt may upbraid them, How is it ye have no faith? Mark 4.41. But they are reſtleſſe till their Election and calling be made ſure, and therefore they are diligent about it, 2 Pet. 1.10.

they

Q. 26. How many objects of Faith are there that thou mayeſt believe?

A. I muſt believe in one Lord, Epheſ. 4.5. Diſtinguiſhed into three perſons, 1 John 5.7. Firſt, in God the Father, 1 Pet. 1.21. Secondly, in Chriſt, John 14. 1. Thirdly, in God the holy Ghoſt, Mat. 28.19. So far forth as it is written in the word, Joh. 20.31. Which is a word of Faith, Rom. 10.8. A plaine and an eaſie word, that the ſimple may be converted by it, Pſal. 19.7 Pſal. 119.130. It is a perfect word, able to make the man of God perfect, 2 Tim. 3.17. Whatſoever men, or Counſels, or traditions, or Angels from heaven ſay, I muſt go to the word; if they ſpeak not according to it, there is no truth in them, Iſa. 8.20. If Paul himſelf were now alive, and ſhould preach any thing beſides it, he were accurſed, Gal. 1.8. It is a damnable ſin to add to it, Rev. 22.18. Or to take a tittle from it, verſe 19.. 'Tis able to convince all gain-ſayers without running to this or that mans Expoſitions of it, the Scriptures themſelves ſhew their own meanings, Acts 18.28.

Q. 27. But may not men give their Expoſitions unto it?

A. There muſt be a tranſlating of the word; people underſtand not the Originall tongue of it, 1 Cor. 14.5. And an expounding too, Luke 24.27. But no man may give his own ſenſe to it, but the ſenſe of the word, Neh 8.8. For the ſame Chriſt that ſpake the dark ſpeeches and Parables, the ſame Chriſt doth expound them, Mark 4.34. The holy Ghoſt ſpeaking in the Scriptures, Heb 3.7. Teacheth the right meaning, John 14.26.

Q. 28. How is this?

A. By ſundry wayes, Firſt, by conferring places with places, as Micah. 5.2. with Mat. 2.6. Secondly, by the ſcope, as if I would know Peters meaning; why he ſaid, that Davids Sepulchre was then to be ſeen, Acts 2.29. I may ſee the ſcope of that ſpeech, v. 31. Thirdly, obſerving whether the word be proper or figurative. John 15.1. and many others.

Q. 29. What ſay you more of the word?

A. It undertakes to be a rule to all that we do, to the wearing of our haire, 1 Cor. 11.14. Or of a Garment, 1 Pet. 3.3. To our eating and drinking, 1 Cor. 10. 31. To our Marketting and Merchandizing, Iam. 4.13. Not ſo little as a ſhoo-tire, but if it be amiſſe, the word doth condemn it, Iſa. 4.18. Not ſo little as an idle word, but the word doth tax it, Mat. 12.36. Not ſo little as a thought, but it muſt be according to the word, 2 Cor. 10.5. What ever we think, ſay, or do, we muſt be carefull to obſerve the judgment of the word, and lay it before us, Pſal. 119.30.

Q. 30. Why doeſt thou ſay, I belie ve in God?

A. For three reaſons. Firſt, becauſe I do not believe unleſſe I go out of my ſelf, and deny my ſelf, Mat. 16.24. Secondly, unleſſe I caſt my ſelf upon God, and rely on him, 2 Chron. 10.20. Thirdly, unleſſe not only naturally, but alſo ſpiritually I be in him, move in him, and live in him, Act. 17.28.

Q. 31. Why doſt thou believe in God as a Father Almighty?

A. Firſt, that in my greateſt dangers I may depend upon him who is able to deliver me, Dan. 3.17. This I muſt believe, Mat. 9.28. Secondly, that in my greateſt temptations, I may not dare to ſin againſt him, for I am not ſtronger then he 1 Cor. 1.10.12.

Q. 32. Why maker of Heaven and Earth?

A. Firſt, that I may conſider I am Created of God, and for God, to live holily, for the wicked are for the day of evil, Pro. 16.4. Secondly, that I may glorify God in my ſoul & body, for they are not mine but Gods, 1 Cor. 6.20. Thirdly, that I abuſe none of his Creatures, for they are all unto Gods praiſe. Pſ. 145. 10. Nor prophane them, for God is holy in them, v. 17. But have pleaſure to ſearch Gods greatneſs in them Pſ. 111.2. & ſee the inviſible things of God in them.

Rom. 1.20. And conſider them, Mat. 6 28 And meditate on them, Pſal. 48.5. And learne Parables or Similitudes for Spirituall things out of them, Mat. 24. 32. For God teacheth me by ſuch Similitudes, Hoſ. 12.10.

Q. 33. Why doſt thou believe in Ieſus Chriſt his onely Son our Lord?

A. For two reaſons, Firſt, that I may be juſtified freely by his Grace, Rom. 3. 24. Who though he knew no ſin, yet was made ſin for me, that I might be made the righteouſneſs of God in him, 2 Cor. 5.21. Secondly, that look whatſoever he did, or ſuffered, or had, may be woven in a myſtery into my heart; if this myſtery had not been in Paul, he himſelf had been a reprobate, 2 Cor. 13.5.6.

Q. 34. Muſt that then which was a hiſtory in Chriſt, be a myſtery in us?

A. Yea, by the application of all theſe articles concerning Chriſt to our ſoules; I muſt be an adopted Son of God, 1 Iohn 3.1. Chriſt muſt be formed and conceived in me, Gal. 4.19. I muſt ſuffer with Chriſt, Rom. 8.17. And mine old man muſt be crucifyed in me, and ſin dye in me, Rom. 6.6. I muſt be crucifyed to the world, and the world unto me, Gal. 6.14. I muſt be buried with him and raiſed up again to a new life, Col. 2.12. And ſeeke the things above in Heaven, Col. 3.1. And judge my ſelf here, otherwiſe I ſhall be judged and condemned of the Lord, 1 Cor. 11.31.

Q. 35. Why doſt thou ſay, Chriſt was conceived of the Holy Ghoſt? &c.

A. He was conceived, Luke 1.31. By the holy Ghoſt, verſe 35 for the woman was found with child of the holy Ghoſt, Mat 1.18 Supernaturally, that his conception might be without ſin, ver. 20. For all others are conceived in ſin, Pſ. 51.5. Becauſe that which is born of the fleſh is fleſh, Iohn 3.6. And yet the Holy Ghoſt made him of a woman, Gal. 4.4. And he was born of her, Mat. 1.16. Being the ſeed of a woman, Gen. 3. 15. Of the ſeed of David, Rom. 1 3. The roote of Ieſſe, Iſa. 11.10. He ſuffered under Pontius Pilate, who gave ſentence that he ſhould be Crucifyed, Luke 23.24. And ſcourged him, and delivered him up to death, Mark 15.15. Before whom he had witneſſed a good confeſſion, 1 Tim. 6.13. And therefore Chriſt is ſaid to be crucifyed at Rome the great City of Antichriſt, Rev. 11.8. Becauſe Pontius Pilate who delivered him to be Crucifyed, was Governour under Tiberius Ceſar Emperour of Rome.

Q. 36. Did Chriſt ſuffer in Soul too?

A. Yea, for his ſoul was exceeding ſorrowfull even unto death, Mat. 26.38. His Soul was an offering for ſin as well as his body, Iſa. 53.10. Whole Chriſt was ſurety for us, Heb. 7.22. And a curſe for us, Gal. 3.13. For our Soules have need of Redemption as well as our bodies, Pſ. 49.8. It is a ſigne he ſuffered greater torments then bodily, by his ſweat in the garden which, was a bloody ſweat, Luke 22.44. And by his lamentable ſpeech on the Croſſe, my God my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? Mat. 27.46. And by his not onely taſting of the firſt death for us, Heb. 2.9. But alſo keeping of the ſecond death from hurting us, Rev 2.11.

Q. 37. How is hell taken in Scripture?

A. Firſt, for the Grave, Iſa. 14.9. Secondly, Hell is taken for the feares of Hell, Pſ. 116.3. Thirdly, Hell is taken for the place of the damned after this life, Luke 16.23. Fourthly, for the hidden parts of the earth, Pſ. 139.8. Fifthly, Hell is taken for the Devil and whatſoever is helliſh, Rev. 20.14. Sixthly, for the loweſt degree of Chriſts humiliation, Acts 2.27.

Q. 38. What ſayeſt thou of Chriſts deſcent into Hell?

A. Not as though he deſcended to hell to ſuffer there the paines of the damned, for he ſaid upon the Croſs, it is finiſhed, Ioh. 19.30. Or to deliver the Souls of the Patriarchs & Fathers of old out of Limbo, for they were glorifyed before Mat. 17.3. And in Paradiſe by the vertue of Chriſts death, he being the Lamb ſlain from the foundation of the world, Rev. 13.8. Or to Preach to Soules there in priſon, 1 Pet. 3.19. For that was his Spirit Preaching in the mouth & days of Noah, while they were alive, v. 20. or to triumph over Hell and Devils, for that he

he did upon the Croſſe, Col. 2.15. Nor as though he deſcended Locally at all into Hell for all that we know; for dying he ſaid unto the good Thief, This day ſhalt thou be with me in Paradiſe, Luke 23.43. And he commended his Spirit to his Father in Heaven, verſe 46.

Q. 39. Is it not an Article of Faith, and hath it not its meaning?

A. Yea, it is an Article of Faith (though the Greeke Church hath omitted it in their Creed) taken out of Scripture, Acts 2.31. And by this ſame deſcent into hell, is meant Chriſts loweſt degree of humiliation, oppoſed to the height of his exaltation and aſcenſion, Epheſ 4.10. For he was not onely dead, but bidden of death for a while, though he could not be held quite, Acts 2.24. Howſoever this deſcent into hell be underſtood, we are ſure by this means his people ſhall never deſcend into hell Rom. 8.1.

Q. 40. What believeſt thou of Chriſts riſing the third day?

A. He roſe again, not by re-uniting his body to his God-head, for they were never ſevered by death, for being Crucified he was ſtill the Lord of glory, 1 Cor. 2.5. But by re-uniting Soul and body together, and taking his life again which before he had laid down, Joh. 10.17. And he himſelf had power to do it, verſe 18. To be Lord of quick and dead, Rom 14.6. And this he did the third day, 1 Cor. 15.4. Namely, the third day from his ſuffering paſſively, verſe 3. And therefore the ſpace is called by the Scripture, the ſpace of three dayes, Ioh. 2.19. And becauſe that every day hath a night belonging to it, it is called the ſpace of three nights too, Mat 12.40. That as by man came death, ſo by man alſo might come the reſurrection of the dead, 1 Cor 25.21. Himſelf being the firſt fruits of them that ſleep, v 20. And the firſt born from the dead, Col. 1.18. And the firſt begotten of the dead, Rev. 1.5. And dyeth no more, Rom. 6.9. And therefore thoſe that roſe before Chriſt, as the, Shunamites child, 2 Kings 4.35. and Lazarus, and the reſt roſe again to a mortall life, John 11.44.

Q. 41. Why did Chriſt riſe again?

A. He roſe again for the glory of God, and the good of all the Elect, Rom. 6.4. that they might be glorified, Rom. 4.25. For if he had not riſen, they had ſtil been in their ſins, 1 Cor. 15.17. This article was a comfort to Iob, and all before the comming of Chriſt, Iob. 19.25. And is to be remembred of all the people of God, as a comfort againſt all troubles, namely that Jeſus Chriſt is riſen from the dead, 2 Tim. 2.8. and for divers other reaſons did he riſe.

Q. 42. What believe you concerning the other two Articles?

A He aſcended into heaven, Ioh. 3.13 and was ſeen ſo doing, John 6.62. being taken up, Acts 1.9. and he went up, verſe 10. whether the bodies of the Saints are not yet aſcended, no nor Davids, Acts 2.34. though their ſoules do aſcend as ſoon as they are diſſolved from their bodies to be with Chriſt, Phil. 1.23. and the Heavens muſt receive him till the times of reſtitution, Acts 3.21. and therefore in reſpect of his body we have him not with us here on earth, Iohn 12.8. but onely Sacramentally in his Supper, 1 Cor. 11.24. And he ſitteth now at the right hand of God, Col. 3.1. in the throne of his Father, Rev. 3.21. being preferred even in his humane nature, above all Angels, and all Principalities and powers, Epheſ. 1.20.21. expecting till his enemies be made his foot-ſtoole, Heb. 10.13. Where Stephen ſaw him ſtanding up as in his defence, Acts 7.55. and where he maketh interceſſion for his redeemed, Rom. 8.24. As being their own onely Mediator, 1 Tim. 2.5.

Q. 43. What believe you of Chriſt judging the world?

A. He is ordained of God to be Judge of quick and dead, Acts 10.42. Not only men but Angels are reſerved to the day, when (being called the great day Iude 6.) He ſhall come to do it viſibly, Act. 1.11. and according to thoſe truths which are contained in the Goſpel, Rom. 2.16. & as men may find their doome in the word, ſo they muſt expect it, Ioh. 12.48. His Saints too by their lives ſhall judge all the world that are not Saints, 1 Cor. 6.2. The ſet day, and houre, and time, knoweth no man, nor the Angels, no not Christ himself as Man, Mark 13.32. Though a mans particular judgement be as he dyes, *Heb.*9.27. either to Heaven or Hell, Luke 16.22.23.

Q. 44. What is the Office of Christ?

A. He is our Mediator, *Heb.*12.24. and he that makes interceſſion for us, *Heb.*7.25. appearing in the preſence of God for us, Heb 9.24. and perfuming the Prayers of his members with the odours of his merits, whenſoever they pray in his name, *Revel.*8.3.4. In this ſenſe, no meere creature can be a Mediatour to intreat for us, 1 *Sam.*2.25. And therefore it is in another ſence, that the prayers of Saints living upon earth, when they pray for other men, are called interceſſions, 1 *Tim.*2. 1. & we muſt pray them to pray for us, *Heb.*13. 18. though not when they be dead, for then they be ignorant of us; yea, though it be Abraham himſelf, *Iſa.*63.16. The dead know not any thing of the affaires of this life, *Eccleſ.*9.5. The Lord counts it an abſurd thing that the living ſhould ſeeke unto the dead, *Iſa.*8.19. when once their ſoules go away hence, they be no more to appeare to us, *Pſal.*39.13. Neither have we any warrant to pray the Angels to pray for us, though they be ſent forth to Miniſter for us, *Heb.*1.14. Nor to ſpeak unto them, unleſſe it be in a Rhetoricall, ſtraine to bleſſe the Lord, *Pſal*103.20.

Q. 45. Why did Christ take the office of a Mediator upon him?

A Becauſe he was elected of God for this purpoſe, *Iſa.*42.1. and fore-ordained, 1 *Pet.*1.20. and ſealed, John 6.27. and Sanctifyed, John 10.36. And given of God for the life of beleevers. John 3.16. not onely to help ſinners with a poſſibility of ſalvation that they might be ſaved, *ver.*17. but to convert ſinners, 1 *Tim.*1.15. This was the agreement made between his Father and him, that he ſhould have a ſeed, and that the Redemption which he purchaſed ſhould actually proſper, Iſa. 53.10. This was the principall end he looke at, namely, that he might purchaſe to himſelf a peculiar people, *Tit.*2.14.

Q. 46. Which be the particular Offices of Christ?

A. He was Anointed, *Iſa.*61.1. Firſt to be our Prophet, to whom we muſt hearken as long as we live, *Deut.*18.15. Secondly, our merciſull and faithful high Prieſt to reconcile us to God, *Heb.*2,17. and King of Saints, Revel 15. 3. For firſt, we were deſperately ignorant of God, and he onely can reveale God unto us, *Matth.*11.27. Secondly, we were deſperately alienated, being the enemies of God, and he onely can reconcile us, Col 1.21. Thirdly, we were deſperately diſabled, and could never have applyed this Redemption unto us; he onely can make us Kings over ſinne and death, *Revel.*1.6.

Q. 47. Who is he that in effect denyeth Christs offices, and teacheth men so?

A. The Pope and his Church; for though he ſeeme to ſit in the Temple of God, 2 *Theſ.*2.4. and have the horne of the Lamb, as though he were Chriſts Vicar and friend, yet he ſpeaks like the Dragon, *Revel.*13.11. And therefore he is ſaid to deny Chriſt, 1 *Joh.*2.22.

Q. 48. How doth he deny Christs Offices?

A. Firſt, becauſe he denies Chriſts; Propheticall office, he coynes new Articles of Faith; and therefore he is called the falſe Prophet, *Revel.*12.20. Secondly, becauſe he denies Chriſts Prieſtly office, for he undertakes to offer Chriſt in the Sacrament, whereas Chriſt was onely once offered, *Heb.*9.28. He hath invented ſatisfactions and penances, and Purgatory, to expiate for ſinne, whereas Chriſt trod the wine-preſſe alone, *Iſa.*63.3. Thirdly, becauſe he denies Chriſts Kingly office, for he applies that to himſelf which Chriſt ſpake of himſelf, *Matth.*28.18. and takes it onely to himſelfe, 1 *Tim.*6.15.

Q. 49. Doth he deny no more of Christ?

A. He makes himſelf the head of the Church, whereas Chriſt onely is the head, 1 *Cor.*11.3. this office being given him onely of God, *Epheſ.*1.22. He makes Peter and himſelf the rock, which was meant of Peters confeſſion that he made.

made *Matth.*16.18. Namely, Christ the Son of God, verse 16 for he onely is the Rock, 1 *Cor.*10.4. The rock of all our salvation, *Deut.*32.15. And who is this rock save our God? *Psal.*18.31.

Q. 50 Why doest thou believe in God the Holy Ghost?

A. That he may apply Christ unto me to Justification, 1 *Cor.*6.11. that he may transform me into the image of God, 2 *Cor.*3.18. And make his graces fruitfull in me, Gal 5.22. that he may teach me all truth, and put me in remembrance of Gods word. Iohn 14.26. and lead me to walke uprightly, Psal 143. 10. That he may comfort me in all Temptations, Acts 9.31. helping me with grones in my Prayers, Rom 8.26. That he may witnesse with my Spirit that I am Gods child, verse 16 that he whom the world knoweth not, may abide with me for ever, Iohn 14..16. For if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his, *Rom.*8.9

Q. 51. What doest thou believe the Holy Ghost doth more?

A. I believe that the Spirit makes me a member of one Body, 1 *Cor.*12.13. Namely, the holy Catholicke Church of Christ, which is spoken of, Rev 7 9. which is the body of Christ, *Col.*1.18 and consisteth onely of Saints and Professors of holinesse, 1 *Cor.*14.33. Whereof if any walke scandalously, they are to be admonished; and if they will not be reclaimed, they must be accounted as Heathens, *Matth.*18.17. and cast out of the Church, though proud Diotrephes abused this power, 3 Iohn 10. and delivered up to Satan, for the destruction of the Flesh, that the Spirit may be humbled, and so saved if it may be possible, 1 *Cor.*5.5. That they may learne not to blaspheme, nor cause the Word to be blaspheмed, 1 *Tim.*1.20. The visible Church have some among them which are not of them, 1 Iohn 2.19. But the true Church which is called Invisible, because the world cannot see which persons they be, are onely them which shall be saved, Acts 2.47.

Q. 52. Wherein doth the Communion of Saints consist?

A. In two things; first, in Fellowship with Christ the head, 1 Iohn 1.3. Secondly, in fellowship with the Saints, verse 7. and so it consisteth in 7. things; First, in Unity, *Ephes.*4.3.4.5. &c. Secondly, In keeping company with them Psal 16 3. Thirdly, in Praying for them, *Ephes.*6 18. Fourthly, in fellow-feeling compassion and bowels, *Phil.*1.2. Fifthly, in helping one another out of sin, Gal 6.1. and provoking one another to goodnesse, Heb 10.24. Sixthly, in imitating the lives of the Saints, 1 *Thes.*1.6. as they imitate Christ, 1 *Cor.*11.1. Seventhly, in relieving them that lack, to the very selling ones goods if need require, Acts 4.34.

Q. 53. What believest thou concerning Remission of sinnes?

A. I believe, that all that believe in Christ receive remission of sinnes, Acts 10.43. I cannot truly say, I am sick, but my sinnes are forgiven me, *Isa.*33. 24. blotted out and remembred in heaven no more, *Isay.*43.25. nor imputed to me, Psal 32.2. but drowned in the Sea, *Mich.*7.19. Namely of Christs bloud, *Ephes.*1.7. which cleanseth me from all sinne, and I know my Belief is right if I walke in the light, 1 Iohn 1.7. For who so have not destroyed the works of the Devill in them, Christ was never yet manifest to them, 1 *Ioh.*3.8. Those that sin against the Holy Ghost, shall never be forgiven, *Matth.*12.32. Neither are such as go on in their guilty Consciences forgiven, *Exod.*34.7. nor such as provoke Christ, and obey not his voyce, *Exod.*23.21. Yet God is a God ready to Pardon, Nehem 9.17. upon true Repentace and Faith answerable to the vow in Baptisme, Acts 2.38.

Q. 54 What believest thou concerning the Resurrection of the Body?

A. Though flesh & bloud count it incredible, Acts 26.8 nevertheless by faith I know it is true, *Iob.*11.14. And that these very eyes shall rise and see my Redeemer, Iob. 10.27. though the wormes have eaten up all my Flesh, verse 26. yea, though my body were drowned and devoured of Fishes, *Rev.*20.13. yet the ſubſtance ſhall be the ſame, Juſtice requiring that the ſame bodies that ſinned ſhould be damned, and Mercy requiring that the ſame bodies that glorified God ſhould be ſaved, 2 Cor. 5.10. Nevertheleſſe, I believe that the qualities and accidents ſhall be altered; namely, that this very mortall ſhall put on immortality, 1 Cor. 15.53. This diſhonourable ſhall put on glory, this weak ſhall put on Power, verſe 43. this naturall body ſhall be raiſed a more Spirituall body, verſe 44. and beare the image of the heavenly, verſe 49. though it be diſpierſed into a thouſand thouſand pieces by Corruption, yet Chriſt will loſe nothing of it, John 6.39. And therefore my Fleſh ſhall reſt in hope, Pſal. 16.9. of the Redemption of my Body, Rom. 8.23. That mortality may be ſwallowed up of Life, 2 Cor. 5 4. Though my ſoul while it is abſent from my body, be preſent in the mean time with the Lord, verſe 8. having returned to God that gave it, Eccleſ. 12 7.

Q. 55. What believeſt thou more of the Reſurrection?

A. That there ſhall be a Reſurrection both of the juſt and alſo the unjuſt, Acts 24.15. the one to life, the other to damnation, John 5.29. For Chriſt is the Judge of quick and dead, Acts 10.42. And therefore though it be appointed unto men once to dye, nevertheleſſe not to dye as beaſts, but to come to judgement, Heb. 9.27. The Angels being inſtruments of gathering them, and ſending them to Chriſts barr with a Trumpet, Matth. 24.31 not a materiall Trump, but with the Trump of God, and with a ſhout, and the dead ſhall riſe firſt, 1 Theſ. 4.16. Then thoſe that are alive ſhall be caught up to meet Chriſt in the aire, verſe 17. being changed in a moment, 1 Cor. 15.52. Bleſſed and holy is he that hath part in the firſt Reſurrection from ſinne unto holineſſe here, Rev 20.6. for he ſhall goe into life eternall, but the reſt into everlaſting puniſhment, Matth. 25.46.

Q. 56 What believeſt thou concerning the laſt Article, namely Life everlaſting?

A. I believe it is the inheritance proper to the Saints, who in this life are made meet to be partakers of it, Col 1.12. Which is a Kingdome, Matth. 25. 34. conſiſting, Firſt in the beatificall viſion and ſight of God as he is, 1 Joh. 2. 2. Secondly, in entire likeneſſe with God, Pſal. 17.15. Thirdly, in fulneſſe of joy and pleaſure everlaſting in Chriſt, Pſal. 16.11. Fourthly, in having no need of the Creature, Rev. 22.5. but inheriting all things in God, Rev. 21.7 Fifthly, in freedome from all troubles and grievances, and imperfections of this life, verſe 4 The Bleſſedneſſe of it cannot enter into the heart of man to conceive it, it is ſo great, 1 Cor 2.9. It is ſuch a holy Kingdome, that no unholy perſon may have it, 1. Cor. 6.9. and if he were there, ſuppoſe that were poſſible which is impoſſible, 1 Cor. 15.50. Yet he could have no happineſſe there, for there dwelleth nothing but Righteouſneſſe, 2 Pet. 3.13.

Q. 57. The wicked ſay they believe all this, but doe they?

A. Indeed they believe the hiſtory of God and his Word, Iam 2 19. otherwiſe they believe a falſhood or a lye, Ierem. 13.25. and therefore though they expect to be ſaved on their death-beds, when they dye they ſhall periſh, Prov. 11.7. Though they cry, Lord, Lord open the gates of heaven to us, yet he will not open it unto them, Matth. 25.11.12. God that made them will never ſave them, Iſa. 27.11. and though they dye, with Lord have mercy upon me, in their mouthes, Matth. 7.21. and ſo goe away like Lambes, they ſhall lye in the grave of Hell, as thick as Sheep in a ſheep-coate, Pſal 49.14.

Q. 58. How many Commandements are there?

A. Ten, ten Words, Exod. 34.28. God added no more, Deut. 5.21. Which are the rule of my ſteps, Pſal. 119.133. continually, verſe 117. in my memory, verſe 109. in mine underſtanding, verſe 130. being my meditation alwayes, verſe 97. that I may refraine from every ſinne, verſe 101. Idle vaine vaine thoughts and all, verſe 113. and endeare them unto me above thouſands of Gold and Silver, verſe 72.

Q. 59. What rules are to help us in the right underſtanding of the Law?

A Six more eſpecially; Firſt, that the Law is Spirituall, ſo ſpirituall that the beſt Saint is carnall in compariſon of it, *Rom.*7.14. reaching to all the heart, ſoul, mind, ſtrength, Luke 10.27. Secondly, that it is perfect, *Pſal.*19. 7. commanding Obedience to every tittle; if a man doe but once ſinne it doth curſe him, *Gal.*3.10. Thirdly, when it forbiddeth or commandeth any thing, it forbiddeth or commandeth all meanes, occaſions, or provocations thereunto; and therefore the leaſt laſcivious look is Adultery, *Matth.*5.28. The leaſt hatred is Murder, 1 Iohn 3.15 Fourthly, whatſoever the Law forbiddeth, it commandeth the contrary, 1 *Pet.*3.11. Whatſoever it commandeth, it forbiddeth the contrary, *Levit.*19.17. Fifthly, it runneth upon Negatives, for negatives bind ſtrongly, this being the nature of a No, no in no wiſe, *Rom.*3. 9. the affirmative bindes alwayes, but not to all moments, but the Negative bindeth to both, Luke 21.34. Sixthly, it's put in the ſecond Perſon, that every ſoul may apply it, *Mal.*2.1.

Q. 60. Who be under the Law, the Rigour of the law, and the Curſe of the law?

A. All diſobedient perſons that are not made righteous by Chriſt, 1 Tim. 1.9. Even the whole world, whether Chriſtian Profeſſors or not, except they be led by the Spirit of God, *Gal.*5.11. bound to doe the Law to the utmoſt, as a wife is bound to her husband, *Rom.*7.2. and therefore the Law hath dominion over them as long as they live, verſe 1. and the Curſe too, *Gal.*3.10. And whatſoever the rigour of the Law ſayes, its ſpoken directly to them, Rom. 3.19. but Believers in whom ſinne doth not reigne, they are not under the Law but under Grace, *Rom.*6.14. nevertheleſſe they muſt not think the Law to be of none effect to them, *Rom.*3.31. But firſt, they muſt conſent to the goodneſſe of it, *Rom.*7.16. Secondly, get the knowledge of their ſinnes more and more by it, verſe 7. Thirdly, fling mire and dirt in their own faces, by reaſon of it, verſe 24. Fourthly, delight in it as a bleſſed rule of life, verſe 22. Fifthly, be moved by it to thankfulneſſe to Chriſt, verſe 25. Sixthly, be ſchooled by it to hang faſter upon Chriſt, *Gal.*3.24. Seventhly, to take heed of the madneſſe of their fleſh, that deſires rather to be under the Law though never ſo cruell, then to be under Chriſt, Gal 4.21.

Q. 61 Wherefore ſerves the Preface; I am the Lord thy God which brought thee out of the Land of Egypt, out of the houſe of bondage?

A. To teach me; Firſt, I cannot wholly obey, except I believe God is my God, *Joſh.*14.8. and be one of the Iſrael of God, Gal 6.16. Secondly, that the conſideration of what God hath done for me, is a motive to obey him, Joſh 24.31. Thirdly, that I am forgetfull of old mercies; and therefore the Lord perſwades me to obedience with the neweſt and lateſt, Exod. 20.2. Fourthly, that the Spirituall meaning of this deliverance from Egyptian bondage, concerneth all that are delivered from Satan and ſinne, *Heb.*2.15.

Q 62. Are the duties of the firſt Table greater then the duties of the ſecond?

A. Yea, becauſe they are the firſt and the great Commandements, Matth. 22.38. Firſt, becauſe the object of them which is God, is greater then man, Job 33.12. Secondly, becauſe the performance of them is the immediate worſhip of God, and he that ſinnes againſt his neighbour, does more eminently ſinne againſt God, 1 Cor 8.12. Thirdly, they moderate the duties of the ſecond; as for example, the duty of obedience to Parents, otherwiſe it is not right, *Epheſ.*6.1. And yet with theſe cautions; firſt, that the compariſon be equally made of the chief of the firſt Table with the chief of the ſecond; of the middle with the middle; of the leaſt with the leaſt; otherwiſe not, *Iſa.*1.15.

Secondly,

Secondly, that our obedience to the ſecond is an argument of our obedience to the firſt. 1 John 4.20. Thirdly, that the obedience to both is inſeparable, holineſſe and righteouſneſſe ever go together, Luke 1.75.

Q. 63. What art thou commanded in the firſt, thou ſhalt have no other Gods but me?

A. To know God and believe him, Iſa. 43.10. and in him, 2 Chron. 20.20. and in no other God, Pſ. 81.9. This Commandement bids me keep all the reſt, Deut. 11.22. Not onely to obey him in what he commanded at the firſt, but any Commandement he would afterwards give, Heb. 11.17. And therefore this Commandement binds me now to believe in Jeſus Chriſt, 1 John 3.23. to rely upon God for all things, 2 Chron. 16.8. Couragiouſly to wait upon God, Pſ. 27.14. To walk before God, as a ſervant before his Maſter, Gen. 17.1. In all my wayes to think of God, and to acknowledge him, Prov. 3.6. To to be merry in him evermore, Phil. 4.4. to fear him and to ſerve him, Deut. 6.13. To turn the deſires of my Soul to him, and to the remembrance of him, Iſa. 26.8. To labour more after him then after meat or drink, or any thing in this periſhing world, John 6.27. To make him the end and ſcope of all mine actions, not onely Spirituall, but alſo civill, and naturall, 1 Cor. 10.31.

Q. 64. Now becauſe we muſt ſerve God, and feare him, and love him, and truſt in him, and ſo forth, according to his Attributes, which be they?

A. He is uncompounded, ſimple, and perfectly one, Deut. 6.4. Immutable and unvariable, Jam. 1.17. and therefore he cannot be ſaid to Repent, 1 Sam. 15.29. but onely improperly, in regard of the effects, Gen. 6.6. Infinite in greatneſſe; the heaven of heavens is not able to contain him, 1 Kings 8.27. being every where preſent, Pſ. 139.7. Infinite in eternity, from everlaſting to everlaſting, Pſ. 90.2. Not by ſucceſſion of time but he is for ever, I am, Exod. 3.14. Infinite in Power, for he is Almighty, Gen. 17.1. Nothing is unpoſſible to him, Luke 1.27. unleſſe it be to do evill, that is a weakneſſe and no power, and therefore unpoſſible to him, Heb. 6.18. Infinite in knowledge, he knoweth all things, John 21.7. Not by diſcourſe one after another, but all together Pſ. 139.4. moſt free in his Will, he doth whatſoever he will, Pſal. 115.3. His will being the cauſe of all things, Epheſ. 1.11. Gracious, abundant in goodneſſe, Mercy, in patience and Truth, Exod. 34.6. and Juſtice, verſe 7. and Holineſſe, 1 Pet. 1.16. of terrible Majeſty, Iob 37.22. moſt happy and bleſſed for ever, Rom. 11.36. and ſo forth.

Q. 65. How doe the attributes of God concerne thine obedience to God, eſpecially in this firſt Commandement?

A. Firſt, God is ſimple as a Spirit, therefore he muſt be ſerved in ſpirit and truth, Joh. 4.24. and I muſt doe every thing with ſimplicity, 1 Cor. 1.12. Secondly, God is unalterable, therefore I muſt truſt in his Covenant, Pſal. 89.34. neither change nor meddle with them that doe, but be conſtant in his feare, Prov. 24.21. Yet I muſt repent and ſo change my life; for God alſo repenteth of the evill, Joel 2.13. Thirdly, if God fill heaven and earth, I muſt be conſcious that whereſoever I am God is, Jer. 23.24. Fourthly, if God be eternall, then he is the Eternall life that I muſt ſeek, 1 Joh. 5.20. and count him my continuall refuge, Deut. 33.27. Fifthly, if God be Almighty, then I muſt not ſtand out againſt his chaſtenings, Iob. 5,17. but feare him, Iob. 6.14. and humble my ſelf betimes before him, Iob. 8.5. and returne to him, for there, is no ſcaping out of his hand, Iob. 22.23., Sixthly, if God know all things, then I muſt be conſcious, that he ſeeth my thoughts, Matth. 9.4. and all my ſecrets, Matth. 6.18. And ſo of the reſt.

Q. 66. What art thou commanded in the ſecond Commandement?

A. Not to ſerve God with will-worſhip, though it ſeeme never ſo wiſe, and humble, and mortifying, Coloſ. 2.23. To abhorre all groſſe thoughts of God, Acts 17.29. as that he is ſuch a one as mens ſelves doe think him to be, Pſ. 50.

21 Not to make any Image, *Deut.*5.8. unleſſe God ſhould reveale a new Commandement, as once he did for Cherubims in the ſanctuary, Exod. 25.18. and the brazen Serpent in the wilderneſſe, Numbers 21.8. or unleſſe it be in a civil uſe, Mathew 22.10. To abhorre images of Idolaters, either to worſhip God before them, 2 *Chron.*25.14 or in them, as the Jewes did God in Baal, *Hoſ.*2.16. or to be put in mind of God by them, veſe 17. or being at Maſſe or communion of Service with them, 1 *Cor.*10.21. or houſing them, 2 John 10. or bidding them God ſpeed, verſe 11. or learning any of their deviſes or cuſtomes of them, Dent. 12.30. or familiar reading their Bookes, Acts 19.19. Unleſſe it be to confute them by their own writers, Acts 17.28. and to upbraid carnall Profeſſors with their ſtrictneſſe in their kind, *Rom.*2.14, 15,16,17,&c.

Q. 67. What elſe art thou commanded in the ſecond Commandement?

A. Not to leane to mine own knowledge, Proverbs 3.5. nor to ſerve God by the precepts of Men, Iſaiah 29.13. not as men bid me, Mark 7.6. Nor according to the Traditions and cuſtomes of the lives of our Fore-fathers, 1 Pet. 1.18. I am commanded to do, not onely in matter what, but alſo in manner, as the Lord commandeth, *Gen.*6.22. For otherwiſe my prayers and ſervices that I do unto God, and all my ſacrifices and oblations are no better then murder, or a Dogs neck, or Swines bloud, or Idolatry; ſo indeed it is, if I ſerve him after my own wayes, *Iſa.*66.3. not onely ſticks and ſtones are Idols, *Levit.*26.1. but carnall fancies, imaginations, dulneſſe, deadneſſe, luke-warmneſſe; for there be Idols in the heart, *Ezek.*14.3,4. Covetouſneſſe is Idolatry, *Col.*3.5. Stubbornneſſe is as idolatry, 1 *Sam.*1.15,23. A careleſs Chriſtian is an Idol, there is an idol Profeſſor, an idol Chriſtian, an idol Shepherd, *Zach.*11.17.

Q. 68. What art thou commanded in the third Commandement?

A. To glorifie the name of God, *Rev.*15.5. that is his Titles and attributes, *Exod.*3.4 5 his law, *Dent.*32.3. his ordinances, as prayer and hearing of his word, and the like, *Deut.*1.2,5. The profeſſion of Chriſt, Mat 10.12. His cenſures, as Excomunication and delivering men up unto Satan, 1 *Cor.*5.4. His Sacraments, Mat 28.19. All his worſhip, Mal 1.11. his Meditation, *Pſal.*104.4. and that not onely in tongue or lips, *Heb.*13.15. but alſo in heart, Pſal. 86.11. and in every action, *Prov.*30.9. If any man or woman do not their duty, as for example, Servants or any others, they cauſe Gods name to be blaſphemed, 1 *Tim.*6.1. So alſo if any man break the Law of God, he is guilty of other mens blaſpheming Gods name, Romans 2.24. Likewiſe if a Brother or Siſter walketh ſcandalouſly, they prophane Gods name, Ezek. 36. 20.

Q. 68. What more art thou commanded in the third Commandement?

A. To feare God and ſweare by his name, *Deut.*6.13. with a Soul-bowing oath, *Iſa.*45.23 which is a wholly confeſſing of God, *Rom.*14.11. and an oath of Covenant, *Iſa.*19.18. and in ſome ſolemne caſes with a renewed oath, Dent. 10 20. either given by others, and ſo willingly taken, 2 *Chron.*15.14. or freely of ones ſelf, *Pſ.*119.106. if need require, by Oath before the Magiſtrate; but then it muſt be in Truth, and righteouſneſs, and judgement, *Jer.*4.2. and if neceſſity of weight be in private agreements, *Gen.*26.31. As for performance of ones laſt will and Teſtament, Gen 47.31. or to cleare ones ſelf, and graciouſly to ſatisfie a Brother, 1 *Sam.*20.3. yea now under the Goſpel too, Iſa. 65.16. And in ſome caſes a Miniſter may ſwear in the Pulpit, to make the People believe, 1 *Cor.*1.13. and in more private threatnings from God, 1 Kings 17.1.

Q. 70. What art thou forbidden in the third Commandement?

A. I am forbidden in common talk Swearing, *Mat.*5.34.35. leſt I fall into damnation, *Jam.*5.12. and bring all the Curſes in Gods book on my houſe, Zach 5.2,3. and cauſe the very land to mourne, *Jerem.*23.10. It was the brand of a Saul to be a common ſwearer, 1 Sam. 14.24,39,44. 1 Sam. 19.6,1. and 28.10. And that whether it be in broken Oathes, as God, and the Lord liveth, Ier. 5.2. Or in Idolatrous oathes, for they are a double ſinne; as by the light, or by Baal, Jer. 12.16. Or any other hideous oathes, as by the Paſſion of Chriſt, or by the Lord himſelf, or by Milchom, Zeph. 1.5. The prophane uſe of ſwearing is a bloudy ſin, ſwearing, lying & killing are put together, for which the Lord hath a controverſie with Men, Hoſ. 4.2. Nay, if a man heare an Oath, and do not utter a reproof, he is guilty of the ſin, Levit. 5.1. and if for every idle word a man ſhall give account before God at the laſt day, what then ſhall he do for his Oathes? Mat. 12.36 ſwearing is a curſing of ones ſelf, Mat. 26.74. but chiefly I am forbidden all falſe ſwearing, Levit. 19.12. for that pulls Chriſt ſwiftly againſt one, Mal. 3.5.

Q. 71 What art thou forbidden more in the third Commandement?

A. Firſt, all taking Gods name in vain, as O God, O Lord, Deut. 5.11. Secondly, the formall repeating theſe words, the Lord be with thee, or the like, 1 Sam. 17.37. I thank God I do ſo and ſo, Luke 18.11. Thirdly vain repetitions, as Lord have mercy upon us, Chriſt have mercy upon us, Lord have mercy upon us; as Papiſts and babling Battuſes uſe them, Mat. 6.7. Yet repetitions that proceed out of a broken zealous heart be holy, Dan. 9.18,19. Fourthly, the abuſe of Lots, for their diſpoſing is of God, Prov. 16.33. and were ſacredly uſed. Firſt, for the deciding of Controverſies, Prov. 18.18. Secondly, for Elections, 1 Sam. 10.21. Thirdly, for dividing of Portions, Numb. 36.55. Fourthly, the finding out of an offender, Ioſh. 7.14. for they were joyned with Prayer, Acts 1.24,26 reſting on Gods determination, Ioſh. 14.2. being a Divine thing by the light of nature, Ionah 1.6,7. and appealings to God, 1 Sam. 14.41. and therefore not to be uſed to wickedneſſe, Mat. 27.35. as South-ſaying, Eſther 3.7. or Covetouſneſs, or any evil practices, Prov. 1.14.

Q. 72. What art thou commanded in the fourth Commandement concerning the Sabbath?

A. To keep it, to ſanctifie it, and ſo as the Lord hath commanded, Deut. 5.12. not to hide mine eyes from it, Ezek. 22.26. not to turn my foot from it, to delight in it, to count it honourable, to honour God in it, not ſeeking mine own pleaſure, not doing mine own works, nor ſpeaking mine own words, Iſa. 58.13. To regard it in mine own dwelling houſe, and in Gods at publique Convocations and aſſemblies, Levit. 23,3. there to Pray, Acts 16.13. To have the Word read and Preached, Acts 15.21. to reaſon about matters of Religion, Acts 17.2. To ſing unto the Lord and thank him, Pſ. 92.1. To meditate and triumph in Gods works, verſe 4. To talke of Gods faithfulneſſe, and ſhew it forth morning and night, verſe 2. It is not an houre or two at Church, and ſo an end, but all the whole day; for it is not a part of a day, but a whole Day, Mat. 12.1. If I will not hearken to hallow this day, I ſhall burn in Hell-fire for ever. Ier. 17.27. He is an adverſary to God that mockes at a ſtrict keeping of a Sabbath, Lam. 1.7. For God hath bleſſed it, Gen. 2.3. and it is a ſigne between a man and his God, Ezek. 20.12.

Q. 73. What ſay you more of the Sabbath?

A. I muſt not onely keep it, but keep it verily, Exod. 31.13. and abſtain from all weekly works, not only reſt but reſt holily, verſe 15. Fathers muſt not ſuffer, much leſs cauſe their Children, or Maſters their Servants, or Inne-keepers their Gueſts, to break this day, Exod. 20.10. none may buy or ſell victuals or wares on this day, Nehem. 13.16.17. nor carry burthens, Ier. 17.22. Nor go journeys, Exod. 16.29. nor dreſs meat beyond neceſſity or godly convenience, to the hinderance of themſelves, or Daughters, or Maids, from ſanctifying this day, verſe 23. Hither are referred holy Feaſts or thankſgiving, Neh. 8,9,10. As the deliverance from the Gunpowder Treaſon, Eſther 6.2. Faſts for humiliations, 2 Chron. 20.3. which muſt be Sanctified too, Ioel 1.14. as being kinds of Sabbaths, Levit. 16.31. And therefore the Convocations of them must be holy, *Levit.*23.24.

of

Q.74. May no works but onely of Gods immediate Worship be done on the Sabbath?

A. Yea, first workes of Mercy to a Beast in danger or need, Mat 12.11. or to Man in sickness or other misery, verse 10. whether in soul or body, Luk. 10.11. Secondly, works of necessity, as taking of food, Mark 2.23. Thirdly works of decency, as making of beds, and the like; for the Sabbath was made for Man, and not man for the Sabbath, verse 27. Fourthly, works of common honesty and humanity, as saluting one another, we are not forbidden to be courteous, 1 *Pet.*3 8. Fifthly, works though otherwise in themselves servile, requisite to Gods worship, as travelling to Church, Luke 6.6. or riding divers miles off to the Prophets of God, if need be, 2 Kings 4.22,23. The Ministers studying his text, and the Priests killing of the sacrifices, 2 Chron 23.31. and setting things in order, Lev 24.8. If any call this prophaning Gods Sabbath, he must know it is blameless, *Mat.*12.5. Sixthly, works of helpfull refreshings, as walking, for that may be existent with the immediate worship of God, Luke, 6.1. I do not meane Playing, *Exod.*32.6. or recreations for our own Pleasure, for they are forbidden, *Isa.*58.13.

Q.75. There be many arguments to prove the Commandement of the Sabbath to be morall; which be the first sixe them?

A. First, the Sabbath was delivered to Adam before the fall, when there was no Ceremony, *Gen.*2.2. which is not spoken by anticipation, but the context sheweth it was then sanctified to him, verse 3. Secondly, Moses takes it for granted, it was known to be morall, & known before the Law was given, Exod. 16.25. Thirdly unlesse this be morall there cannot be ten Commandements; for the Duties being commanded in the three former, the time onely here, either this time must be morall, or else there cannot be ten which is false, Deut. 10.4. Fourthly, God would not put a ceremoniall law in the middest of the moralls, and urge it with more words, reasons, repititions, and particulars then any of the moralls, as he doth the Sabbath, *Exod.*20.9,10,11. Fifthly Christ speaking of those dayes, when all the ceremoniall law was dead and buried, sheweth the Sabbath to stand still, Mat 24.20. Sixthly, the Prophet prophecying of the dayes of the Gospel, when Christ the righteousnesse and salvation of God should be revealed, *Isa.*56.1. pronounceth a blessing on them in those times that keep the Sabbath from polluting of it, verse 2. and putteth the keeping of the Sabbath for the whole obedience of of the covenant, verse 6. which he would not do, if it were ceremoniall; for obedience is better then sacrifice or ceremony, 1 Sam 15.22.

Q 76. Now because some object, saying, the Sabbath is not engraven in mens hearts, neither is there any mention either before the Flood or after that the fathers did keep it, and so forth, therefore tell me what arguments have you to prove it morall?

A. First, if God had meant to put one Ceremony among the Lawes that were morall, he would rather have put Sacrifice, for that is more adequate to all the ceremoniall law, *Hos.*6 9. being a type of repentance, *Ps.*50.17. Thanksgiving, *Ps.*107.22 Prayer, *Prov.*21.27 Justice and Judgement, v 3. all religion, *Prov.*15 8 a full type of Christ, Heb 9.14. Secondly, the Scripture sheweth that no Christ, Mat 5.17. nor the law of faith doth disanull any thing of the law, meaning directly the Decalogue, *Rom.*3.31. Thirdly, the Sabbath was intimated in Cain & Abel publick serving of God, *Gen.*4.3.4. and in the publick calling on Gods name in the dayes of Enosh, v 26. and in Noahs waiting the fall of the waters by Sevens, *Gen.*8.10,12. who no question as he condemned the world by building the Ark on the week days, *Heb.*11.7. So also by preaching on the Sabbath for he was a Preacher, 2 *Pet.*2.5. & in Abraham too who was a Propher, Gen. 20.7. and had a great people to preach to, *Gen.*14.14. Fourthly, the Sabbath is engraven upon mans heart, of which the engraving upon Tables was a token, *Exod.*34.28. and to ſhew the everlaſtingneſſe of it, it was written, which none of the Ceremonies were, in ſtone, *Deut.*4.15. Fifthly, when God ſpeaketh of the Covenant of grace, he ſaith, he will write it again in the minds of his redeemed, *Heb.*10.16. even upon the fleſhly tables of their hearts, alluding to the materiall writing, 2 *Chron.*3.3. Sixthly, the very heathens had their Sephtamins, their eights and the ninths, ſtill hovering about the holy ſeventh of the Decalogue, the whole law being obſcurely written in their hearts, Romans 2.15.

Q. 77. The Sabbath was the laſt day of the weeke; how commeth it now to be changed into the firſt day of the weeke?

A. This day the Lord hath made, *Pſal.*118.24. For on this day Chriſt roſe from the dead, and reſted from the work of Redemption, Mat 28.1. Having created new heavens and a new earth, *Iſa.*65.17. which we are to keep by vertue of the fourth Commandement ſtill; for Chriſt telleth us, he is Lord of it, Mat 11.8. which is called ſometimes from priority of order and dignity, the firſt day of the weeke, Acts 20.7. Sometimes from the Author that did inſtitute it, the Lords day, *Revel.*1.10. as we ſee the Lords ſupper is called, 1 *Cor.*11.20. And though the Sabbath from the creation were from even to even, Levit 23.32. Dayes being ſo reckoned, *Gen.*1.31. Yet this Sabbath is to be reckoned from Chriſts reſurrection, and therefore is from morning to morning, Mark 16.2. And albeit Mary Magdalen came while it was darkiſh, and Chriſt was riſen before that, and ſo might ſeem to have riſen over-night, Iohn 20.1. yet that could not be; the woman, and Peter, and Iohn would never have deferred their going to the Sepulchre till morning then as they did. v 2. Now howſoever this day be circumſtantially changed, and Ceremonies removed; yet the day ſtands ſtill morall, Acts 16.13. The Commandement of not Killing had a ceremony annext unto it, as the eating of fleſh with the bloud, *Gen.*9.4.5. which now is changed, *Col.*2.21. and yet the Commandement of not killing ſtands ſtill, *Rom.*13.9.

Q. 78. What art thou commanded in the fifth Commandement?

A. To honor my Father and Mother, *Exod.*20.12. to feare my mother and father, *Levit.*19.3. to uſe reverent ſpeeches to them, 1 King 2.19. to obey them, *Prov.*16.20. in godly choice of Marriage, as Iſaac did, *Gen.*24.4.67 and of vocation, as Samuel did, 1 *Sam.*1.28. and 2.11. and of ſuitable Apparell, verſe 19. yea in all things, *Col.*3.20. ſo it be in the Lord, *Epheſ.*6.1. To receive all godly inſtruction from them, Prov 1.8. to ſubmit to their correction, Prov. 23.13. to requite my Parents love, 1 *Tim.*5.4. to relieve them if they be in want, *Gen.*47.11. to cover their infirmities in a humble wiſe, *Gen.*9.23. To intreat Chriſt for them, Mark 1.29,30,31 in nothing to be unnaturall towards them, 2 *Tim.*3.2,3. I muſt honour my Parents, not onely by generation, *Prov.*23.22. but alſo by affinity, Ruth 3.1,5. by adoption, Eſther 2.7,20. By rule and government, as Kings and Magiſtrates, *Iſa.*22.21. by bounty, as benefactors, *Iob.*29.16. alſo through age, as old men, 1 *Tim.*5.1.2. or through Spirituall profeſſion, as Miniſters and Preachers, 1 *Cor.*4.15. for they are my ſpirituall Fathers, *Tit.*1.4. and theſe I muſt have in a double honour, 1 *Tim.*5.17.

Q. 79. But what muſt my Parents do for me?

A. They muſt pray to God for me, 1 *Sam.*1.10. and devote me unto God before I am born, verſe 11. bleſſe God for me when I am born, Luke 1.68. and provide all things neceſſary for me to this life, and therefore much more for Heaven, 1 *Tim.*5.8. To teach me diligently the wayes of the Lord, *Deut.*6.7. that I may be learned in the Scripture from a child, 2 *Tim.*3.15. and not provoked to wrath, but brought up in the nurture of the Lord, *Epheſ.*6.4. To offer continually the ſacrifice of Prayer for me, though I be afarre off, Iob 1.5. to ſet up the ſervice of God in their houſe, that I may daily partake of it, *Ioſh.*24.

15. For curſed are ſuch families that have not Prayers and invocations upon God in them, *Jer.*10.15. to hold me to the obſerving of Gods ſtatutes, as for example, the Sabbath, *Exod.*20.10.

Q.80. What is the meaning of the ſixth Commandement, Thou ſhalt do no Murder?

A. Thou ſhalt not kill thy ſelf, Acts 16.27,28. neither by diſtempering thy ſelf as a drunkard doth, 1 *Sam.*25.36. nor by neglecting the body, *Col.*2.23. nor by denying comforts to the body, 1 *Tim.*5.23. nor by too much grief, *Prov.*17.22. Thou ſhalt not kill another, whether he be a good man, Prov. 1.11. or a bad man, *Gen.*4.15. neither by deviſes, 2 *Sam.*11.15. nor by forgery, 1 Kings 21.13. nor by challenging duels, 2 Kings 14.8. This Commandement doth not onely forbid murder in outward act, *Gen.*9.6. but alſo all reprochfull words and anger, *Matth.*5.22. and all angry looks, *Gen.*4.6. and all hatred, 1 *Ioh.*3.15. and all tale-bearing, *Lev.*19.16. I muſt blow away a tale-bearer, as the North-wind blowes away raine, *Prov.*25.23. I muſt be carefull to maintaine the life and health of, and to recover my neighbour from ſickneſſe, not onely his daughter, *Matth.*15.22. not onely his ſonne, *Ioh.*4. 47. not onely his ſervant, *Matth.*8.5,6. but alſo a ſtranger, Luke 10.34.

Q.81. Is it not lawfull to kill in any wiſe?

A. Yes, *Deut.*13.9. for the Magiſtrate may and muſt uſe the ſword againſt them that deſerve it, *Rom.*13.4. but then it muſt be done in humility; Iezabel in her feigned doing of juſtice, would have a faſt when ſhe put Naboth to death, 1 Kings 21.12. and with tenderneſſe of the malefactours ſoul, that I may give glory to God, *Ioſh.*7.19. A Captaine and his ſouldiers may kill the enemy in a juſt battell, 1 *Sam.*15.5. nay he is an offender if he will not, verſe 18.19. but ſo as there be peace firſt offered if they be fit to have it, *Deut.*20.10. and alſo a private man in caſe of neceſſity, upon his own defence or brothers. *Exod.*2.12.

Q.82. What elſe doth this Commandement urge?

A. Not to be ſoon angry, *Tit.*1.7. unleſſe it be without ſinne, *Epheſ.*4.26. and againſt ſinne, *Mark.*3.5. not to be haſty, *Prov.*14.26. to be long ſuffering, 1 *Cor.*13.4. to overcome evill with goodneſſe, *Rom.*12.21. ready to forgive, *Epheſ.*4.32. not to be ſuſpicious, 1 *Cor.*13.5. but apt to believe good of ones neighbour, verſe 7. to be courteous, 1 *Pet.*3.8. without envie, *Iam.*3.14. without emulation and any evill, *Matth.*20.12. or envious diſdaine, *Prov.*14. 30. or contempt, *Prov.*18.3. or uncompaſſionateneſſe, 1 *Joh.*3.17. not to be a flattering friend, *Prov.*19.4. nor treacherous, Luke 12.4. nor to beare a ſecret grudge, *Prov.*26.26.

Q.83. What more doth it Command?

A. To rejoyce with them that rejoyce, and weepe with them that weepe, *Rom.*12.15. To reſiſt the beginnings of ſtrife *Pro.*17.14. as loud ſpeaking, Epheſ. 4.31. or provoking interjections, as Piſh, tuſh, Raca, *Matth.*5.20. To depart from ones own right to redeeme love and peace, Gen 13.8,9,10. To be hoſpitable, for thereby ſome have entertained Angels unawares, *Heb.*13.2. to be without offence, *Rom.*14.21. yea in a morſell of meat, verſe 15. For if we offend the Conſcience of our weak brethren, we ſinne againſt Chriſt, 1 *Cor.*8.12.

Q.84. What is the meaning of the ſeventh Commandement, Thou ſhalt not commit Adultery?

A. Thou ſhalt not commit Sodomy, *Rom.*1.27. nor Beſtiality, *Lev.*18.23. nor Inceſt, verſe 6. nor Whoredome, *Lev.*20.10. nor Fornication, *Heb.*12. 16. nor Polygamy, *Mal.*2.15. nor Rape, Deut, 22.25. nor admit of unlawfull Divorces, *Matth.*19.9. for leſſe then Adultery, Matth 5.22. Yet in caſe the wife hath committed Adultery, the bond is not broken, if the Husband be pleaſed to continue it and renew it, 2 *Sam.*3.14. nor unreaſonable abſenting, but there may be abſenting upon neceſſity, 1 *Sam.*25.18. As a Souldier in time of warre, 2 *Sam.*11.11. or when a lawfull trade doth inforce, as a Sea-faring man; for the men were named onely to have sayled abroad, 1 Kings 9.27. Husband and wife must not defraud one another, unlesse it be with consent for a time, for fasting and Prayer, 1 *Cor.*7.4. or for some speciall work of God, *Exod.*18.2. they must not deny one another due benevolence, 1 *Cor.*7.3.

Q. 85. What say you of Marriage?

A. Marriage is honourable among all men, Ministers and all, *Heb.*13.4. Simply considered, better then cœlibate or single life, because instituted before the fall of man, *Gen.*2.18. as since the fall it is a meanes to avoid Fornication, 1 *Cor.*7.2. and temptations, verse 5. and burning, verse 9. yet to this or that man not to be married may be better, verse 1. and a speciall gift, verse 7. by reason of circumstance and present distresses, verse 26. For thereby one is more vacant for the service of God, verse 32. But Marriage in it self hath neither Commandement for it, nor against it, verse 25. When a Sonne and Daughter are to marry, their Fathers have power to strike up the Marriage, *Deut.*7.3. between such and such, *Jer.*29.26. namely, with the parties consent, for that is essentiall to Marriage, *Gen.*24.8. However the Father have a negative voyce, Gen 28.1. And though they have given their consent, he hath power to break it. Exod 22.17. Nay, their vow cannot stand without his consent, either expresse or implicite, *Numb.*30.5.

Q.86. What say you of Contracts or Espousalls before consummate Marriage?

A, They are not essentially required to Marriage, for it may be all at once, *Gen.*2.22. yet it is not amisse to goe by degrees in Marriage, being a weighty thing, a Covenant of God, Prov. 2.17. but when a couple are Contracted onely, they are Man and Wife, *Deut.*22.23.24 Joseph and Mary espoused onely, Matth 1.18. yet they were Man and Wife, verse 20. as appeares also by the spirituall Espousalls unto Christ, which are the faithfull, Hos 2 20 & stands for ever, verse 19. namely, the Espousalls being absolute, Luke 2 5. yet if they be conditionall, they may be broken when Marriage cannot, for Marriage no Creature can disanull, Marke 10 9. to wit, First, if there were a just condition put, which is not fulfi led. Secondly, if a time were set, and the one party failes, then the other is free. Thirdly, if there appeares any thing after the Espousals, which if it had been known before had hindered them; and now one party reasonably changeth his mind. Fourthly, if both agree to loosen the Promise made but conditionally; promises of Marriage become often scandalous, 1 *Sam.*18.17. and therefore better stay till through agreement; for Marriage is the absolute taking of one to be a Wife, *Gen.*25.1 Marriage though it be more solemnly celebrated by the Minister, yet it may be also by the civill Magistrate, Ruth 4.1. openly before Witnesses, verse 9. and with invocation and benediction, verse 11.12. so then Marriage is consummate, verse 13.

Q. 87. What is the duty of Man and Wife?

*A*s First, Conjugall love, as toward their own bodies and soules, Ephes 5 28. Secondly, speciall honour, and dwelling together according to knowledge, and Communion in the worship of God, 1 *Pet.*3.7. Thirdly, communication of their body, and so possessing the vessell in Sanctification, 1 *Thes.*4.4. Fourthly, communication of outward goods, especially for the use of them, for they are one flesh, *Ephes.*5 31. onely so as the Husband be the head, 1 *Cor.*11.3. And therefore, First, he is to cherish his Wife, and to provide for her necessaries, *Ephes.*5.29. Secondly, to goe before her in knowledge, yet so, as he is to hearken to her godly counsell, Judges 13.23. Thirdly, to rule well over his house, 1 Tim 3.4. and as for the Wife, First, she must submit and acknowledge her self subject to her Husband in the Lord, Ephes, 5.22. Secondly, reverence him, verse 33. Thirdly, ask questions of him, wherein she is ignorant about points of Faith; and therefore he is bound to be able to tell her, 1 *Cor.*14.35. she may in some cases give something away without the expresse consent of her ber husband, ſo it be for the good of the family, 1 *Sam.*25 18. And alms to the poore, *Prov.*31.20 eſpecially, if ſhe get it over and above by her induſtry, verſe 13. and doe not ſinne againſt the truſt of her Husband, verſe 11. for his good and not for his evill, verſe 12.

Q.88. What muſt they doe that are to marry? And what ſay you more of the ſeventh Commandement?

A. They muſt ſeek God extraordinarily, by Prayer and meditation, as Iſaac did, *Gen.*24.63. and their parents muſt ſolemnly bleſſe them, or they that give them in Marriage; they muſt ſolemnly bleſſe them, and beſeech the Lords bleſſing upon them, verſe 60. The man muſt be carefull that he marry a godly daughter of Gods people, *Judg.*14.3. and ſo is the Maid that ſhe marry in the Lord; 1 *Cor.*7.39. and when they doe marry, to marry as if they marryed not, verſe 29. and to beware of any diſorders at the marriage-feaſt, as if Chriſt Jeſus were bodily there. *Joh.*2.2. this ſeventh Commandement forbids wanton company, *Epheſ.*5.7. all drunkenneſſe and exceſſe, 1 Pet 4.3 Idleneſſe, Ezek 16.49. ſleepineſſe, and looſeneſſe of eyes, 2 Sam. 11.2. and an impudent forehead, *Jer.*3.3. all kindes of light talking, 1 *Tim.*5.13. or geſture, *Iſa.*3.16.17 wanton Dances, Stage-playes, Pictures, Hiſtories, tales, or any filthy converſation which may grieve a righteous Lot, 2 *Pet.*2.7. and luſtfull attire, Prov. 9.10. any ſtrange faſhions or apparell, *Zeph.*1.8. Magiſtrates muſt not tolerate, or lightly or ridiculouſly puniſh Whoredome or Fornication; for that is as bad as tolerating, *Deut.*23.17. nor forbid the remedy, as Marriage, 1 *Tim.*4.3.

Q.89. What is the eight Commandement?

A. Thou ſhalt not ſteal, that is, Thou ſhalt not defraud, Marke 10.19 whether it be by robbery, Luke 10.30 or Burglary, *Exod.*22.2. or any other theft, 1 *Cor.*6.10. whether by concealing, 1 Kings 21.7. or by partaking thereof, *Prov.*29.24. or by being a confederate, *Prov.*1.14. Secondly, thou ſhalt not uſe cunning guile, 1 *Theſ.*4.6. neither by vaine getting, *Prov.*13.11. nor unright getting, *Jer.*17.11. nor covetous getting, *Hab.*2.9. nor by unjuſt detaining, *Jam.*5 4. Thirdly, thou ſhalt not be an Uſurer, whether by extortion, *Ezek.*22.12. or any other ſinne againſt the ſenſe of true lending, Ezek. 18.8. He that lives in this ſinne wittingly, is under an impoſſibility to be ſaved yet. *Pſal.*15.5. for he is an unjuſt man, *Prov.*28.8. whether he be a lending Uſurer, *Deut.*23.19. or a Broker for Uſurers, *Jer.*15 10 or a wiſe inventer of new uſury; for it is curſed to be wiſe to doe evil, *Jer.*4.22. Fourthly, thou ſhalt not be niggardly, *Eccleſ.*6.2. nor carking and caring in any thing, Phil. 4.6. nor reſolving to be rich, 1 *Tim.*6.9. nor haſty to be rich, *Prov.*28.20. nor inſatiable in the increaſe of riches, *Eccleſ.*4.8. Fifthly, thou ſhalt not be a waſter, *Prov.*28.9. nor improvident, for thy ſelf, or ſervants, or wife, or children, or any others that are thine, 1 *Tim.*5.8.

Q.90. What doth this Commandement forbid more?

A. Heedleſſe ſuretyſhip, *Prov.*11.85. falſe weights and meaſures, verſe 1 Ingroſſings and hoardings of Corne, or the like, verſe 23. asking a higher price for wares then the ſeller may afford, for that is lying, *Prov.*21.6. though it be to bring the buyer to a due worth, for that is to doe evill that good may come of it, *Rom.*3.8. diſpraiſing of the wares as buyers uſe to doe, that they may get them under value, *Prov.*20.14. buying things that are not to be ſold, as Graces, pardons, preſentations to benefices, Acts 8.18. making of wares that are unlawfull to be uſed, as Dice, and Shrines for Idolatry, Acts 19.24. Sacriledge, *Rom.*2.22. of things given to good uſes, either by ones ſelf, for which Ananias and Saphira died ſuddenly, Acts 5.5.10. or by others, *Prov.*20.15. of tenths or any Church duties, *Mal.*3.8. or Church livings, whether it be by mangling, or alienating, or devouring of them, *Neh.*13.7.8. Here are condemned, Firſt, Bankrupt Gentlemen that will not labour in their

their calling, Luke 16.3. Secondly, Idle Gentlemen that will not work at all, 2 Theſ. 3.11. Thirdly, idle beggers that would have to eat, and yet are lazie to work for it, verſe 10 Fourthly, all, be they never ſo great, or Noble, or rich, that uſe no vocation, Gen. 3.19. Fifthly, all Juglers, Fidlers, Gameſters, Players, keepers of game-houſes, Sight-ſhewers, and all that work not with their hands the thing that is good, Epheſ. 4.28.

Q. 91. What more does this Commandement command?

A. Firſt, To make reſtitution whenſoever we have wronged our neighbour, Ezek 33.15 yea rather more then leſſe to the party damnified, Lev. 6.5 or if he be dead, to thoſe next of kin, or for want of them to pious uſes, Numb. 5 7,8. with amends for the wrong, Luke 19.8. and if we be not able, yet ſo much as we can, Exod. 22.3. though it be with the parting with our garment, if it be deſired, Prov. 27.13. if ever we meane to be forgiven our ſinnes, Lev. 6.7. nay our repentance is all rotten whatſoever it be, except we right our wronged neighbour; for God is no reſpecter of perſons Col. 3.25. Secondly, to be content with whatſoever eſtate we are in, Phil. 4.11. whether rich or poore, verſe 12. even with bare food and rayment, 1 Tim. 6 8. yea in want and neceſſities, 2 Cor. 12.10. to be moderate in the caring for maintenance, Prov. 30.8. Thirdly, to uſe comfortably the good gifts of God, Eccleſ. 5.10. ſo that nothing be loſt for want of honeſt ſaving, John 6.12. caſting our care upon God, 1 Pet. 5 7. to be ſober in the uſing of, or caring for any thing, ver. 8. not giving too much to the belly, Luke 16 19. or back by chargeable apparell, 1 Tim 2.9. Fourthly, To give without ſparing to them that are in need, Prov. 22.26. as we have wherewithall, Epheſ. 4.28. eſpecially to the Saints, Rom. 12.13.

Q. 92. What ſay you of mens particular Callings, for they come here to be examined?

A Every man and woman is to have a calling, Gen 2.15 and to doe his own buſineſſe, 1 Theſ. 4.11. though it be with much labour and ſweat, Gen. 3.19. wherein he is to labour ſix dayes, Exod. 20.9. except it be to goe to a Lecture, or to any other higher duty, John 4.28. for idleneſſe is a deep ſleep, Prov. 19. 15 Now a man may know whether his calling be good. Firſt, if it be the working of that which is good, Epheſ. 4.28. Secondly, if it be honeſt and of good report among the Saints, Phil. 4.8. Thirdly, if it be ſuch a calling as he may have God to teach him in, Iſa. 28.26. and to give him a gift comfortably and profitably to diſcharge, 1 Pet. 4.10. and theſe things he muſt have for to follow it. Firſt, Wiſdome and skill to underſtand his way in it, Prov. 14.8. Secondly, Diligence, Prov. 10.4. Thirdly, Prudence to obſerve opportunities, verſe 5. Fourthly, Courage to undergoe difficulties, Prov. 20.4. Fifthly, Not to be haſtier to be rich then godlineſſe and a good Conſcience will afford, Prov. 28. 20. Sixthly, Minding his own matters, 1 Pet. 4.15. Seventhly. The grace of God to ſanctifie and eſtabliſh his work, Pſal. 90.17. a man muſt abide in his calling wherein he is called, 1 Cor. 7.20. except it be a calling onely for a time, as to be a ſervant; for then he may be free when God opens a doore, verſe 21. otherwiſe not to leave it without a ſpeciall warrant, Amos 7.15.

Q. 93. Now becauſe the rich are the poores purſe-bearers, and doe ſteal from them if they be not mercifull and bountifull to them, what ſay you of almes and bounty?

A. Every ſoul that hath not a farthing to give, yet in affection muſt; for there is a liberall ſoul, Prov. 11.13. Secondly, though a man be a poore labourer, he muſt labour the harder that he may be able to give, Epheſ. 4.28. Thirdly, much more if a man have this worlds goods ſomewhat more plentifully, 1 John 3.17. Now this giving is not to burden a man either in his neceſſaries or conveniences to his eſtate and condition, 2 Cor 8.13. yet in caſe of neceſſity of our poore brother, we muſt to our power and beyond our power give, ver. 3.

yea in our deep poverty to be liberall, *v.*2. to our decayed brethren, Acts 20. 35. especially such as are neareſt us, verſe 34. to all, but moſt eſpecially of all to the houſhold of faith, *Gal.*6.10. not ſo much to them that are wicked, yet charity will not judge eaſily evil of any, 1 *Cor.*13.5. and this our giving muſt be firſt with aiming at the honouring of God, *Prov.*3.9. Secondly, without letting our left hand know what our right doth, *Mat.*6.3. Thirdly, without ſhaming of the poore, 1 *Cor.*11.22. Fourthly, out of a charitable & a compaſſionate mind, 1 *Cor.*13,3 Fifthly, not grudgingly but chearfully, 2 *Cor.*9.7 and bountifully v. 6. Sixthly, according to the meaſure of Gods proſpering of us, 1 *Cor.*16.2. where, and how much, and what, and when, cannot be defined, but by wiſdome and righteouſneſſe which teacheth how to give, *Pſ.*112.5. Seventhly, we muſt conſider, that he which takes pity on the poor, lends to the Lord, and that which he hath given, he will pay him again. Proverbs 19.17.

Q. 94. What is the meaning of the ninth Commandement, Thou ſhalt not beare falſe witneſſe, againſt thy neighbour?

A. That is, thou ſhalt not lye, *Levit.*19.11. for lying is an abomination unto the Lord, *Prov.*12.22. and ſhalt never eſcape, *Prov.*19.9. but be damned, Rev. 21.8. whether it be with merry lyes, *Hoſ.*7.3. or officious lyes, though it be to help ones ſelfe, *Gen.*12.13. neither mayeſt thou lye, thinking to glorifie God by it, *Rom.*3.7. or for God, though thy meaning benever ſo good, Job 13.7. much leſſe with pernicious lyes, *Prov.*6.17. nor by telling the truth with a feigned geſture, or countenance, or pronuncation, or unſeaſonably, as Doeg ſpak truth, 1 *Sam.*22.9. yet he lyed by ſpeaking it, *Pſ.*52.3.4 deceitfull tongue ſhall not be in thy mouth *Zeph.*3.13. Thou ſhalt not feare to confeſs the truth *Mat.*26. 70. nor ſlip away for feare of ſtanding to the truth, 2 *Tim.*4.16. Thou ſhalt not give eare to Rumors, flying reports, or tale-bearing lipes, *Prov.*17.4. nor give credit, to ſuch as curry favour, as David to Ziba, 2 *Sam.*16.3,4. nor interpret good things ill, 1 *Sam.*16 13. nor judge raſhly, leſt thou be judged, Mat. 7.1. unleſſe where thou know by the fruits, thy judgement is right, verſe 20. and then curſed art thou if thou call a wicked man an honeſt man, *Iſa.*5.20. Thou ſhalt not ſpeake true words intending a wrong ſence, Matthew 26.60, 61. thou ſhalt utter the truth, when thy neighbour does need it, or God does command it, Acts 4.20. and not betray the truth from thy neighbour, *Eph.*4. 25. nor leave him comfortleſſe in the middeſt of lying reports, 1 *Sam.*94. though it be like to coſt thee thy life, 1 *Sam.*20.32,33.

Q. 95. Which be the Speeches that ſeeme to be lyes, and yet are not?

A. Firſt, Ironicall ſpeeches ſeeme to be lyes, and yet are not, *Mat.*22.1. Secondly, Sarcaſmes they are not lyes neither, *Gen.*3.22. nor ſpeeches in godly deriſion of wickedneſſe, 1 Kings 18.27. nor Thirdly, Apologues and morall fables, though of matters that cannot be ſo, Iudge 9.8. nor Fourthly, Hyperboles, though they ſet forth things ſeemingly more then they are, 1 *Sam.*7.6. nor yet Fifthly, Figurative ſpeeches, though literally not true, *Iob.*15.1. nor Sixthly, Speeches of confeſſion, though cleane contrary to the down-right meaning of the ſpeaker, 1 *Kin.*22.15. nor Seventhly, ſpeeches of ſimple deſire, though the event be otherwiſe, Luke 24.28. nor Eightly, threatning, though not effected, when the underſtood condition is ſupplyed, *Ion.*3.4. nor Ninthly, Promiſes not kept when the condition is broken, 1 Kings 11.38. nor Tenthly, dictating Commandements, 1 *Sam.*10. though not obeyed, 1 *Sam.*13.8

Q. 96. What lying reports go for currant on the godly?

A. They are reproched and ſhamed, *Pſ.*69.7. and counted, Firſt, ſtrange men, yea even of their brethren, verſe 8. Secondly zealous hot ſpurres, verſe 9. Thirdly, moding weepers, verſe 10. having Proverbs made on them, verſe 11. Songs and Ballads made on them too, verſe 12. being mowed and grind at as they go in the ſtreets, *Pſal.*35.16 and winckt at with the eye, verſe 9. and laught at, verſe 21. Fourthly, Signes and wonders, and monſters of men, *Iſa.*8.18.

Fifthly, fooles, Isa. 35 8. Sixthly, hypocrites, as if drunkards, & whore-masters & Atheists, & prophaneings, were holier then they, Isa. 65.5. they are counted proud and self-conceited men, that have naughtier hearts then others, for all their faire shews; as Elias thought of David, 1 Sam. 17.28. Seventhly, troublers, and seditious turbulent spirits, 1 Kings 18.17. Sectaries every where spoken against, Acts 28.22. pestilent fellowes, Acts 24.5. Irregular men, enemies to the Law of the land, Acts 25.8. men that care not for Churches, Acts 24.6. Eighthly, precise & strict men, and the world wonders they will not do, as other men do, 1 Pet. 4.4. Singular people and certain fellowes by themselves, Zach. 3.1. Puritans, whom our Saviour prophetically blesseth, though others do curse them, Mat. 5.8. and you are one of the Elect forsooth, thus folk mock them; for so was Christ handled. Luke 23.35. and if they say they are persecuted and nicknamed for righteousnes sake, as they are, the world answers them as the Jewes answered Christ, for a good work we stone thee not, John 10.33. Nay the world thinks they do well to revile them; like the Jewes, say we not well thou art a Samaritan, and hast a Devil? John 8.48.

Q. 79. What pretences have the Papists for their Equivocations, and their mentall Reservations, and how are they answered?

A. First, because our Saviour sayes of the dead Damosell, she is not dead, Mat. 9.24. but Christ spake plainly to the understanding of the standers by, who thought she was finally dead, as it appeares by the Minstrels, verse 23. 24. because he sayes he told his Disciples all things that he heard of his father, John 15.15. whereas afterwards he confesses that he told them not all things, John 16.12. but he speakes distinctly in regard of his friendly openesse, John 15.14. 3ly, because he sayes he was ignorant of the day of Judgement, whereas indeed he was not; but he did not equivocate, for he confesses he spake this in regard of his man-hood, Mark 13.32. Fourthly, because he sayes he would not go up unto the feast, and yet he did, John 7.10. but the truth is, he did not say he would not go up unto the feast, but that he would not yet, v. 8. nevertheless in some case a man may reveale one part, and conceale the other, Ier. 38.27. Nay though we probably know, some will gather false inferences, Acts 23.6. 7. but we must never lye to one another, for that is a badge of the old man, Col. 3.9. abomination unto God, Prov. 6.17. and the brand of Dogs that are without Christ, Rev. 22.15. and the Devil is the father of it, John 8.44. and it is clean contrary to saving grace, which is called truth, John 1.17. and to God himself, who is called the God of truth, Ps. 31.5.

Q. 98. Now for the tenth Commandement, before you speak of that; tell me what is Originall sinne?

A. It is three-fold, First, it is Adams actuall disobedience, whose person infected the nature, and nature infected infects every person, insomuch as all men thereby are made sinners, Rom. 5.19. For he sinning all men sinned, verse 12. all men were in Adam, 1 Cor. 15.22. and Adam was not onely that man, but man, verse 21. and all men were then potentially in his loynes; as Levi was in Abrahams when Melchisedech did meet him, Heb. 7.10. and they all sinned in Adam, as Levi payed tithes in Abraham, verse 9. As they were all made upright in Adam, so they all sought out many inventions in Adam; and looke what Adam did, they all would have done if they had been in his roome, Eccl. 7.29. being born of him, as the young toad of the old one, or a young wild Asse-colt of the old one, Iob 11.12. Can the young Viper complain that the old one brought forth a Viper and not a goodly Oxe? Mat. 3.7. or can the fruit of the Thistle complain that it was not a Figg? Mat. 7.16. No more can the child complain of the father, that he brings him forth sinfull: woe be to him that sayes to his father, what begettest thou? Isa. 45.10. Like must needs beget like, and after its own image, Gen. 3.5.

Q. 99. You ſaid, that Originall ſin is three-fold, and have told me the firſt branch; which is the Second?

A. A naked privation of all originall righteouſneſs which every ſoul is born in, Hoſ. 2.3. whereby there is no Spirituall goodneſs in any man by nature, Rom. 7.18. no power ſo much as to think a good thought, 2 Cor. 3.5. no life of God, Epheſ. 4.18. the mind altogether in darkneſſe, Epheſ 5.8. deſperately unable to comprehend any ſaving light, though it ſhine on it, John 1.5. the conſcience void of all Purity, 1 Tit. 1.15. and all true peace, Iſa. 57.21. and feeling, Eph. 4.19. and ſence, 1 Tim. 4.2. the will unable to make choice or to receive the things of Gods ſpirit, 1 Cor. 2.14. and never able to help it ſelf, except the Lord work it, Phil. 2.13. the whole man dead in ſin, Col. 2.13. the affections out of order and vile, Rom. 1.26. and unnaturall, 2 Tim. 3.3. the appetite unbridled from immoderate thirſting, Jer. 2.25. and had need of a knife to be put to the throat, Prov. 23.2. the ſences unſpirituall, Iude 19. and had need of a new covenant to be made with them, Iob 31.1. being heavy and dull to let in that which is good, Mat. 13.15. the outward members ſervants to the carnall heart, Rom. 6.19. a privation of right to the Creatures, for Chriſt onely is now the heire of them, Heb. 1.2. and thoſe that are in Chriſt, 1 Cor. 3.22. otherwiſe all the creatures grone in mans hands, Rom. 8.22. indeed wicked men may have a civil right before men to the creatures; Nabal ſheared his ſheep, 1. Sam. 25.2. and muſt feed upon the creatures; becauſe they are forbidden to murder themſelves, Exod. 20.13.

Q. 100. Which is the third branch?

A. A poſitive corruption of nature, 1 Cor. 15.50. whereby the whole man is not onely fleſhly, but fleſh it ſelf, John 3.6. it being a compleat body of ſinne, Rom. 7.24. conſiſting of all the members, verſe 23. the mind an enemy unto God, Rom. 8.7. deſperately inclined by carnall reaſons, to deviſe evil, Ier. 4.22. the will ſelf-willed, 2 Pet. 2.10. the affections invincibly ſet upon the things here on earth, Col. 3.2 except Chriſt raiſe them up again, verſe 1. the memory apt to forget ſpirituall things, 2 Pet. 1.9. and to remember carnall, or carnally, Mat. 27.63. the Conſcience irrecoverably evil, Heb. 10.2. except Chriſts eternall Spirit once purge it, Heb. 9.14. and therefore it is the nature of a man to be a child of wrath, Eph 2.3. which is moſt conſtant and unalterable, and impoſſible to be healed, except the power of the Almighty change it, and quicken it altogether with Chriſt, verſe 5. Thus is every man conceived and born, nay David himſelf, Pſ. 51 5. and though he be baptized, and then preſently die, yet if he were not baptized with Gods Spirit too, John 3.5. and born again from above, he could not be ſaved, verſe 3.

Q. 101. How is Originall ſinne called in Scripture?

A. Firſt, becauſe this onely is hereditary, its called abſolutely ſin, Rom. 5.12. Secondly, becauſe it can never be gotten quite out in this life, it is called the ſin that dwelleth in us, Rom. 7.17. Thirdly, becauſe of its wonderfull faſt hold it hath gotten of our natures, it is called the ſin that hangs ſo faſt on, or that ſo eaſily beſets us, Heb. 12.1. Fourthly, becauſe it hath enthralled the whole man, and every faculty and members, Rom. 7.23. Fifthly, becauſe of its antiquity and maturity, and experienced ſubtilty, it is called the old man, Rom 6.6. Sixthly, becauſe it is ever hatching and conceiving of evil, and though a man have never ſo much grace, yet it is ever luſting againſt it, it is called luſt, Iam. 1.14. which will not let the godlieſt man under heaven do that good that he would, Gal. 5.17. Seventhly, becauſe it is directly oppoſite to the ſpirit, and all the graces of the Spirit, it is called the fleſh, Eph. 2.3. and the uncircumciſion of the fleſh, Col. 2.13. and becauſe a carnall man loves it as deare as he does his heart blood, it is called blood too, 1 Cor. 15.50. &c.

Q. 102. The Papiſts ſay, that it is not properly a ſin, but after a manner; the Pelagians ſay, there's no ſuch ſin by propagation, but onely by imitation.

and the Anabaptiſts ſay, that now under Chriſt there's none borne in ſinne; How do you prove then that there is ſuch a ſinfull corruption of nature properly ſo called?

A. Firſt, David ſhewes plainly that ſinne was propagated to him, *Pſal.*15. 5. Secondly, Eliphaz ſhewes that ſinne is now as naturall to a man as water to a fiſh, Iob 15.16. Thirdly, Iob ſhewes it is ſuch a wofull corruption, that no creature can ever purge it out, Job 14.4. Fourthly, Moſes ſhewes that there is ſuch an infinite depravation in mans nature, that all that flowes from it, though it ſeeme never ſo holy, and godly, and religious, yet it is onely evil and continually evil, Gen 6.5. Fifthly, Paul ſhewes that mans nature is ſo truly corrupted, that there is nothing in it but it is the object of Gods wrath, *Epheſ.*2.3. Laſtly it is ſuch a dolefull contagion, that the deareſt of Gods Saints, whenſoever they look on it, they are faine to cry out! O wretched man that I am, *Rom.*7.24. And this Originall ſinne remaines ſtill after Baptiſm; the Saints at Rome were baptized, *Rom.*6.3. and yet it was in them, onely they were to look to it, that it might not reigne in them verſe 12. and if a ſoul be under grace, he is not freed from the exerciſe of it, and the continuall aſſaults of it, but onely from the dominion of it, verſe 14. and becauſe its a fountain ever running afreſh; we muſt every day ſue out a new pardon, *Matth.*6. 11. and ever goe to the freſh fountain to be waſhed anew, *Zach.*13.1.

Q. 103. What doth this Doctrine of Originall ſinne teach us?

A. Firſt, to begin our humiliation here; thou wert a tranſgreſſor from the womb, *Iſa.*48.8. Secondly, not to truſt any of our faculties; David would not truſt his mouth without a bridle, Pſal 39.1 he would have no wicked thing in his houſe or before his eyes, *Pſal.*101.7. Joſeph would not truſt himſelf with hearing of, or being with his Miſtreſſe, *Gen.*39.10. Thirdly, to keep our heart with all diligence, *Prov.*4.23. and to bind the Law of God about our heart, *Prov.*6.21. nay, Fourthly, not to truſt any grace that we have received already, nor to count our ſelves to have apprehended enough, but ſtill to preſſe forwards, *Phil.*3.12. Fifthly, to be ſtill laying aſide more and more of this weight, *Heb.*12.1. and to be ſtill warring againſt it, for it ſtill warres againſt us, 1 *Pet.*2.11. For firſt, this ſinne is an enemy ever preſent with us, nay, even when we are doing the beſt good, *Rom.*7.21. Secondly, becauſe our heart is worſe by reaſon of this ſinne then we can believe, before we find it by experience; Hazael could not believe what a vile heart he had, 2 Kings 8.13. no nor Peter neither, *Matth.*26.33. Thirdly, becauſe its a madneſſe in the heart, there is no truſting of a mad man, *Eccleſ.*9.3. Suppoſe we ſtand for the preſent, and another fall, as we muſt reſtore him, ſo we muſt conſider our ſelves; it may be our caſe be we never ſo ſpirituall, *Gal.*6.1.

Q. 104. What doth the laſt Commandement forbid?

A. It commands the inward parts, *Pſ.*51,6. to be incorrupt in the hidden man of the heart, 1 *Pet.*3. it forbids all inward luſt, *Rom.*7.7. and all firſt motions of ſin, verſe 5. even before the conſent and allowance of the evil, verſe 15. and all luſtings after evil, 1 Cor 10.6. or after the good creatures of God in a carnall manner, *Num.*11.4. and all the ſquint-eyed lookings of the heart, 1 Iohn 2.1. for the very luſts are, Firſt, ungodly, Iude 18. Secondly, they are fooliſh and hurtfull, and they may drowne men in perdition, 1 *Tim.*6. 9. Thirdly, they are deceiveable, *Epheſ.*4.24. Fourthly, worldly, *Tit.*2.12. Fifthly, they are of the Devil, Iohn 8.44. Sixthly, they are the very chokers of grace, Mark 4.19. Seventhly, they are the firſt wheeles of a ſinfull converſation, *Epheſ.*2.3. the firſt temptings and enticings of ſin, *Iam.*1.14. and the firſt itchings of ſin, 2 *Tim.*4.3. and the firſt that makes the ſoul a ſervant to ſin, *Tit.*3.3. and they flow immediately from Originall concupiſence, 1 Theſſ. 4.5. and if we do not crucifie them, it is a ſigne we are not Chriſts, *Gal.*5.24. and if we do not eſcape them better then the world does, we cannot be partakers of the Divine nature, 2 *Pet.*1.4.

Of Thoughts.

Q.105. Now becauſe the Thoughts are the beginnings of actions, and all ſinnes begin there; for whereas Saint John ſaid, Think not to ſay within your ſelves, as Matthew hath it, Matth.3.9. Saint Luke hath it thus, Begin not to ſay within your ſelves, Luke 3.8. Therefore what ſay you of the Thoughts?

A. Sinne when it is but begun in the thoughts is already a ſinne, *Prov.*24.9. as ſoone as ever thoughts peep up in the heart, *Deut.*15.9. nay it is not onely a ſinne, but it is abomination, *Prov.*15.26. and if it lodge in the heart, it hindreth Salvation, *Jer.*4.14. and a man never repents till he have forſaken his thoughts, as well as his outward ill courſes, *Iſa.*55.7. never can he be forgiven, except repentance root them out, Acts 8.22. and therefore we muſt labour to prevent their very riſings in our hearts, Luke 24.38. not onely thoughts that proceed out of our own heart, *Matth.*15.19. but alſo thoſe that the Devil puts in our hearts, John 13.2. eſpecially if they never ſo little cloſe with our heart, and prove to be our thoughts, though but for a moment, Luke 9.47. which they will doe for certaine either little or much; for our heart is like tinder, and if any ſparke doe fall in it, will kindle, *Pſal.*39.3. yea even blaſphemous thoughts, though the heart ſeeme to hate them, Marke 7.21. and indeed doe beat them down, *Pſal.*73.15. yet the heart will think them haſtily though in a moment; by reaſon of grace either proper or common does unthink them againe, *Pſal.*115.11.

Q.106. But how if a ſoul be haunted with evill thoughts, and the more it ſtriveth againſt them, the more it is haunted, how then?

A. Firſt, lay thy hand upon thy mouth, and be humbled for the wretchedneſſe of thy thoughts, *Prov.*30.32. Secondly, run to Chriſt Jeſus for his grace and comfort againſt them, *Pſal.*94.10. Thirdly, reaſon theſe thoughts out of thy heart, ſaying, why ſhould I think them? *Iob.*31.1. Fourthly, if they haunt thee ſtill, goe to thy calling, and doe not ſtand poring on them; thoughts moſt haunt a ſoul that is idle and at eaſe, *Iob.*12.5. Fifthly, be ſure thou hate thine evil thoughts and be not diſmayed, *Pſal.*119.113. Sixthly, underſtand it is the Devils doing to make thee faint in the way; for he is in a rage, ſeeing his time is but ſhort, *Rev.*12.12. Seventhly, know thou the Lords meaning herein, it is to let thee ſee thou haſt not ſo good a heart as thou didſt imagine, for the heart is deſperately wicked, *Jer.*17.11. It is not ſafe to lay all the blame on the Devil, and falſely to accuſe him, though he doe falſely accuſe thee, *Rev.*12.10. though there were no Devill, the heart is bad enough to be guilty of ſuch haunting thoughts, *Gen.*6.5.

Q.107. Is the Law of God ſo perfect, that it commands whatſoever can be ſaid to be goood and pleaſing unto God; and is there no roome for Popiſh ſupererogation, or the Doctrine of diſtinguiſhing of Evangelicall counſels from Precepts?

A. Gods Law is ſo broad, that it containes all the latitude of good, and of its perfection there is no end, *Pſal.*119.96. It implyes a contradiction, that we ſhould performe obedience to God in a thing that he hath not commanded, *Deut.*12.32. he that ſayes he addes over and beyond the word of God, is a lyar, *Prov.*30.6. and therefore there can be no ſupererogation, Firſt becauſe the word commands whatſoever is true, honeſt, juſt, pure, lovely, or good; no good beyond a whatſoever, *Phil.*4.8. Secondly, becauſe it requires all the ſoul; and all the heart, and all the mind, and all the ſtrength; what can be beyond all? Luke 10.17. Thirdly, becauſe no man is able to doe as much as the Law does command, and therefore much leſſe can any doe more; it makes the beſt Saint daily to cry out, Forgive us our treſpaſſes, *Matth.*6.12. There's not one juſt man upon earth but falls ſhort of doing the good he is commanded, *Eccleſ.*7.20. Fourthly, ſuppoſe men ſhould command any thing beyond, the Lord tells them flatly they evacuate his Law, *Matth.*15.9. If their heart and wit doe deviſe any commandement, it is againſt the Commandement of God, *Num.*15.39. yea though it be never ſo highly eſteemed in the judgement of man, Luke 16.15.

Q.108. But particular circumſtances are not in the word, Here, and now, and he, and this, and that caſe; It ſhould ſeeme then where the Word leaves, there counſell may goe on?

A. Commandements are of two ſorts. Firſt, ſome are directed to all the people in the world, *Pſal.*49.1. as the morall Law, *Gal.*3.10. Secondly, ſome are directed to ſome particular men, either expreſſely, *Matth.*19.21. or implicitely and mediately, if ſuch and ſuch circumſtances be, as to this or that man not to Marry, 1 *Cor.*7.26. though there be no immediate Commandement for a thing to bind me or thee, verſe 6. yet when here, and now, and thus, and in ſuch a caſe, and other ſuch circumſtances come between, it may prove a morall Commandement, verſe 9. and if I would know whether it be Gods will that I ſhould doe this or that thing, yea or no, *Zach.*7.3 I may know it by a ſyllogiſm, *Matth.*12.3. the Propoſition in generall being to be ſought for in Scripture; look what is written, Luke 10.26. The Aſſumption is be ſought for out of circumſtances, and out of this or that mans particular caſe, *Matth.*19.10. and ſo the concluſion, in reſpect of this or that man, at ſuch a time, or in ſuch a place, or in ſuch a caſe, comes to bind in conſcience; like as if it were an expreſſe morall Precept, verſe 11, As for example, theſe are Scripture rules, every one muſt labour to give no offence, 1 *Cor.*10.32. every one muſt take away that is moſt for Gods glory, verſe 31. and for the promoting of the Goſpel rather then their own profit, verſe 33. Now Paul, all circumſtances being conſidered, did aſſume thus; if I preach the Goſpel without hire, I ſhall cut off offences, 2 *Cor.*11.12. I ſhall promote the Goſpel the better, 1 *Cor.*9.23. and I ſhall more edifie the Church, verſe 19 hence he concluded, I Paul muſt preach without hire, verſe 15. this one thing rightly conſidered confounds the Doctrine of Papiſts about Evangelicall counſels, verſe 25.

Q. 107. Why are not Believers under the Law?

A. Firſt, Becauſe Chriſt was made under the Law for them, *Gal.*4.4. Secondly, becauſe as many as are under the Law, are under the Curſe, *Gal.*3.10. Thirdly, becauſe they are led by the ſpirit of Chriſt, *Gal.*5.18. Fourthly, becauſe they have the inheritance by promiſe, *Gal.*3.18. and it may be known who they be that are not under the law; Firſt, by their ſubjection to the Goſpel, for they that obey not the Goſpel of God are all under the law and the curſe, 2 *Theſ.*1.8. Secondly, by thankfull walking worthy of the Goſpel, Rom 7.25. and by ſtedfaſt working the Lords work, 1 *Cor.*15.58. Thirdly, by being a law to themſelves in an univerſall reſpect to all Gods Commandemennts, *Pſal.*119 6. Fourthly, by groaning and ſighing after God, that they may more and more be directed and ordered by his ſtatutes. verſe 5. Fifthly, by doing all this out of love, not for feare of hell and judgement, for they are a willing people, *Pſa.*110.4.

Q. 110. In what ſenſe are not believers under the Law?

A. Firſt, They are not under the Law in regard of the rigour of it, for that requires men to be without ſinne, which none can be in this life, 2 Kings 8.46. and to performe perſonall obedience, which now is impoſſible by reaſon of the weakneſſe of the fleſh, *Rom.*8.3. Secondly, they are not under the law in regard of juſtification, *Rom.*3.20. they are freed from the neceſſary ſeeking of righteouſneſſe by it, *Gal.*2.21. Thirdly, they are not under the Law, in regard of the curſe of it, *Gal.*3.13. the Law miniſters death, 2 *Cor.*3.7. Fourthly, they are not under the Law, in regard of the ſpirit of feare that is in it, 2 Tim. 1.7. which accompanies the Law, as it did the deliverer of it, *Heb.*12.21. and yet as long as their love is not perfect they doe feare, 1 John 4.18. Fifthly, they are not under the Law, as it was in Moſes his hand, *Joh.*1.17. having a yoke of bondage annexed to it, *Gal.*5.1. the Church being then in her minority, *Gal.*4.3. under Tutors and governours, verse 2.

Q. 111. Now prove that Believers in some sence are under the Law?

A. First, Paul sayes the Law is not abrogated by faith, nay God forbid sayes he, *Rom.*3.31. Secondly, the duties of the law are presst upon the conscience after faith; avenge not your selves, *Rom.*12.19. children obey your Parents, *Ephes.*6.1. and the rest; neither is he a legall teacher but an Evangelicall teacher, that now presseth the commandement of the Law upon the conscience, *Matth.*15.19. Thirdly, because it is a presumptuous speech to say, be in Christ and sinne if thou canst; for Davids murder after he was in Christ was a sinne, 2 *Sam.*12.13. there is not a justified man upon earth but sinneth, *Eccles.*7.20. nay, we that are Apostles of Christ, in many things we offend all, sayes James, *Jam.*3.2. and if we say no, we lye, 1 John 1 8. now where no law is, there can be no sinne, *Rom.*4.15. Fourthly, Christ came not to abrogate the law, *Matth.*5.17. as he fulfilled it himself, so he makes his members to delight in it, *Rom.*7.22. and to love it, *Psal.*119 97. and the law is said to be fulfilled by them, when they walke not after the flesh, but after the spirit, *Rom.*8 4. and if they sinne at any time, they are commanded to confesse their sinnes, 1 *Joh.*1.9. and though they obey God out of love, yet when they love, they fulfill the law of God, Rom. 13.10.

112. What is that sence, Wherein believers are under the Law?

A. They are under the Law. First, in regard, they are commanded to keep it, *Psal.*105.45. and to order their lives according to it, as a rule, *Psal.*119. 9. Secondly, in regard of the necessity of good works, not as causes of, but as a way unto life, *Tit.*3.14. Thirdly, in regard that God is displeased with them, when they break it, 2 *Sam.*11.27. and will punish them, *Amos.*3.2. as a father doth his sonne that doth offend him, *Heb.*12.7. nay sometimes with the sleep of temporall death, *Cor.*11.30. Fourthly, in regard that they are bound to repent whensoever they sinne, *Rev.*3.19. and to pray for pardon of sinne *Psal.*51.1. Fifthly, in regard that the threatnings of the Law must be a motive to them to take heed, Job 31.23. for though their God be a loving and everlasting father, yet he is a consuming fire, *Heb.*12.29. for though unbelievers, onely shall be damned, 2 *Thes.*2.12. yet believers must heare of Gods judgements and see them, that their flesh may be curbed with feare, *Psal.*52.6. Sixthly, in regard that they are to be humbled themselves by the Law, and cry out upon themselves for their often transgressings of it, *Rom.*7.24.

Q 113. What is Prayer?

A. It is a calling upon God, *Rom.*10.13. in the name of Jesus Christ, Joh. 16.23. for whatsoever we need, John 14.13. it is an act of our spirit, 1 Cor. 14.14. and of our heart prepared, *Psal.*10.17. and of all the soul lifting it self up unto God, *Psal.*25.1. and looking up to him, *Psal.*5.3. and presenting our selves before him, *Dan.*9.20. with Faith, *Jam.*1.6. and earnestnesse, Acts 12.5. and striving, *Col.*4.12. and great heed, Marke 13.33. by the help of the holy Ghost, Jude 20. who is the spirit of Prayer in Gods children, Zach. 12.10. without whom there is no sence nor meaning in our prayer in Gods accompt, *Rom.*8.27. neither can we truly call God father without sinne, Gal. 4.6. neither are our Prayers prayers at all, except we be Saints; the prayers of the Saints, *Rev.*5.8.

114 To whom are we to Pray?

A. To God onely, it is his glory to be called upon, Psal 50.15. which he will not give to another, Isa 42 8. First, because Prayer is a principall part of divine worship, Joel 2.32. and divine worship is to be given to God only, 1 Sam 7.3. Secondly, because we may call upon none but on whom we are to believe,

believe, *Rom.*10.14. Thirdly, becauſe God onely knoweth our hearts and what we inwardly deſire, Acts 1.24. Fourthly, becauſe he onely is all-ſufficient and Almighty, *Gen.*17.1. to give us whatſoever we aske, 1 Iohn 5.15. warrantably, verſe 14. Fifthly, becauſe the Lord counts it a heavy judgement, when he lets people call upon any other but him, *Iudg.*10.14. Sixthly, we have neither precept nor example of any Saint that called upon any but his heavenly father; nay, our Saviour ſaith, when ye pray, pray to your heavenly Father, *Matth.*6.9. Seventhly, becauſe we need nor Saint nor Angel to intercede for us, we may make bold our ſelves with the throne of grace, *Heb.*4.6. Laſtly, Chriſt knocks of all need of Mediatours with an argument of Gods infinite condeſcending love, Iohn 16.26.

Q.115. Why muſt we Pray in the name of Chriſt the Mediator?

A. Firſt, becauſe we are poore ſinfull duſt and aſhes, and therefore we cannot be admitted, except he procure us acceſſe unto the father, *Epheſ.*2.18. Secondly, becauſe we have provoked God, and therefore ſhould pull down a curſe rather then a bleſſing, except he ſhould make interceſſion for us, *Rom.*8.34. Thirdly, becauſe he onely is enough powerfull with God, Matth 28.19. and no man is acquainted with God, but he, and ſuch as he makes to be acquainted with him, *Matth.*11.27. againe there is none worthy but he, for he was ſlaine for us, *Rev.*5.9. Fourthly, what are Moſes, and Samuel, and Iob, and Daniel, and Noah, that we ſhould aske in their name? to which of the Saints can we turn? Iob 5.1. Fifthly, all the Saints that were in the old Teſtament, or ſince, prayed in his name; David lookt at him as his ſurety, Pſal. 119.122 and his Meſſias or anointed, *Pſal.*84.9. Hezekiah lookt at him as his undertaker, *Iſa.*38.14. Daniel prayed God to heare him for his ſake, Daniel 9.17.

Q.116. What is it to Pray in the name of Chriſt?

A. It is not, Firſt, to uſe Chriſts name, and ſay, Lord we pray in Chriſts name, *Matth.*7.22. nor Secondly, onely to conclude our prayers thus, Through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, though the Saints doe uſe the words too, 1 *Cor.*15.57. nor Thirdly, to counterfeit Chriſts Ring to the father, and ſay we come from him; for the Lord knowes who are his, and whether we truly come from him, yea or no, 2 *Tim.*2.19. for Chriſt will ſay to his father, Father I never ſent ſuch and ſuch, as he did of the falſe Prophets, I never ſent them, *Jer.*14.14. but to pray in the name of Chriſt, is, Firſt, when we are in with Chriſt, and ſo pray, Iohn 15.7. As the Tyrians firſt made Blaſtus the Kings Chamberlaine their friend, and then made their ſuite to the King, Acts 12.20. Secondly, when we can truly ſay, not onely that there is an Advocate with the father, but alſo that we have him for our advocate, 1 Iohn 2.1. Thirdly, when we doe not only conceipt that we come to God by him, but we come to God by him indeed, *Heb.*7.25. Fourthly, when we can truly ſhew his Ring, that he is our Mediator by promiſe, *Heb.*8.6. Now this Ring is, firſt, effectuall calling, Heb. 9.15. Secondly, a good Conſcience; when our heart condemns us not, then we may be confident, 1 Iohn 3.21. Thirdly, faith, *Matth.*21.22. Fourthly, the ſaving knowledge of the truth, 1 *Tim.*2.4. for then we may be ſure we have a token from the Mediator, verſe 5.

Q.117. Why is Faith neceſſary to Prayer?

A. It is neceſſary to bring us to Prayer. Firſt, becauſe we cannot draw neare unto God elſe, *Heb.*10.22. Secondly, becauſe the relation of God as a father, muſt bring us unto prayer, Luke 15.18. Thirdly, becauſe the ſence of our wants, and ſinnes, and afflictions, are to fetch us unto prayer, *Pſal.*116.10. Fourthly, becauſe Faith is the feet whereby to come unto God, *Heb.*11.6. againe, Faith is neceſſary to diſcharge Prayer, Iam 5.15. Firſt, to pray boldly, *Ehpeſ.*3.12. Secondly, to lift up hands that are holy, 1 *Tim.*2.8. Thirdly, to enlarge thy heart in prayer, 2 *Sam.*2.1. againe, faith is neceſſary to conclude prayer, how elſe can we ſay Amen ? Revel. 22.21. or leave out prayers with Chriſt, in whom the Promiſes of God are Yea! and Amen ? 2 Cor. 1.20 Firſt, becauſe faith muſt ſet thy heart at quiet after prayer; when Hannah had done Praying, ſhe did eat, and her countenance was no more ſad, 1 Sam. 1 18. though there were but an inch between David and death, yet when he had Prayed, he ſet his heart at reſt, Pſalm 3.5. Secondly, faith makes the ſoul wait, and when we have prayed and uſed all the meanes, we have need of patience to wait, Heb. 10.36. Thirdly, faith inhanceth prayer the next time, that if it ſpeed not the firſt time, I may riſe higher and higher with all importunity, Luke 11.8.

to

Q. 118. What ſay you of the differences and diviſions of Prayer ?

A. Prayer is either, firſt Metricall with muſick, Acts 16.1. which is a duty commanded, Pſal. 95.1. being very ſutable to ſpirituall mirth, Jam. 5.13. and to make us heavenly minded, and therefore profitable every day, 1 Chron. 16. 23 It is good to make meditation ſweet, Pſalm 104.33.34. and to ſtir up affection, and to put glory upon Gods praiſes, Pſalm 66.2. good alſo to ſtir up the ſpirit of Propheſie, or of Prayer, 2 Kings 3.15. its a duty that requires much grace, Col. 3.16. and great underſtanding, Pſalm 47.7. and ſpirit, 1 Cor. 14.15. and great modeſty and gravity, it being melody to the Lord, Eph. 5.19. the heart not being upon the tune, but fixed upon the ſence, and upon God, Pſalm 57.7. not as though we did ſing to one another, but unto the Lord, Pſalm 13.6. that we may not onely ſing Davids Pſalms, but that we may be ſweet ſingers of them as he was, 2 Sam. 23.1. or Secondly, Profane call, which is either publique prayer in the Congregation, Pſal. 7.7. or private in the family, 1 Pet. 3 7. or ſecret alone, Mat. 6.6. and all are either ordinary prayer, which is every day, Pſ. 145.2. or extraordinary, as at a faſt, Jonas 3.8.

Q. 119. What ſay you of publique Prayer ?

A. The Miniſter is to performe it, and that with an audible voice, Nehem. 9.4. in the publique Sanctuary, Pſalm 150.1. which may be in any place now, Mal. 1.11. all the Congregation firſt joyning with him with one conſent, Zeph. 3.9. as though they were all one man, Judg. 20.1,8. Secondly, teſtifying this their conſent by ſaying Amen, 1 Cor. 14.16. Amen, Amen, Nehem. 8. 6. Thirdly, all praying the ſame prayer with as much uniformity of thoughts and affections as can be, that it may make all one ſound in Gods eare, 2 Chron. 5.13. though the perſons praying be many, yet the act muſt be as if it were one act, Luke 1.10 and this publique Prayer is neceſſary. Firſt becauſe when it is publique, it is the more glorious, Pſal 96 6. becauſe men are ſociable creatures; and therefore as they love to live together, and trade together, ſo they ſhould praiſe God together, Pſ. 111.13. its fit to ſtir up one another. O praiſe the Lord with me, Pſ. 34.3. Fourthly, the Lord is the likelier to pity, when there be many, Jon. 4.11. Fifthly there be many publique ordinances of God, which all have need to be ſanctified by Prayer; there is the adminiſtration of the Sacrament, and that requires Prayer, Acts 22.16. and the Word, and that requires prayer; and the cenſures, and they require prayer; and therefore Gods houſe is called a houſe of Prayer, Mat. 12.13.

Q. 120. What more of publique Prayer ?

A. Publique Prayer is harder then private, though Gods people do more joy in it then in private, Pſalm 122 1. for in publique a man is more ſubject, Firſt, to diſtraction what with one thing or another, it ſhould ſeeme Eutichus was diſtracted with the ſweltneſſe of the throng, and made drowzy, Acts 20. 9. Secondly, Hypocriſie; hypocriſie made the Phariſees willing to pray in their Synagogues, Mat. 6.5. Thirdly, to formality, Mat 15.8. Meanes to help theſe evils, are, Firſt, pray often in ſecret; learne to pray there, and then thou mayeſt the better pray in publique : David bidding us praiſe God in the congregation, Pſalm 149.1. he bids us praiſe God in our beds, verſe 5. Secondly, prepare thy ſelfe, and fixe thy heart firſt, and then come and pray in publique, *Pſal.*57 7,8,9. I will prepare Bullocks and Goates, ſaith the Pſalmiſt, Pſal 66. 15. Thirdly, labour that the ſpirit of God may bring thee into Gods temple, Luke 2.27.

Q.121. How do you prove, that the Maſter of the family is to gather his family together every Morning and Evening, and to pray in his family?

A. Firſt, becauſe this is made to be one of the reaſons why Husbands ſhould dwell with their wives, that their domeſticall prayers be not hindred, 1 *Pet.*3.7. Secondly, by the example of Joſhua, *Joſh.*24.15 and Cornelius, Acts 10 2. and Eſther, Eſther 4. 16. Thirdly, becauſe the families of the godly are called Churches, Rom 16 5 and therefore they ſhould be as the Temple, where Morning and Evening ſacrifice was every day; and it was counted the abomination of deſolation, when it was taken away, *Dan.*11.31. Fourthly, becauſe there is a Promiſe to encourage men to it, though but two or three in the family, Mat. 18. 20. Fifthly, becauſe there be family ſinnes, and family wants, and family bleſſings, all which require prayer; and therefore all families ſhould have ſacrifices in them, 1 *Sam.*20.29. Sixthly, becauſe the Lord curſeth ſuch Families as do not call upon his Name, Jer 10,25. there is Scripture enough to prove it, though we might ſay of family prayer, as Paul does to the godly concerning Love; touching brotherly love, ye have not need that I write unto you, for ye your ſelves are taught of God to love one another, 1 *Theſſ.*4.9. So God taught Iacob to ſet up his worſhip in his houſhold, *Gen.*35. 2. and ſo did Abraham, *Gen.*18.19.

Q. 122. What ſay you of extraordinary prayer?

A. Three things make it Firſt, extraordinary might and fervency, Ioel 3 8. Secondly, extraordinary continuance, Eſther 4.16. Thirdly, extraordinary aſſiſtance of the ſpirit, and ſtrength of the new nature, *Mat.*9.17. Five things do require it more eſpecially Firſt, a ſpeciall want of ſome bleſſing, Luke 2.37. though the bleſſing be but temporall, *Gen.*25.21. Secondly, entring upon a calling, Matthew 4.2.17. Thirdly, ones firſt converſion, 2 *Chron.*33.13,18,19. Fourthly, ſome Imminent danger through ſin, Matthew 26.75. Fifthly, when we ſee that ordinary prayer will not ſerve turn, 2 *Cor.*12.8. now faſting doth help it, Acts 10 30. for faſting, firſt, it pulls down the fleſh, and chaſtens the ſoul, Pſalme 69.10 and afflicts it, Ezra 8.21. Secondly, its a good help to contrition, when its ſanctified, Ioel 1.14. Thirdly being rightly obſerved, its a ſigne of humiliation, *Nehem.*1.4. Again, extraordinary Prayer. Firſt, it requires reſolution of better obedience, *Hoſ.*14.2,3. Secondly, much humillation contrary to pride, Iob 35.12. Thirdly, freedome from worldly cares, that we may be given unto prayer, *Pſal.*109 4. Fourthly, watchfulneſſe and great heed-taking, *Mark.*13.33. Fifthly, that we loſe not our quickenings afterwards, leſt we be guilty of holding down our heads like a bulruſh for a day, *Iſa.*58.5.

Q. 123. What motions are there to induce us to extraordinary prayer and ſeeking of God?

A. There be ſix motives; Firſt, the Commandement of God when ordinary ſeeking will not find him, now he tels us is a time for extraordinary, Ioel 2.12. Secondly, the gracious promiſe that God hath made to it, *Mat.*7.7. Thirdly, the great efficacy of it, *Jam.*5.16. for importunity can do much, Luke 18.5. the Iſraelites prayed often and ſped not, but when they cryed then they ſped, *Exod.*3.7. So again, when they cryed to God they did ſpeed, *Judg.*3.15. this poor man cryed, ſayes David, pointing at himſelf, and the Lord heard him, *Pſal.*34.6. Fourthly, the glory of God, and the credit of the Goſpel; for what may the world think, if we that ſtand ſo much for praying ſhould not prevaile, Ezra 8.22,23 Fifthly, our infinite need, and therefore we ſhould think it is high time to awaken, and to call upon our hearts to awake, Pſalm 108 2.

Sixthly.

Sixthly, our laſt refuge is extraordinary ſeeking, we muſt reaſon thus; What hope have we, if we do not ſpeed with God? *Pſal.*39.7.

Q. 124. May we not pray for the dead?

A. No, David ceaſed praying for his child when once it was dead, 2 Sam 12. 3. as for that place in the Machabes, *Macch.*12.44. that is not Canonical ſcripture, 2 *Macch.*15.38. Firſt, when people are dead our communion with them ceaſeth, *Iſa.*18 9. Secondly, there is no profit in ſuch prayers, as the tree falleth ſo it lyeth, *Eccleſ.*11.3. When our Saviour ſayth, that the ſinne againſt the holy Ghoſt ſhall not be forgiven, neither in this world nor in the world to come, Matthew 12 32. he doth not imply that there may be ſome ſinnes, that though they be not forgiven in this world yet they be forgiven in the world to come; but it is onely a vehement phraſe to ſhew it ſhall never be forgiven, verſe 31. for we muſt agree with our adverſary, while we are here in the way with him, *Mat.*5.25. and yet we may pray for the conſummation of ſuch as are dead in the Lord, for that is included in the ſecond Petition, Thy kingdome come, *Mat.*6.10. and they without us cannot be made perfect, Heb 1.40. Againe, we may give thanks for the glorious victory of the Saints departed; for if one member be preferred to honour, all the members rejoyce with it, 2 *Cor.*12.26.

Q. 125. Now there be five ſorts of the living that we muſt Pray for, Firſt, for the whole Church of Chriſt. Secondly, for the Miniſters. Thirdly, for them of our own houſe. Fourthly, for them of the place where we live. Fifthly, for our enemies; ſhew me now whether and why we muſt pray for the whole Church of Chriſt?

A. We muſt pray for all Saints, whether Saints actually already, or elect, which ſhall be Saints, *Eph.*6.18. for theſe Saints make up the Church, 1 Cor. 14.33. for, Firſt, they are the dearly beloved of Gods ſoul, *Ier.*12.7. Gods pleaſant portion, verſe 10. The city of the living God, *Heb.*12.22. the Lambs bride, Revelation 21.9. Secondly, we are moſt bound to the Church, for the Church is our mother, *Gal.*4.26. and therefore we ſhould preferre her before all, Pſalm 137.6. Thirdly, we ſhall proſper the better if we do, *Pſal.*122.5. Fourthly, we ſhall the ſooner be heard for our ſelves; David when he would fain be heard for himſelfe, he prayed for the Church, Pſalm 51. 18. yea all bleſſings that come to us, come to us through the Church, *Pſal.*133. 3. Againe, if the Church be in miſery, good reaſon we ſhould lament for her, *Nehem.*1.4. Secondly, her miſeries are ours; look what evil comes upon her comes upon us, *Dan.*9.13. Thirdly, it is the brand of the wicked not to regard the afflictions of Ioſeph, Amos 6.6.

Q. 126. What and why muſt we pray for Gods Miniſters?

A. That they may be clothed with righteouſneſſe, *Pſal.*132.9. and take heed to their Miniſtry to fulfill it, Col 4.17. which is; Firſt, not to Preach themſelves but Jeſus Chriſt, 2 *Cor.*4.5. Secondly, to ſpeak, and exhort, and rebuke with all authority, *Tit.*2.15. in ſeaſon, out of ſeaſon, with all inſtance and long ſuffering, 2 *Tim.*4.2. Thirdly, not to look back from the plough, leſt they be unfit for Gods kingdome, Luke 9.62. Fourthly, to be an example to Believers, in word, and converſation, in ſpirit, and in purity, 1 Tim 4. 12. Againe, we muſt pray that they may have utterance with boldneſſe, Epheſ. 19. For firſt, we cannot look to have a good Miniſter, except we pray for him, Matthew 9.38. Secondly, though we have one, we cannot look to keep him, except we Pray for him, Acts 12.5. Thirdly, though we do not loſe him, yet he may be ſtreightned, that he ſhall never be able to do us good, except we pray for him, Coloſſians 4.3. Fourthly, though he be not ſtreightned, yet our hearts may be cloſed up under his Miniſtry, except we pray for him, 1 Theſſalonians 5.25. Fifthly, we have no love of the Spirit in us, except we pray for Gods Miniſters, *Rom.*15.30.

The Lord himſelfe teacheth us how to Pray, Deut 33.8.

Q. 127. How do you prove, that we muſt Pray for all of our houſe, for our Children, and Kindred, and Servants, and for our Parents, and Wife, and Huſband, and Maſters?

A. Eliazer prayed for his Maſter, *Gen.*24.12. Eliſha for his Servants, 2 *Kin.*6.17. Iacob for his Children, *Gen.*48.16. and Job too 1.5. Abraham for Iſmael, *Gen.*17.18. Firſt, becauſe we are bound not to peſter the Church with a naughty generation, if ſo be we can help it; when Seth had begotten Enoſh, then he ſet up Prayer, *Gen.*4.26. Secondly, we are bound to love the glory of God, that our Children may ſtand up to praiſe God, when we are dead and gone; and therefore David had a care of a good ſeed, *Pſal.*22.30. and ſo Abraham of his houſhold after him, *Gen.*18.19. Thirdly, becauſe we bring forth our Children children of wrath. *Eph.*2.3. Fourthly, becauſe its a great bleſſing to have godly children, Pſ 144.12. and we are bleſſed in them much more when they are godly indeed, *Deut.*33.24. Fifthly, becauſe otherwiſe we do but beget them by halves, when once we have gotten them to be wiſe and gracious, then we may be better ſaid to have begot them, *Prov.*23.24.

Q. 128. How do you prove that we muſt more eſpecially pray for the Towne and place where we live?

A. The inhabitants of Jeruſalem prayed for Jeruſalem, *Pſ.*74.2. Firſt, becauſe our ſelves do live there; and therefore we muſt pray for it as Lot did for Zoar, *Gen.*19.21. and yet he was but about to live there, verſe 20. Secondly, becauſe our peace and good conſiſts in the peace and good of the Towne that we live in, *Jer.*29.7. And except the feare of God be among them, we cannot comfortably live by them, *Levit.*29.35 and if we pray for them, God can lay a charge upon their Conſciences not to trouble our reſting place, *Prov.*24 15. Thirdly, we may win ſome of their ſoules to go along with us to heaven, *Gen.*35.2. David dwelling at Gath, it ſhould ſeeme he converted Ittai to the faith, 2 Sam. 15.19. Fourthly, becauſe we are bound to do ſuch duties, as do require prayer for them, as for example to exhort them; and therefore Philip did ſo to Nathaniel his neighbour, John 1.45. Levi being converted himſelf, got his neighbours to be at his houſe to meet Chriſt, Luke 5.29. and ſo did Cornelius, Acts 10.24. Fifthly, we our ſelves may have a great deale of comfort, if we convert any of their ſoules, *Iam.*5.20. Sixthly, hereby we may be helpers to Gods Miniſters. Philemon a great Nobleman was Pauls fellow-labourer in this kind, *Philem.*1.

Q. 129 Why muſt we pray for our Enemies?

A. God is pleaſed to ſhew them this favour, that though himſelfe do not forgive them, yet he will have us to forgive them, and love them, *Matth.*5.44. there may be more ſelfe-reſpects in praying for them that love us, verſe 46. but there is more godly ſingularity in praying for our enemies, verſe 47. and more perfection and ſincerity, verſe 48. and more proximity to God, verſe 45. David faſted and prayed for his enemies, *Pſal.*35.13. Firſt, becauſe we are more ſenſible of their enmities and injurings, by reaſon that we feele them; and therefore we may the better pray for them, Luke 23.34. Secondly, hereby we have that condition that is required to the forgiveneſſe of our ſinnes, Mat. 6.14. for if we do not forgive them, God will not forgive us, verſe 15. Thirdly, hereby we may overcome the evil of revenge in our hearts, nay and of malice in theirs, *Rom.*12.19,20. Fourthly, this is that way to commit our cauſe unto God, as the poore godly ſoul doth, *Pſal.*10.14. Fifthly, we ſhall loſe nothing by it, for either our enemies will be mollified towards us, or if they be not, God will reward us, Proverbs 25.22. Sixthly, it will be a great comfort to us, we can ſay thus before God, I have ſtood before thee to ſpeake good for them, *Ier.*18.20. Seventhly, this duty being rightly done is a ſigne of a ſanctified heart, Acts 7.60.

Q. 130. What ſay you of Curſing or imprecation, or praying againſt one? it ſeemes it is unlawfull, Rom. 12.14. neither can we be called unto it, 1 Pet. 3.9. for it proceeds from hatred, now hatred is Man-ſlaughter, 1 Joh. 13.15.

A. We may not wiſh evil, as it is evil, to any man, but onely as it is good, *Gal.*5.13. Firſt, we may wiſh evil to a man for the mans good, *Pſal.*9.20. Secondly, we may pray againſt a mans ſinnes, *Pſal.*7.9. Thirdly, againſt all the plots, and counſels, and projects of the wicked, that God would curſe them, *Pſal.*59.11,12. Fourthly, againſt the life of offenders; I may wiſh that the Magiſtrate would put them to death, not as it is harme to them, but as it is a good to the Church, or State, or Pariſh, that we live in, *Pſal.*101.8 as for theſe curſing ſpeeches of Plague, and Murraine, and Vengeance, and Devil, that theſe evils might take one, they are the ſpeeches of tongues ſet on fire of hell, eſpecially as they are uſed, *Jam.*3.6. Nay, a man muſt not curſe Satan, as it is in the Apocrypha, *Eccleſ.*21.27 much leſſe the good creatures of God, as people curſe their meat, the weather, or a ſtone that they ſtumble at, *Rom.*3.14 yet we may abſolutely curſe the enemies of the Lord in the generall, becauſe we meane ſuch as are finally enemies, *Pſal.*68.12. and if we had a ſpirit of diſcerning in particular too, 2 *Tim.*4.14. We read of three kindes of Curſing, firſt, optative, *Pſal.*109.6. Secondly, imperative, Judges 5.23. Thirdly, indicative or declarative, ſo Gods Miniſters curſe the wicked whenſoever they preach, *Ier.*3.11.

Q. 131. Is Thanksgiving a part of Prayer?

A. It is a calling upon God, Pſal 105.1. and the very thanking of God for mercies received, is a kind of praying for new mercies, *Col.*1.3. and by our thankfulneſſe for grace that we have, it may be known that we requeſt grace that we have not, *Phil.*4.6. and our maine Thankſgiving is prayer-wiſe, Lord make me thankfull; we muſt ask it of God and call upon him for it, *Pſal.*116.13. Thankſgiving is called by the name of Prayer; the Phariſee prayed thus, God I thank thee, Luke 18 11. and if we would perſevere in prayer, a thankfull heart is the beſt to continue it, *Col.*4.2. and yet it is harder then prayer it ſelf. There were ten askers to one thanker, Luk 17.15,16. Firſt, becauſe our nature is like the horſleech, ſtill it cryes give, give, Prov 30.15. Secondly, becauſe there is more ſelf-love in prayer, but thankfulneſſe is more contrary to ſelf-love, 2 *Tim.*3.2. Thirdly, becauſe our hearts are apt to love the bleſſing more then God the giver of it; the pleaſure more then God the beſtower of it, verſe 4 Fourthly, becauſe we are apt to be leſſe and leſſe mindfull of former benefits, whereas thankſgiving is an everlaſting grace, Pſal 70.15. Fifthly, we are apt to be diſcontented, if Gods bleſſings doe not every way pleaſe us; now thankſgiving is a chearefull grace, Iſa 51.3. Sixthly, there is more holineſſe in Thankſgiving, *Pſal.*97.12.

Q. 132. What ſay you of Thanksgiving for Gods ſpirituall mercies?

A. We muſt be thankfull for them, *Epheſ.*1.3. Firſt, for our knowledge, or elſe it is accurſed unto us, *Rom.*1.21. Secondly, for any power againſt ſinne, *Rom.*7.25. Thirdly, for victory over death and hell, 1 *Cor.*15.57. ſo for peace of Conſcience, *Col.*3.17. ſo for ability to ſerve God in our callings, 1 *Tim.*1.12. but we muſt be ſure that we have theſe bleſſings, or elſe we mock God; we muſt have faith, or elſe we cannot thank God for it, Col 2.7 When one ſayes, God I thank thee for electing me, and yet does not know it, it is vaine, 1 *Theſ.*1.2,3. none but the redeemed of the Lord can ſay, Lord I thank thee for thine everlaſting mercies, *Pſal.*107.1,2. we muſt be chiefly thankfull for ſpirituall mercies; firſt, becauſe they are mercies for our ſouls, Pſal. 16.15,16. Secondly, they are eternall, *Pſal.*100.4 5. Thirdly, peculiar to Gods elect, as faith, Tit. 1.1. and the ſpirit of Prayer, Luke 18.7. bowels of mercy and the like, *Col.*3.12. Fourthly, they are rarer, Matth. 11.25. Fifthly, they bring with them the bleſſings of this life, 1 *Tim.*4.8. Sixthly, to be thankfull for ſuch mercies is a good antidote againſt ſinne, Epheſ. 5.3,4. which a man can never be to any purpoſe, except he can ſay, God is my God, *Phi.*4.

Q. 133. What temporall mercies muſt we be thankfull for, and why?

A. Firſt, for covering us in our mothers womb, *Pſal.*139.13. for our life, *Pſal.*63.4. and breath, *Pſal.*150.6. for the continuance of life, Pſal 30 3, Secondly, for our food and raiment, *Gen.*28.20. and for our maintenance, whether it be rich or poore, for both is from God, *Prov.*22.2. For the convenience of our dwelling, as it is ſaid of Juſtus, his houſe joyned hard to the Synagogue, Acts 18.7. Thirdly, for our peace and ſafety, this is another bleſſing of God, 1 Kings 4.25. Fourthly, for preſerving us from ill accidents and miſhaps, as fires, inundations, or any evil caſualties, yea for all his benefits, Pſal. 116.12. Firſt, becauſe the Lord doth call for it, *Pſal.*107.8. and it is his will; 1 *Theſ.*5.18. Secondly, the Lord is angry when we are not thankfull, 2 Chron. 32.25. Thirdly, Gods temporall mercies are graces, *Gen.*33.5. Jeſus Chriſt may be ſeen in the recovering out of any Ague, Acts 9.34. Fourthly, we are leſſe then the leaſt of them, *Gen.*32.10. we are nothing, 2 *Cor.*12.11. Fifthly, Thankſgiving is a multiplying duty, *Matth.*15.36. Sixthly, there is goodneſſe in Thankſgiving, Pſal 92.1. Seventhly, to be thankfull for temporall bleſſings, is the way to be thankfull for ſpirituall, and if we be not thankfull for them, we will be thankfull for nothing; therefore an unthankfull man and an evil man is all one, Luke 6.35. and ſo unthankfull, unholy, 2 *Tim.*3.2. Laſtly, to be thankfull as for meat, is to eat to the Lord, *Rom.*14.9.

Q. 134. Muſt we not be thankfull to God for his mercies upon others?

A. Yes, *Pſal.*147.1,2,3. whether a particular perſon, *Philem.*4. or a whole family, 2 John 4. or a whole Pariſh, *Phil.*1.3. or the Church, Acts 11.18. or good Magiſtrates, 1 Kings 10.9. We muſt thank God not onely for ſaving grace that we perceive others have, 1 *Theſ.*1.3. but alſo for common grace, *Phil.*1.18. There was but a little good in the towne-Clark, he did but ſpeak a good word for Paul, and Ariſtarchus, and Gajus, yet Luke doth record it as a bleſſing, Acts 19.35. Gamaliel, a meere civil man, yet when he did but pleaſure the Apoſtles a little, it is regiſtred as a mercy, Acts 5.34. The Barbarians making a warme fire for the Apoſtle is related as a kindneſſe, Acts 28.2. for God is glorified thereby, when the people did but wonder at the Word as any of Gods works; this is a glory unto God, Matth 9.8. and therefore they are wretched, Firſt, who have not grace nor goodneſſe; for we cannot give thanks for them, but rather bewaile them, *Phil.*3.18. Secondly, who though they have mercies and graces, yet they doe not communicate them to others, to occaſion thankſgiving; they are like with-holders of Corne whom the people curſe, *Prov.*11.26. Thirdly, who envy and repine at the bleſſings of others; conſider therefore, firſt, if we envy our brothers good, it doth us no good but harme, Job 5.2. Secondly, it is ſafer for us that another ſhou'd have ſuch and ſuch bleſſings then we; for then they muſt give account and not we, Luke 16.2. Thirdly, it is better for us too; is it not better that the eye ſhould have the bleſſing of Sight, then the foot or the hand, 1 *Cor.*12.21.?

Q. 135. Becauſe Confeſſion is to be joyned with Prayer, Dan.9.20. and is put for prayer, Nehem.9.3. Tell me whether it is neceſſary to prayer, to confeſſe our ſinnes in it?

A. Expreſſe Confeſſion is not neceſſary alwayes in Prayer, Acts 4.24. but implicite is; when the Apoſtles prayed God for boldneſſe, they did implicitely confeſſe their want of it, verſe 29. one of theſe two Confeſſions is neceſſary; for confeſſion it is put for prayer, *Dan.*9.4. Firſt, becauſe Prayer it ſelf does confeſſe our poverty of ſpirit, Luke 1.35. and it inferreth humbling of our ſelves, and a ſence of our own inſufficiency; for if we were ſufficient in our ſelves, what need we goe to God? *Iam.*4.10. Secondly, both we and our Prayers are vile and uncleane, Iob 40.4. but expreſſe confeſſion is neceſſary, when our Conſcience is fouled with guilt, *Pſal.*32.5. not to informe God; for he knoweth mens ſinnes, 2 Kings 19.27. but Firſt, to cleare the Lords juſtice, Nehem. 9.31.32,33. Secondly, to obtaine mercy, *Prov.*28.13. Thirdly, to lay hold on Gods faithfulneſſe, 1 Iohn 1.9. I doe not meane of every particular ſinne; for firſt, our ſinnes are innumerable and cannot all be reckoned up, *Pſal.*40.12. Secondly, ſome of them we know not, *Pſal.*19.12. but our grievouſer ſinnes; them we muſt particularly confeſſe, 1 *Sam.*15.19. Firſt, becauſe theſe ſhew that we have need of a God of ſalvation, Pſal 51.14. Secondly, ſuch ſinnes moſt waſt Conſcience, moſt dead the heart, and moſt hinder us from ſeeking Gods face, *Hoſ.*5.15. ſuch are the roots of many other ſinnes; and if we root them out, many others will the eaſilier fall off, 1 Tim 6.10.

Q. 136. As Manoah ſaid to the Angell, how ſhall I order the Child? Judg.13. 12 So may I ſay of Confeſſion, how ſhall we order our Confeſſion? how ſhall we make it?

A. We muſt doe with Confeſſion as Chriſt ſaith of Hearing, we muſt take heed how, Luke 8.18. Firſt, the confeſſion of ſinne muſt be naked, without hiding of ought, *Prov.*28.13. though the committing of it be the worſe, the leſſe we doe hide it, *Iſa.*3.9. Secondly, by way of judging our ſelves, 1 Cor. 11.31. and inditing our ſelves, 1 Chron. 21.8. Thirdly, with grief and ſorrow, and compunction, and ſmiting of our breaſt, Luke 18.13. Fourthly, ſhame and confuſion of face, Ezra 9.6. caſting our ſpirits and ſelves down, Ezra. 10.1. Fifthly, giving over our old company, and ſeparating our ſelves from them, *Nehem.*9.2. Sixthly, accepting the puniſhment of our iniquity, *Lev.*26.40, 41. not onely confeſſing our ſinnes, *Dan.*9.4. but ſetting our hearts to it, verſe 3. Seventhly, with Faith, Acts 19.18. and with having our ſinnes ever before us, *Pſal.*51.3 Beſides, this confeſſion, before God, in ſome caſes there muſt be a Confeſſion? Firſt, before the Magiſtrate, *Joſh.*7 19. Secondly, before a Brother, 1 *Sam.*26.21. Thirdly, before one another, *Jam.*5. 16 Fourthly, before a Miniſter, Marke 1.5.

Q. 137. Whether are we bound to pray the Lords Prayer, juſt thoſe very words and no other? There be ſome ſuperſtitious people ſay, let us pray for this, and let us pray for that, and let us pray for the eſtate for the whole Church, and let us pray for the King; and for all theſe things, let us ſay the Lords Prayer; doe theſe men doe well?

A. No; Chriſt when he bids us ſay, Our Father which art in heaven, &c. Luke 11.2. He does not meane, that we ſhould preciſely keep our ſelves to theſe words, but that we ſhould Pray after that manner, Matth 6.9. As Miniſters ſhould preach nothing but the Word, 2 *Tim.*4.2. and yet they may give the ſence in other words, *Nehem.*8.8. Firſt, becauſe the Apoſtles prayed in other words, and did more ſpecialize their Petition, Acts 1.24. Secondly, this prayer is diverſly ſet down by the Evangeliſts, one way in one, *Matth.*6. 11. another way in Luke, Luke 11.3. one way in one, *Matth.*6.12. another way in the other, Luke 11.4. Thirdly, who knowes this is all that Chriſt uttered? *Joh.*21.25. we ſee plainely Matthew ſets downe more then Luke doth; it may be Chriſt ſpake more then either hath expreſſed, Matth 6 13. Fourthly, Chriſt himſelf did not uſe theſe very words ever, when he would pray Lazarus alive, he did not ſay the Lords prayer over the grave, *Joh.*11.41. when he would pray for his Apoſtles, he did not ſay the Lords prayer over them,

Iohn

John 17.1. Fifthly, our ſpeciall ſinnes and wants doe require that we ſhould pray more ſpecially then ſo, 2 Kings 19.15. Sixthly, we read of praying all night, we cannot think that the Lords prayer was ſaid over and over againe and againe, Luke 6.12. we are to continue in prayer, what by going over and over the Lords prayer? No, *Col.*4.2. neither is it neceſſary to conclude our prayers with this, Acts 4.30. and yet we may if we will, Luke 11.2. neither is there any thing againſt it. No, though it be ſcripture, the ſame thing may be ſcripture and the word of God, and yet the prayer of a man, *Pſa.*90.12.

Q. 138. Why doth our Saviour teach us to call God father in our prayers?

A. Firſt, to teach us we cannot pray to him except he be our Father, and we have the ſpirit of his Sonne, *Gal.*4 6. Secondly, to aſſure us that he will give us good things, Luke 11.13. Thirdly, to call no man father on earth, for he is our own father, *Matth.*23 9. Fourthly, that we may behave our ſelves towards him as a Father, Deut 32.6. Firſt, to honour him as a father, Mal. 1.6. Secondly, to count our ſelves, ſojourners, as long as we be abſent from him, 1 *Pet.*1.17. Thirdly, to be ſeparate from the children of this world, and to touch no unclean thing, 2 *Cor.*6.18. Fourthly, to be followers of God, ſeeing he is our father, *Epheſ.*5.1. to be obedient children, taking heed of all luſts, 1 *Pet.*1.14. to continue ſo doing to the end, and to overcome; otherwiſe he is not our Father, nor we his Children, *Rev.*21.7. If we deſire that he ſhould be our Father, firſt, we muſt be fatherleſſe otherwiſe, *Pſal.*85.5. Secondly, we muſt receive Chriſt, and then we ſhall have the power of calling him Father, *Joh.*1.12. Thirdly, we muſt get the Lord to ſay to our hearts, *Hoſ.*1.10. Fourthly, we muſt be ſure that we be Peace-makers, *Matth.*5.9. Fifthly, we muſt love our enemies, and lend freely, Luke 6.35. Laſtly, we muſt be the good ſeed begotten againe under the Kingdome of grace, Matth. 13.38.

Q. 139. Why our Father, not my Father?

A. We may pray alſo my Father, Luke 15.18. and we are taught to doe ſo in private, Matth 6.6. for, firſt, Nature teacheth that the creature ſhould have a particular propriety in God whom it calleth upon, *Jon.*1.6. Secondly, we have need of a particular propriety in God, that we may ſtrengthen our Petition, Luke 15.19. Thirdly, that we may come thankfully before him, *Rom.*1.8. Fourthly, that we may come with filiall affections, and never run away from him, *Ier.*3.19. but our Saviour puts it in the Plurall number; firſt, becauſe we are to Pray with others, Acts 20.36. Secondly, we are to Pray for others, *Iam.*5.16. Thirdly, to teach us to love one another, and not to deale unbrotherly one with another, *Mal.*2.10. Fourthly, to ſhew us that God is univerſally a Father to all his elect, and he is not like an earthly Father, that hath but one Bleſſing, or few bleſſings, *Gen.*27.38. nay, though all the company that joyne with us in Prayer, be not adopted unto God; yet if two or three by the mouth of the company, may pray, Our Father, *Iſa.*63.16. the meeting is denominated a congregation of Saints from them two or three, *Pſal.*149.1. there is a communication of the Phraſes; the mouth of the aſſembly knowing there be ſome wicked, though ſome be not, yet by the communication of phraſes, he may ſay, We have done wickedly, though neither himſelf, nor many of the company have done ſo, *Nehem.*9.33. Beſides, God is in a generall ſence the Father of ſuch as are rebellions, *Iſa.*1.2. and they may equivocally be ſaid to be in Chriſt, John 15.2.

Q. 140 What is the meaning of Heaven in Prayer?

A. Heaven ſignifies, firſt, the region of the aire, *Ier.*8 7. Secondly, the place of the Sunne, Moone, and ſtarres, *Gen.*15.5, Thirdly, the Church of Jeſus Chriſt, *Rev.*12.7. Fourthly, the bleſſed Angels, Iob 15.15. Fifthly, God himſelf, *Dan.*4.26. Sixthly, the habitation of Gods holineſſe, where the glorified Angels are in bliſſe, and enjoy the beatificall viſion of God, and from [illegible] mediat meant here especially, 1 Kings 8.30. which is called the third heaven, 2 *Cor.*12.2. farre above all other created heavens, *Ephes.*4.10. it selfe being a created thing too, Hebrewes 11.10. Gods childrens house and home, 2 *Cor.*5.1. Gods holy hill, Psalm 24.3. from whence he blesseth his People, Deuteronomie 26.15. where he sitteth as a great Prince on his throne, Psalm 11.4. and he is said to be in heaven; first, to strike reverence into us, Ecclesiastes 5.2. Secondly, to let us understand, he can do whatsoever he will, Psalm 115.3. Thirdly, to lift and raise up our hearts in prayer, Psalm 123.1. Fourthly, to shew how infinitely he is above us, his thoughts above ours, his motions above ours, Isaiah 55.9 Fifthly, to expresse Gods condescending goodnesse, that he being in heaven will deigne to look upon a poore soul, Isaiah 66. 1,2. and yet God is not confined to heaven, as though he were there onely, Psalm 139.7, 8. No, he fills heaven and earth too, Ieremiah 23.24. and the whole world is not able to contain him, 2 Chron. 6. 18.

141. For the first Petition, Hallowed be thy Name; what is the meaning of Name here?

A. First, the Lord himselfe, his very Person and nature, *Deut.*28.58.for Name is often put for ones person, Acts 1.15. so also, *Rev.*3.4. Secondly, Gods attributes, Exod 34.5. Thirdly, Gods esteeme that he should have in all the world, Psalm 8.1. Fourthly, Gods worship, *Gen.*4.26. Fifthly, any of Gods works or word, or any thing whereby he is known, *Exod.*20.7. His name is Jehovah the Lord, Isaiah 42.8.or I am that I am, *Exod.*3.13,14. As Christ said of himselfe, before Abraham was, I am, John 8.58. The most High, Psalm 9.2. El-shaddai, or the Almighty, or the All-sufficient, *Gen.*17.1. He hath sweet names in the new Testament, the God of Peace, Romans 15.33. the God of Patience and Consolation verse 5. the father of Mercies and the God of all Comfort, *Corinth.*1.3. &c. Indeed Gods name is unutterable, no word is able to expresse who he is, Proverbs 30.4.It is transcendent above all Names, *Phil.*2.9.and Wonderfull, Isaiah 9.6. and Secret Judges 13.18. and hence is it; First, that no name is able sufficiently to set him forth, *Gen.*32.2.9. Secondly, his name is expressed by negatives, to shew that we can rather tell what is not his name, then what it is Immortall, Invisible, 1 *Tim.*1.17. Unsearchable, Psalm 147.3. Infinite, Psalm 47.5. Thirdly, his Name is borrowed from his effects, God that made the world, Acts 17.24. and from his backparts, *Exod.*33.2. Fourthly, figurative, and not proper, *Exod.*15.3. Proverbs 8.10. O then! God being so great, what a condescending goodnesse is in him to take upon him such a poore name as this, Our God, the God of Abraham? Exod 3 15.

142. Why Hallowed or Sanctified rather then glorified? why is that word used rather then this?

A. Because Gods holinesse is the cause why we should glorifie him, *Exod.*15 11. Secondly, because Gods greatnesse most appeareth in his Holinesse, Isaiah 12.6 and so doth his might, Luke 1.49. and therefore we call Kings Sacred, and the greater a person is the more sacred; and therefore of all creatures the Lord made his Angels most holy, Luk 9.26. Thirdly, Gods holinesse is the beauty and lustre of all his Attributes, *Ps.*96.9 nay it is the beauties, *P.*110.3. Fourthly, when the Angels would pick out an attribute to glorifie God most in, they chose his holinesse, Holy, holy, holy not glorious, glorious, glorious, *Isa.*6.3. Fifthly, we cannot glorifie God, except we be holy, 2 *Pet.*2.9. nay, it is rather an obscuring of God glory, when a prophane soul praiseth him, and therefore our hearts, & our tongues, & conversations must be holy, 1 *Pet.*1.15. 16. we must sanctifie him in righteousnesse, *Isa.*5.16. not as though we can put holineſſe upon God that he had not before; in this caſe we had need that he ſhould ſanctifie us, 1 Theſſ. 5.23. but we muſt make his Name to appeare to be holy by our doings, Iſa. 29.23.

Q. 143. For the ſecond Petition, thy Kingdome come; what ſay you of that?

A. God hath a four-fold Kingdome. Firſt, the kingdom of his Power, whereby he is over all, 1 Chron. 26.11. and ruleth over all, Pſal. 103.19. and regneth in the Kingdomes of men, Dan. 4.32. and hath the keyes of hell and death, Rev. 1.18. Devils, and reprobates, and all ſhall bow to this Kingdome paſſively, as well as the good Angels and elect actively, Rom. 14.11. though they yet ſay he ſhall not reigne over them, Luke 19.14. Secondly, the Kingdome of his Goſpel, whereby he reignes over the Chriſtian world, both good and bad, Matthew 13.47. which God threatens to take away, when people are unworthy, Mat. 21.43. which is called a Kingdome, becauſe it offers men a Kingdome, Matthew 4.17. and becauſe by it Chriſt reignes in his Saints, Rev. 15.2. and in his enemies too, but in a different manner, Rev. 19.15. Thirdly, the Kingdome of his grace, whereby he rules onely in his elect; for this Kingdome is within them, Luk. 17.21. conſiſting in righteouſneſſe, and peace, and joy, Rom. 14.17. bringing every thought into obedience, 2 Cor. 10.5. and making them Kings too, Rev. 1.6. and to rule as it were with God, over ſinne and the world, and the Divel, Hoſ. 11.12. and this Kingdom is not of this world, Iohn 18.36. Fourthly, the Kingdom, of glory, that fleſh and blood cannot enter into, 1 Cor. 15.10.

Q. 144. For the third Petition, Thy will be done; what ſay you to that, why is God will ſet next to his Kingdome?

A. Firſt, becauſe the greater his Kingdom is, the more he ſtands upon his will; we ſee this in earthly Kings, Dan. 11.3. Secondly, becauſe the doing of Gods will is the giving the glory of his Kingdom unto him, Heb. 13.21. Thirdly, becauſe by doing of his will we ſhew that he is our God and King, Pſalm 143.10. becauſe by doing of his will, we ſhew that we are worſhippers of him, Ioh. 9.31. Fourthly, hereby we ſhew that as God is a great God, ſo he is great with us; as Moſes was great with the Egyptians, becauſe he could borrow of them whatſoever he would, Exod. 11.3. Why did David greatly praiſe God, and give him whatſoever obedience he would? becauſe God was great with him, Pſal. 145.3. Fifthly, becauſe by doing of Gods will we may enter into Gods Kingdome, Mat. 7.21. Laſtly, this is to be men after Gods own heart, when we fulfill the Lords will, Acts 13.22.

Q. 145. Hath God ſuch a will in him, as he calls a conditionall will; as for example, To will all mens ſalvation if they repent?

A. Properly there cannot be a conditionall will in God. Firſt, becauſe ſuch a will ſuppoſeth a ſuperiour that may hinder, Acts 18.21. Secondly, it ſuppoſeth ignorance how things may fall out, as Abraham willed his ſervants to fetch a wife for Iſaac out of the land of his kindred, Gen. 24.4. If ſhe were willing, verſe 8. nevertheleſſe improperly it may be given to God, not as though his will can have a condition, for that's the property of a created will, to have a condition of it, Iam. 4.15. but becauſe the thing willed of God may have a condition, Iſa. 7.9. Now, that the Lord may be ſaid to have a conditionall will in ſome ſence is plain. Firſt, becauſe he is ſaid to will the connexion of things, when he doth not will the things a ſunder; and therefore he wills them onely upon the condition of a connexion; God would have all men to repent, and come to the knowledge of the truth, 1 Tim. 2.4. Secondly, becauſe he is ſaid to will the ſalvation of all believers, and true penitent perſons: and therefore if a reprobate do believe, he willeth his ſalvation, 1 Kings 11.38. This is true of God towards a reprobate, If thou wilt obey me I will bleſſe thee, Deut. 7.12.13.

Q. 146. What ſay you of Gods ſimple and poſitive will?

A. God willeth a thing ſimply two wayes. Firſt, by purpoſing and decreeing, Rom 9.11. either to be wrought by himſelf, which is his working will Eph 1.11. and ſo he willeth his elect to believe, and to be ſaved, Act. 13.48. or to be done by another, Act. 4.28. and ſo he willeth the hardening of the reprobate, Rom 9.17, 18. Secondly, by liking and approving which is the will of his word, Pſalm 40.8. which telleth us what is acceptable unto God, Rom. 12.2. and thus he willeth every man to repent, 2 Pet. 3.9. and all men to come to the knowledge of the truth and to be ſaved, 1 Tim. 2.4. even thoſe that finally will not, Math 23.37. hither is referred that diſtinction of Gods will either ſecret, or revealed, Deut 29.29 Not as though God hath two wills, for it is an imperfection to have two wills, as it is an imperfection to be of two minds, Iam. 4.8. it argueth a change, Act. 28.6. but it is one and the ſame will, whereof one part is ſecret and unknown, the other revealed, Heb. 11.8. the revealed part and all was once kept ſecret and unrevealed, Rom. 16.25. and God revealeth it two wayes. Firſt, in his word, whereby Chriſt reveileth the will of his father to his people, Matth 11.27. Secondly, in the event of things; as for example, I do not know whether it be Gods will that I ſhall be perſecuted for the truth to morrow, yet it is ſecret; but when I ſee that it is ſo come topaſſe, the event doth reveale it to be the Lords will, 1 Pet 3.17.

Q. 147 What ſay you of Gods ſecret Will?

A. It is not for us to know it, Acts 1.7. nor aske after it, Iudg. 13.18 nor pry into it to ſearch it, Iſa. 40.28. A man is very chary of his ſecrets; Suppoſe one ſhould know them, yet he taketh ill that he ſhould reveale them, Pro. 21.1. wouldeſt thou know when it is Gods will thou ſhalt dye or be ſick? nay ſtay till himſelf is pleaſed to reveale it; who made thee of his counſell? Rom. 11.34. when Gods will of command is revealed, it is nothing but unbelief to be inquiſitive what is iſſue and event ſhall be, Mat 6.20 nay to be doubting about it, it its unbelief, Mat. 14.31. The prying into Gods ſecret will about iſſues, and the ſuffering of thy heart to be queſtioning it, is the cauſe of moſt of thy ſinnes; the Lord had revealed his will unto Ionas, that he ſhould go and preach to Niniveh, Ion. 1.2. Now Ionas queſtioning what Gods will was the iſſue ſhou'd be, may be they will put me to death, may be the Lord will ſpare them, and then I ſhall be counted a falſe Prophet; this made him fly away to Tarſhiſh, Jon. 4.2. nay, it is the cauſe of moſt errours of ſome, when a part of Gods truth is revealed enough for faith and ſalvation, Ioh. 20.31 but when people will be tampering beyond, no wonder if they erre, for Gods judgement is unſearchable, Rev. 11.33.

Q. 148 What uſe do you make of God ſecret will?

A. Firſt, in all our intentions we muſt be carefull to inſert this. If it be Gods will, Iam. 4.13, 14, 15. either implicitely, 1 Cor 11.34. or expreſſely, Acts 18.21. for there may be a thouſand counſels in our hearts, but none of all can ſtand, but that which is appointed in heaven, Prov. 19.21. Secondly, we muſt never be over earneſt in our undertakings, leſt Gods will comming forth to the contrary, puts us to diſcontent and vexation, 1 Kin. 21.4. Thirdly we muſt labour to be provided for whatſoever may break our purpoſes off, Ioh. 11.11 if it be Gods will our purpoſes ſhall never take effect, he hath may wayes to do it, Iſa. 59.10. by ſuffering us to be inconſiderate, Proverbs 15.22. by taking us away before we effect that we purpoſed, Pſalm 146.4. what a pitifull caſe had Ionathan been in, if he had not been provided for all? may be he aimed to be next David, when he came to the crown, 1 Sam. 23.17. but before he came he was dead, 1 Sam. 31.2. Fourthly, we muſt beware that we run not againſt Gods revealed will, rather then ſuffer our purpoſes to be fruſtrate; the old Prophet of Bethel, when he had a purpoſe to get the Prophet of Indah home to his houſe, rather then he would be hindred of his purpoſe, he told a wretched lye, 1 Kings 13.18. The unjuſt Steward having a purpoſe to live and make himſelfe friends, rather then he would be hindred of his purpoſe, he would couzen his Lord, Luke 16 4. Fifthly, we muſt be ready to ſubmit to Gods will againſt it comes to be revealed what it is, Acts 21.4. Sixthly, we muſt remember that even our own hearts cannot will as we liſt, but as God liſt, Prov 21.1 nor our tongues anſwer as we liſt, though we have what to anſwer, but as God liſts, Proverbs 16 1.

Q. 149. What pray we for in this Petition, thy Will be done?

A. Firſt, That we may renounce our own will, Mat. 26.39. whether it be our carnall will, called the will of our fleſh, Eph 2.3. which muſt be abſolutely renounced, for it is contrary to the will of the ſpirit, Gal. 5.17. or our naturall will, whereby we will life and maintenance, and freedom from torment; and this we muſt renounce reſpectively, namely when Gods will ſtands in competition, Iohn 5.30. Secondly, we pray that God would make us content with his will, whether it be diſpoſing of our allowance, Heb 13.5. or correcting us for our ſinnes, 1 Sam. 3 18. Thirdly, we pray that God would enable us to do his commanding will, Pſalm 143.10. Fourthly, we may do it, as Gods Angels do, Pſalm 103.20. that is, firſt readily, without delay, Pſalm 119. 60 Secondly, willingly. Pſalm 40.8. that it may be our meat to do it, Iohn 4.34. Thirdly, conſtantly, 1 Chron. 28.7 Fourthly, faithfully, not picking and chooſing, but all the Lords will, Acts 13.22.

Q 150. What ſay you of the will of Gods word or command, is it the Lords will that men ſhall do it or elſe woe is unto them?

A. Yes, for that is his will by force of a law, Rom. 2.18. and the buſineſſe that he bids men to do, Luke 2.49. and what ever prophane wretches think, he will for a certain require it, Pſalm 10.13. and if men will not do it, he himſelf will ſee it done one way or other, Ezek. 21.28. Gods word muſt needs be his peremptory will, firſt becauſe it is his pleaſure, Ezra 10.11. Secondly, becauſe he engages his glory upon it, and therefore he wills it above heaven and earth, Pſal. 148.13. he will ſooner let heaven and earth come to nought, then any tittle of his word not be done, Mat. 5.18. his wiſdome is engaged upon it too, and therefore it is called his wiſdome, Prov. 2.2. his holineſſe is engaged upon it too, and therefore it is called the word of the holy one, Iob 6.10. and his power too, and therefore none that neglect it ſhall eſcape, except they be ſtronger then he, 1 Cor 10.22. and his greatneſſe too, his greatneſſe is ſtamped upon every jot of his word, Hoſ. 8.12. Thirdly, its a ſigne how ſtrongly the Lord willeth his word, by the greatneſſe of the rewards that he propounds to them that keep it, Pſal. 19.11. and by the greatneſſe of the plagues that he threatens to them that will break it, Deut. 28.59. Fourthly, it appears by the Lords importunity whereby he wooeth us to do it, Mat. 23.37. Fifthly, by the coſt he was at to purchaſe his word; he delivered his own Son up unto death to procure us this will and teſtament, Heb. 9.16. and therefore how ſhall they eſcape that are ſtubborn againſt it and ſlight it? Heb. 2.2,3.

Q. 151. What motives are there to perſwade us to do the Lords will?

A. Firſt, if we do the Lords will, the Lord will heare our prayers, Iob 9.31: Secondly, if we do the Lords will, we ſhall abide for ever, 1 Ioh 2.17. Thirdly, the doing of Gods will puts a great Nobility upon us, Mark 3.35. Fourthly, hereby we ſhew our ſelves to be the ſervants of God, Epheſ. 6.6. Fifthly, to do the Lords will, is a ſign of one that ſhall enter into heaven, Mat. 27.21. Sixthly, by ſo doing we pleaſe God, Heb. 13.1. when we do our own will and not Gods, we exalt our ſelves above God, Dan. 11.36. We ſaid in our Baptiſme, that we would do the Lords will; and therefore if we will not, we are lying children, Iſa. 30.9.

Q. 152. The fourth Petition is, Give us this day our daily bread; what is meant by Bread here?

A. Firſt, Bread it ſelf in particular, 2 Kings 4.42. which ſtrengthens mans heart, Pſalm 104.15 Secondly, that, and alſo any other food, *Gen.*3.19. any meales meat, 2 Kings 6.22. even fleſh too, *Gen.*18.5,7. and rayment too, and whatſoever our naturall life needs, Eccl, 11.1. even all outward things, *Gen.*40. 20. for not onely food, but rayment, and warmth, and outward comforts do feed us; a man may be ſtarved with cold: and therefore whatſoever helps to ſatisfie the deſire of nature, may be called Bread, *Prov.*20.13. Fourthly, it ſignifies ſpiritually Chriſt too, *Iohn.*6.51. and his Word, Amos 8.11. and his Grace, 1 *Cor.*5.8 and his Promiſe, *Matth.*15.26. But this ſpirituall bread is not here meant; we pray for ſpirituall bread in the other Petitions, here only for our daily ſuſtenance, Luke 11.3. Indeed it is good to raiſe up our meditations from hence unto ſupernaturall meat, Iohn 6.27. Firſt, becauſe man liveth not by bread onely, but by every word of God, Matth 4.4. Secondly, becauſe a wiſe man looketh higher then the food of his carkaſe, *Prov.*30.8: neither is the Sacramentall bread here meant; for that we pray for in the fifth Petition, it being the ſealing of the forgiveneſſe of our ſinnes, *Mat.*26 28.

Q.153. What doth this teach us, That our Saviour bids us pray for Bread, and not for dainties and abundance?

A. To teach us, that having food and rayment, therewith to be content, 1 *Tim.*6 8. Firſt, becauſe our life does not conſiſt in abundance, Luke 12.15. Secondly, becauſe there is danger in abundance, eſpecially when we are eager to have it, *Prov.*30 8. An eſtate may be too great, as a ſhooe may be too bigge, or armour may be too great, and then it hindereth one in the uſing of it, 1 *Sam.*17.39. Riches accidentally make it harder for one that goes to heaven, *Matth.*19.24. Thirdly, if we be not content with ſuch things as we have, be they never ſo little, we will never be contented, but covet more and more, *Heb.*13.5. Fourthly, we are citizens of heaven, and ſtrangers here below; and therefore it doth not become us to be having and having, *Heb.*11.9,10. If we can ſay, The Lord is my portion, we have a goodly heritage, *Pſal.*16 6. and therefore we ſhould pray onely for the things that are neceſſary, *Matth.*6.32. Now thoſe things are neceſſary, that are neceſſary, firſt, unto nature; nature requires ſome food or rayment, or elſe it will pine, *Lam.*4.4. Secondly, unto our vocation, as Books to a Schollar, inſtruments to a Carpenter, meaner meanes to people that are of a meane calling, greater to Lords and to Kings; give me not poverty, ſayes the King, becauſe his calling called for more meanes then ſo, *Prov.*30.8. Thirdly, neceſſary to our charge, whether it be a great charge or ſmall, 1 Tim 5.8. Fourthly, that which is apparently neceſſary for time to come too, 2 *Cor.*12.14. when Joſeph fore-ſaw a great famine, he laid up afore-hand, Gen 41.48.

Q. 154. Why muſt we pray for temporall things, or for the creatures of God?

A. Firſt, becauſe rayment is good, and food is good, and every creature of God is good, 1 *Tim.*4.4. Secondly, they are uſefull to many duties, and to the duty of hoſpitality, *Rom.*12.13. of owing nothing one to another, Rom. 13.8. of honouring God, *Prov.*3.9. Thirdly, they are neceſſary with neceſſity of need, *Mat.*6 3?. and with the neceſſity of convenience, *Prov.*30.8 Fourthly, the want of them is great temptation to many ſinnes, *Prov.*30.9. and the very Lyons, *Pſal.*104.25. and the Ravens teach us to call upon God for them, *Pſal.*147.9. For though we love them too well, 1 John 2.15. and are too apt to labour for them, John 6.27. and to pray carnall prayers for them, *Heſ.*7.14. yet we had rather get them any way then by Prayers; as by cares, Luke 21.34. by taking thought, *Matth.*6.25. by unlawfull and unrighteous courſes, Luke 16.9 Firſt, becauſe as long as we think we can help our ſelves, we love not to be beholding to another; and therefore the Apoſtle is faine to exhort us to pray to him, *Phil.*4.6. Secondly, becauſe we cannot abide to ſtand to Gods allowance, as we muſt if we would get them by prayer, John 15.4.

Thirdly, becauſe prayer is too holy a courſe for our corrupt nature to come by them, 1 *Tim.*2.8. Fourthly, becauſe God indents with us to glorifie him, if he give us any thing by prayer, *Pſal.*50.15. but we ſhould pray for them, *Gen.*38.10. Firſt, becauſe that is the way to have it ſanctifiedly, 1 *Tim.*4.5. and ſecondly, without falling into temptation about them, *Matth.*26.41. And thirdly, moſt honourable, for it is the honour of our maintenance, as it was of Chriſts, if they come down from heaven, *Joh.*6.33.

Q. 155. The text ſaith our bread, it ſpeaketh of a title we have to the Creatures; what ſay you of that?

A. There is a two fold title to the Creatures. Firſt, a ſpirituall title, whereby they are ours, if they be ours by being in Chriſt, 1 *Cor.*3.22. Secondly, a civil title, as by deſcent of inheritance, as Nabothis vineyard was his, 1 Kings 21.3. Or by purchaſe, as the field of Ephron was Abrahams, *Gen.*23.16,17. or by honeſt labour, and covenant between man and man, as the party-coloured Sheep were Jacobs ſheep, *Gen.*30.40. The wicked have not a ſpirituall title unto them, becauſe he whom they are without, is heire of all things, *Heb.*1.2. They onely have title to them which have faith to overcome, which the wicked have not, *Rev.*21.7. Title unto the creature is not founded upon Nature, *Gen.*1.29. but upon the Image of God in righteouſneſſe and true holineſſe, which the wicked have not, verſe 26. and yet, Firſt, they have a gift of Providence; though they have forfeited Gods creatures, yet God does not preſently ſeize upon the forfeiture, but continueth the old gift in Adam, *Pſal.*115.6. Secondly, a co-gift as it were, by reaſon of cohabitation with the godly, Deut. 32.14. Thirdly, a ſufferance rather then a gift, to be as rods for the righteous, *Jer.*27.6. Fourthly, a conditionall gift, upon condition that they will repent and believe in Chriſt, otherwiſe the creatures will turne to a curſe to them, Ieb 20.14. if they doe eat, they ſinne becauſe they cannot eat with faith, *Rom.*14.23. if they doe not eat, they ſinne too, becauſe then they ſhould murder themſelves, which they muſt not, *Acts.*16.34. As Simon Magus if he ſhould pray he ſhould ſinne, by praying without the ſpirit, if he ſhould not pray he ſhou'd break the commandement of prayer; and yet Peter bid him pray, Acts 8.22.

Q. 156. It ſeemes then that the Anabaptiſts, conceipt is moſt falſe, that all things are common, and that we cannot ſay this is ours, and that is yours; Give us this day our dayly bread.

A. Yes, for firſt, the Law ſayes thou ſhalt not ſteale, *Exod.*20.15. Secondly, the Lord ſayes we muſt work, and earne and eat our own bread, 2 Theſ. 3.12. Thirdly, the Scripture ſpeakes often of proprieties, a good Biſhop rules well his own houſe, 1 Tim 3.4. John took Mary into his own houſe, John 19.27. Fourthly, the action of buying and ſelling does alſo prove it; Chriſt bid his Diſciples to buy meat, John 4.8. Fifthly, the Goſpel relates divers rich men, if there were a community, no one ſhould be richer then another, Joſeph of Arimath a was rich, *Matth.*27.57. the Eunuch was rich, Acts 8.27. Paul does not adviſe rich men to make all away they have, but not to truſt in their riches, 1 *Tim.*6 17. Sixthly, the duty of being liberall ſuppoſes a propriety; for then is a man liberall, when he gives bountifully of his own, 2 *Cor.*9.6. when one beggeth of us, and we let him have, we are ſaid to give, *Matth.*6. 42. Firſt, becauſe ſo is Gods inſtitution at the firſt, Acts 16.27. and a diviſion of goods and inheritance is Gods Ordinance, Deut 32.8. Secondly, ſo is Gods providence, he maketh rich as poore. *Prov.*22.2. Thirdly, it is not mans ſinne when he counts his goods his own, or his houſe his own; Simon had a houſe of his own, Acts 10.6. Mary a houſe of her own, Acts 12.12. Philip had a houſe of his own, Acts 21.8. It is true, firſt, we are all one in Chriſt, in regard of ſpirituall life, but not in civill life, *Gal.*3.28. for ſome are Maſters, and ſome ſervants, *Epheſ.*6.5. ſome rich, ſome poore, Mat 26.11. Secondly, there there muſt be a communion of charity, but not ſuch a communion as is contrary to all propriety, *Heb.*13.16. nay this kind of communion ſuppoſes a propriety, *Prov.*5.16 17. Thirdly, the Goſpel commands a readineſſe to forſake all that we have when we are called, but not alwayes an actuall forſaking of all, Luke 14.33. Fourthly, the Church may ſtand in need of a community of good, Acts 2.44. and that all goods ſhould be common, Acts 4.32. and yet that doth ſuppoſe, firſt, that our goods are our own, and in our own power to make common, Acts 5.4. Secondly, not a neceſſity but a freeneſſe of giving, 2 *Cor.*9.7. Thirdly, it was onely by accident, in regard of the multitudes of poore Believers, Luke 12.33.

Q. 157. Why pray you not for weekly or yearely bread, but give us this day our daily bread?

A. That we may not be ſolicitous for to morrow; for firſt, this day will afford us buſineſſe enough to doe, we had not need to preoccupate for the morrow, *Matth.*6.34. Secondly, if we be carefull for the morrow to day, we ſhall be forced to care for it twice, and therefore let us take care for to day, and to morrow, for to morrow *Matth.*6.34. Thirdly, we need not to morrow, till to morrow is come; it is onely this day that is the ſeaſon of our need, *Pſal.*145.15. Fourthly, it is the act of Faith to live from hand to mouth, and it is againſt faith to be thoughtfull for to morrow, *Matth.*6.34. not, but we may provide for to morrow, *Gen.*30.30. When the Lord giveth us this day a ſurplus for to morrow; faith alloweth this, 1 *Tim.*5.8. Againe, the Lord teacheth us to pray every day, for every dayes bleſſing; for firſt, Gods mercies flow not from him all at once, but ſome to day and ſome to morrow, *Pſal.*68.19, for they flow from him as water from a fountaine *Pſal.*36.9. ſome grace to day, and new to morrow, *Zach.*13.1. Secondly, the covenant of Grace requireth that we ſhould ſue to it continually, 1 *Theſ.*5.17. Againe, to ſhew the fickleneſſe of our life; for what is it? Jam 4.14. Joſhua, though now well, yet lookt upon this Day as the day of his death, *Joſh.*23.14. for firſt, we may dye to day, we doe not know when, *Gen.*27.2. Secondly, if we doe not dye to day, yet if we be plodding now for to morrow, it will make us the more unwilling to dye to morrow, Jam 4.13. Thirdly, the not thinking of Death as a thing preſent, makes one the more ſubject to ſinne, Amos 6.3. Againe, to teach us to look out for heaven, which is not for a day, nor for a yeare, but for ever, Iohn 6.27. an Immortall inheritance, 1 *Pet.*1.4.

Q. 158. If our daily bread be ours, why doe we beg it? and if we beg it, how is it ours?

A. It is the gift of God, *Pſal.*146.7. though the materiall cauſe of it be from below, yet the efficient cauſe is from above, *Jam.*1.17. nay, if we be his children, firſt, it is the gift of his everlaſting mercy, *Pſal.*136.27. Secondly, as an appurtenance together with Chriſt, *Rom.*8.32. as an addition to the Kingdom of God, *Matth.*6.33. Indeed he would have us make it ours, firſt, by believing in Chriſt, 1 *Cor.*3.22. Secondly, by honeſt labour, 2 *Theſ.*3.10. and yet though we get it by gifts from friends, or by our own induſtry and labour, yet it is he doth give it unto us, *Deut.*8.17,18. and then doe we acknowledge it to be his gift, when we doe ſhew it by our Practice, and our dependance upon him, uſing it to his glory, *Hoſ.*2.8. and becauſe that givers among men never want beggers, we ſhould be ſutors unto him for theſe things, for he is the hearer of Prayers, *Pſal.*64 2. Againe, if he be a giver, we muſt not have an evil eye, though he give others more, us leſſe, Matth. 20.15. againe, if he be the giver, we ſhould not lay out his gifts upon that which will not profit us, but uſe them to our good, *Iſa.*55.2. Againe, if he be the giver, we ſhould ſay of every thing that we have, this is Gods mercy of of every morſell of bread; his is Gods mercy, of every nights ſleep, this is Gods mercy; the Lord curſeth people when he renders them their deſerts;

Pſal.

*Pſal.*28.4. again, if theſe be his gifts, then they cannot help our needs further then his influence is in them. David had clothes, and did uſe them, and yet could not get warmth, 1 Kings 1.1. and though we have them, yet we have need to pray for them as though we had them not; for without him they are and they are not, Prov. 23.5.

Q. 159. Forgive us our debts; why are ſinnes called debts?

A. Not becauſe they are debts that are owed, for ſo good works are debts; as to love one another, *Rom.*13.8. not to live after the fleſh, *Rom.*8.12. to publiſh the Goſpel, *Rom.*1.14. but becauſe they are debts owed and not payed, *Matth.*18.27. Firſt, they are called debts, becauſe God is the creditor, Luke 7.41. Secondly, becauſe we are indebted to his Juſtice to pay the utmoſt farthing; *Matth.*5.25. and therefore it is a miſery to be a ſinner, 1 *Sam.*22.2. for, firſt, he loves not to come into Gods preſence, except he be brought, *Matth.*18.24. Secondly, he loves to be ſhifting with God, as the unjuſt Steward and the debtors were ageeed to cozen their maſter, Luke 16 5. Thirdly, he is apt to leave the ſurety in the lurch, *Prov.*22.26. Fourthly, he is ſubject to be arreſted of Gods juſtice, as a debtor is of mans, 2 Kings 4 1.

Q. 160. What is Sinne?

A. It is the tranſgreſſion of Gods law, 1 John 3.4. whether by omitting of what is commanded, *Matth.*25.42. or by committing of what is forbidden, *Jer.*2.13. or by failing in manner of doing it, for in every thing we doe, be it materially never ſo good, we doe ſinne, *Gal.*7.20. whether it be in eſſentialls, as Jehu's obedience is called murder, *Hoſ.*1.4. or in ſome circumſtantialls, as Rebeckahs deſiring that Iacob might have the bleſſing, there was a lye cleaving to it, *Gen.*27.15. whereby the perſon becomes guilty, *Ezek.*22.4. both with the guilt of offence, 1 *Cor.*11.27. the ſinne being laid to his charge, Acts 7. 60. and with the guilt of death and damnation, *Rom.*1.18. by which two guilts as with chaines, the ſoul is bound in heaven and in earth, *Matth.*16.19. and the Conſcience defiled, *Tit.*1.15. which can never be purged again but by the bloud of Chriſt, 1 John 1.7. beſides, ſinne leaves a blot and an uncleanneſſe behind it, upon the ſoul and all the whole man, *Matth.*15,11.

Q. 161. Are any ſinnes ſo ſmall, that they are veniall, and doe not deſerve hell?

A. No, *Matth.*5.19. though it be but the leaſt breach; but of one jot of Gods Law, verſe 18. or but an idle word, *Mat.*12.36. or but a luſt, *Rom.*7.7. though it be but in the leaſt thing *Gal.*3.10. the Lord does not ſay, the wages of a great ſinne, but ſinne is death, Rom 6.23. he does not ſay, Thou ſhalt not ſteale a pound, or a ſhilling, but thou ſhalt not ſteale, though it be but a farthing, *Matth.*19.18. It is a curſed ſpeech, Is this ſuch a matter? be the matter never ſo little, that is not it, but the littleneſſe of the will, *Matth.*26.41. muchneſſe of will aggravates any ſinne exceedingly, Heb. 10.26. When people ſay, we will not doe thus and thus, or we will doe thus and thus, *Ier.*6.16. for againſt whom doſt thou ſinne? *Iſa.*57.23. even againſt an infinite God, *Pſal.*145.3. and thou art nothing to him, *Dan.*4.35. and leſſe then nothing in his hands thy breath is, *Dan.*5.23. and yet ſinnes are not all equall, Luke 12.47,48. and though all ſinnes be mortall, yet by reaſon of Gods mercy; all ſinnes are not unto death, John 5.16. namely when a man is in Chriſt, then no ſinne can damne him that he hath committed, *Rom.*8.1. again ſome ſinnes are little in compariſon of other ſome, Ezek 16.48.

Q. 162. How comes ſinne to be ſaid to be ours?

A. Firſt, Actuall ſinne comes to be ours by committing of it, *Ier.*16.10. or by being acceſſary to anothers committing of it, *Nehem.*13.17. by teaching others to ſinne, Ier 28.16. or by commanding others to ſinne, 2 *Sam.*13. 28. or by ticing others to ſinne, 1 Kings 21.25. or by giving others a ſinfull example, *Gal.*2.14. or by conniving, 1 Sam 2.29. or by remiſſeneſſe of reproving ſinne, ſo as the reproved is never the more reſtrained, 1 *Sam.*3.13.

or of too little preaching to the Conſcience, Ezek 33.6. or by keeping company with them that doe ſinne, *Rom.*1.32. or by being anothers inſtrument in ſinning, 1 *Sam.*22.18. or by feeding upon ſinnes of others, *Hoſ.*4.8. Secondly, originall ſinne is made ours, by being conceived in it, *Pſal.*51.5. and born of the fleſh, Iohn 3.6. not by imitation onely, for Firſt, ſinne entred into the world by one man, and not by every man, *Rom.*5.12. and we were all dead in Adam before we could imitate him, 1 *Cor.*15 22. or ſinne after his ſimilitude, *Rom.*5.14. Secondly, originall ſinne is before actuall, for Firſt, we are uncleane before actuall iſſue from us, Iob 14.4. Thirdly, we are ſinners from the womb, and therefore before we doe actually imitate our Parents, *Pſal.*58.3. Indeed the actuall ſinnes of our parents are not made ours but onely by imitation, *Ezek.*18.14. and yet even they too thus farre are ours, as that we are to be ſpecially humbled for them, Ier. 3.25.

Q.163. Forgiveneſſe of ſinne being there put by a Synecdoche, the part for the whole, the whole being Iuſtification, tell me what is Iuſtification?

A. Firſt, it is a free act of God, *Rom.*3.24. Secondly, looking at his own grace, and not at any good works in man, *Rom.*11.6. Thirdly, whom he conſidereth as formally a ſinner, or ungodly, *Rom.*4.5. Fourthly, whereby he freeth him from the Law, and from ſinne, and from death, *Rom.*8.2. and maketh him righteous in his accompt, 2 *Cor.*5.25. Fifthly, for Chriſt his ſake, verſe 19. Sixthly, apprehended by faith. *Rom.*5.1. and therefore juſtification conſiſteth of two parts, *Zach.*3.4. The firſt is the not imputing of ſinne, Rom. 4.8. the ſecond, is the imputing of righteouſneſſe, verſe 6. for Chriſt hath done two things; Firſt, he hath made reconciliation for ſinne; and ſecondly, he hath brought in everlaſting righteouſneſſe, *Dan.*9.24. And therefore the Scripture doth not meane that Juſtification is onely by Chriſts paſſive obedience, when he ſaith, It is by his bloud, Rom.5.9. but it is alſo by his active Obedience, verſe 19. whereby he fulfilled all righteouſneſſe, *Matth.*3.15. and the Law, *Rom.*10.4. being made under the law for that purpoſe, *Gal.*4.4. he fulfilled not the law for himſelf, for the qualification of his Perſon, that he might be a holy Sacrifice for ſin, for he was originally holy, being Jeſus Chriſt the Righteous, 1 John 2.1. himſelf had no need to be turned over to the Law; by reaſon of his hypoſtaticall union, he was holy from the womb, *Luke.*1.35. and therefore he put himſelf under the Law to fetch Righteouſneſſe from thence, for his redeemed ones, Gal 4.5. he did all that he did for them, and ſuffered all that he ſuffered for them. Nay, he was born for them, as well as Crucified for them, *Iſa.*9.6. and he ſanctified himſelf for them, *John.*17.19. and as he dyed for them, ſo he lived for them too, *John*14.19. His Incarnation, Birth, Circumciſion, Baptiſme, his life and converſation, and death, from the womb to the Croſſe, all was for them, yea, ſelfe and all was for them, *Gal.*2. 20. Yea alſo he he roſe again for them, *Rom.*4.25. & now liveth in heaven for them *Heb.*7.25. and ſo well may he be called, The gift of God, Joſh.4.10.

Q.164. Who is the Author of forgiveneſſe of ſinne?

A. God, even God onely, *Iſa.*43.25. Firſt, becauſe this is his glory; when Moſes would fain ſee the Lords glory, *Exod.*33.18. The Lord told him he was the forgiver of ſin, *Exod.*34.7. Secondly, he onely can forgive ſinne; if one do forgive ſinne that hath not a power to do it, it is nothing, Marke 2.7. Thirdly, ſin is committed onely againſt God, Pſal 51.4. Fourthly, he onely can give the Conſcience peace, *Rom.*5.1. Though all the world ſhould ſay, ſuch a one is an honeſt man, ſuch an one hath his ſinnes forgiven him, his Conſcience will miſgive him for all that; except the eternall ſpirit ſet it on, Heb. 9.14. Forgiveneſſe of ſinnes is in Chriſts name onely, Luke 24 47. and through his Bloud, Matth. 26. 28. when God himſelfe puts away a mans ſinnes by it, *Iſa.*44.22. Indeed in a treſpaſſe are two things, firſt the obliquity or evil that is in it; Secondly, the hurt or detriment that redounds unto man by it; as it is an obliquity, it is an aberration from Gods law; ſo onely God can pardon, it for it is he that pardoneth all ſinne, *Ier.*33.8. as it is a hurt unto man, ſo farre as it concerns him, he may and muſt forgive it, *Mat.*6.14. and whereas it is ſaid, that Gods Miniſters may forgive ſinnes, *Ioh.*20.23. That is onely declaratorily, as Iohn declared unto them whom he wrote his Epiſtle to, That their ſinnes were forgiven them, that is, of God, and not of him, 1 Ioh 2.12. As Nathan ſaid to David, 2 Sam 12.13. Men cannot get the pardon of their ſinnes as they liſt, Act 8.22. Let men feare to ſin againſt God, leſt he ſay in his wrath, he will never forgive them, *Ier.*14.12. if people were ſure of a pardon when they have ſinned, it were another matter; but when they preſume upon a pardon, and ſo ſinne, the Lord ſaith he will diſappoint them, *Deut.*29. 19,20.

Q.165. Who be they that are the proper ſubjects of forgiveneſſe of ſinne; I meane who are they that this article belongs to?

A. Not all but many, *Mat.*26 28. namely, the remnant of Gods heritage, Micha 7.18. The city of God, thoſe that dwell therein ſhall be forgiven their iniquities, *Iſa*33.24. Indeed forgiveneſſe of ſinne muſt be preached in Chriſts name among all Nations, Luke 24.47. according to the riches of his Grace, *Epheſ.*1.7. for Chriſt is the Lambe of God that takes away the ſinnes of the world, Iohn 1.29. The Goſpel is to be propounded to every creature, and it may ſo be, Mark 16.25. but if any would partake of the forgiveneſſe of ſin, Firſt, he muſt repentantly confeſſe his ſinnes, Iob 33.27. Secondly, he muſt be ſenſible of his ſpirituall captivity, for the acceptable yeare of the Lord is for Captives onely, Luke 4.18,19. Thirdly, we muſt hungerly attend upon God in all his ordinances; and take heed of wilfull hardneſſe of heart, leſt God take an order with him that he never be forgiven, Mark 4.12. Fourthly, he muſt not onely be Baptized, but alſo with the Baptiſme of repentance, Mark.1. 4. Fifthly, he he muſt give the godly good encouragement, that they may comfortably pray for him, *Iam.*5.15. Sixthly, he muſt be a meek and a patient man to forgive ſuch as treſpaſſe againſt him, Mark 6.14.

Q.166. Who is the meritorius cauſe of forgiveneſſe of ſinne?

A. Chriſt, in whom God reconcileth his people to himſelf, 2 *Cor.*5.19. for their ſinnes were laid upon him, *Iſa.*53.5,6. He is the true hyſope whereby their ſinnes are purged away, *Pſal.*51.7. He is the fountain ſet open for their uncleanneſſe, Zach. 13.1. He is the Mediatour of forgiveneſſe, 1 *Tim.*2.5. not onely by way of ſupplication, Iohn 17.9. as Ioab and the woman of Tekoah was to David for Abſalom, 2 Samuel 14.2. not onely by way of interceſſion, Hebrewes 7.25. as Blaſtus to Herod for the Tyrians, Acts 12.10. not onely by way of ſatisfaction, Hebrewes 12.24. as Paul to Philemon for Oneſimus, Phil 18. but alſo an advocate to plead it, and ſue it forth for them, 1 Iohn 2.1. Indeed forgiveneſſe of ſinne to us is an act of grace, if God take our ſinnes, he doth it graciouſly, *Hoſ.*14.2. yet in regard that Chriſt hath made ſatisfaction, it is an act of juſtice, 1 Iohn 1.9. but firſt, our ſinnes muſt be overwhelming burthens to us, and we muſt be ſenſible of our infinite need of a pardon, Iſaiah 40.2. otherwiſe when we make mention of a Mediatour in our prayers, it is not in truth, *Iſa.*48.1. Secondly, we muſt be effectually called, *Heb.*9.15. Thirdly, we muſt be in Chriſt, for pardon floweth from union, and being in Chriſt, *Coloſ.*1.14. the effect whereof is a new Creature, 2 *Cor.*5.17. Chriſt in one is the hope of glory, *Col.*1.27. Fourthly, we muſt have Faith, Acts 13.38,39. we muſt behold the Lambe of God, Iohn 1.29. A Mediatour is not a mediatour of one, but ſuppoſeth two parties, and a conſent on both ſides, *Gal.*3.20. which is on Gods ſide by giving of Chriſt, and on ours by believing in Chriſt, Iohn 3.16. and receiving of him by Faith, Iohn 1. 12.

Q. 167. What are the comforts of forgiveneſſe of ſinnes?

A.

A. Firſt, it is a comfort that there is ſuch a thing that when we have ſinned, propitiation is poſſible, 1 John 1.2. Secondly, that it is not onely poſſible, there being ſuch a thing, but that it may be applyed unto us, if we come to take it at Gods, termes, 1 Joh. 1.9. Thirdly, that it is univerſall of all ſins, Iſa. 38.17. and all kinds of ſins, Exod. 34.7. yea though they be ſcarlet ſins, or crimſon ſins, Iſa. 1.18. Fourthly, that it is accompanied with the healing of ſin too, Pſalme 103.3. and the ſubduing and killing of it, Micha 7.19. with the changing of ones mind and diſpoſition, and making him repent that ever he committed it, Acts 5.31. Fifthly, that where the ſinne is forgiven, the puniſhment is forgiven alſo, and the man that hath it may know his own ſalvation, Luke 1.77. and therefore he may be of good cheare, Mat 6.3. Sixthly, that where ſinne is once forgiven, it can never return to be unforgiven, or to be laid to ones charge more, or remembred againſt him any more, Ier. 31.34. it is a debt quite blotted out that can never be demanded more, Iſa. 43.25. Indeed it may ſeeme to return upon the Conſcience by doubtings and temptation, and recidivation into ſinne again, then the conſcience may be foul again with it, and cry guilty afreſh, becauſe the man hath blotted his Evidence; and therefore he muſt pray for the renewing of it again, Pſalm 32.5. Again, a conceipted pardon may be repealed, as we ſee by the debtor in the Parable, Mat. 18 34. whom his Maſter had ſeemed to forgive, verſe 27. but that Parable doth not imply the repealing of any true pardon, but onely the conſtancy of that rule; That whoſoever would have God to forgive them, muſt forgive one another, Mat 6.15. For when a man is forgiven indeed, though afflictions come to ſeek out his ſins, yet they ſhall not be found, Jer. 50.20.

Q.163. Seeing God ſaith, It is abominable to juſtifie the wicked. Prov.17.15. What is the meaning then of the Apoſtle, who ſaith, That God juſtifieth the ungodly? Rom.4.5. Will God do that which is abominable to him?

A. Firſt, God may juſtifie an ungodly man, and yet do it with righteous judgement; he is the Law-maker, and therefore he may pardon what law-breakers he will; becauſe mercy and forgiveneſs belongs to him to diſpenſe it where he will, Dan. 9 9. But if officers and Magiſtrates juſtifie the wicked, they ſinne, becauſe they do it without warrant, for love, or for reward, Iſa. 5.23. Secondly, God juſtifies no other ungodly ones but onely his elect, whoſe ſins Chriſt dyed for, Rom. 8.33.35. Thirdly, God can juſtifie an ungodly man, becauſe he can make him godly and purge his ſpirit from guile, Pſalm 32.2. As he openeth the eyes of the blind, the man is not blind afterwards, John 9.25. The Lord never cleareth any man that goeth on ſtill in his guiltineſſe, Exod. 34.7. And therefore it is no act of injuſtice in God; whereas if a man ſhould juſtifie the wicked, it is injuſtice in him, becauſe he cannot make the man godly; and therefore he muſt juſtifie none but the righteous, and condemne none but the wicked, Deut. 25 1. Fourthly, God juſtifieth the ungodly, not wallowers in ſin and ungodlineſſe, but ungodly, that is formally ſo conſidered as ſinners, 1 Tim. 1.15. Now then is a man formally a ſinner, when, firſt, he looks upon himſelfe as a ſinner, when he ſeeth his ſinnes in their own colours, not tickled with any righteouſneſſe of his own, Mat. 9.13. Secondly, when he carrieth himſelf ſo before God in his looks, and thoughts, and affections, and mind, as becommeth a ſinner in his caſe to do, Luke 18.13. Thirdly, when his impudence is gone, and confuſion of face is put on, Dan. 9.8. Fourthly, when he hath no ſquint lookings, or any merits of congruities, or condignities, or preparatives, or fitneſſes, but; magnifieth mercy, verſe 18. Fifthly, when he is truly reſolved upon turning to God, as abhorring the contrary to the pit of hell, Iſa. 55.7. Sixthly, when a man is in truth willing to take up Chriſts croſſe and follow him, Luke 9.23.

Q.169. Seeing the Lord Jeſus teacheth us to pray plurally, Forgive us our ſinnes; muſt we not pray that God would forgive others?

A. Yes, all that have wronged us, Acts 7.60. yea all that we have communion with, 2 Chron. 30.18. yea all that live in the Church, Exod. 32.11. and others too, Gen. 20.7. For first, we have a command for this duty, Jam. 5.16. Secondly, we have a promise of hope of speeding, verse 15. Thirdly, there have been blessed effects of Gods servants prayers in this kind. Namely, the Lord hath forgiven others, upon their intreaty, Num. 14.20. Fourthly, we do our selves good hereby; yea though God have purpose to forgive one, yet sometimes he stayes till his servants intreat for him, Job 42.8. Therefore first, we should take notice of other mens sins, yea though they do not know they have sinned, yet we should pray the Lord to forgive them in case they have, Job 1.5. Secondly, we should begge one anothers prayers, 2 Thes. 3.1. Thirdly, we should labour to be such as Gods people may have encouragement to pray for us, as Paul was encouraged by the Ephesians faith and forwardnesse in the duty of love, Ephes. 1.15. to pray for them verse 16. for the good things that are to be seen in us, Phil. 1.5. make them pray for us with joy, verse 4. Though Simon Magus intreated Peter to pray for him, yet having no encouragement, we do not read that he did, or if he did, he could not do it with any confidence, Acts 8.24. Again, first, let us pray for our selves, 2 Kings 20.1. if we would have others to pray for us, verse 4. Secondly, we must not dissemble with the children of God, when we pray them to pray for us, Ier. 42.20. Thirdly, we must not live in any known sinne, lest the Lord say to his people, do not pray for such, and lock up their hearts, Ier. 7.16. Fourthly, we must humble our selves to them, if we have thought evil of them in our hearts, Numb. 21.7. consider, First, if we be Saints, the cause may be such that God will not pardon us, except other Saints joyne, Deut. 9.20. Secondly, the Saints of God are marvellous willing to do it for us, 1 Sam 12.23.

Q. 170. Whereas our Saviour teacheth us to say, As We forgive them that trespasse against us; What is it to forgive one another?

A. It included four things; first, to forbeare one another, withholding our selves from revenge, Col. 3.15. which is no pusillanmity, but a victorious grace, Rom 12.21. It is to overcome our selves, which is more then to take a City, Prov 16 32. and to overcome the malice of our enemies, and to mollifie their hearts, 1 Sam. 24.17. and to overcome the right way, which is by patience and not by rendering quid for quo, Prov. 24.29 Secondly, to root out all desire of revenge; not onely to tolerate for want of a handsome opportunity to revenge, but to do it from the heart, Mat. 18.35. for it must be with love, which proceeds not onely from the heart; for so we see Drunkards will forgive one another but also from a pure heart, 1 Tim 1.5. Besides we must forgive and forget when people say, I forgive but I cannot forget, this is a silly forgivenesse like Ephraim, a silly Dove without a heart, Hosea 7.14. Again, we must do it with earning bowels, as Ioseph forgave his Brethren, he wept and melted towards them, Gen. 50.17. Thirdly, to be ready notwithstanding to performe all offices of love, verse 21. To blesse them that curse us, and to pray for them that spite us, Mat. 5.44. for God is good to his enemies, verse 45. and hereby we shew that he is our Father, ver. 48. Publicans can love them that love them, verse 47. Besides, if that be all, we have our reward, and can looke for none from God verse 46. Fourthly, to forgive universally all wrongs to our persons, Acts 7.60. to our names, 2 Sam. 19.23. and debts too, when the debtor is not able to pay, and yet submits, Philem. 18. Nay the greater the wrong is the greater is our glory to forgive, Num. 12.13.

Q. 171. Seeing a Souldier may kill his Enemy in a lawfull warre, and yet love him as farre as the Law binds in such a case; so may a man go to law with his Brother, without breach of Charity or the duty of forgiving, when his ends are right: Tell me then What these ends be, that may stand with love?

A. First to demand ones right, when one is called to demand it, Luke 18.3.

Now

Now right is contrary to love, but agreeable unto judgement, Iſa. 10. 2. Secondly, to amend and humble the party nocent; and therefore the Magiſtrate is ſaid to be a Miniſter for good, *Rom.*13 4. That others may hear and fear, and may not do the like, Deut 19.20. Fourthly, that the party damnified, and others too, may live in peace; and this is the reaſon why we ſhould pray for Magiſtartes, 1 *Tim.*2.2. but provided, firſt, that it be done in love, 1 *Cor.*16.14. and not with recompencing evill for evill, *Rom.*12.17. Provided, ſecondly, it be done without offence, 1 *Cor.*6.1. Provided, thirdly, the party wronging be able to make ſatisfaction; as for example in Debts, for if the party be not able, and yet ſubmits, it is cruelty to uſe the law againſt ſuch a one, 2 Kings 4.1. Provided, fourthly, that going to law be our laſt and utmoſt remedy, when people will preſently go to law, refuſing to take wrong, or be tried by private agreements; this is unchriſtian, 1 Cor. 6. 7. Provided, Fifthly, that the wrong be not fit to be put up; in this caſe Paul appeals to Ceſar, Acts 25.11. for as the Apoſtle ſayes in another caſe, ſo we may ſay in this, The law is good if a man uſe it lawfully, 1 Tim.1.8. Private revenge is wretched: Firſt, becauſe vengeance is mine, ſayes God, Heb. 10 30. and the Lord is the avenger, 1 Theſ.4.6. Secondly, wherefore ſerves the Magiſtrate? he is ordained of God to puniſh evill doers, 1 *Pet.*2.14. Again; Firſt, it is ones excellency to forgive, *Mich.*7.18. Secondly, it is a note of a bleſſed man, Matth. 5. 7. Thirdly humane ſociety cannot well be without it; for we are apt to wrong others, and have need that they ſhould forgive us, and therefore ſhould be ready to forgive them, forgive and ye ſhall be forgiven, Luke 6.37. Fourthly, it is neceſſary to reſiſt our wicked heart; now not to forgive, proceeds from the wickedneſſe of ones heart, *Matth.*18.32.

Q.172. What is the meaning of that As; as we forgive them that treſpaſſe againſt us?

A It doth not ſignifie a pattern or a rule, or direction, as it doth in the third Petition, *Mat.*6. 10. for we would be glad that God would forgive us better then we can forgive one another: There be no works like unto his works, *Pſal.*86.8. neither doth it import that we can forgive one another, before God hath forgiven us, Matth 18.32. For Gods forgiving of us, Firſt, is an enabling cauſe of our forgiving one another, as Gods love to us enables us to love him, 1 John 4 19. Secondly, it is a motive cauſe too, *Mat.*18.33. Thirdly, it is evidenced unto us by our forgiving one another, as a cauſe by the effect. *Mat.*6.14. And yet we muſt, firſt, forgive one another, before we can intreat the Lord to forgiveus, Luke 11.4. but this ſame As doth imply that there muſt be a reſemblance between Gods forgiving us, and our forgiving one another, *Eph.*4.32. that is, Firſt, we muſt frankly forgive, Luke 7.42. Secondly, alwayes, as often as we pray, Mark 11.25. which muſt be continually, 1 *Theſ.*5.17. nay, though they be our enemies, and do not yet repent of their wronging of us, Luke 23.34. how much more if they do repent? Luke 17.3. Yea, we muſt forgive others, as Chriſt hath forgiven us, whatever the quarrell be, *Col.*3.13.

Q.173. Why doth our Saviour teach us to pray, Lead us not into Temptation, immediately after praying for the Forgiveneſſe of our Sins?

A. For two reaſons, Firſt, becauſe forgiveneſſe of ſin and grievous temptations are inſeparable companions, a true penitent perſon is moſt baited by Satan; he needs not trouble impenitent perſons, for he hath them ſure enough already, & therefore commonly he lets them be quiet, *Lu.*11.21. Sergius Paulus no ſooner believed, but the Devil ſtirred up Elimas againſt him, Acts 13.8. When a man begins to turn unto God, the Devil ſuſpects he is one of Chriſts ſeed, and therefore he labours to bruiſe his heele, that he may not go on, Gen. 3.15. and to devour him, *Rev.*12.4. he hath experience of prevailing againſt divers good beginners, John 6.66. and Paul was afraid he had prevailed againſt the Corinthians, 2 *Cor.*11.3. Again, the ſpeciall providence is in it to humble the ſoule; and therefore he made David rore before he would forgive him, Pſ. 32.3. And therefore, it is a ſigne when people know not what grievous temptations mean, the Devil holds them captive at his will, 2 *Tim.*2.26. for he deſires to ſift all that have got out of his clutches, Luke 22.31. Again, when people are not ſmitten in conſcience and tempted, it is a ſigne the Word does not work, for if it work it cuts like a ſword, *Heb.*4.12. Secondly, becauſe forgiveneſſe of ſin and yeilding to temptations cannot ſtand together, *Cant.*5.3. For firſt, the grace of forgiveneſſe teacheth a man not to yeild to ſin, *Tit.*2. 11,12. Secondly, pardon of ſin and grace not to goe on in ſin are couppled together in the Covenant of grace, *Jer.*31.33. Thirdly, they are coupled together in reaſon, *Pſa.*41.4. Fourthly, forgiveneſſe makes one love God, and ſo not be tempted away from him, Luke 7.42. Nay, fifthly, God will not forgive nor acquit upon other termes, but that we ſhall labour againſt temptations to ſin, Job 10.14. When we labour for forgiveneſs, except we mean to be godly, our labour is in vain, Job 9 29 God will not hear, Iſaiah 59.2.

Q.174. What is Temptation, and how many-fold?

A. Temptation is a proofe, *Pſal.*95.9. or a tryall to ſee what is in one, or what one will do, 1 *Pet.*4.12. Temptation is of different nature according as it is uſed, ſometimes good, *Gen.*22.1. ſometimes bad, 1 *Corinth.*7.5. Firſt, God is ſaid to tempt, to try what is in a mans heart, *Deut.*8.2. what grace is in man, Pſalm 105.16. what corruption, 2 *Chron.*32.31. Nay ſometimes he tempts a man in his juſt judgement to ſinne, 2 *Sam.*24.1. This he does in a righteous manner, for otherwiſe he cannot be ſaid to tempt any, *Iam.*1.13. properly it is a mans luſt that doth tempt him to ſinne, verſe 14. Secondly, the Devil is ſaid to tempt, *Mat.*4.1. by putting motions into the heart, John 13.2. by thruſting of importunate thoughts and itchings, which provoke unto ſinne, 1 Chron. 21.1. by preſenting of objects before one, Luke 4.5. and egging to take them, verſe 6. by ſetting a diſcouraging look upon ones afflictions, 1 *Theſſ.*3.5. by preſenting occaſions, *Mat.*4.3. ſpeaking in the mouths of friends, *Mat.*16. 23. Thirdly, men are ſaid to tempt too, John 8.6. Firſt, they tempt God, either upon good ground to help their Faith, Judges 6.37. And Ahaz ſinned becauſe he would not tempt God thus, *Iſa.*7.12. or in a wicked wiſe, Acts 5.9. As when a man diſtruſts God, and uſeth unwarrantable means, *Mat.*4.7. And when a man ſins in any other kind, 1 *Cor.*10.9. either againſt God or his Meſſengers, Exod. 17.2. Secondly, men tempt themſelves either well, by a warrantable proving what is in them, 2 *Cor.*13.5. or ill, by putting themſelves upon danger, *Mat.*26.58. Thirdly, men tempt others, and that either well, to prove a brother whether he be the man that he ſeemes, Revelation 2.2. or ill, to draw him into ſinne, *Gen.*39.7. or inconveniences, Matth. 22.18.

Q.175. What is a Temptation to ſinne?

A. There be four things that concurre in it. Firſt, it ſuppoſeth flexibleneſs in the party tempted, when the party is idticeable, *Iam.*1.14. And therefore a frigid man cannot be tempted to Adultery, but one that hath luſt in him, Matthew 5. 28. The bleſſed Angels cannot be tempted to ſinne at all, becauſe they are confirmed in Grace, and ſo was Chriſt as man too; and yet there is an intrinſecall flexibleneſſe in every Creature, and in that reſpect the beſt creature may be capable of a temptation, *Mat.*4.1. but God is not at all, *Iam.*1.13. Secondly, it ſuppoſeth a baite to take the party with, *Prov.*6.25. When a man hath ſome booty by ſinne, either the getting of ſome ſeeming good, as in allurements; as Judas got thirty pieces of ſilver, *Mat.*26.15. or prevention of ſome evill, as in temptations of feare or ſhame, or the like, Gal. 6.12. when a man ſinnes without a baite, he does not ſinne out of temptation, and therefore his ſinne is the worſe, *Ezek.*16.34. much more when a man loſes by his ſinne, Acts 23.12. Thirdly, it ſuppoſes a trying what the party will doe, 2 *Chron.*32.31. When a man layes a baite before one, as for example, a ſhilling or ſo, in a corner where a theeviſh ſervant may ſee it, and conceive it is forgotten, to try whether he will ſteal it; as the Prieſts offered the Souldiers money to try whether they could get them to bely the diſciples of Chriſt, Matth. 8.12. Fourthly, it ſuppoſeth a wicked mind or intention in the temper; and therefore God cannot tempt any, *Jam.*1.13. but the Devil, *Mat*4.1. or ſinfull men,ſuch onely tempt, Heb 11.37. Wherefore temptation, are ſhrewd things to us, *Gal.*6.1. for firſt, they may move us to ſinnes though otherwiſe we would never have committed it; may be Jacob would never have told a lye, but being tempted of his mother, he did, *Gen.*27.14. Secondly, they may move us to ſinne, when we have vowed and ſtrongly purpoſed not to yeild; how many ſinnes was David tempted and drawn to commit, and yet he had ſworn he would not? *Pſal.*119.106.

Q.178. What uſe do you make of this,that Temptations are ſo dangerous?

A. Firſt, to teach us not to tempt any, *Prov.*16.29.Secondly, to be carefull we do not conſent when we are tempted, *Prov.*1.10.Thirdly,to keep our heart with all diligence, Prov. 4 23. for ſin doth eaſily beſet us, and tempt us, Heb 21.2.Firſt, we muſt give the tempter a peremptory deniall at firſt, *Mat.*4.10. Secondly, we muſt back our denialls with reſiſtance, Iam 4.7. Thirdly, and what though we have reſiſted again and again? we have not reſiſted unto bloud, Heb 12.4. and therefore we muſt continue reſiſting with ſtedfaſtneſſe, 1 *Pet.*5.9.Fourthly,we muſt look upon temptations as warriours againſt our ſouls, that ſo we may abſtaine from yeelding to them; counting our ſelves ſtrangers upon the earth, and ſuch as have nothing to do to be paddling in the world, *Pet.*2.11. Fifthly, we muſt give no advantage to Satan, 2 *Cor.*2.11. neither by giving him matter, 1 *Cor.*7.5. nor occaſion, *Gal.*5.13. nor any pretence, *Exod.*10.26.nor by want of obſerving his houre, *Rom.*3. 10. nor by making proviſion for the fleſh, Rom 13.14. Sixthly, we muſt take unto us the whole armour of God, *Eph.*6.13. knowing the Devil hath many wiles,verſe 11.having on us the girdle of truth, the breſt-plate of righteouſneſſe,verſe 14. the preparation of the Goſpel of peace, verſe 15. the ſhield of faith, verſe 16. the helmet of ſalvation, and the ſword of the ſpirit, verſe 17. praying with all prayer, verſe 18. and humbling our ſelves, and in particular for our originall corruption; David went to that, when he ſaw he had bin tempted to Adultery and Murder, Pſalm 51.5. keeping our ſelves from vain company, Pſalm 119.115. taking heed of melancholy, labouring to be chearefull, *Prov.*17.22.not to be too ſolitary, *Eccl.*4.10.

Q. 177. Is a man naturally under the power of Temptation?

A. Yea, the fleſh is too weak to reſiſt it, *Mat.*26.41. and ſo is the heart, *Ezek.*16.30. an inticing word is able to enforce us, Prov 7.21. Firſt, becauſe our will is naturally ſtrong ſet to the things of this life, as eaſe,and credit, and friends, and riches, &c. 1 *Tim.*6 9. yea and to ſinne it ſelfe, naturally we cannot ceaſe from it, 2 *Pet.*14. Secondly, becauſe naturally we do not love the commandements of God, nor any ſaving truth; and therefore the leaſt temptation that comes to draw us from it is ſtrong, 2 *Theſſ.*2.10,11. Thirdly, our minds naturally are without knowledge of the danger, *Prov.*9.18. and therefore temptations are ſweet to us, verſe 17. from hence we may ſee, that woe is them that are in the fleſh, becauſe they are ſo ſubject to pleaſe their own ſelves, that they cannot pleaſe God, *Rom.*8.8. Again, the Saints hence ſhould labour to get their natures healed more and more, becauſe they have ſtill ſome remainders of bruitiſhneſſe, whereby they are ſubject to be tempted by ſenſe, *Pſal.*73.22. ſigns of perſons under the power of temptations, are firſt, to be uſually ſtirred up by them, 2 Kings 21.25. Secondly, when the Devill and his inſtruments can undertake to overcome them by temptations, 1 Kings 22.21.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, when the Devil like a ſtrong man can doe it with eaſe, without any a doe, he can lead them hand-ſmooth, Luke 11.21. Fourthly, when they can endure the firſt itchings of temptations without rooting of them out, 2 *Tim.*4.3. Fifthly, when they can pray with eaſe, and heare with eaſe, and be in company with eaſe and alone with eaſe, they are not put to it, whereas Paul went groaning up and down, *Rom.*7.24.

Q.178. Is it any excuſe, to ſay we were tempted?

A. No, for firſt, the Commandement calleth for obedience, though we be never ſo much tempted to diſobey it; temptations do not weaken the bond of Gods law, *Prov.*1.10. Secondly, the firſt leſſon of the Goſpel telleth us, we are not for Chriſts turne, except we will deny all temptation, yea though ſelfe doe tempt ſelfe, Luke 6.23. Thirdly, ſin is of a damning nature, though all the temptations in the world concurre to egge us to it, though feare, though ſhame, &c. Luke 9.26. Fourthly, there's no thanke in that obedience that we have no temptations to draw us from, but bleſſed is he that endureth temptation, James 1.12. Fifthly, what excuſe can that be, when the very temptations themſelves come from our own luſting hearts? James 1.15. or elſe we put our ſelves upon temptations; as firſt, by not marrying in the Lord, 1 *Kin.*11.4. Secondly, by being idle and out of our callings, as David was upon the rooſe of his houſe, 2 *Sam.*11.2. Thirdly, by putting our ſelves upon dangerous callings, as keeping of an Inne, or an Ale-houſe; in this caſe we ſhould ſay as Chriſt ſaid, who made me a Judge? Luke 12.14. Fourthly, by going about actions without warrant, as Dinah, *Gen.*24.1. or by being in tempting places without ground, as Peter, *Mat.*26.69. Fifthly, by not keeping the communion of Saints when we may; what tempted Thomas to unbeliefe but his abſence from the ſociety of his fellow Apoſtles? John 20.24. Sixthly, by doing that which another may lawfully do, yet as things ſtand, we may not lawfully do it. Abraham might look towards Sodom, Gen. 19.28. but Lot might not, verſe 27. God does not forbid every man the comming neare the houſe of a whore, for ſome can go cloſe by her doore without any temptation to go in, but ſome he does, Prov 5.8. But if a man have a calling to a ſtation full of temptations he is in Gods way, which is ſtrength to the upright, Proverbs 10.29. the Angels take charge of the Saints, while they are in their way, *Pſ.*91.11. Though Ahabs houſe were a houſe full of temptations, yet Obadiah having a calling to be there, feared the Lord greatly, 1 *King.*18.3.

Q.179. Why doth God permit men to be tempted?

A. That he does permit men to be tempted, is plain in the example of Eve, 2 *Cor.*11.3. and of Hezekiah, 2 *Chron.*32.31. and ſpecially of the wicked, *Act.*14.16. and the reaſons are, firſt, becauſe he is not bound to keep men from being tempted, he made man upright, *Eccl.*7.29. Secondly, becauſe he may juſtly do ſo, ſeeing men have ſinned againſt him; as when Iſrael had ſpared the Canaanites contrary to his command, he left them to be tempted by them, *Judge.*3.1. Chriſt left Peter to be tempted by a damoſell, for he preſumed of his ſtrength, *Mat.*26.33. and therefore, Firſt, let us pray, Lord, leave us not, Pſalm 27.9. If we be foiled at any time, we may thank our own ſelves, for he hath made us a promiſe not to ſuffer us to be tempted above what we are able, 1 *Cor.*10.13. and therefore we wrong our own ſoules, if we do not flye to it and ſue it forth; for if we be his, he hath ſaid, He will not ſuffer our foot to to be moved, Pſalm 121.8. Again, ſecondly, let us watch, *Mat.*26.41. If he do but leave us to be tempted, and grapple with temptation, we are gone; if he ſhould but ſuffer our feet to ſlip, they will ſlip for certain; and therefore let us watch towards him, who hath ſaid, he will not ſuffer them, Pſalm 66.6. Thirdly, let us beware leſt we provoke God to permit us to temptation; let us take heed we be not joyned to a luſt, for then God will ſay, Let them alone, *Hoſ.*4.17. Fourthly, this is a comfort, that we cannot be tempted except God permit; No, not by Satan, Job. 1.12 God hath Satan in a chaine, Iob 2.6. he can doe nothing except Chriſt give him leave, Marke 5.

for

Q. 180. How ſhall we know, whether a temptation flow from our ſelves or from Satan?

A. This queſtion is ſomewhat dangerous, for any evil, yea Blaſphemy it ſelfe may proceed from our own heart: *Mat.*15.19. and yet it is ſome ſigne it is from Sathan; firſt, when a man is tempted to that which he is naturally averſe from, *Mat.*4.6 Secondly, when the temptation is ſuddain, like a flaſh of Lightning, Luke 4.5. Thirdly, when the temptation comes without any coherence with that which one was thinking upon, Sathan cares not what he moleſteth one with, for he ſtands at ones right hand there ready for the nonce, *Zach.*3.1. Fourthly, when a temptation is in a hurrying manner, skipping from one thing to another, when it is with importunity, like ſummer Flies upon a ſore, or a Bald-head when it is as though it would never have done, Luke 4.2. Fifthly, when it is with the deluſion of the ſenſes, *Mat.*4 8. Now the way to beat the Devil off, is not to rayle at him, Jude 9 but firſt by Faith, 1 *Pet.*5.9. Not by a naked quoting of Scripture, for he will quote Scripture himſelf, and put a falſe gloſſe upon the ſame, Luke 4.10. but Secondly, by ſo quoting it, as to cleave by obedience unto, it, verſe 12. not by making of croſſes on our breſt, for how can that drive him away, when Chriſts own bodily preſence did not feare him away? verſe 9. but thirdly, by a ſtout and peremptory deteſtation of his motions to abandon him, verſe 8. and fourthly, by conſidering that Chriſt was in all points tempted as we are, ſinne onely excepted, *Heb.*4.15. and fifthly, though the Devil can find a great deale of matter for him in us, yet he could find nothing in Chriſt, John 14.30. Sixthly, by looking at the end that the Lord will make, *Jam.*5.11. for though Sathan be not under our feet, yet he ſhortly ſhall, Rom 16.20.

Q.181. Whether do theſe two clauſes, Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from all evill, make but one Petition?

A. Firſt, it matters not much whether they make but one or no; for it is a ſigne of Pride to ſtrive about words, 1 *Tim.*6.4. Secondly, 'tis more likely that they make but one Petition, and that is, as our Saviour ſummes both the clauſes up in one, that our heavenly Father would keep us from the evil, John 17.15. For firſt, the one clauſe is Negative, and the other Affirmative; now the Negative and Affirmative make but one truth As we ſee in this paſſage Thou ſhalt dye and not live, Iſa.38.1. Secondly, our Saviour does not put them down copulatively, Lead us not into temptation, and deliver us from evill; for then they mought have ſome colour of being two; but he unites them with a But, as though the firſt were not a whole Petition without the ſecond, Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evill, Luke 11.4. Thirdly, it is enough to ſay, it is one Petition conſiſting of two parts. The one for preventing Grace, to prevent us from falling into evil, the other for recovering Grace; that at the furtheſt, if we fall into evil, yet howſoever the Lord would deliver us out, according to that of the Pſalmiſt, *Pſal.*37.24. Fourthly, that conceipt of the Papiſts to make ſeven Petitions in the Lords Prayer, according to the number of the ſeven Graces of the Spirit, is but frothy, for there be many more graces of the Spirit. His grace is manifold, 1 *Pet.*4.10.

Q.182. Becauſe this laſt clauſe ſheweth that we are naturally under the power of evill, whereof the Devill is the Captain; ſhew me then, how that naturall men are under the Power of the devil?

A. He hath his Shop-houſe in all the children of diſobedience, and he worketh in them, *Eph.*2.2. yea, he reignes and rules in them; for the Devil hath his Kingdome, and in whom hath he it, if not in them? *Mat.*12.26. For first, the Lord the just Judge turnes them over to the Devil, because they will not be ruled by him, therefore the Devil shall have them to rule over them; yea he shall be their God, though they be blind and see no such thing, 2 Cor 4. 4. and he gives the Devil charge over them, as he gives the good Angels charge over the godly, Ps 91. 11. Secondly, because the Devil can find none that will do his workes but onely them, Joh. 8. 44. and therefore great is their misery; for first, they are his Slaves, and he holds them captive at his will, 2 Tim. 2. 26. Secondly, they are so tyrannized over and kept under by him, that he will not let them look after Heaven, or any good to any purpose; he doth oppress them Act. 10. 38. Thirdly, he hath power over their death, that they shall never dye well, though they seem to dye never so well, Heb 2. 14 Fourthly, he leads them, though they little think it; he that lyeth, little thinks he that the Devil filleth his heart, and yet he doth, Act 5. 3. Idle persons and tatlers, 1 Tim. 5. 13. little think they that they turn after Sathan, and yet they do verse 15. he that committeth sin, littles thinks he that he is of the Devil, and he is, 1 Joh 3. 8. enemies of righteousnesse, they little think that they are the children of the Devil, and yet they all be, Act. 13. 10. For first, the Devil is a Spirit, and therefore he can be in the wicked, and they never spy it, Rev. 16. 14. Secondly he can transforme himselfe into an Angel of light; and therefore he can make them believe, he is a good Spirit, 2 Cor. 11. 14.

Q. 183. Are there no more evils that we have need to be delivered from?

A. Yes, the whole world is full of evils, Joh. 17. 15. we can walk in no way but there be many evils attending upon it to defile us, and happy is he that is undefiled with them, Psal. 119. 1. We cannot tread one step, but there be evils ready to have dominion over us, except the Lord deliver us therefrom, verse 13. 3. First, in our outward callings, as we are in danger in being overmuch, or not enough in them, of savouring them too much, so that we cannot savour the word, the Sacraments, and Sabbaths, for fleshly feare and distrust; grasping too many things, Improvidence, hampering our selves with the wicked, so that happy is he whose God is the Lord, for he is faithfull to keep one from the evil, 2 Thess. 3. 3. Secondly, in Prosperity, we are apt to think we shall dye in our nest, Job 29. 18. hoping it will not end yet nor yet; we are apt to be vain, and delicate, and tender, and unhardy, to forget the afflictions of Joseph, to be selfe-confident, to prize heaven the lesse, to be the unfitter for humiliation, and the other irksome duties of Mortification; such evils wise Agar saw in being full, Prov. 30. 9. Thirdly, in adiversity to be impatient, discontented, to be moping, to use unlawfull means, to be Pusillanimous and base, to be dead to good things, David himself in his affliction found a want of quickening, Psal. 119. 107. Fourthly, in our eating and drinking, as the Israelites minds ranne upon their Onyons and Garlick, and flesh-pots, their soul loathed the Manna; when we drink, we are ready to be caught with the redness of the Wine, when we eat as Esau with the redness of the Pottage, at feasts we are subject to forget feare, we are in danger of Intemperance, curiosity, pleasure; and therefore blessed is he that hath Faith in Gods word, to pray that his meat may be sanctified, 1 Tim. 4. 5. Fifthly, in our delights and recreations to be too jesting, and light, and tickled, immoderate, unseasonable, over-long, to be unfitted thereby to graver and seriouser things, which are great evils, for they do exceedingly dead us towards Christ, 1 Tim. 5. 6. Sixthly, in our company to be infected some way or other, and carried away, Gal. 2. 13. Seventhly, when we are alone, Eccl. 4. 10. though the more Grace we have, the lesse we are alone when we are alone, Joh. 16. 32. Eightly, when we are about godly duties, there be evils about us too, and therefore we had need to take heed, Luke 8. 18.

Q. 184. It appeares then, GOD is the onely deliverer?

A. Yes, Psal. 70. 5. for first, he is strong enough; Kings and Princes are not able to be deliverers, 2 Kings 6. 27. He onely is our Rock, and therefore our onely onely deliverer, 2 *Sam.*22.2. Secondly, in him onely may we truſt for deliverance, Pſal 144 2. and therefore, Firſt, we ſhould fly onely to him for deliverance, *Pſal.*50.15. Secondly, this condemnes them that fly to any other for deliverance; It is a heavy curſe when a man is given up to ſuch a reprobate ſenſe as to goe any where elſe, Judg 10.14. if we be delivered at any time, let us take notice that our deliverance cometh from him, and let him have a ſong of Praiſe, *Pſal.*32.7. Fourthly, let us labour to be ſuch as he may be willing to deliver; as firſt, let us ſee our ſelves utterly undone without him, 2 *Chron.*20.12. Secondly, let us climbe up to mount Sion, deliverance dwells there, Ioel 2.32. Thirdly, let us ſet our ſelves to be holy, Obad 17. Fourthly, let us be importunate with God not to tarry long before he deliver, Pſal 40. 17. and yet Fifthly, wait too till he is pleaſed to deliver, *Lam.*3.26. Sixthly, let us look to the Holy one, *Iſa.*31.1. Seventhly, if any deliverance be offered any other way, let us not accept it, *Heb.*11 35. the Lord doth deliver, Firſt, by keeping away the evil, *Iob.*33.17. Secondly, by removing it away when it is come, *Pſal.*51.14. Thirdly, by diſanulling the force of the evil, *Dan.*3.27. or the hurtfulneſſe of it, Marke 16 18. Fourthly, by altering of the nature of it, and turning it to good, *Gen.*50 20. Fifthly, by taking one away from the evil, 2 Kings 22.20. which few men doe conſider, *Iſa.*57.1. And therefore firſt, God hath more wayes to deliver his people then one, *Pſal.*44.4. Secondly, though never ſo many wayes of deliverance be blockt up, yet let Faith ſay, God hath another way yet, Eſther 4 14. for God is skilfull and well verſt in delivering his, 2 *Pet.*2.9. Thirdly, let our Faith be indifferent; may be God will be with us in trouble, and that is a deliverance, *Pſal.*9.15. may be God will keep us in it, and that is a deliverance, *Pſal.*25.20. may be he will keep us from ſinking, and that's a deliverance too, *Pſal.*69..14.

Q. 185. What doe you learne from theſe words, For thine is the Kingdome, the Power, and the Glory?

A. That prayer is to be preſſed with arguments, as Moſes his Prayer was, Exod. 32.11,12,13. ſo was Aſa's, 2 *Chron.*14.11. Firſt, becauſe God is a God of infinite underſtanding, and therefore when we ſpeak unto him, we had need to ſpeak reaſon, Iob 13.3. Secondly, becauſe Prayer is a pleading, which muſt be full of good reaſons, *Iob.*23.4. Thirdly, becauſe Prayer is a main part of Gods ſervice, which is reaſonable, Rom 12.1. for even a mortall man ſtands much upon reaſon, Iob 32 11. much leſſe hath the wiſe God delight in fooles, *Eccleſ.*5.4. Therefore firſt, we ſhould well ponder our Prayers; before we doe pray them, David calls his Prayers his meditations, *Pſal.*5.1. we muſt ponder upon what ground we come to God, otherwiſe he will ſend us away without hearing, Iudg 10.14. we muſt ponder what correſpondency we have with him, otherwiſe he will indite us of Impudence, for our comming into his Courts, *Ier.*11.15. when we Pray to him rightly, God ſayes, Come let us reaſon together, Iſa 1.18. Secondly, hence we ſee that wicked men, be they never ſo learned, and gifted in Prayer, yet they cannot Pray, for lack of Spirituall reaſon, they are unreaſonable men, 2 *Theſ.*3.2. That is a comfort to good Chriſtians, that have the Lords attributes all on their ſide, for God will be ſure to heare ſuch, *Ioh.*9 31. Hence it is that they doe not faint in Prayer, as others doe, becauſe their reaſons are never exhauſt, they have ſtill more and more reaſon, Luke 18.17. Iacob had ſuch reaſons that he would not let the Lord goe, *Gen.*32.26. The Prophet Iſaiah his mouth could never be ſtopt, he had ſtill more and more to ſay and preſſe the Lord with, *Iſa.*62.1. and therefore, firſt, when we have a good argument, we ſhould lie a tugging with it, and follow it hard, as Ioſhua did, Ioſh 7.6.9. Secondly, when our arguments ſeeme to be anſwered, we ſhould recover them againe, *Mat.*15.22,23,24.

ſhewing, that they are more wilful than blind. What wilt thou ſay now, ſaith S. Chryſoſtome? thou knoweſt not what things are to bee done? thou both knoweſt them, and willingly refuſeſt to walk in them. The third is taken; ab experientiâ, from experience, experience tells us, that the wicked are more wilfull than blind! wherefore elſe could Elias, that was a Prophet thirty years, and Eliſha that was a Prophet in his room ſixty years, wherefore could they do no more good upon the people? Wherefore does St. John after his ſo many ſcores of years teaching, break off with this ſpeech? Hee that is filthy let him bee filthy ſtill, Rev. 22. 11. The Drunkard hears us preach againſt drunkenneſſe, and hee will not obey; the Blaſphemer hears us preach againſt Blaſphemy, and hee will not bee reformed, the Church-ſleeper, hath heard his Church-ſleeping condemned, and yet hee will not mend it. If Nero could not endure Veſpaſian, becauſe hee ſlept at his muſick, how can God endure ſuch as ſleep at his Word? yet no reſtauration.

Hierom & Nicephorus.

Whence wee ſee, that the will is more corrupt by wilfulneſs, than the underſtanding by blindneſs; The heart is deceitful above all things, Jer. 17. 9. Above all things; That is, the heart is corrupt above all things, namely, the will above all things elſe, and therefore above the underſtanding. The heart of the wicked is like an Oven, as hot as fire, Hoſ. 7. 6. That is, the will is like a red hot Oven, where all ſinnes are baked with the heat of Concupiſcenſe. And therefore wicked men are very oft ſaid to walk after the ſtubbornneſſe of their heart, Jer. 9. 14. Jer. 11. 8. Jer. 13. 10. Jer. 18. 12. Jer. 23. 17. Eccl. 11. 9. There bee three reaſons why the will is more corrupt of the twain.

1 Ratione Originis, becauſe the Will was it that firſt rebelled againſt God, for the Serpent could not have deceived the underſtanding of Eve, unleſs ſhee would; the underſtanding as long as it was in innocency could not be deluded by the Devils guile, unleſs it would; for otherwiſe God had made the underſtanding imperfect with a ſinful ignorance; the underſtanding it ſelf like a natural agent, underſtands, and works, ad ultimum virium, as well as it can, and it ſuſpends not its conſideration it ſelf; now it is the Will only that is eſſentially free, and a free worker of its own works; and now freely itching to ſinne by its private influence into the underſtanding, ſuſpends it, not to conſider, and libertate participatâ, by participated freedome, not to obſerve Satans policy. Thus Adam and Eve, willingly guld, ate the forbidden fruit, and firſt ſinning willingly, they and wee are moſt puniſhed in the will, moſt corrupted in will. And therefore all ſinne is devolved upon the heart, as the firſt inward cauſe thereof. The Atheiſm of the Atheiſt is caſt upon the heart; The fool hath ſaid in his heart there is no God, Pſal. 14. 1. The miſcheif of the miſchievous is turned upon the heart, But miſchief is in their hearts, Pſal. 28 3. the Iniquity of the vain man is truly fathered upon the heart; His Heart gathe-reth iniquity to it ſelf, Pſal. 41. 6. Our Saviour Chriſt ſets all corruption upon the hearts ſcore; Out of the heart proceed evil thoughts Murthers, Adulteries, Fornications, Theſts, Falſe Witneſſes, Blaſphemies, Mat. 15. 19. St. Chryſoſtome addes more, Reviling, touchy, teaſty words, filthy talking, &c. And I may adde, Out of the heart proceeds drunkenneſſe, and company keeping, &c. That is, out of the Will, for the heart is commonly put for it. Λοιδορία ἢ ῥήματα ῥυπαρὰ &c.

2 Ratione Reatus, becauſe the will is it that indeed is guilty of all the evil in the ſoul, yea of all the ſaid errors, and ignorance of the underſtanding, and therefore ſaith God of the wicked; They do always erre in their heart, Pſal. 95. 10. Errour is not in the heart, but in the minde, and underſtanding; but ſays the Text, They do err in their heart; becauſe they do erre, and they would err. They walked in the Counſels and Imaginations of their evil heart, Jer. 7. 24. Counſels and imaginations are properly in the underſtanding and minde, and not in the heart; but ſayes the Text, They walk in the Counſels and Imaginations of their evil heart. For the underſtanding, as it ſayes the ſin is delightfull, and gainfull to fleſh and bloud; ſo it would ſay alſo, that it is forbidden by God, and puniſhed with death; but the will gives ear to that word, the pleaſingneſs and the profit of ſinne, but will hear no more, or elſe bridles the underſtanding, that it conſiders no further. And therefore theſe broken Counſels, the imaginations by halves, as interrupted ones of the heart, are of the heart. Hereupon it comes to paſs, that as the will is free by native diſpoſition, and the underſtanding free by participation; ſo is the underſtanding blinde, and ignorant, and deceived ſubjectively by innate errour, and the Will by a circular communication. And ſeeing the Will is guilty of all the evil in the Soul, all the blame God layes upon the will, and plagues it with the ſoreſt ſpiritual plagues, that it is moſt wilful.

3 Ratione ipſius, In regard of it ſelf, becauſe the will was beſt while it was good, now it becomes worſt when it is bad. As a good King is the beſt of men, ſo a wicked Tyrant is the worſt of men. A good heart is Gods; My Sonne give mee thy heart, Prov. 23. 26. A wicked heart is the devils; Satan hath filled thy heart, Act. 5. 3. Every conceit of the underſtauding is not evil; But every imagination and thought of the heart is onely evil continually, Gen. 6. 5 The heart is the fountain, Jam. 3. And when God would curſe all the rivers and ſtreams, hee curs'd the fountain, the heart. Now as in a corrupt fountain, the nearer yee come to the fountain head, the more corrupt the water is, ſo the nearer the heart, the more corrupt. And therefore the outward actions being corrupt, the outward members are more corrupt, they being corrupt, the fancy is worſe corrupt; that corrupt, the underſtanding is worſe corrupt; that being corrupt, the affections are ſtill worſe and worſe corrupt; and they being corrupt; the heart is worſt of all corrupt; for that is the fountain. Out of the abundance of the heart the minde thinketh, the ſenſe remembreth, the fancy imagineth, the mouth ſpeaketh, the hand work- Corruptio optimi, peſſima. Τὸ περισσὸν τοῦ ἐνδόλου. Chryſ.

eth, the foot walketh, out of the abundance of the heart; ſo that that which is at all in the other faculties and members of the man, is in abundance in the heart.

Whence again wee ſee that the will doth not alwaies follow the underſtanding; for the Wiſe-man preſuppoſeth that a mans underſtanding may bee right, and yet the will not follow it; and therefore hee ſaith, Bee yee wiſe, and refuſe it not. Prov. 8. 33. Thus how many thouſands, their own knowledge, yea and their own conſcience haling them from, yet will run upon ſin: The envious, revengeful, malicious man, his own knowledge teſtifies againſt this ſin, and yet hee will revenge; his own conſcience reproves him for this ſin, and yet hee will bear malice. The lukewarmling, and the civiliſt, his own knowledge in the Scripture tells him, hee muſt live holier and ferventlier, his own conſcience checks him for not living better, and yet hee will not live better; like the knowing Phariſees, Yee are of your Father the Devil, and the luſts of your Father yee will do, Joh. 8. 44. Indeed its true, that the will muſt needs follow one dictate or other in the underſtanding, for it cannot ſee its object but by the underſtandings ſpectacles. Nevertheleſs the underſtanding having nothing but a political or ſuaſive power over the will, it can but tender the diſ-junction, and leave the aſſumption to the wills choice, for any imparative power that it hath. As for example, worldlineſs, true, it is a gainful ſin, you may bee better to live to the eye of the World, that you may get by it: but then it is a dangerous -- ſayes the underſtanding. Let mee have it, let mee have it, ſayes the will; I will cark, I will care for the World, &c. This I will do, I will pull down my barnes, and I will build greater, and there will I beſtow all my fruits, and my goods, Luk. 12. 18. and then I will ſay to my ſoul, &c. ver. 19. I grant likewiſe, that an inordinate act of the will preſuppoſeth an errour in the underſtanding too; I ſay, an errour in the underſtanding, but not alwayes an erring underſtanding; it preſuppoſeth errorem materialem, non ſemper formalem, in caſe the will immediately before this inordinate act were an incorrupt will, and the underſtanding an inlightened underſtanding, as the Angels, and Adam before their fall. It is a goodly Apple, fair to ſee to, ſweetly likely to taſte on, and the Serpent tells mee I ſhall not dye, ſayes the underſtanding: Well, I will put it to the hazard, I will eat it, ſayes the Will. Theſe were the ſeeds of an errour, but not an errour it ſelf, till by the wills intervening itch, the underſtanding began to bee darkened in a moment. Now that the will, will not follow the underſtanding alwayes, may appear by theſe reaſons:

1. Becauſe the bleſſed Angels, albeit extrinſecally they bee confirmed in grace, and by the vertue of extrinſecal actuating, are finally, and infallibly, and intrinſecally ſettled in their wills upon grace, yet they have an inbred radical mutability of will poſſibly to depart from the grace revealed.

2. Becauſe, if the will muſt needs follow the underſtanding, then there could bee no ſin in the will againſt knowledge, much leſſe the

diſtinct

diſtinct and illuminate knowledge, which is to bee ſeen in the ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt, wherein the wilfulneſſe of the will, lifts up the heel againſt the very face of more ſpecial knowledge. And although there bee ignorance, yea the myſticalleſt and devilliſheſt ignorance of all ignorances, admixt with that knowledge, yet that ignorance is not the cauſe, but a concomitant of the wilfulneſs, eſpecially quatenus, as it is a ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt.

3 Becauſe the will is ſo far from following the Underſtanding, that the more the Underſtanding is in goodneſs, the ſtouter the will is, as is evident by the wicked, who the more they grow learned, and Doctorly, the further they are from the maſtery of their corrupt Wills. Some of the deepeſt heads, that could anſwer all the Objections in their brains, by their extracted Science out of the Word of God, that any carnal man can bring to perſwade them to live in any one ſin, and declare that they muſt live ſo and ſo, if they themſelves mean to be ſaved, yea and in this particular, at this particular time, together with all the circumſtances of Preſſe knowledge, yet notwithſtanding, have unſanctified hearts, and therefore Salomon having charged us to be wiſe in underſtanding, hee chargeth us alſo to be wiſe in heart, Prov. 8. 5. yea, the good Saints of God, the more knowledge they have, the more their wills grow reſty from zeal, or from the ſtrength of zeal that they had before, notwithſtanding that grace hath abated the violence of their reluctant wills, and given it a mortiferous blow. I know that learning and knowledge puffeth up, and caſts a miſt before the eyes of the underſtanding, yet this doth not hinder the truth of the poſition, that the heart is more wilful, then the minde is blinde; bee it that the minde is blinded, yet the wilfulneſſe growing upon the knowledges ſtature, ſheweth plainly, that it is the more wilful of the two, the knowledge of ſaving Grace being not ſo adverſe to the fleſh as the practiſe thereof, and therefore Salomon having bidden us get Knowledge, hee commands us to love it with our heart, Get underſtanding, Prov. 4. 5. And love her, and ſhe ſhall preſerve thee, verſ. 6.

4 Becauſe the argument of them which hold the will muſt needs follow the laſt dictate of the underſtanding, may be retorted upon themſelves, They ſay, it muſt and does: becauſe the Sinner never ſins a ſinne, which his underſtanding knows is a ſinne, and that a perilous ſinne to his own ſoul, and at this time too, but the Will goes further, and tells him, That it is a delightful profitable ſinne, and there is hope that God will not bee ſo ſtrict with him, as to damn him for it; O! Chriſt dyed for our ſinnes, and God is merciful, and at what time ſoever a ſinner doth repent him, &c. and therefore I may do the ſin; I ſay, this may be recoyled back upon them, becauſe this is but a begg'd dictate, which the will would fain have, and therefore to gratify its luſts, the underſtanding like a partial judge, and a fee'd Counſeller, and a crafty Lawyer, or elſe Fury, pleads, Judges, and counſels, and gives verdict according as the importunat Will would have it.

For

For the underſtanding and will, are ſomewhiles like Simeon and Levi, brethren in euil, ſworn brethren in wickedneſs. The Will will yeild to the Underſtanding in ſome things, and the Underſtanding to the Will in other things, for they are two wicked brats of a wicked parent ſoul. Otherwhiles the Underſtanding and the will are like two diſagreeing hounds in a collar, that neither the Underſtanding will do as the Will would, for ſometimes it is made to underſtand a thing againſt the Will, or ere the Will bee aware of it, nor the Will do, as the Underſtanding preſcribes it. Sometimes the Will deals with the underſtanding, as Nahaſh would with the Gileadites, pluck out its right eye, or draw it ſome other way, or ſhut it ſelf that it may not look upon this or that lust, with Scripture looks, or Bible-glaſſes, but view it only with the left eye, with reſpect to what gain it will bring in, what pleaſure it will afford, what credit it will yeild, what conformity it hath to ſelf-love.

Thus the ſinner will minde the ſin, will conceive the ſin, will invent reaſons to maintain the ſin, why? he would fain commit the ſin: Thus the Will gives the underſtanding its queue, and prompts it, what it would have ſaid, and then follows the advice when it hath done. Lewd things are in his heart, hee imagineth evil at all times, Prov. 6. 14. He imagineth, how ſo? becauſe lewd things were before in his heart. So that now wee may ſee the deſperate eſtate of the corrupt Will: It is not onely ſtupens voluntas, a will in a ſwoun, but dead; ſhew all the light to a dead man, whats hee the wiſer? neither is it enough that the will have a poſſe, a power of willing grace vouchſafed it, for the will is more wilful, then impotent. It is well obſerved by St. Auſtine. The Apoſtle doth not ſay, it is God that worketh in you the poſſe, but the Will: It is not ſaid, God worketh in you the power to will, But it is God that worketh in you the will and the deed, Phil. 2. 3. It is not ſaid, I will put my Spirit into you, and cauſe you to bee able to walk in my Statutes, but Ego faciam ut faciatis, ſaith the ſame father, I will make you to do it, Ezek. 36. 27. The will of it ſelf, the more reaſon it hath to be turned, the more it is wilful, it hinches and winches, and ſnuffes againſt it: For ſinne taking occaſion by the [known] commandement works all manner of concupiſcence, Rom. 7. 8. Nitimur in vetitum, ſemper cupimuſque negata. Like the running torrent, that having nothing to ſtay it, runs the ſlowlier, at ab obice ſævior, but being hindred, runs the fiercelier.

Behold then here, what a ſecret the grace is, that converts this profligat will, which I here preſent you with, and ſo much the rather, you, Loving Sirs, becauſe I would have you have a depoſitum of our Countries thankfulneſs unto you, and ſuch as you are in that famous City, that have like ſo many Joſeſes, brought your mony and laid it down at the Apoſtles feet, to the plantation of the Goſpel in our ignorant coaſts. The bleſſedeſt project that ever could come into any Chriſtian heart; for as the people might go to Gods houſe when the word of the Lord came from Jeruſalem, Eſa. 2. 3. ſo may our people hear it; For the word of the Lord is come forth of your Jeruſalem and proſpers, Bleſſed be our Lumen Angliæ, our Columna literarum, that ſtands in our Country as a Beacon to all, by whom, as a worthy inſtrument, Deus nobis hæc otia fecit. Accept of this poor mite, as a gratulatory Schedule, from my ſelf in ſpecial to the one of you, and from the Country in general to the other of you. And I pray God to move the hearts of more ſuch as may help forward the Work of the Lord.

Hidden

HIDDEN MANNA: OR,
The Myſtery of Saving Grace.

Pſal. 25. 14.
The ſecret of the Lord is with them that fear him, and hee will ſhew them his Covenant.

SAving Grace is a ſecret, that no man knows but the elect, and the elect cannot know it neither, without ſpecial illumination;

1 Special ſhewing, Shew mee thy ways O Lord, ſaith David.

2 Barely ſhewing will not ſerve the turn, but there muſt bee a ſpecial teaching, And teach mee thy paths, verſ. 4.

3 Bare teaching will not avail neither, but there muſt bee a ſpecial incalcutive teaching; Teach me in the ways, to verſ. 8.

4 Inculcative teaching will not do the deed neither, but there muſt bee a ſpecial directive teaching, Guide in Judgement and teach, verſ. 9.

5 Directive teaching will not bee ſufficient neither, but there muſt bee a ſpecial manu-ductive teaching, Lead me forth in thy truth, and teach me, verſ. 5.

6 Manu-ductive teaching will not be effectual, but there muſt be alſo a ſpecial choice teaching, a determinating of the very will; an elective teaching, Him will he teach the way that he ſhall chuſe, verſ. 12.

And what ſecret is this? not common grace, for that is not the ſecret of the Elect, but ſpecial and peculiar Grace.

1 The ſpecial grace of prayer, Unto thee, O Lord, I lift up my ſoul, verſ. 1.

2 A ſpecial grace of Faith, My God, I truſt in thee, verſ. 2.

3 A ſpecial grace of Repentance, Remember not the ſins of my youth, &c. verſ. 7.

4 A ſpecial grace of hope, My hope is in thee, verſ. 21.

5 A ſpeciall grace of continual living in Gods ſight, and dependance upon God, Mine eyes are ever toward the Lord, verſ. 15.

6 Which is the root of all Gods ſpecial and eternal favour and mercy; Remember O Lord thy tender mercy, and thy loving kindneſſes, for they have been for ever, verſ. 6. even Gods ſpecial mercy to him in particular, verſ. 11.

This is the ſecret, The ſecret of the Lord is with them that fear him, and he will ſhew them his covenant; That is, the ſecret favour and grace of the Lord is with them that fear him, and not only with them, but with none elſe, as Kimchi ſpeaks, The Greek tranſlates it, ἐρατοὶς μοι. The Lord is a ſtrength to thoſe that fear him; but as a reverend divine notes upon סוד out of the Hebrew, The ſecret of the Lord is with them that fear him, for God hath hid theſe things from the wiſe and prudent, and hath revealed them unto babes, Whence wee gather this point of doctrin, That ſaving Grace that the children of God have, is a ſecret that none in the world know beſides; ſo ſaith the Wiſe man, Froward people are abomination to the Lord, but his ſecret is with the righteous, Prov. 3. 32. even the ſecret of heavenly grace, which hee hath hid from the wiſe and prudent, ſaith St Hierome, yea the very badge of this ſecret, Job calls a ſecret, The ſecret of God was upon my tabernacle, Job. 29. 4. this is the hidden Manna that the godly eat, Rev. 2. hidden in a pot of gold in the Ark, that is, Chriſt; Heb. 9. This is the white ſtone, and a new name written in it, which no man knows of, ſaving him that receiveth it, Rev. 2. 17. whereby the children of God are abſolved from the wrath to come; a phraſe taken from the Heathen, that uſed to condemn malefactors with black Stones, and for others with white Stones, as Ovid ſpeaks, this therefore is that ſame ψῆφος σαξσα that ſaving pardoning ſecret that no man knows, but hee that receiveth it, and therefore the Children of God are called, Gods ſecret ones, Pſal. 83. 3. This ſecret is called a ſecret three ways.

Mors erit antiquis niveis utriſq; lapillis his damnare reos, illis abſolvere culpa
l. 15. metam.

1 Secret to the eye of ſole nature, and thus it is not meant; for ſo the grace of Chriſt is a ſecret only to Heathens, and ſuch as are as blind as they, for common Chriſtians know it, the rinde of it.

2 Secret to the eye of taught nature, nor thus is it meant; for ſo the grace of Chriſt is a ſecret only to the ignorant ſort of Chriſtians, many Carnal Goſpellers that ſit under a good Miniſtery know it, and the barke of it.

3 Secret to the eye of inlightned nature, and thus it is meant: for ſo the grace of Chriſt is a ſecret to all unſanctified profeſſors, whether learned or unlearned, namely, the pith of it: for though great Doctors and profound Clerks, and deep ſtudied Divines unconverted, know the Doctrin of Grace, and the truth of Grace, though they can diſpute of Grace, and talk of the glory of Grace, yea and taſte a little the good word of Grace, yea and underſtand it generally, it may bee as well as Saint Paul, and St. Peter, as Judas did, yet the ſpecial and the ſpiritual knowledge thereof, for all their dogmatical illumination, is a ſecret unto them, thus The ſecret of the Lord is with them that fear him, and hee will ſhew them his Covenant. And that for three reaſons

The firſt reaſon is taken a naturâ rei intelligendæ, from the nature of this ſecret, and therefore it is called a myſtery, a myſtery kept ſecret, Rom. 16. 25. The wiſdome of God is a Myſtery, even the hidden myſtery, 1 Cor. 2. 7. The myſtery of God, 1 Cor 4. 1. The myſtery made known unto mee, Epheſ. 3. 3. The myſtery of Chriſt, verſ. 4. The myſtery hid in God, verſ. 9 The myſtery hid, Col. 1. 26 a rich glorious myſtery, verſ. 27. The myſtery of Faith in a pure conſcience, 1 Tim. 3. 9. Yea the Goſpel, though fleſhly men may learn and preach it, yet the ſaving knowledge of it is a myſtery that none but Gods Saints knows, the myſtery of the Goſpell, Eph. 6. 19. Yea though the Trinity be known unto the wicked, yet none but Gods children know it piâ cognitione, piouſly, and therefore that is called a myſtery, the myſtery of God, and the Father, and Chriſt, Col. 2. 2. Yea Chriſtian religion though the wicked notional understand it, assentingly beleeve it, yet indeed it is a secret that none but the godly perceive, and therefore called a mystery, even the mystery of Christ, Col. 4. 3. The articles of faith, albeit the wicked can say them by rote, and credit them universally, as for example; the Resurrection, yet none but the holy ones truly beleeve it, and therefore it is called a mystery, 1 Cor. 15. 51. The Judgements of God, though the wicked feel them, and perceive them, yet none but the Heirs of Heaven truly enjoy them, and therefore they are called a mystery, The mystery of God shall be finished, Rev. 10. 7. Popery, howsoever the wicked Protestants some of them know it, and the policy of it, yet none but Gods marked ones see it, to avoid the mystery of it; and therefore that is called a mystery, the mystery of iniquity, 2 Thes. 2. 7. the very Devil himself that would be worshiped as God, would have his mysteries too, τελητὰς ἀπορρήτους saith Dionysius Halicarnasseus, unutterable mysteries. Saint Chrysostome compares the mystery of Christ, in regard of the wicked, to a written book, that the ignorant can neither read nor spell, hee sees the cover, the leaves, and the letters, ὃτι ὅισθεν ἄπερ ὁρᾷ hee understands not the meaning of what hee sees; hee compares the mystery of grace to an indited Epistle, which an unskilful Ideot viewing, hee cannot read it, χάρτην εἶναι μέλαν hee knoweth it is paper, and Ink, but the sense hee perceiveth not; so the wicked, never so learned, they perceive the bark of the mysterie of Christ, but not the inward sense of the spirit, as Theodoret said of the Philosophers, Εἴπασι τῶν ὠδίνων ὀρνίθων, &c. they are like singing Parrots, that can imitate mans voice, but they skill not the meaning; so the wicked can speak gracious things by rote, and understand not what they speak; no, that is a secret; The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him, and he will shew them his Covenant.

The second reason is taken, a modo intelligendi, from the manner of perceiving the secret of Grace, which is spiritual; the natural man receiveth not the things of the spirit of God, neither can hee know them, for they are spiritually discerned, 1 Cor. 2. 14. and hee that doth know the minde of the Lord, that is, the secret, hee must have the minde of Christ, vers. 16. Indeed the wicked that have learning, may perceive and know these things of the spirit, but they know them in a carnal manner, not in a spiritual wise; and howbeit they may reform their outward courses, and cut off many acts of sinne, and like Grace somewhat in their hearts, thus farre, and further may the Carnal man go, being but changed, not renewed. Now they cannot spiritually discern Grace, for in regard of spiritual discerning they are in the dark, even as eyes, saith the same Father ἐαν βόλονται χώρις φοτὸς ὁρᾶν even as eyes, if they would see without light, the eye-sight, and the goodness, and excellency of the ball will not avail to make them see; so the wicked, even the learnedst of them all, they cannot see Grace because they have not the spirit of discerning light, their learning, and their wit, and all their good parts, cannot suffice them to discry this secret; they see it indeed, But seeing see not, and hearing hear not; and perceiving understand not, Mat. 13. 13. Why the knowledge of this secret is not given to them, but only to Christs Disciples, vers. 11. and therefore it is called the Unction of the Holy Ghost; yee have an Unction from the holy one, and yee know all things, 1 John 2. 20. That is, you know all the secret, it is called eye-salve, Anoint thine eyes with eye salve, that thou maiest see, Rev. 3. 18. This same eye-salve, the Phisitians tells us, is an ointment to purge away all filth and fluxes, and ophthalmies out of the eyes, that they may clearly see. κολλύριον

Its called the opening of the eyes, Open thou mine eyes, that I may ſee the wondrous things of thy law, Pſal. 119. 18. Its called the lighting of the eyes, Lighten mine eyes, Pſal. 13. 3. Its called ſeeing, becauſe all the wicked are blinde to this ſecret, And the eyes of the blinde ſhall ſee out of darkneſſe, Eſa. 29. 18. Alas, the natural walks in the blinde ſhadow of death, and is not acquainted with this gracious light; no, that is a ſecret, And the ſecret of the Lord, is with them that fear him, and he will ſhew them his Covenant.

The third reaſon is taken a ſtatu intelligentis, from the condition of the party that muſt perceive the ſecret of grace, hee muſt have another ſecret thing to bee made capable of this ſecret, and that is the new creature, Gal. 6. 15. which is called the hidden man of the heart, 1 Pet. 3. 4. Its called a hidden life; Your life is hid with Chriſt in God, Col. 3. 3. and therefore the word of God is cloſed up in the godly, that the wicked underſtand it not, Dan. 12. 9, 10. they are like ſcrauled blotted Papers that cannot receive. The law is ſealed up in the godlies heart, and the ungodly, whether learned or unlearned cannot read it, Eſa. 29. 11, 12. Seal my Law amongſt my Diſciples, Eſa. 8. 16. A garden incloſed is my ſiſter, my ſpouſe, a ſpring ſhut up, a fountain ſealed, Cant. 4. 12. That is, myſterium, the myſtery ſaith Ambroſe; even the ſigned and ſealed myſtery of Faith and Grace; for as a private letter to a friend contains ſecret matter that no man elſe may read, becauſe it is ſealed; ſo is grace ſealed up, it is under the privy-ſeal of heaven, that no man can break open, but the faithfull, to whom it is ſent. The ſecret of the Lord is revealed to them that fear him, and hee will ſhew them his Covenant.

My firſt uſe ſhall be for inſtruction.

Is Gods ſecret with them that fear him? then the godly are the friends of God. Yee are my friends, if you do whatſoever I command you, John 15. 14. Henceforth I call you not ſervants, for the ſervant knoweth not what his Lord doth, but I have called you friends, ſo I have made all things known unto you, verſ. 15. Myſteriis digni facti eſtis, ſaith Theophylact, I have thought you worthy to bee acquainted with my ſecrets, and Abraham was called the friend of God. Jam. 2. 23. What ſhall I hide from my friend? Shall I hide from Abraham the thing that I do? Gen. 18. 17. μεγίση τὸ θεὸ ἡ συγκατάβασις, ſaith Chryſoſtome, Oh! how greatly God condeſcends to the godly! hee ſpeaks to them as a man would ſpeak to his friend; there is no profitable ſecret that hee will not impart unto them, The ſecret of the Lord is with them that fear him, and he will ſhew to them his Covenant.

Secondly, Is Gods ſecret with them that fear him? then the godly are all one with God: As Oreſtes and Pylades loved one another ſo well, that they were all one with another: Oreſtes was called Pylades, and Pylades was called Oreſtes, ſo are the godly all one with each other: St. Paul calls the Godly, Chriſt, yea Chriſt ſaith as much; That they all may be one as thou Father art in me, and I in thee, that they alſo may bee one in us, Joh. 17. 21. ὡς ἀνθρώποις δυνατὸν ſaith St. Chryſoſtome, ſo farre forth as is poſſible for man to bee one with God; ſo here the honour of the godly, they are admitted to Gods ſecrets to bee one with him. Tiberius Ceſar thought no man fit to know his ſecrets, and yet the Lord vouchſafeth the godly to know his own ſecrets, as Eliſha could tell the ſecrets that were ſpoken in the Kings bed-chamber, 2 King. 6. 12 ſo the godly know the ſecrets of Gods chamber, even of the King of Kings Preſence-chamber. O the honour of the Godly, ſaith a ſweet Father againſt the Perſians, none but noble-men, Lords and Dukes

Dukes might bee made partakers of State-ſecrets; they eſteemed ſecrecy a God-head, a divine thing, ſaith Ammianus Marcellinus, the godly are heavenly Lords, and Nobles, and the Privy-ſtates men of heavens Court, Such honour have all his Saints: for the Kings ſecrets are the glory of the ſubject that is in favour, ſaith Caſſiodore, and the Lords ſecrets are the glory of the godly. The ſecrets of the Lord is with them that fear him, and he will ſhew them his Covenant.

My ſecond uſe ſhall be for Refutation.

Away then with Pelagians and Semi-pelagians, and Arminians, what ſhall I call them? Scabioſum teſſerula far poſſidet. Their griſt is all muſty that ſay, God gives no ſecret thing to any one man more than another, that riſle up all Gods ſecrets, and would have all men ſo many Tireſiaſes, that ſwallow up St. Pauls ὦ βάθος as it were a depthleſs depth. St. Paul cryes out, Oh how unſearchable! Rom. 11. 33. Oh how ſecret are theſe things! and theſe Numicians, Coſmongers, picklock Gods ſecret cloſet; and expoſe his hidden treaſures. St. Paul hee admires, τίς ἔγνω, Who hath known? verſ. 34. who hath known theſe ſecrets, Armenius vel Commagenus Aruſpex pectora divorum rimatur, & exta, as Juvenal the Satyriſt ſpeaks; let mee tranſlate it: Arminius and his company ranſack all Gods ſecrets, divulge and communicate them to the ſeed of the woman, and of the ſerpent all alike, they make Gods eternal love of election, no ſecret, but a vulgar Idea, they make the myſtery of Chriſt, and him crucified, no ſecret, but like an Apothecaries drug. Catholical, they make the eſpecial grace of God, no ſecret, but a common quality; Faith no ſecret, but a generall vertue, repentance and the new creature, no ſecret, but an univerſal gift, no ſecret favour to St. Peter, but make God a party ante, not to love St. Peter more then Judas, no ſecret intent to any one perſon more then another; but that Chriſt might have died for all him, and never a man ſaved, no ſecret working of the Lord in any more than other, but for any thing that either God the father hath done by creating, God the Sonne by redeeming, or God the Holy Ghoſt by ſanctifying, all the world were left to their ſcrambling, take it, if you will, if you will not, chuſe; they ſay God would have men to bee ſaved, but that hee will not work it for his own part, rather for this man, or that man determinately that hee bee ſaved, as Stilpo ſaid that ἄνθρωπός ἐϛι μεδεὶς ὅτε γὰρ ὅδε, ὅτε ὅδε, man is no man, an univerſal is never a man, for its neither this man, nor that man, for why not this man, as well as that man? ſo ſay they, Chriſt died for man, that is indeed for no man, not this, nor that man, for why rather this man, than that man, or that man, more than this man? Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, Paul, and John, and all the * Saints might have been damned for all God: and Eſau, and Ahab, and curſed Herod, might have been ſaved, and, not they, for all him; no ſecret reference to God in this man, rather than that man, but bleſſed Lazarus in heaven, is no more bound unto God, than damned Dives in hell, Num quis te diſcrevit? No ſecret putting a difference betwixt Angel or Devil, but if David bee better than Saul, hee may ſacrifice to his own net: Thus theſe Heretical Opinioniſts, ſchiſmatical Quodlibetiſts, ſo I may call them, are worſe than the Roman blabs that Paulus the Lawyer ſpeaks of, that diſcloſed ſecrets, for they cut all Gods ſecrets at one blow. But we beloved wee, let us hold this as a foundation, For the foundation of God remaineth ſure, and hath this ſeal the Lord knoweth who are his, 2 Tim. 2. 19. The foundation is faith, as St. Ambroſe ſpeaks, and as a foundation is ſecret under God, ſo is faith ſecretly grounded in the hearts

*Man in regard of Gods Grace, is like Pontilian, Sepæ ſalutatus nunquam prior ipſe ſalutas, ſic erit æternum Pontiliane, vale. Martial. l. 5. Ep. 67. Hee was often ſaluted firſt, but hee never began firſt, ſo that he gave a continual farewell. So God often prevents man, but man never prevents him firſt, and were it not for God he would give an eternal farewel to all grace.

hearts of thoſe that are Gods. This ſeal is Gods confirming grace, ſaith Chryſoſtome, and as a ſeal is ſet upon ſecrets, ſo is this grace ſecretly radicated, and abiding in them; this knowing, the Lord knoweth who are his; In the ſecret Election of God, ſaith Haymo, as if the Apoſtle ſhould ſay, though Hymeneus and Philetus; and ſuch like were ὡσφραγίστοι, without ſeal, and erred concerning the faith, and fell off from what they ſeemed to have. Nevertheleſs Gods ſecret is with his, the foundation of God is ſure, and hath this ſeal, the Lord knoweth who are his; For the ſecret of the Lord is with them that fear him, and he will ſhew them his Covenant.

My third Uſe ſhall be for Conſolatio.

Oh! what incomparable comfort is this to Gods people! Gods ſecret is with them, God hath and will reveal his ſecret myſteryes unto them, God hath given them a proſpective Chink to look by into his ſecret things, they are Gods friends, and as they turn my Text in meeter, they know Gods ſecret intent, they are ſo honoured with the Lord, that God hides no good thing from them which is neceſſary for their ſalvation. All the earth is Gods, but ſuch as obey Gods voice are Gods peculiar treaſure, Exo. 19. 5. Gods ſpecial jewels, Segullah it is in the Original, that is Gods proper ones. or Gods ſecret ones that he keeps in ſtore for himſelf, and for eſpecial uſe, κειμήλιον, as the Greek turns it, like a jewel which the King delivers not into the hands of any of his officers, but keeps himſelf in ſecret, ſaith Rabbi Menahim, hee hath choſen them to bee a ſpecial people to himſelf, above all people that are upon the face of the earth, Deut. 7. 6. that is a ſecret people, A choſen generation, a royall Prieſthood, a holy Nation, a peculiar people, 1 Pet. 2. 9. that is a ſecret Nation, his peculiar pearl, Pſal. 135. 4. that is his ſecret gem, all ſhewing for their comfort, that God gives them ſome ſpecial peculiar ſecret grace, that hee gives to none elſe in the world but to them. Chriſt hath given himſelf for them That hee might redeem them from all iniquity, and purge to himſelf a peculiar people, zealous of good works, Tit. 2. 14. that is a ſecret generation. God loves a περιπόιησις, and a ſpecial claim to them, as Syneſius uſeth the word, for to them alone hee maketh known the myſtery of his will according to his good pleaſure Eph. 1. 9. even his ſecret will, and hidden pleaſure. They are Gods portion, Deut. 32. 9. The lot of his inheritance, as a great Inheritor reſerves in ſome ſecret box, or ſome ſecret cloſet, his bonds and writings, hee keeps them ſecretly under lock and key; ſo are the godly. Oh! what a bleſſed and happy eſtate is the eſtate of all that fear God! Doſt thou ſerve God in thy family? Doſt thou ſerve him in thy calling? Doſt thou ſtand to his truth openly, and indear it above all riches privately? Doſt thou make conſcience of every of Gods commandements? fear not, the Lords ſecret is with thee, there is no evill ſhall ever hurt thy ſoul. For in the time of trouble hee ſhall hide thee in his Pavillion, in the ſecret of his Tabernacle; ſhall hee hide thee, and ſhall ſet thee upon a rock, Pſal. 27. 5. Do the proud inſult over thee? Do the wicked Tongues nickname thee? God ſhall hide thee in the ſecret of his preſence from the pride of man, God ſhall keep thee ſecretly in a pavillion from the ſtrife of Tongues, Pſ. 31. 20. Gods grace is a ſpeciall grace to ſuch as you are, and ſuch as you are only. Chriſt Jeſus is your Saviour, for hee will ſave his people, Mat. 1. 21. His ranſom is a ſpecial ranſom, a ranſome not for all, but for many; Mat. 20. 28. His bloud-ſhedding was not ſpecial bloud-ſhedding, not for all, but for you many, Mat. 26. 28. Sanctification is a ſpecial ſanctification, not of all, but of you, Joh. 17. 19. Juſtification is a ſpecial juſtification, not of all, but of you only, his elect elect, Rom. 8. 33. Intercession is a special intercession, not for all, but for you alone, vers. 34. Christ is the head, a spiritual head, not to all, but to you his Church, Eph. 1. 22. Christ his purchasing was a special purchasing, not of all, but of you his church, Act. 20. 28. Christ his prayer is a special prayer, not for all, but for you, John 19. 9. Christs redemption was a special redemption, not of all, but of you that are his Sonnes, Gal. 4. 4. Christ is the author of a special salvation, not to all in general, but to all you that obey him, Heb. 5. 9. Specialiter, saith St. Ambrose, especially for you, whom hee hath made with himself, co-heirs of salvation. It is a secret that God hath given you, none of the wicked in all the world know it, it is a secret favour that he hath vouchsafed you, no covetous, nor drunkard, scrape-penf, nor swearer, nor any ungodly man, or woman in the earth partaketh of it with you.

Bee comforted, then whosoever thou art, that hast given over thy wicked wayes, and betaken thy self to newnesse of Life. For the secret of the Lord is with them that fear him, and he will them shew his Covenant.

But thou wilt say, Alas, thou canst not pray, thou canst not beleeve, thou canst not serve God.

I Answer, Though these things do not openly manifest themselves: yet Gods seed may abide in thee, 1 Ioh. 3. 9. Seed is secret in the ground, and seems to bee hid, yet it sprouts out in its time, and groweth; so grace may bee as hidden seed in thy heart; secretly sown in thy soul.

But thou wilt object again, Alas, I cannot feel any such matter!

I answer, what if thou canst not, it may bee secret as from others, so from thy own sense and feeling, The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him, and he will shew them his Covenant.

My fourth use shall be for terrour to the wicked.

Here's horror to all the ungodly, they are strangers from God, they are not admitted unto Gods secrets. The godly are signed with the Spirit, saith St. Ambrose, a secret obsignatum, Gods spirit is their Sigil, saith Theodoret, a secret seal, they are his Sonnes, and sealed with his Spirit, saith St. Chrysostome, a secret Son-ship. But the wicked have neither secret sign, nor secret Seal, nor secret Son-ship, nor any secret special or peculiar thing of God, they are aliens from God; Reveal not thy secrets to a stranger, saith Salomon, God reveals not his secrets to such as are strangers to him. As Aristotle said of his Acroamaticks, , that they were ἐκδεδομένα set out, but not ἐκδεδομένα set forth; so may I say of the Law, and the Gospel in regard of the wicked, it is expressed, but not expounded to them; now when they rebelliously reject all obedience, hee will close their eyes, and hoodwink both wicked Ministers and people, Esa. 29. 10. Yea the Psalmist curseth them that their eyes bee darkned that they see not, Psal. 69. 23. Pour out thy indignation upon them, and let thy wrathful anger take hold of them, vers. 24. As if hee should say, ipsissimam perditionem, saith Marlorat, let them bee damned, and all with damnation it self, for Gods ways are kept secret from them, and not with them. Art thou a drunkard, and hast not Gods secret to keep the from drunkennesse? here thou seest thou art in the state of damnation? Art thou a worldling, and hast not Gods secret to keep thee from worldlinesse? thou art in the state of damnation: Art thou malicious and a hater of thy brother, and hast not Gods secret to keep thee from it? thou art in the state of damnation? Art thou a Swearer, a lyar, or a luke-warmling, &c. and haſt not Gods ſecret to keep thee from thy ſinnes? thou art in the jaws of hell and vengeance, brutus ſtupor, as Calvin ſpeaks, a brutiſh ſtupidity poſſeſſeth thee, the ſecret of the devil is with thee, thou haſt thy ſecret too, but it is the devils ſecret, thou keepeſt the Devils counſell, O my ſoul, come not thou into their ſecret. Gen. 49 6. Well may ſome bee called the Devils ſecret, for the Devil hath power over the wicked ſecretly, and they perceive it not; the ſecret counſel of the wicked, Pſal. 64. 2. The ſecret of mockers, ſo it is in the original, Gen. 15. 17. as for the ſecret of the Lord, that is with them that fear him, nemini niſi, ſaith Muſculus, with none elſe, The ſecret of the Lord is with them, that fear him, and he will ſhew them his Covenant.

Is the grace of Gods children ſuch a ſecret that none in the world knoweth beſides them? then let mee commit this to the Arminians conſideration; what miſchief hee doth to his own Soul; God ſaith this grace is a ſecret thing, only revealed to his ſecret ones; God ſaith, it is a myſtery opened only to thoſe that are his; God ſaith, it muſt bee ſpiritually diſcerned, and without a ſpecial eye-ſalve can never bee perceived; God ſaith, it is a fountain ſealed up from the men of this world, a book claſped up, that nor learned, nor unlearned can read, but onely they to whom it is eſpecially given from above; God ſaith, it is a depth; it is unſearchable, and a peculiar treaſure, a peculiar pearl, a ſpecial gift; but the Arminian looks for no other grace but what is not ſecret, not peculiar, not ſpecial, but common grace; hee looks for no other grace ſave that which God vouchſafeth to all, even reprobate and all. Oh! what and if this Metaphyſical grace they hazzard their ſouls upon, ſhould prove uneffectual, I beſeech theſe men to chew upon this point; I do not ſay they do debarre themſelves from Salvation, but if they would ruminate this thing ſerionſly, I think they would not dye as they do for ten thouſand worlds, let them hear a little, and I pray let their Conſciences intently ponder.

1 Muſt it bee a ſecret grace of God that the world hath not, if a man bee the child of God? Oh then (I quake to think of it) how do they look to bee the Children of God only with their univerſal grace?

2 Muſt it bee a ſpecial redemption that a man muſt have if he bee redeemed? how do they look to be redeemed with a general?

3 Muſt God give faith in a ſpecial manner, or elſe a man cannot beleeve? how do they look for faith by an univerſal gift?

4 Muſt a man have a peculiar grace, or elſe he cannot bee of the redeemed of the Lord? how do they look for it that do not ſo much as pray for it by their tenent?

5 Muſt a man bee beholding to God in a ſpecial manner; if hee bee choſen out of the world? Oh! how do they look to be vouchſafed, that profeſſe themſelves not ſo much as to conne God any thanks for it?

6 Muſt a man bee determinately converted to God in his will of God, or elſe hee cannot bee converted? how do they look for it that profeſſe they do not look for it from God, but from their own freedome?

7 Muſt Chriſt pray in a ſpecial wiſe for thoſe that are his, that their wills may bee quickned, how do they look to have the will and the deed, that profeſſedly maintain, that they will not bee beholden to Chriſt for his prayers no further, but to have the power of will; yea, and that Chriſt muſt pray them, if hee mean to have the will it ſelf, that do even diſpute the caſe, contend, and give out in effect, that there

They ſalute God with thanks by the halves, like as Apollonius ſalured Decimus by the name of Quintus, Mar. l. 4. Epig. 22. As Martial called Cinna, Dominus, when hee meant no ſuch matter, 5 Ep. 58 ſo theſe men call God Lord, whereas they mean no ſuch matter, but themſelves Lords over their own hearts.

is no ſpecial prayer, nor ſpecial quickning, they will not acknowledge any ſecret matter in it, yea they write, and bitterly do they reaſon it too, that if God do no more to them a priori than to the vileſt damned Caſt-away, give them meerly the Catholique poſſe without any ſpecial eſſe, yet they can bee ſaved. They ſay that they can beleeve, that they can repent, that they can bee converted, is from God; but that they beleeve, that they do repent, that they are converted, is from the liberty of their own wills, But what haſt thou that thou haſt not received? and if thou haſt received it, why boaſteſt thou as if thou hadſt not received? 1 Cor. 4. 7. Well, I will tell thee, if thou boaſteſt thus, ſure I am thou haſt not received it; but thou wilt ſay, as Cornelius à Lapide, That I do beleeve, that I do repent, that I am converted, is from mine own will, but I received the power of God, and I do it by the vertue of that grace which I received of God. Nay, but oh man! the very eliciting and drawing of this act from that which thou haſt received, cannot bee without a ſpecial act of God; for the wicked that have received ſo farre, yea having received further, even this ſecret too, do not beleeve, do not repent, are not converted. Thou beleeveſt thou repenteſt, and not Judas, and not Elimas, Doſt thou? well then, either St. Paul is a lyar, or thou muſt have received more than an univerſal grace, or elſe thou art a lyar, thou beleeveſt not; thou repenteſt not, thou art not converted; Of what boaſteſt thou ſaith Theodoret, of thine eloquence? but God gave it thee: of thy knowledge, but God conferred it on thee; he might go on of thy power of beleeving, but it is the gift of God; of the deed it ſelf, but it is the work of God; of any one ſtock of good that God ſhould joyn with thee upon it, but that was the effect of God too. Saint Peter thou ſayeſt hath Free-will, and Judas hath the ſame: Saint Peter had power of God to beleeve, and Judas hath the ſame; Thus farre God goeth along (thou ſayeſt) with Judas as well as with Peter. St. Peter doth beleeve, and hath faith it ſelf, and Judas hath not; and what now ſay I (and yet not I, but Saint Paul) hath St. Peter, that hee hath not received? and if hee have received it? how can Saint Peter boaſt, that hee hath not received, no more then Judas, that hath not received at all, Saint Peter and Judas, have both free-will of God, there they agree; Saint Peter and Judas have both power of God to beleeve, there they agree too, thou ſayeſt, Judas doth not beleeve, St. Peter doth, there they differ; And who made thee Peter to differ from Judas? Certainly when Saint Paul asked the queſtion, Who hath made thee differ from another? 1 Cor. 4. 7. hee never thought the queſtion could, or ſhould bee ſo anſwered, that thine own will made thee differ from another. Take heed, O man, ſhall a Beggar ſtand at the door and tell thee, hee doth not ſtand in need of this, or that alms, but can help himſelf well enough, without receiving ought from thee; wouldſt thou help him? I trow not to ſuch a boaſting beggar. Alas poor Mendicant! and how doeſt thou look for the τὸ credere, the τὸ reſipiſcere, for the Alms of actual faith, and repentance at Gods mercy gate, and bee at theſe tearms with God? This is to deal with God as concerning grace, as the Egyptians for the watering of their Country, they ſaid they were not bound to the gods for it, but to Nilus. So thou ſayeſt, by this opinion thou art not bound to God for it, but to the freedome of thy will; no, the Pſalmiſt reads us another Lecture, The ſecret of the Lord is with them that fear him. Tremble then, O duſt and aſhes; to diſanul Gods ſecrets, ſhouldeſt thou make ſome mens ſecrets no ſecrets, but ſhouldſt commonly ſpread them, ἐκτέμνεσθαι τὴν γλῶτταν, ſaith Diodorus Siculus, Thou ſhouldeſt have have thy tongue cut out; O what a fearful sinne doest thou run into, if thou dost display the secrets of the Lord of Heaven on this fashion? Dost thou not read of Gods special grace every where in scripture, before thou canst read of any good in any man or woman? As it was said of Pherecides, that hee got his learning by the Phœnycean secrets, so thou mayest finde in Holy Writ, that all the elect got all that they had from Gods special secret, even his special and secret grace: Adam and Evah were faithfull, but was it not first said of God; The seed of the woman shall break the Serpents head? Gen. 3. 15. not -- him, so as Adam and Evah might, if they would break the Serpents head; no, hee shall break it, is a word de facto, He shall break the Serpents head; Seth was faithful, but was it not first said, God had appointed him, Gen. 4. 25. and not Cain? Noah was faithful, but was it not first said, before hee heard one syllable of good in Noah, Noah found grace in Gods sight, Gen. 6. 8. and not others? Abraham was faithful, but had not God first called him, Gen. 12. 1. and not the rest that were in Ur of the Chaldees? Isaac was faithfull, but was it not first said, In Isaac shall thy seed bee called, and not in Ishmael? Jacob was faithful, but was it not first said, I have loved Jacob, and not Esau? Rom. 9. David was faithful, but was it not first said, The Spirit of the Lord came upon David? 1 Sam. 16. 13. Iob was faithfull, but doth not the very Devil acknowledge Gods special blessing to him first? Job 1. 10. &c. Wherefore serves all this, but to teach thee how to beware; lest thou sinne against Gods special secret, O the Lord will not suffer this indignity at thine hands, as to abuse his secrets; even the Devils in Hell, that are called Gods Apes, among the Paynims, they would have their secrets inviolably preserved.

Like Fabulla that having gotten anothers hair, ſwore it was her own hair, Martial. l. 6 Ep. 12. like Fidentinus, that repeated Martials books for his own, l Ep. 30

Pherecydes.

Dionisius Halicarnassens tells us of the Pharii Arcanorum custodes, that looked to the secrets: and verily the sacred Lord of unsearchable glory is tender of his secret. Consider how wretchedly thou wrongest thy Maker, in saying, the reason why one is converted and not another, is from the free arbitrement of the will, for thou robbest God of his secret jewel, The secret of the Lord saith the Psalmist, the secret of the will, so it should bee, sayest thou; that is, the secret cause why this man is converted rather than some other. I beseech thee quake, and dare not so great audacity. Is not mans will said every where to bee passive, and all to magnify this secret? Are not the children of God said to bee elected, called, converted, redeemed, justified, adopted, sanctified? Are not their wils said to bee turned, mollified? All passive, all to shew, all to bee from this secret. Thou that art an Universaller of grace answer mee, Why was Jonas sent to Niniveh, and not to Tarsus? Why was Elias sent to the Widow of Zareptah, when there were other widows in Israel as well as shee? 1 King. 17. was it not of this secret? Why was Paul commanded to go to Macedonia, and not to Bythinia, Act. 16. 7. was it not from this secret? Why hath such and such Countries means of Salvation, and others again for many hundred; nay, thousands of years not? was it not from this secret? Why are some Asses and tools, like beasts in knowledge to their dying day, and others not, is it not from this secret? Again, answer me, Wherefore were all almost that were converted in Scripture then converted, when their own wills were about no such matter, but rather the clean contrary, but only to set up this secret? Pauls will was to persecute grace, then did hee light upon conversion of grace, Act. 9. was it not from this secret? Levi, when he was sitting at the grating receipt of Custome, then he rose to the receipt of grace, Mark. 2. 14. was it not from this ſecret? Were it from the liberty of the Will? then Converſion ſhould bee when the Will is moſt intent upon it; wherefore was the man poſſeſſed with a Legion of devils, turned in the inſtant, could that bee from the firſt choice of his own Will? Mar. 5. 2. nay, hee cryed out againſt Chriſt, verſ. 7. but even then was hee converted, verſ. 13. was it not from this ſecret? Wherefore are Publicans and Harlots oftner ſaved than other orderlyer people, is it not from this ſecret? wherefore was that ſame παλλακὶς τῦ Νέρωνος as Chryſoſtome calls her, and not Seneca? was it not ſtill from this ſecret? Again anſwer mee, why is not every bleſſing of God univerſal, if Saving grace were to bee univerſal? God doth not give ſtrength to all, nor beauty to all, nor wit to all, nor riches to all, nor houſes to all, nor learning to all, nor any left hand favour to all, and will hee give ſaving Grace to all? Shall wee deny that to God, which wee account an injury to offer a denial of to the meaneſt of Gods Creatures? May not a mother love one child more than another; yea while they are conſidered in themſelves both alike? May not a Maſter love one of his ſervants more then another, though reſpected alike? May not a Prince raiſe up a favourite out of the reſt of the people, though circumſtantiated alike? Yea very fowls love ſome young one more than another, though qualified alike; yea the very viper will affect one of her brood more than the reſt, though ſhaped alike; The Sunne doth not ſhine upon all places alike, nor the Moon upon all corners alike; the mother Earth doth not feed all her plants alike but ſome more, ſome leſſe, ſome not at all. And wilt thou ſay that God gives univerſal grace alike, and deny him to do with his own whatſoever hee pleaſeth? The Pſalmiſt here teacheth ye better Divinity, The ſecret of the Lord is with them that fear him, and hee will ſhew them his Covenant. O remember, it is the part of a ſlanderer to diſcover ſecrets, Prov. 11. 13. Prov. 20. 19. and verily thou ſlandereſt Gods wiſe and hidden Counſels, that thus broacheſt all his ſecrets, yea, thou takeſt part with mockers, that revile the Saints, who ſay to the godly; Oh, forſooth, what ſecret have you? Oh, belike you are of thoſe ſpecial ones; even as Eliphas abuſed Job, Haſt thou heard the ſecret of God? and doſt thou reſtrain Wiſdome to thy ſelf? Job 15. 8. What knoweſt thou that wee knew not? What underſtandeſt thou that is not in us? verſ. 9. With us are both the gray-headed, and the aged men, much elder than thy father; ver. 10. Is there any ſecret thing in thee? verſ. 11. yes mocker, there is a ſecret with them, and God reveals it to his babes, and leaves the wiſe and the aged many times in their folly, and it is Gods glory to conceal this ſecret from them, Prov. 25. 1. not as if the godly can, or may pry into Gods ſecret Ark, but this ſecret is the knowledge of their own vileneſs, which Zophar calls the ſecret of wiſdome, Job. 11. 6. This is a ſecret that God reveals to them alone. The ſecret of the Lord is with them that fear him, and he will ſhew them his Covenant.

Grace,

Nero's harlot.

Seeing the grace of Converſion is a ſecret; how comes it about then, that the wicked, that have not this ſpecial ſecret afforded them, are bound to be converted, and ſhall be judged for not being converted?

For anſwer hereunto, I muſt needs uſe a little extravagancy: The Prophet Jeremiah ſaith, Woe bee unto thee, O Jeruſalem, wilt thou not bee made clean? This is a plain queſtion, and therefore ἢ ναὶ ἢ οὐ ὑποκριτέον, the people ſhould anſwer yea, or no; ſuppoſe they anſwer down-right no, we will not bee made clean; then their wilfulneſſe plainly appears, they will not bee made clean: ſuppoſe they anſwer Yea, wee will be made clean; then their wilfulneſs appears to bee double, for they are not only wilful, but lyingly wilful; wee will bee made clean, but when ſhall it once bee, ſaith God? they do but dally with him, ſo that hee is fain to denounce a woe, Woe unto thee, O Jeruſalem; and queſtion again, as being not yet ſatisfied, When ſhall it once bee? It is evident then that they were wilful in their impenitency; They kept not the Covenant of God, and refuſed to walk in his law, Pſal. 78.10. that is, neither did they, nor would they: The wicked refuſe to do Judgement, Prov. 21. 7. They would not hear, Eſa. 28.12. Children that will not hear the Law of the Lord, Eſa. 30.9. And they would not, verſ. 15. They would not walk in Gods ways, neither were they obedient to his word, Eſa. 42. 24. They would not bee ashamed, they would not receive correction, Jer. 5.3. They refuſe to return, Jer. 8.5. They refuſed to hearken, and pulled away the ſhoulder, and ſtopped their ears that they ſhould not hear, Zach. 7. 11. So that here wee ſee the wicked are wilful againſt Converſion; That they are wilful, may be gathered,

Buxtorf. 1 From the corrupt nature of their will; their heart is deſperately wicked, Jer. 17. 9. אנוש that is deadly wicked, ſaith Buxtorfius, Bonorum expectatio nuſquam apparet, ſaith Tremellius, There is no good to bee expected in it; and therefore as it wills ſinne, ſo it will will ſin, and Will will not bee converted. The carnal heart is enmity againſt God, for it is not ſubject to the law of God; neither indeed can bee, Rom. 8. 7. that is, it doth not barely not do good, but it is an enemy of God, it doth not onely not obey, but οὐ δύναται it cannot obey, and why can it not? Quia non vult, as Haymo ſpeaks, becauſe it will not, for [becauſe it can not] is not put as a reaſon of its not obeying, but as a parentheſis, as if he ſhould ſay, It is not ſubject to the Law of God, becauſe it is an enemy, it will not, indeed it is true it cannot, but that's not the reaſon, for it rebels againſt it, Rom. 7. 23. it will not bee made clean. That they are wilful, may be gathered,

Secondly, from the abominable ſpawn of hideous conditions in the heart, for a wicked heart is πανσπερμία κακῶν an alſeminary of ſinnes, an univerſal roe, or ſeed-plot of rebellions. Tell it of new obedience, it ſimply wills not, They would not conſider his ways, Job. 34. 27. urge it, it perverſely wills not, The ungodly man ſcorns judgement, Prov. 19. 28. urge it further, it ſtrongly wils not, A fool rageth, and is careleſſe, Prov. 14. 16. preſſe it yet more, not only outwardly by preaching, but alſo inwardly, by the ſtrange motions of Gods Spirit, it ſtubbornly and contumaciouſly wils not, They reſiſted the Holy Ghoſt, Act. 7. 51. winde into it, and excite it, it maliciouſly, and deſperately wils not, Hee hath done deſpight unto the ſpirit of grace, Heb. 10 29. their will is the very tunnel of hell it ſelf, ſo that the Sinne againſt the Holy Spirit is in the bottome of the heart, and the reaſon why all do not break forth into it, is, becauſe God doth not follow and preſs all the wicked hearts alike with grace.

That they are wilful, may bee gathered, Thirdly, from the Father of their corrupt heart, the Devil, For the Devil worketh and ruleth in the children of diſobedience, Epheſ. 2. 2. It is the devil that poyſoned the heart, and what poyſon hath hee brought into the heart? even like a Serpent, the poyſon that hee hath in himſelf, namely willingneſſe to diſobey, and wilfulneſſe (either actually or radically) in diſobeying, and therefore a wicked heart is wilful upon ſinne, It is dead in treſpaſſes and ſinnes, Epheſ. 2. 1. But what death is that that the Apoſtle tells us, a luſtful deſiring, ſelf-minded wilful death, verſ. 3. ἐπιθυμίαι καὶ νοήμασις τῆς διανοίας ἡμῶν, ſaith St. Chryſoſtome this death is an elective death, dead the will is, and dead would bee, My people love to have it ſo ſo, Jer. 5. 31. whence I deduce this ſure concluſion, That the reaſon why wicked men are not converted, and do not repent, is not becauſe they cannot, but becauſe they will not. The Lord doth not ſay, Canſt thou not bee made clean, but wilt thou not? Indeed a wicked man cannot repent; For, no man can come unto mee except my father draw him, Joh. 6. 44. No man can come unto mee except it bee given to him of my Father, verſ. 65. that is, beleeve in mee ſaith St. Auſtine; Hence it is, ſaith the ſame Father, that the preaching of the Croſs is pereuntibus ſtultitia, to them that periſh fooliſhneſſe, but unto them that are ſaved, it is virtus Dei; every wicked man is like Lazarus dead in the grave, faſt bound, and a ſtone upon him, ἀδύνατος πράγμαλος it being an impoſſible thing to raiſe himſelf again: as a foundered horſe cannot but limp, ſo a wicked heart cannot but be impenitent: Chryſoſt. there is a neceſſity, though not a violent, yet a cruel neceſſity, as Avitor cals it, not as fatal, yet a willing miſtree neceſſity, as Bernard calls it; So that Luther gives the free will of a wicked man in regard of grace, a good title, Res de ſolo titulo, A naked titular thing, no ſuch matter. Yet notwithſtanding, albeit the wickeds will cannot but be impenitent; the cauſe why it is impenitent, is not becauſe it cannot be other, but becauſe it will not be otherwiſe penitent, it doth not repent, and it will not, Sic volo, ſit at pro ratione voluntas ſo I will, this will is the reaſon.

Thou wilt ſay, thou wouldeſt repent, although thou bee a wicked man, I would if I could, but alas I cannot, though I would. Object.

I anſwer three wayes;

Firſt, Haſt thou a will in thee to repent? many will boaſt every one of his own goodneſs, Prov. 20. 6. It may bee ſaid to thee, as Seneca ſaid to his friend, of a wicked yongſter, that ſaid hee would bee good; I do not ſay, ſayes hee; hee lyes, but putat ſe cupere, he thinks hee wills, but hee wills not. Thou ſayeſt thou haſt a will to repent, whom may I beleeve ſaith St. Bernard? truly, I dare not beleeve thee, if thou liveſt in wicked courſes, thou haſt a will to live in them, Thou art a ſcorner and wilt hear no rebuke, Prov. 13. 1. Thou art ſo, and thou wilt bee ſo, thou wilt not be made clean.

Secondly, I anſwer, thou ſayeſt thou art offended with thine own iniquities, I do not deny it, what damned devil is not? Homines vitam ſuam, & amant, & oderunt, wicked men hate their own lives, and love them both at one time, their own conſcience gripes them, and ſo they muſt needs finde fault with themſelves, but then their corrupt deſires tranſport them: Thou doſt not will to bee wicked, and yet thou doſt will to be wicked, like old wife Akko, that ſaid ſhe would not, and yet ſhee would; like a Whore that would bee ſtrange, forſooth. Oh! ſhee will not, and yet it is becauſe ſhee may cogge the more the love of her Paramours. Thou wouldeſt repent, and thou wilt go on in ſinne, thou haſt a ſetled will to ſinne, but a ſorry would, or a months mind to repent; The truth is, thou calleſt for mercy, thou prayeſt, thou repenteſt, for a faſhion to humor thy Conſcience, and ſinne the freelier; For the Soul of the wicked wiſheth evil, Prov. 21. 10.

Thirdly, Thou ſayeſt thou wilt repent: the glutton when hee feels his head to pain him, his panch to burden him, his belches to annoy him, hee will not bee ſuch a glutton again; what ſaith the Stoick? Stomachum illi fecit luxuria, cito tamen redibit in gratiam, his gluttony hath turned his ſtomach a little, hee'l bee friends with his ſinne next time again. The wicked Iſraelites they ſought God, and enquired early after the Lord for a while, Pſal. 78. 34. but how long did it hold? Alas, Their heart was not right within them, they would not abide his Covenant, nant, verſ. 37. Wicked Ahab now hee is faſting and humbling himſelf in ſack-cloath, 1 King. 21. 27. A man would have thought Ahab will now become a new man, but preſently the byas was turned, by and by hee is as bad as ever he was, hee hates Gods Miniſters, 1 Kin. 22. 8. So that ſtill the truth is infallible, that a wicked man, the reaſon why hee doth not give over his ſins, is not becauſe he cannot, but becauſe hee will not.

1 Becauſe hee will never indeed try whether hee can or no, but hee is like Salomons ſluggard, vult & non vult, as the vulgar tranſlates it, hee wils, and hee wils not, Prov. 13. The Soul of the ſluggard deſireth; and [hath] nothing, verſ. 4. There is never a wicked man ſhall be able to ſay to God at the day of judgement, Lord, I would have repented, I did what ever I could to repent, but alas, thou Lord thou knoweſt, I could not: No, The ſluggard lets his field bee overgrown with thorns and nettles, and the wall battered down, Prov. 24. 31. Happily his field is barren ground and cannot bear fruit; but is that the reaſon that it hath no fruit? Indeed if hee did hedge it, and dung it, and plow it, and harrow it, and weed it, and then it would not bring any increaſe, it were another matter, Cupiunt conſequi non & ſequi, the wicked would arrive in heaven, but he doth not ſtrive to his power for heaven.

Secondly, a wicked man doth not, not repent, becauſe he cannot, but becauſe he will not, for if he truly and fully would, he could; for the will is the miſtreſſe of all the powers and faculties of ſoul and body: He that would be ſober, might bee ſober, unleſs hee would gagg his mouth, and pour in liquor as into a barrel; He that would ſpeak holyly, may ſpeak holy words, unleſs hee were dumb, or one ſhould ſow his lips; Thou wouldeſt leave thy company at the Tavern, thou lyeſt unto God, there is no man hales thee into it, as a Calf to the Shambles with a rope, thou art not tyed there by a chain, as a Bear by the noſe at the ſtake; No, thou wilt not, Non velle in cauſa eſt, non poſſe prætenditur, I will not, is the cauſe, I cannot is pretended: No, the ſcorner will not go to the wiſe, Prov. 15. 12.

Thirdly, A wicked man doth not, not repent, becauſe he cannot, but becauſe hee will not, becauſe hee ſhews hee hath ſtill in every action more Can-does, then Wil-does; Eſau could weep for repentance when hee ſaw hee had loſt his Fathers bleſſing, Heb. 12. but hee runs a hunting and ranging at other times, is not this a will not? Simon Magus could pray Peter to pray for him one while, Act. 8. and at other times play the Sorcerer, and ſeduce the people, and not look after his own, nor Peters prayer; is not this A will not? Saul could ſacrifice to God, and confeſſe his ſinnes now, but anon hee will not obey God, but malice David: Is not this A will not; Wicked ſwearers ſay they cannot leave their oaths, and yet in ſuch and ſuch company they will forbear; was not that A will not? Wicked drunkards ſay that they cannot but be overcome ſometimes, yet they can abſtain while they are about their worldly profits: Was not this A will not?

Fourthly, A wicked man doth not, not repent, becauſe hee cannot, but becauſe he will not; for his Can-not, is a willing Can-not; he ſaith, hee cannot but ſinne, but might not hee in the loyns of his firſt parents have kept him out of ſinne if hee had would? but that is paſt alas! hee cannot now chuſe, οὐδεὶς ἑκὼν πονηρός, There is no man willingly wicked; Ariſtotle the very heathen can confeſſe, he falſifies with God, and the carnal Phyloſophy of man cannot help them. Well, to let paſſe the Original Will-not, there is a new actual Will-not, E.g. the Spend-

Spend-thrift, hee ſaith, hee hath not wherewithal to give to the poor, hee cannot give; but hee hath willingly ſpent his mony upon potting, or apparrel, or pleaſure, or vanity, and therefore a willing Can-not. Many cannot remember the leſſons of the word preached, to repeat them in their houſholds, but their minds have willingly roved in that interim, a willing Can-not. He cannot repent, but hee willingly lyes in ſinne, that debarres him from repentance, this alſo is a willing Can not.

Quod eſt voluntarium a parte ante, illud eſt voluntarium, Axiom.

Fifthly, A wicked man doth not not repent, becauſe hee cannot, but becauſe he will not; for when the means to remove or abate his Can-not are lent him, he willingly refuſes them. Holy conference is a means; and he willingly refuſes it; Powerful preaching is a means, and he willingly miſlikes it; to bee reproved of his ſinnes is a means, and hee willingly repines at it. So that the reaſon why a wicked man doth not repent, is not becauſe he cannot (though he cannot) but becauſe he will not.

Qui tollit media voluntarie, voluntarie tollit finem.

Now then for anſwer, do ye ask, Why is a man invited by the Miniſtery to repent, and turn unto the Lord, when he hath not Gods ſecret, but cannot? becauſe the reaſon why he doth not repent is, becauſe hee will not, nor he cannot.

Yea, but thou wilt ſay, Preachers cannot bid him, as for example; Hee cannot command Judas, or Cain, to beleeve that their ſinnes may bee forgiven them; becauſe Chriſt never dyed for the Reprobate, I anſwer, Mentiris Cain, thou lyeſt Cain, Chriſt dyed for thy ſins, and that five ways. Auguſtine.

1 By way of Proclamation; remiſſion of ſinnes is to bee proclaimed to thee, if thou wilt beleeve, ſo ſaith Paul, Bee it known unto you therefore, men and brethren, that through Chriſt is Preached unto you forgiveneſſe of ſinnes, Act. 13, 38. yea, among all Nations, Luke 24. 47. For to him give all the Prophets witneſs, that through his name whoſoever beleeveth in him ſhall receive forgiveneſſe of ſinnes, Act. 10. 43. ſo that Gods Miniſters are bound to preach that thy ſins may be forgiven thee, if thou repent and beleeve the Goſpel.

2 By way of Obligation; thou art bound to beleeve, that thy ſinnes may bee forgiven thee in Chriſt, remiſſion of ſins is one of the Articles of thy Creed, that thou art commanded to beleeve, Repent and beleeve the Goſpel, Mark. 1. 15. and therefore its called, the Law of Faith; Lex á Ligando, the Law bindeth, Rom. 7. 2. All are bound to beleeve in Chriſt Jeſus, to the remiſſion of ſins, even reprobate and all, they are bound as well as the Apoſtles themſelves; For our Saviour commands them, to command all creatures the very ſame things that hee commanded them; Teaching them to obſerve all things whatſoever I have commanded you, Mat. 28. 20. ſo that thou art bound to beleeve that thy ſins may be forgiven thee.
